28 Lafayette Place. New York

BINDER for THE TRUTH SEEKER

For the benefit of our readers who preserve their papers we offer a new style of binder, made for the purpose, and with the heading of THE TRUTH SEEKER printed in gold letters on the outside. This binder allows the opening of the papers perfectly flat. It also allows the taking out and replacing of one or more papers from any part of the file without disturbing the other parts.

Sent by mail, postpaid, for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
tf 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

SAKYA BUDDHA.

A Versified, Annotated Narrativ of his Life and Teachings.

With Citations from Buddha's "Path of Virtue."

BY E. D. ROOT.

I take pleasure in speaking in praise of this work.—Prof. J. M. Peebles.

The book has been introduced into Buddhist schools in Ceylon. The "Banner of Light," "Religio-Philosophical Journal," and many Spiritualist papers and lecturers hav spoken highly of the book.

Extra Cloth, 175 pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

WHAT KIND OF A MAN CLARK BRADEN IS.

BY B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 10 cents.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

HOW TO Strengthen the Memory,

OR,

NATURAL AND SCIENTIFIC METHODS OF NEVER FORGETTING.

The Boston Post says: "This book actually shows us how to keep our memories in good working condition and repair them when out of order." Price by mail $1.

Parturition Without Pain.

BY M. L. HOLBROOK, M.D.

Godey's Lady's Book says: "We giv our cordial approbation to this work. The information it contains is most important, and, we are fully convinced, reliable." Price by mail, $1.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY

AND HYGIENE, or, THE MYSTERIES OF MAN. Carefully revised edition, with 111 illustrations. The most perfect book for men and women ever published. 50,000 sold. Price $2, by mail. Illustrated catalog free.

Marriage and Parentage.

In Their Sanitary and Physiological Relations and in Their Bearing on the Producing of Children of Finer Health and Greater Ability.

BY M. L. HOLBROOK, M.D.

The Scientific American says: "This work is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young." $1.

EATING FOR STRENGTH;

OR,

FOOD AND DIET IN RELATION TO HEALTH AND WORK.

The New York Herald says: "Dr. Holbrook's book is among the very best of its kind."

The Home and Garden says: "A study of this book will enable any intelligent reader to make a choice of food which may save the cost of the book every day in providing for a family, besides increasing health, strength, and longevity." $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kil grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll

IN THE

TRIAL OF C. B. REYNOLDS

FOR

"BLASPHEMY,"

At Morristown, New Jersey.

Stenographically reported, and revised by the author.

Handsome 8vo, 86 pp., beautiful type, fine paper. Price, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 25 cents, or $2 per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1890.

Edited by CHARLES WATTS.

CONTENTS.

Agnosticism and Immortality.....Samuel Laing
A Sonnet..... Joseph Ellis
Who Was Moses?..H. J. Hardwicke, M.D., F.R.C.S.
The Comfort of Agnosticism.....E. Lynn Linton.
Are Miracles Credible?...Constance C. W. Naden.
The Contest Between Agnosticism and Theology, John Wilson, M.A.
Above: A Poem.....W. Stewart Ross.
The Evolution of the Agnostic Idea, R. Bithell, B Sc., Ph.D.
The New Fatalism.....B. Russell.
Descartes's Proof of the Existence of a God, F. J. Gould.
A Poem.....W. B. McTaggart.
The Free Expression of Opinions..G. F. Underhill.
Fragments.....William Maccall.

Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

POINTERS:

A POCKET CYCLOPEDIA,

CONTAINING

Tables, Rules, Practical Hints, and Historical Sketches, for Farmers, Mechanics, Machinists, Merchants, Housekeepers, and the Public Generally, with

Numerous Maps, Illustrations, and Diagrams

Illustrating some of the more Important Comparativ Statistics of the World.

More Information for Less Money than has ever been offered.

ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

For $50 worth of "Cold Facts" boiled down in a Nutshell. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by its Fruits; Our Ideas of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism: Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A four days' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. BURGESS, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Paper, 50 cents. Cloth, 80 cents.

Underwood-Marples Debate. A four nights' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Rev. JOHN MARPLES. Fully reported. Paper, 35 cents; cloth, 60 cents.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the prices named.

THE CANDLE FROM UNDER THE BUSHEL; or, Thirteen Hundred and Six Questions to the Clergy, and for the Consideration of Others. By William Hart. 12mo, paper, pp. 205. New York: Truth Seeker Company. Price, 50 cents.

Whoever undertakes to honestly consider and answer these questions will be likely to entertain different views of what purports to be the revealed "word of God," when he gets a fourth way through it, from what he does at the start. The author desires it to be understood that nothing his work contains is intended to reflect against the honest convictions of any person. The questions are designed to shed light upon creeds founded upon a book said to be harmonious and infallible.—Banner of Light.

"The Candle from Under the Bushel, or 1,306 Questions to the Clergy, and for the Consideration of Others," by Wm. Hart, and published by the Truth Seeker Company, is a book of 205 pages expressing so many doubts in regard to the truth and reasonableness of the Bible, that it would be dangerous for an ordinary church-member to read it.—The Altruist.

We may spare a few lines to a notice of a book that, though not of a Radical nature and thus not of special concern to Freethinkers, may serve the turn of anyone who is disposed to rest himself from polemics by picking up for an idle hour a work or two out of the stream of general literature outside. A novel by Anatole France has gained such favor with French readers as to hav been translated into English, and it is now published by Harper & Bros. in paper at 50 cents. "The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard" is enjoyable for its character-drawing and the quiet humor that pervades it. The story relates the adventures and experiences of an old bibliophile in his search after a rare manuscript of the fourteenth century, and in his rescue of the daughter of his old love from an educational institution where she was ill-treated. The character of the simple octogenarian, wrapped up in his world of books, and with his unselfishness and ignorance of the outside world, is thoroughly entertaining.

A GALAXY OF PROGRESSIV POEMS. By John W. Day. Boston: Colby & Rich. Cloth, pp. 72. Price, $1.

The author has been favorably known for years as a poet of Spiritualism. His productions before us breathe that spirit of hope and resolution which lends no little attractivness to the literature of his belief. The book is handsomely printed on heavy paper, and firmly and well bound.

A REPLY TO DR. LIGHTFOOT'S ESSAYS. By the author of "Supernatural Religion." London: Longmans, Green & Co. Cloth, pp. 180. Price, $2.

Many of our readers are aware that the work published anonymously in England some years ago, entitled, "Supernatural Religion," has ever since been unto the clergy of that land as a thorn in the flesh, and an abomination not less distressing than were all the abominations of Israel unto the Lord. The most eminent defenders of the church hav in vain essayed to refute its argumentation, and all the ingenious guessers of the island hav been baffled in their conjectures as to the personality of its undeclared author. Among those who hav set themselvs up against the profound erudition and invincible reasoning of the work, is the eminent churchman Dr. Lightfoot. Several of his essays against it having recently been collected and republished in permanent form, the author of "Supernatural Religion" has accordingly collected and issued in one volume the replies that he has made against the attacks on him from time to time as they appeared. In his introduction he says:

It is not too much to say that in no part of these essays has Dr. Lightfoot at all seriously entered upon the fundamental proposition of "Supernatural Religion." He has elaborately criticised notes and references; he has discussed dates and unimportant details; but as to the question whether there is any evidence for miracles and the reality of alleged divine revelation, his volume is an absolute blank.

The Independent Pulpit for February has been received. This number completes the seventh volume of a publication that, in the beginning of its career, but few thought would complete one. It is devoted to the true, the beautiful, and the good in science, philosophy, and ethics, and as an evidence that it is growing in favor with its patrons, they hav lately raised, for its maintenance and improvement, a fund of $3,000 in $10 notes, now due and payable to its editor. The Pulpit is published monthly, at $1.50 a year, single copies 15 cents. Address all orders to J. D. Shaw, Waco, Tex.

Max Nordau will be remembered as the author of "The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization," the book suppressed in Austria for the "crime of insulting the members of the imperial family," the "crime of denouncing religion," the "crime of inciting to hostility against religious communities," and the "crime of insulting a church and sect recognized by the state." This so sadly criminal writer has now perpetrated another enormity, in the shape of a book inscribed, "Paris Sketches," No. 1. The edition before us is a translation from the original German. This book will not be so sought for by Radicals as the "Conventional Lies," as it does not deal with the same deep matters, but is devoted to a light, though fearless and unconventional, discussion of aspects of Parisian life and society. The chapter titles are: Othello in Paris, Taine and the French Revolution, Woman and Her Position in Paris, The Education and Life of French Lads, Alexander Dumas as a Moralist, The Alcoholism in Paris, The "Quartier Latin," George Sand and Her Time, Bachelorship, Sarah Bernhardt, Free Love Before a Jury, An Illegitimate Child, The Career of a Cocotte, The "Man of Affairs," Players' Wedlock. In treating of Woman and Her Position in Paris, the author thus describes the education of the French girl at the pension, or school:

Nuns who are themselvs most profoundly ignorant, hav entire charge of the instruction, which is without the slightest depth or practical value The knowledge acquired by the Paris girl is supremely superficial and external. She learns to recite La Fontaine's fables and long passages from Bossuet's speeches, is interminably studying grammar, spelling, and rhetoric, writes daily exercises, compositions, and sentimental letters, and yet, of history and geography, she acquires only the most inadequate ideas, with absolutely nothing of arithmetic or the natural sciences. . . . On the other hand, the good sisters who manage the pension attend to the religious instruction of those committed to their charge with the greatest solicitude. Devotional exercises, incessant drudgery over the catechism, frequent masses and almost as frequent confessions, all work together to fill the young girl's mind with the darkest, most superstitious bigotry, whose power over her is increased by the fact that there is no enlightened intercourse nor enlightening knowledge to counteract its effect.

In France woman exercises, the writer informs us, an almost absolute supremacy over man. Perhaps the majority of our readers are inclined toward woman's side in the current discussion of the respectiv merits and deserving of the sexes, but as Liberals always wish to know all sides of a question, they may be pleased if we subjoin an opinion of Mr. Nordau:

The absolute supremacy over the husband gives a fatal direction to matters of interest to the entire nation. The influence of the grandes dames has always been pernicious to the destinies of France, whether wielded illegitimately by the mistresses of Louis XV., or legitimately by Marie Antoinette. The same thing is as noticeable today as it was a hundred years ago. France had to suffer Sedan because the empress Eugenie wanted "her little war," and the French crisis of 1877 was principally the work of the pious duchess of Magenta and her aristocratic friends. French society gains nothing by the high and sovereign place accorded to woman in it. Apart from the consideration that it is feminin influence that perpetuates the influence of the priest and renders every liberal reform exceedingly difficult, if it does not prevent it altogether, the knowledge that a man must win woman's favor if he would attain success, imparts to all his actions a tendency to gallantry that is not conduciv to really great, really earnest, and really manly achievements. The ideals of a society governed by woman, necessarily become smaller and lower all the time. The husband's abdication leads finally to the total disintegration of society. While in other countries the emancipation of woman is one of the dreams of the social reformers, here in France the more intelligent class are sighing for the emancipation of man.

Price, 50 cents.

A HANDBOOK OF FREETHOUGHT, by W. S. Bell, containing, in Condensed and Systematized Form, a vast Amount of Evidence against the Superstitious Doctrins of Christianity; selected from the writings of the following named distinguished writers and others: Ingersoll, Bradlaugh, Bennett, Seaver, Underwood, Walker, Gardener, Peterson, Graves, Waite, Wettstein, Denton, Stillman, Pentecost, Paine, Clifford, Cobbett, Lecky, Baring-Gould, Buckle, Hume, Buchner, Haeckel, Shaw, Fisk, Guizot, Tyndall, Figuier, Draper, Preston, Stevenson. San Francisco: W. S. Bell. Cloth, pp. 381. Price, $1.25.

On this book Ella E. Gibson has written us an opinion, which we will subjoin, first interjecting our own indorsement of her views, and commendation of the volume: "I hav just finished a careful perusal of W. S. Bell's "Hand-book of Freethought," and know not how to do it better service than to quote his preface to the book. He says:

"I hav aimed, in preparing this work, to put into compact and orderly form, a large amount of irrefragable evidence against the superstitions of the church. I hav often felt the need of such a work for my own use. The matter herewith presented has been culled from some of the ablest writers living and dead. As a book of reference I hope it may be a valuable aid to all investigators and truth seekers. Its running head-lines, chapter heads, subheads, and classified subjects make it a hand-book.

"I am sure anyone who reads this book will bear testimony that Mr. Bell has well fulfilled his aim. In one chapter of thirteen pages he has given us the opinions of ninety-five great philosophers, scientists, theologians, and scholars, on 'What is, and Where is, the Soul?' This chapter alone, is a rich treat, to say nothing of the matter on the devil, polygamy, creation, prophecy, miracles, Jesus Christ, heaven and hell, canon of scripture, immortality, Materialism, design argument, Sunday question, absurdity of prayer, Protestant persecution, Blue laws, Secularism, and many other interesting subjects too numerous to mention."

The Adventist denomination in the United States are, as probably almost all Freethinkers know, among our most valued allies in resistance of the union of church and state attempted by fanatic organizations. The leading publishing house of this denomination is the Pacific Press Publishing Co., Oakland, Cal. This firm issues that excellent weekly, the American Sentinel, and a number of books. The editor of the paper, and author of most of the books, is Elder Alonzo T. Jones, whom, notwithstanding that his title is a trifle antipathetic to our associations, we must praise as a writer of uncommon clearness and force. "Civil Government and Religion" is the title of a work by this writer. It consists of 176 large pages, and is sold at the very low price of 25 cents. Some of its subject-titles are: Christianity and the Roman empire—What is due to God and what to Cæsar?—Moral law and civil law compared—Sin and crime defined—The religious attack upon the United States Constitution, and those who are making it—The Sunday law movement in the fourth century, and its parallel in the nineteenth—The development of the papacy—The papacy a false theocracy—Constantine's Sunday law—The church secures the aid of the state to enforce it—Resulted in the Inquisition—The present demand for a theocracy—The power of the state sought for the support of religion—What will be sacrificed to secure it—The workings of a Sunday law—The Arkansas cases—Some facts worthy of note in the Arkansas indictments. Appendixes to this book contain, among other things, the text of the Blair bill, the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution. Other good books are issued in the Sentinel Library, semi-monthly, the numbers varying in size and price, while a yearly subscription may be had for 75 cents. No. 1 is "The National Reformed Constitution and the American Hierarchy." It givs a view of our Constitution as it would appear when amended by the National Reformers. Among the delightful utterances of the opposit side, quoted in this book to show that side's real intentions, are these:

The existence of a Christian Constitution would disfranchise every logically consistent Infidel.—Christian Statesman, Nov., 1883

When the amendment is adopted, how will it act upon the civil and political rights of Infidels, Jews, etc.? This depends largely upon themselvs. The worst result will be to disfranchise them.—Christian Statesman, Feb. 21, 1884.

This number contains 24 pages, and costs 3 cents. No. 2 is "Religious Liberty," 8 pages, 1 cent. It givs the body of a speech by Senator Crockett before the Arkansas legislature in behalf of a bill exempting from Sunday-law penalties those who observe the seventh day. No. 3, "Evils of Religious Legislation," 8 pages, 1 cent. No. 4, "The Blair Sunday Rest Bill: Its Nature and History," 56 pages, 7 cents. No. 5, "The Blair Educational Amendment: The Result if Adopted," 24 pages, 3 cents. No. 6, "Purity of National Religion," 8 pages, 1 cent. No. 7, "National Reform and the Rights of Conscience," 16 pages, 2 cents. No. 8, "The American Papacy: The Outcome of National Reform Religion," 16 pages, 2 cents. No. 9, "The Salem Witchcraft: A Lesson for Our Time," 8 pages, 1 cent. No. 10, "National Reform is Church and State," 16 pages, 2 cents. No. 11, "What Think Ye of Christ?" 8 pages, 1 cent. No. 12, "Bold and Base Avowal," 16 pages, 2 cents. No. 13, "National Reform an Absurdity: The Folly of Its Claims," 16 pages, 2 cents. No. 14, "The Republic of Israel: A Theocracy and a Republic Compared," 8 pages, 1 cent. This tract calls in question the assertion of the National Reformers that the government of Israel as described in the Old Testament was a republic. This assertion is made with the purpose of securing a precedent for the establishment of an American republic under the control of Jehovah as was that of Israel. The tract shows that the government of Israel was not a republic, but a theocracy pure and simple. No. 15, "National Reform Presbyterianism," 32 pages, 4 cents. What is here demonstrated is that the movers in the National Reform movement are Presbyterians, and that what they wish to do is to incorporate Presbyterianism in our government. A review of the workings of Presbyterianism whenever it has obtained civil power, in Scotland, England, or elsewhere, is added. No. 16, "A Lutheran View of the National Reform Movement," 24 pages, 3 cents. No. 17, "Religion and the Public Schools," 32 pages, 4 cents. This is the argument of Alonzo T. Jones before the United States Senate committee on education and labor, Feb. 22, 1889. No. 18, "The National Sunday Law," 192 pages, 25 cents. This book is the argument of the same Adventist champion before a Senate committee on Dec. 13, 1888. No. 19, "Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts against the Editors of the American Sentinel: The Charges and the Defense," 10 cents. Here is given the full history of the challenging by the American Sabbath Union secretary of A. T. Jones to debate, and the subsequent drawing back from the contest of the former. No. 20 is "Romanism and Civil Liberty." The author says that the reasoning that has actuated every persecuting Christian through all the centuries may be expressed in the following formula:

Whatever is of greatest importance to man should hav the control of human affairs. Religion is of greatest importance to man. Therefore religion should hav the control of human affairs.

The foregoing are all good books, yet not quite so good as we could wish, for, while earnestly desirous that other sects shall not oppress, Adventism still insists upon the truth of its own version of that religion which can never be really believed without producing oppression. Let our Oakland allies learn that, as the little formula of the pietist's reasoning just given might suggest, the real evil principle at the bottom of all is religion—religion of any kind. Until this is got rid of, we shall never be quite free, quite safe. Until our friends see this, and take a thoroughgoing Rationalistic position, they may be doing good, but they are not doing the best.

Joseph Adams, 81 S. Clark st., Chicago, has written and published a 5-cent pamphlet entitled, "A Christian Science Sermon on the Nonentity of a Personal Devil." It is a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing.

Relativ to the pictures in THE TRUTH SEEKER, I consider them of great value. I hav shown them to many people. I hav no recollection of a single person failing to show interest, and many hav exhibited the keenest delight. I hav found many to look at the pictures that would not read the paper. A Freethinker that could not enjoy the humor of one of the pictures, and hav his mind thrilled to increased effort against religion by the other, could never occupy a high place in my estimation.—Wm. Bondies in the Golden Perhaps.

CONSTRUCTIVE FREETHOUGHT

IN THE

Kingdom of the Unselfish.

BY JOHN LORD PECK.

The readers of this paper can find some genuine Constructive Freethought, which, in the words of one of their own writers, "reaches forward to grasp some philosophy of life and its myriad uses—some teaching that shall crystallize around this present life and lift it to a pedestal hitherto unknown—some lofty purpose that shall fill and thrill all with a new and glorious enthusiasm" This is what the book really accomplishes. To obtain it inclose price, $1 00, to the EMPIRE BOOK BUREAU, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER,

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photo-engravings of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 40c.; with autograph, 50 cts.

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 833pp., silk cloth, $3.

Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price, 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.
tf

THE

Cosmian Hymn Book,

A COLLECTION OF

Original and Selected Hymns

(Words and Music)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies, For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

PRICE, ... $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Candle from Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

22 Discussion with Elder Shelton. Bennett. 10
23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5
31 God and God-Houses..... 2
35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No.2.Rev.Theologicus,D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5
81 Hereafter, or the Half-way House. Sypher. 2
82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr.A.G.Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps. 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Bible-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2
107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 5
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev.M.J.Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10
121 Ingersoll's Review of his Reviewers..... 3
122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2
158 The Fool's Creed..... 1
159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL
Price, 25 Cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

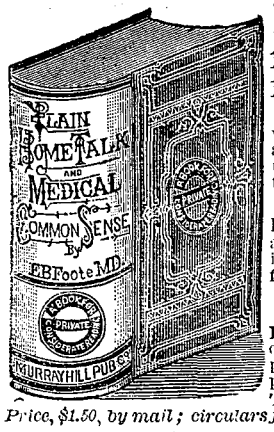
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.



If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

It seems hardly worth while to call attention of old-time radical thinkers to "Plain Home Talk," since probably most of them are familiar with it. Yet there may be some such who hav lost or loaned their copies of the work and who would be glad to get a new copy of the latest revised edition. To the younger generations of Liberals and to recent converts to Freethought literature "Plain Home Talk" is a book that offers much of interest in the line of radical thought on marriage and social relations, besides much very valuable instruction concerning physiology, hygiene, and what it is well for everyone to know concerning disease, its causes, prevention, and treatment.—Truth Seeker.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

All about the human body, in health and disease, nature's secrets revealed, How life is perpetuated, health maintained, disease induced, death delayed, How to marry your own mate, and transmit wealth of health to posterity, Read the most popular, comprehensive and useful book treating of which Dr. Eadon declares to be "priceless in value, new, startling and very instructive." The latest edition is more complete and valuable than ever, having been re-written in important parts. It contains AN APPENDIX of great practical utility made up of

MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

OVER 200 PRESCRIPTIONS OR RECIPES

For Acute and Chronic Disorders Common to Adults and Children, a complete table of poisons and their antidotes (from highest authorities), illustrated directions for resuscitating the drowned (prepared for Health Boards), and hygienic rules for care of infants; also

ORIGIN OF LIFE AND DEVELOPMENT OF MAN, tracing the embryo from conception, through all stages to birth, Illustrated by Over 20 Beautiful Colored Lithographs, on fine plate paper, such as are to be found only in high priced, imported medical works; and to illustrate the anatomy, and relative positions of important parts, each book is also embellished with THREE ELEGANT CHROMO CHARTS of VITAL ORGANS.

Price, $1.50, by mail; circulars free; agents wanted. Murray Hill Pub. Co., 129 E. 28th St., N. Y.

ONE "PLAIN HOME TALK" FREE to any one likely to make a good agent, and who sends $3.00 for two books; we will send one more free, or three altogether.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Career of Jesus Christ.

An Exposition of the True Meaning of this Character as described in the New Testament. By Milton Woolley, M.D., author of "Hebrew Mythology." Paper, 8vo, 25 cents.

THE NEW GOD.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,
Secretary of the American Secular Union.
Price 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

DIAMONDS.

Unprecedented offer. No other house so fair In order to giv my Liberal friends throughout the United States an opportunity to examin, test, and compare my goods and prices with those of other diamond merchants, I will sell any piece of Diamond Jewelry, accompanied by contract that cash in full will be refunded any time within one year from date of purchasing if goods are not entirely satisfactory. No other dealer will do it. None will sell as cheap. Carrying a large stock, being an expert, close buyer, and doing business on smallest possible expense, you will positivly save twenty to thirty per cent by purchasing of me. Diamond Pins and Eardrops, worth $600, for $400; Pins, Rings, Eardrops, Studs, Hair Ornaments, Pendants, worth $300, for $200; do., worth $200, for $140; do., worth $150, for $110; do., worth $100, for $70; do., worth $80, for $60; do., worth $60, for $45; do., worth $40, for $30; do., worth $30, for $22; do., worth $20, for $15. You can wear these goods daily for one year. It will not cost you a cent. If in the mean time you are not satisfied that the goods are better and cheaper than sold elsewhere return and get your cash in full.

Selections sent to responsible parties on approval; to any banking-house or C.O.D., privilege of examination.

The "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

sixteen jewels, finely adjusted to heat and cold, patent regulator, Brequet hair-spring, beautiful double-paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Perfect, and no watch will compete with it! In silverine case, $19; in four-ounce coin silver case, $23.50; five-ounce, $25; six-ounce, $27. In open face, best filled gold case, $27; hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV., $35. In fourteen carat solid gold, $50 to $150. Sent prepaid, and cash refunded if not satisfactory.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established 1857.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can have their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhatan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 58th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Admission free. Discussions follow lectures.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston,
Meets every Sunday (from October to June) at 2:45 P.M., at Paine Memorial Building, Appleton street.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J.F.MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Cleveland, O., Secular Union
meets every Sunday evening at 7:30, at room 29, City Hall, for lectures and free discussions on religious and social subjects. The public cordially invited.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A.W. CALDER, Sec.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.

Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid, for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
tf

Essence of Religion.

By L. FEUERBACH.

Translated from the German. Cloth, 12mo, 75pp.; 50 cts.

The truth-teller is ill-mannered, therefore immoral.—Extract.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AN HOUR WITH THE DEVIL.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

Price, - - - 10 cents.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indescretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of these afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. R. P. Fellows is an outspoken Infidel and a very successful physician. He is worthy of and extensiv patronage.—The Liberal.

News of the Week.

TROUBLE continues between the Protestant and Orange city of Ottawa, Canada, and the Roman Catholic and French city of Hull, population 20,000, situated opposit on the Ottawa river. Premier Mercier has sent a corps of detectivs and 100 police, and the 43d regiment Carleton Rifles, with a detachment of Dragoon Guards, hav been got ready.

THE North Dakota senate has adopted the Australian ballot system by a vote of 21 to 8.

AT Omaha on the 22d a boiler explosion killed three and inflicted probably fatal wounds on seven.

REV. HENRY DUNCAN on the 21st ascended to heaven from Ozark, Ala., where he was hanged for wife-murder.

THE House has selected Chicago as the site of the World's Fair, and at writing the bill awaits the Senate.

AT Plymouth, Pa., the Polish priest and some of his parishioners had a row on the 20th in which a revolver was freely flourished by the man of God.

NEAR Suisson, Cal., on the 21st, there was a collision between eight locomotivs returning from a snow blockade by which many laborers were killed.

THE Philadelphia Siberian Exile Petition Association on the 22d composed a petition to be circulated for signatures throughout the United States and sent to the czar.

ON the 20th in the Mississippi legislature Representativ West moved the adoption of a memorial to Congress asking the repeal of the XVth amendment to the United States Constitution, but the motion was lost 21 to 38.

MANY British statesmen advise letting Canada join us in peace.

A RELIGIOUS labor order called the Brothers of the Cross is being organized at Paris.

A BILL to establish a government postal telegraph system has been introduced in the House.

THE pope is alleged to be making extensiv studies of the Socialist question, preparatory to issuing an encyclical on it.

ON the 22d delegates from the states deliberated at Philadelphia the erection in Fairmount park of a memorial of the establishment of the United States government and adoption of the Constitution.

MISS MAGGIE GLEASON, who has been taken to a Worcester, Mass., asylum for religious insanity, will die. She first became affected while working for a priest, and was especially moved by sermons on eternal punishment.

GOVERNOR FORAKER corrects the report that he said he was asked how many men he could send to Canada, what he said being that the question was asked him during the fisheries trouble, the purpose remaining unspecified.

THE city council of South Norwalk, Conn., procured the enforcement last Sunday of the statute prohibiting any secular business on Sunday between sunrise and sunset, and closed livery stables, drug stores, cigar-stores, fruit-stands, and restaurants.

ON the 20th two murderers left for a better world from a scaffold at Philadelphia, surrounded by preachers and priests; and one murderer of his wife and mother-in-law was hanged at Bellefonte, Pa., after having been set at ease in mind by like religious ministration.

AT the late election in Germany the Socialists showed great increase since the one previous, polling 1,500,000 votes against 774 128 in 1887. They elected a large portion of their candidates. In Berlin alone they showed an increase of 33 000 and the Liberals 8,000, while the Conservativ vote decreased 35,000. At Cottbus and Bamburg there was bloodshed between Socialists and soldiers.

ON the 22d a storage dam built across the Hassavampa river, Ariz., by the Walnut Grove Water Storage Co., at a cost of $300,000, gave way from floods, and forty persons below were drowned. The dam was 110 feet long at the base and 400 at the top, and 110 feet thick at the base and 10 at the top, restraining a body of water 3 miles by three-quarters of a mile, and 110 feet deep. This was the first of the great storage reservoirs projected in the territory.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

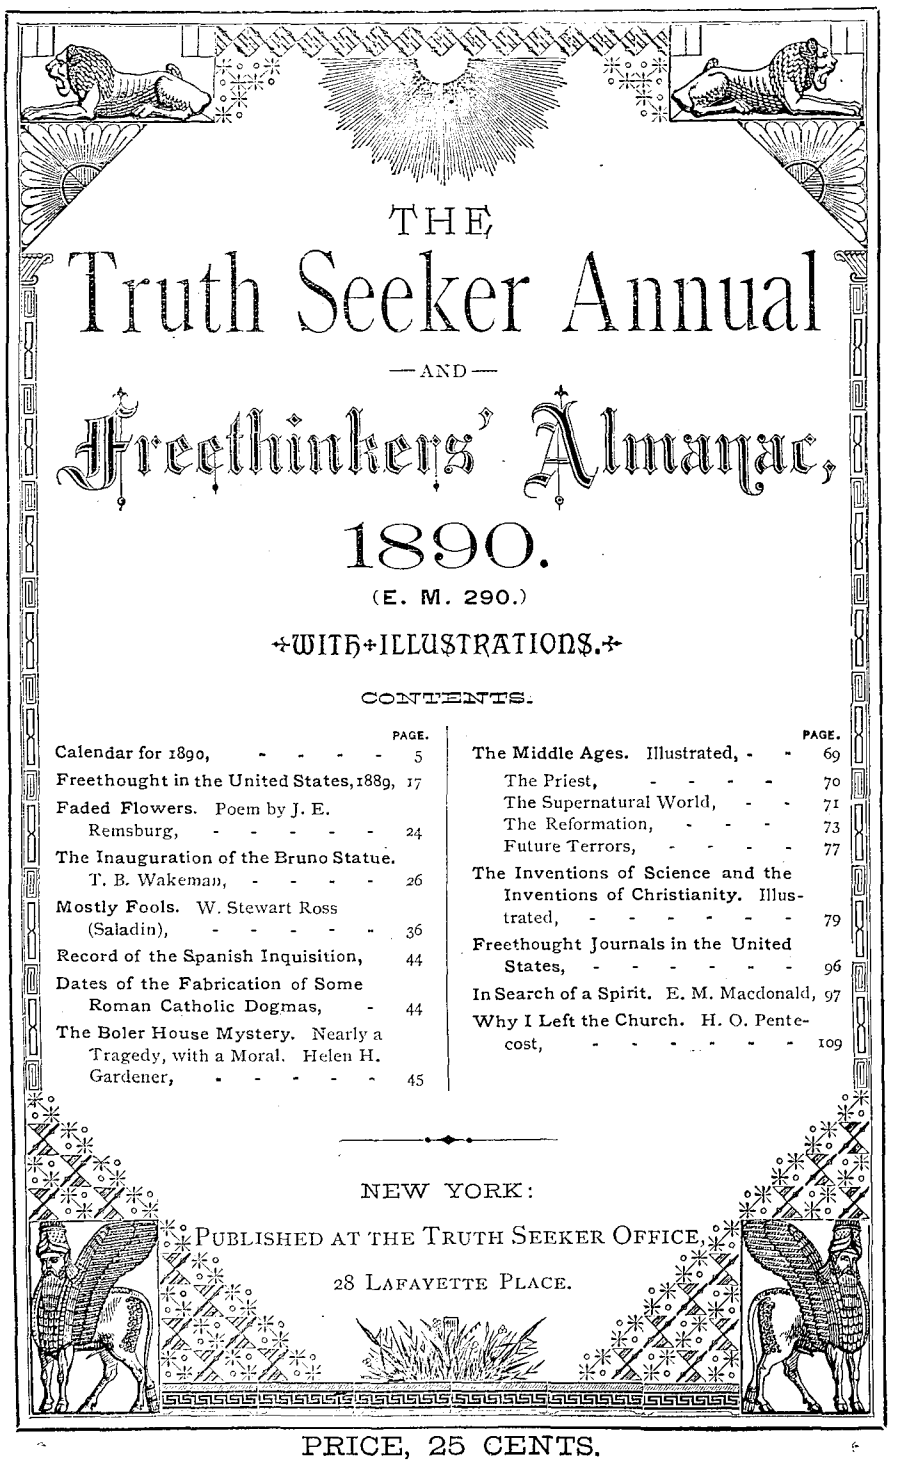
BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

GODS AND RELIGIONS ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.



BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BOAZ SECURETH A BARGAIN.

And Boaz said unto the elders, and unto all the people, Ye are witnesses this day that I hav bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi. Moreover, Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of Mahlon, hav I purchased to be my wife, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance, that the dead be not cut off from among his brethren, and from the gate of his place: ye are witnesses this day.—Ruth iv, 9, 10.

THE

Truth Seeker Annual

—AND—

Freethinkers' Almanac,

1890.

(E. M. 290.)

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Calendar for 1890,	5
Freethought in the United States, 1889,	17
Faded Flowers. Poem by J. E. Remsburg,	24
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue. T. B. Wakeman,	26
Mostly Fools. W. Stewart Ross (Saladin),	36
Record of the Spanish Inquisition,	44
Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas,	44
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral. Helen H. Gardener,	45
The Middle Ages. Illustrated,	69
The Priest,	70
The Supernatural World,	71
The Reformation,	73
Future Terrors,	77
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated,	79
Freethought Journals in the United States,	96
In Search of a Spirit. E. M. Macdonald,	97
Why I Left the Church. H. O. Pentecost,	109

NEW YORK:

PUBLISHED AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Gems of Thought.

IT is remarkable that almost all speakers and writers feel it incumbent on them, sooner or later, to prove or to acknowledge the personality of God. It is a sad mistake. In reading a work on agriculture, we hav to skip the author's moral reflections, and the words "Providence" and "He" scattered along the page, to come to the profitable level of what he has to say. What he calls his religion is for the most part offensiv to the nostrils. He should know better than to expose himself, and keep his foul sores covered until they are quite healed. There is more religion in men's science than there is science in their religion. Let us make haste to the report of the committee on swine.—Thoreau.

THE distinction between theology and science was entirely unfelt. The broad truth which repeated experience has now impressed on almost every unprejudiced student, that it is perfectly idle to quote a passage from the Bible as a refutation of any discovery of scientific men, or to go to the Bible for information on any scientific subject, was altogether undreamed of; and in exact proportion to the increase of European superstition did the doctrin of inspiration dilate, till it crushed every department of the human intellect.—Lecky.

MEN offer up to heaven vows, sacrifices, and presents, to obtain an end to their sufferings, which in reality are attributable only to the negligence, ignorance, and perversity of their guides, to the unreasonableness of their laws, and above all, to the general want of knowledge.—D'Holbach.

MANY a youth, with good natural genius, who is apprenticed to a mechanical trade, such as a carpenter, wheelwright, blacksmith, etc., is prevented getting forward the whole of his life, from the want of a little common education when a boy.—Paine.

THE vision is a species of magic lantern which the eternal father has from the beginning been in the habit of exhibiting to his saints, his prophets, and his favorits of one and the other sex. Women, madmen, and rogues are the persons whom the divinity in preference favors in this wise.—Voltaire.

VOLTAIRE accepted all the menaces, all the outrages, all the persecutions, calumny, and exile. He was indefatigable and immovable. He conquered violence by a smile, despotism by sarcasm, infallibility by irony, obstinacy by perseverence, ignorance by truth.—Victor Hugo.

THE authority of men was everywhere substituted for that of reason; books were much more studied than nature, and the opinions of antiquity obtained the preference over the phenomena of the universe. This bondage of the mind was still more detrimental to the progress of the human species by corrupting the method, than in its immediate effects.—Condorcet.

THE war against Truth was carried to the length of suppressing not only the skeptical inferences of science, but science itself; chemists, astronomers, physiologists, mathematicians, and bona fide historians could pursue their inquiries only at the risk of an inquisitorial indictment; and a cloud of ignorance, which in the days of Horace and Pliny would hav been thought disgraceful to the obscurest hamlet of the Roman empire, brooded for ages over the face of the entire Christian world.—Prof. Oswald.

THE Christian who affirms that intellectual and moral greatness is incompatible with the absence of Christianity, forgets, in his zeal for his faith, that civilizations of a high type preceded, many centuries, the advent of the Christian religion.—Underwood.

THE Jews had a Bible; the Romans had not. Which had the greater and the grander government? Let us be honest. Which of those nations produced the greatest poets, the greatest soldiers, the greatest orators, the greatest statesmen, the greatest sculptors? Rome had no Bible. God cared nothing for the Roman empire. He let the men come up by chance. His time was taken up with the Jewish people. And yet Rome conquered the world, including the chosen people of God. The people who had the Bible were defeated by the people who had not. How was it possible for Lucretius to get along without the Bible?—Ingersoll.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 17. No. 10. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 8, 1890. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

HOW MANKIND IS CRUCIFIED BETWEEN TWO THIEVES.

Notes and Clippings.

In a speech in the Senate two weeks ago, Senator Blair said: "This country is not to be given over to those who would teach a civil allegiance elsewhere than within our own borders primarily, and a subsidiary civil allegiance only to the United States. I speak of but a section of a great body of our citizens, for the masses of that same body of American citizens are true to the flag and do not propose to elect a president who resides on the banks of the Tiber." Senator Blair has a streak of sense running through his head once in a very great while.

In the biography of the late James Macdonald of the London Times is the following information as to the religious views of the journalists with whom he came in contact: "'Madam,' I was reluctantly compelled to tell an accomplished and pious lady, who asked me these questions when I was last in Aberdeen, 'madam, I know a great many journalists, men of letters, and other educated people in London; but, to speak frankly, I don't know a single one who believes in Christianity. I know few who mention it for any other purpose than to ridicule its pretensions.'" He makes an exception for George Augusta Sala, as "the most orthodox man I know."

The Brazilian correspondent of the Mail and Express writes: "Among the new measures adopted by the central government is the abolition of Catholic and Christian holidays, and the substitution of nine national holidays. The Fourth of July is one of them, to commemorate the independence of the United States. Also November 2d, which is devoted to the dead, as part of humanity. Here we meet with the Positivists in power. They care for the dead, but leave out the birthday of Christ. Also, on the national flag hav they written, 'Order and Progress.' It is the only flag, I think, which has an inscription. This is the first time that the followers of Comte hav had a chance of putting their principles into practice."

Of the arrest and exposure of Mrs. Carrie M. Sawyer and her manager, Captain Burke, in Chicago, for presenting fraudulent manifestations, the Banner of Light says: "There is no doubt in the minds of all Spiritualists who hav thoroughly investigated Mrs. Sawyer's mediumship that she is a fine instrument for spirit-manifestations; but it is also known that she is unreliable—not to be depended upon. It is strange that the greed of money will tempt those who might be useful in the cause of truth, to descend to such tricks as these people are charged with. If they are guilty, they deserve to be exposed and punished. There is no doubt the spirit-world itself is anxious to sift the chaff from the wheat; consequently those who prove false to the high trust imposed upon them, as instruments for spirit-manifestation, must not complain if they are brought to grief in their wrong-doing."

The Herald of Bertrand, Neb., says, with Western directness: "Crank Blair, of New Hampshire, is still ranting about his favorit bills—for woman suffrage, Prohibition, national Sunday laws, national education, etc. It is lucky for the country that Crank Blair does not possess the power to formulate a national bill of fare for every American citizen. It is fortunate for both church and state that he has not the power to direct just what shall be taught in our public schools, and just how each individual shall regard Sunday, whether he be Christian, Infidel, Agnostic, or Jew. If Crank Blair could secure the position of chief dictator to this nation, the American people would soon find themselvs shorn of every individual right. Religious liberty and freedom of conscience would be destroyed, and church and state would be as firmly united as in the days of the rack and the Inquisition. Fortunately, however, the amiable fanatic from New Hampshire must forego the pleasure of torturing his ideas into people. The intelligence of the age forbids it."

Nothing could better illustrate the ridiculousness of religious oath laws than a scene in one of our courts last week. It occurred in the suit of Seth C. Johnson against Man Sing Son & Co., Chinamen, on a promissory note for $1,800, purporting to hav been signed by them, which they allege is a forgery. The witnesses were Chinamen. The Chinaman alleged to be the forger is a member of a Christian Sunday-school, and he alleges that his Sunday-school teacher instructed him to indorse the note. One Mongol took the oath on a Bible. Another one said he was willing to do so, as when he is in America he "has the Christian religion and when in China believes in Confucius, and worshiped his ancestors." The court thought he had better swear on joss sticks, which had been procured, and a Chinaman tried to stick them into a crack in the judge's desk, but the crack was too narrow. Then a happy thought occurred to him, and he propped them up between two Bibles and lighted them. Another celestial on being called to the stand said that he had never been in a court before, and did not know much about swearing. He believed in the religion of Confucius, but would swear in any way that the counsel desired. "Hav you no preference?" asked the lawyer. "None whatever," said the witness. "Hav you any conscience?" demanded the lawyer. "Certainly I hav," answered the celestial in a hurt tone. "Then what form of oath does your conscience dictate that you should use?" "All forms are the same to me, but I will tell the truth no matter how I swear." "Oh, well, giv him the Bible, then," said the lawyer. "No; he doesn't know anything about the Bible," said Judge McAdam. "Giv him something that he knows about. Light up the joss sticks." Still another Chinaman claimed to be an Agnostic, and he affirmed. Commenting upon the case Wong, an Americanized Chinaman who writes magazine articles and does reporting for the daily papers, says: "Chinamen are having lots of fun among themselvs out of Chu Fong's revelations. What amuses them is that Chu Fong, a Christian convert, testified in court that he learned the art of forgery from his Sunday-school superintendent, who doesn't seem to hav devoted all of his time to disproving the teachings of Confucius. This little circus has at least decided the fate of the seventeen victims of Chu Fong's forgeries so far as going back on Joss is concerned."

Communications.

Symposium Questions Answered.

Freethought, in our opinion, does hav an affirmativ, positiv, constructiv side. Indeed, it has no other side—no negativ, no non-constructiv side.

In its very nature it is in its entirety essentially affirmativ, positiv, and constructiv.

The charge so often preferred against Freethought, or Infidelity as it is usually called, that it is a mere negation—a mere denial of the truth of the Christian religion—is utterly false.

Freedom was the original, and is the only normal condition of thought—a condition which prevailed until those two mighty foes to human progress, the church and the state, forged the chains with which thought is now so bound as to be partially deprived of its affirmativ, positiv, constructiv action.

Freethought denies no truth, negativs no fact, destroys nothing that has a right to exist—nothing but the chains with which itself has been bound.

Thought is action, and all action is affirmativ, positiv, and in its ultimate results constructiv.

The properties of negation, of non-construction, etc., with which Freethought has been charged, inhere not in itself, but in the chains with which its enemies who make the charge hav partially paralyzed its action. These enemies, therefore, are themselvs the parties guilty of negation and non-construction.

As to why Freethought, in its very nature, is thus affirmativ, positiv, and constructiv, we can simply say that such is the course of nature—just as it is the course of nature for the sun to shine, the flowers to bloom, the universe to be just as it is.

But in what do the affirmativness, the positivness, the constructivness of Freethought consist?

In everything that results from thinking, when the thinker is free to act out his thoughts—in establishing between man and all his surroundings such relations as shall ultimate in the highest possible perfection of the individual—in obeying every law, utilizing every gift of nature, in according to every individual the right to think and to express his own thoughts, to control his own acts, to appropriate his own goods, the results of his own labor, and to freely enjoy his full share of nature's bounties, the air, the sunlight, the land, the water, etc.

Every advancement in science, every improvement in art, and almost every useful discovery in nature, has been the result of thought, of Freethought. Every statue, every painting, every palace, every temple, every steamship—every work of art, whether of utility or of beauty, has been thought before it has been wrought.

Only remove the grasping, the paralyzing hands—the invading, grinding heels of those twin monsters, those relics of barbarism, the church and the state, from the people, and who could assign any limits to their attainments in this department?

But grand and glorious as are the achievements, past, present, and prospectiv, of Freethought, in the domain of art, in the construction of temples, etc., from inanimate matter, grander still and more glorious are destined to be its achievements in the domain of physiology—in the developing of the highest degree of health, strength, and beauty in that wonderful "temple of the soul," the human body. Only let the monsters in question be relegated to their proper places in the dark ages of the past, and let them bear away with them upon their heads and their backs those parasitic monsters, which themselvs hav bred the Grundys, the Comstocks, et id genus omne. Only let thought be free in this department—let the people fully understand that, in the wonderful machinery of the human body, Mother Nature has made nothing obscene, improper, or shameful. Let them fully understand that every part of this wonderful and complicated machinery is just as necessary, and hence just as right, proper, and decent, as is every part of the machinery of a watch or of a steam-engin. Let them fully understand that it is just as right, proper, and decent to see and to name any part of the human body, to describe its form and its functions, as it is to do the same things in regard to any part of a watch or of a steam-engin. Let them fully understand that with a view to improvement, it is not only their right, but also their duty, to freely discuss, publicly and privately, the uses and functions of all the organs of the human body, and especially of those pertaining to sex. Let them fully understand the laws of heredity, the best conditions under which conception and gestation can be performed, and the best conditions with which children, after birth, can be surrounded, and we will soon hav a race of beings tenfold superior to the men and the women of the present time. But this is not all. Thought, when free, will inevitably tend to improve itself. Let it cease to be obstructed, depressed, or perverted, and the mind of the people, as a whole, will soon be tenfold superior to what it is at the present time.

And so, too, of the department of morals. Only let thought be free and soon every individual will be able to do tenfold more to advance the social happiness of the race than he does now.

We are aware that most persons, even many so called Liberals, confine the word Freethought to the mere denial of the divine inspiration of the Bible and the truth of the dogmas of the Christian religion. We do not, of course, employ the term in this extremely narrow sense. We extend it to every subject that is in any way involved in the solution of that one grand, ultimate problem, human happiness.

JOHN R. KELSO.
ETTA D. KELSO.

The Work of Freethought.

We are often reminded by the religionists that Freethought is only a destructiv power; we are charged with destroying the temples of religion without erecting new ones in their places; we are asked, If you take away the consolation of religion, what do you giv us in its place? In short, we are told that we hav no right to disturb humanity's faith and undermine its religious beliefs unless we can offer a new religion. Let us see how far this charge is just. That Freethought is destroying the popular beliefs of the world is a truth which cannot be disputed. But the question is, Are these beliefs worth preserving, and is it not rather better that they should be destroyed? It seems to me that an illusion, no matter how sweet it might be, should not be cherished. It is of no use to build castles in the air. A crust of bread within our reach is far better than an imaginary feast. A pauper who knows that he is poor is, in my opinion, better off than the one who livs in the realm of imagination and considers himself rich. The former will do his best to better his condition, but why should the latter work? Is he not rich already? And when we remember that the illusion called Christianity has in store an eternity of joy for a few elected beings and an eternity of misery for the majority of the human race, will not mankind at large be happier when this illusion becomes a thing of the past? Is it really necessary for us to giv something else in place of hell? If we kill a rattlesnake, will anyone demand that we should giv another snake in place of the one we killed? When a slave is freed, will anyone say: You must giv him another master? Should we giv the slave freedom, should we break his chains, in order to put immediately new chains on his limbs? What does the slave get in place of slavery? Liberty. Liberty is the opposit side of slavery. A slave is not a unit; he has no rights whatever; he belongs wholly to his master. But giv him liberty, and he becomes a human being; he has an opportunity to work for himself; his own body, at least, belongs to him. So if we destroy the kingdom of Jehovah, why should we provide heaven with a new God? If we refuse to worship Jehovah because his record is bad, can we possibly create a god who will pay more attention to the needs of humanity? Is it in our power to inaugurate a new religion with a god who will control the lightning, cyclones, blizzards, earthquakes, etc., and who will ennoble the heart and brain of men? Do we know that the record of the new god will be better than that of Jehovah? Is it worth while to dethrone Jehovah and bend our knees before another tyrant? Why should we put a phantom in the sky to rule us? Why should we enslave ourselvs and invent instruments to torture our own bodies? We hav no need of any god; we claim our rights to be free at least from the dictates of others.

There should be no masters and no slaves. Should the memory of all the gods fade away, the world still remains, there is still plenty of work for us to do. Instead of the kingdom of God, we giv the world the kingdom of man. Humanity is grander than divinity. An ungodly man is better than an unmanly God. How much better off will the world be if we crawl in dust and assure a phantom that we love him and do all we can to please him? Who will be benefited by such action? Will it diminish the miseries of the world? Will it add one rose of happiness to the thorns of life?

The mission of the Freethinker is to work for this world, to help humanity instead of helping God. We liv in a world full of poverty, misery, disease, both of body and mind, crime and degradation. The real benefactor of the human race is he who can solve the knotty social problems, and solve them in such a way that there should be no overflowing riches in the hands of a few fortunate persons and poverty the lot of the majority, who can prevent disease from torturing our bodies and minds, who can do away with crime and correct the criminal. Why should we gaze at the stars and leave the mud beneath our feet in its present condition? Why should we dream of a heaven beyond the clouds and allow the earth to be a hell? Let us work for the future, let us increase the happiness of humanity, and if we cannot gain much in the present, it will still be a consolation to us to know that we hav done our best to make the future better than the present. As Tchernychewsky said: "Love the future, work for it, transport as much of it as possible into the present." We hav a great deal of work to accomplish in this world—we cannot afford to waste our time to serve phantoms. "Let the ghosts go. We will worship them no more. Let them cover their eyeless sockets with their fleshless hands and fade forever from the imaginations of men."

CLEMENS P. BERYLSON.

Presbyterianism.

I was born in the year 1814 in one of the rural towns of New England. At the time of my birth the only excitement that was created in the vicinity was from the fact that the frail embryo would pull down the scales but a few ounces more than two pounds. After I began to show symptoms of pulling through, my mother, who was a firm believer in the Presbyterian religion and hoped that I might be one of the favored class that God had ordained unto everlasting happiness in the Calvinistic heaven, concluded to call the Presbyterian minister of the parish and hav me subjected to the sacred ordinance of baptism.

After that performance, which was done "in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost," I grew and "flourished like a green bay-tree." But notwithstanding my diminutiv size, I was destined to become nearly a six-footer.

One of the first lessons taught me after I began to think a little was the great and marvelous truths contained in the "holy Bible," and the goodness of God as proclaimed therein. I attended church frequently, and believed that the minister was a little more than human, as his wonderful knowledge was not confined to this little earth but reached to the home of the angels, whose holy feet tread the "golden pavements" of the New Jerusalem.

When I was some five years of age I selected a playmate of about my own age. Sammy, as we all called him, was one of the best of boys, even-tempered, and generous to every fault of mine. Many happy hours we had together notwithstanding the dark and angry clouds of Calvinism were floating in the sky. When Sammy was about eight years of age he was taken with a raging fever. A Calvinistic doctor was called. This son of Esculapius was not only a Calvinist in religion but also in medicin, for the first move he made was for blood, then the jalap and mercury, until the poor boy fell a victim to what was scientific quackery. Soon after the death of Sammy I called at the house of mourning and for the first time in my life I looked upon a corpse. Oh, how changed! His face was like marble; his lips that had said so many pleasing words were sealed forever. To me the scene was terrible. I left with streaming tears. I left, hearing the wailings of the mother until I was beyond their reach.

The day for the funeral was appointed. The minister came to administer religious consolation to the afflicted family. The friends and neighbors came until the house was nearly full. The man of God opened the sacred volume and delivered a discourse of about half an hour in length. He spoke with wonderful power, for he was noted as a preacher that was ever ready to proclaim the terrors of the law to a sinful and dying world. During the delivery of the sermon the minister became somewhat inspired by his guardian spirit John Calvin, for in his address to the mourners he talked loud and with great force. After descanting upon the terrible punishment that God would inflict upon the sinners, he pointed to the weeping mother and said, with emphasis, "Your boy is in hell!" Quick as a lightning stroke the mother fell from her chair and moaned as though her heart would break, for she dearly loved her little boy. After these terrible words were said by the minister a general panic ensued—women and children were in tears. I well recollect a man of the audience who had never experienced the love of the Calvinistic God said some wicked words about the preacher, which produced quite an angry discussion.

After learning from the highest authority of which I knew, I began to think of my own sinful condition. I was "under conviction," and thought I was no better than Sammy. I had sleepless nights; I had heard much of God's terrible anger told by revival preachers, but my mother soon put a quietus upon my fears by referring to the fact that I had been sprinkled by the regenerating waters of baptism. So, in that respect, I was one better than Sammy.

As I came to years of knowledge and understanding I was made familiar with the Presbyterian creed, not knowing but the Lord might be pleased to some time call upon me to preach the gospel. But after reflecting upon the fact that God from the foundation of the world was continually bringing into existence harmless babes that he knew would go into a never-ending hell, the doctrin began to look infamous. I exposed my thoughts on the subject to several of the elect, but the answers were of a threatening character; that a young stripling like myself was committing the crime of blasphemy by questioning the venerable creed which was in perfect harmony with "God's holy word." The consolation that I got from those that I had supposed to be regenerated Christians had with me a very unfavorable effect. I soon began to look upon Calvinism and Jonathan Edwardsism as the most abominable doctrin that ever disgraced the heart of man. That monstrous creed would to-day, in this age of science and investigation, lessen the natural goodness of a South Sea Islander, if he could be led to believe it. The idea of a God that has for ages been peopling the regions of hell with countless millions of pagans because they never heard of Presbyterianism! That abominable doctrin could not hav originated with human beings possessing a moral and benevolent nature, but must hav had its origin in the loathsome dens of wild beasts, where huge spiders hung upon their silken cords and instilled their deadly poison into the very bowels of their victims. Is it possible that human beings in this age of enlightenment can believe such diabolical doctrins? If the civilized world could to-day wake to a firm belief in the Presbyterian creed, it would paralyze the people of all nations, both Christian and pagan, and they would, like patient Job, curse the day in which they were born. F. LARKIN, M.D.

Randolph, N. Y., Feb. 4, 1890.

Mr. Bradlaugh.

Sunday, Feb. 16, 1890, is a day which will long be remembered by the Freethinkers of London and other large cities of England, for on its memorable morn Mr. Charles Bradlaugh assembled the representativs of the National Secular Society in the London Hall of Science to hear his reasons for resigning the presidency of that well-known association. Delegates had come from all parts of the country; and those who were stewards had plenty to do to welcome those who had come from afar and introduce them to their fellows of the metropolis.

At a quarter past eleven, to the tick of the clock, Mr. Bradlaugh rose in his place. Pale and feeble though he was, with all the marks of his recent terrible illness upon him, he nevertheless stood out in grand relief from the many hundreds who occupied the hall. The preliminaries over, the venerable president rose up to make his explanations. One mighty cheer burst forth from all. Not a hand in all that vast assembly that did not clap its hardest, and many an eye was moist as it watched the keen and overpowering struggle that was going on in their convalescent leader. He tried to speak, it was useless. With tears in his eyes he sat down again, his words unspoken. It was a sight such as one rarely sees, to witness the strong man who has so often stood in the front of danger—fearless, defiant, victorious—tremble and quiver, utterly speechless, as he tried to speak a few words to those whom he knew to be loving friends. Once more a ringing cheer of sympathy and encouragement re echoed through the building: once more the greatest lawyer and unique orator tried to address his disciples. This time he succeeds. With voice low and musical, the old man tells of his illness and assures us that a second such attack must prove fatal. With breathless silence we hear him through, relieved when at length the more formal business comes before us. Then, when George William Foote, who has himself tasted the horrors of a twelvemonth's incarceration in a British jail, is appointed president on the motion of our thirty years' leader, and the badge of office is handed to the new general, we see beyond doubt how it is necessity, helpless necessity, which has compelled him to relinquish the banner he so dearly loved to bear before the world. With him, we recognize in Mr. Foote a worthy leader whom we can trust; with Mr. Foote, we recognize how difficult it will be to follow creditably in the footsteps of such a giant in the cause. On the other hand, with unstinted cheers we congratulate the new president and assure him of our loyalty, and the meeting closes with a few more words from Mr. Bradlaugh, which find their way home to every heart.

The Hall of Science has witnessed many scenes of Freethought history, and not the least touching of those was one which many of us well remember. It was that in which Mr. Bradlaugh acknowledged, at a banquet given to poor, old D. M. Bennett, the great kindness he had received from the Freethinkers of America when he visited their shores. Americans will join with us in wishing length of life and some degree of comfort to our retiring chieftain, and prosperity in the work to him who comes to guide and help us. Mr. Bradlaugh has left us all footsteps in which we may follow—footprints which are not only British but universal, as the present testimonials from India bear witness, and the congratulations from all parts of the world confirm. Surely in him, if in any living man, we see the beneficial effects of living up to Thomas Paine's great maxim, "The world is my country, to do good my religion."

SAM STANDRING.

Mr. Bradlaugh in India.

We hav received from Bombay the annexed Address to Charles Bradlaugh, printed in colors. The original was given to Mr. Bradlaugh "engrossed on a finely illuminated sheet of parchment and presented in a silver casket of exquisit design."

TO CHARLES BRADLAUGH, ESQ., M.P., President of the National Secular Society of Great Britain, Ireland, and the Colonies. Honorable Sir: The Freethinkers of India cordially unite with all the other classes of the Indian community in offering to you their sincere congratulations on your late recovery from a dangerous illness, and in bidding you a hearty welcome on the occasion of this your first visit to the shores of India.

Weighed down with the sense of the invaluable services you hav rendered struggling humanity by your fearless advocacy of justice and truth, we are unable to find adequate words to express to you the deep gratitude we feel and the love we cherish for the man who from boyhood has spent his life in trying to make this world better and its people happier.

We hav followed with pride and admiration your public career and hav rejoiced to find that in the fiercest battles for the right you hav earned from friend and foe alike a name for undaunted courage, unfaltering perseverance, untiring industry, and unswerving probity.

The long and arduous battle for a free press in England which that noble martyr, Richard Carlisle, waged, you hav continued with the greatest success, and the liberty of tongue and press has found in you one of its greatest and bravest champions.

It is impossible for us to forget the immense service you hav rendered to humanity in asserting and maintaining the rights of the people to choose their own representativs irrespectiv of class or creed, in removing the last shackles of the English press laws, and in expunging from the English statute book and courts of justice that last surviving legacy of an ignorant and bigoted past, the Oaths test.

The theological bands which hav bound the brain of thousands of this generation hav been snapped asunder by the unwearying efforts of such men as yourself to spread the light of reason, and many hundreds even in priest-ridden India hav by a study of your life and works been led to throw off the dark thraldom of superstition and to embrace that greatest of all religions—the religion of humanity—whose only creed is, "The world is my country and to do good my religion."

We honor the man who, possessed of the highest talents, has sacrificed wealth and comfort to assist the down-trodden and to succor the distressed; who has, at the risk of his life, championed the cause of peace in a Christian land; who has never by word or action swerved from his devotion to principle, and whose pen and tongue were always at the service of the poor and the miserable without fee or price.

We take this opportunity of bringing to your notice the vast field for the propagation of Freethought that India presents, and which we, from the circumstances that surround us, are unable to work as it ought to be worked. We therefore beg you will bestow on this matter the consideration it deserves and extend to us your powerful support in the furtherance of the noble cause of Freethought. Christian missionary education has very greatly contributed to prepare the minds of the youth of this country to throw off all superstition, indigenous or imported, and now they only await the arrival of Freethought lecturers to preach the noble principles of Secularism, to enlist hundreds in the great army of progress that everywhere in the world is daily and hourly increasing in numbers and in strength. The names and works of Charles Bradlaugh, Mrs. Annie Besant, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, and G. W. Foote, are, we are proud to say, familiar to thousands of students in all parts of this vast country.

We fervently trust that the day is not far distant when we shall hav the pleasure of welcoming you once again to these shores and hope then to be able, each in his own town and district, to express personally his heartfelt gratitude for the numerous services you hav rendered and to show you in detail the wants and needs of the Secularists of India.

With our best wishes for your health and happiness and with the assurance of our high respect,

We hav the honor to remain,

YOUR GRATEFUL AND OBEDIENT SERVANTS.

Bombay, Dec. 31, 1889.

Canadian Freethinkers and Their Custom Houses.

Under the presidency of Captain Robert C. Adams the Canadian Secular Union is doing a needed and splendid service for liberty. A few weeks ago THE TRUTH SEEKER received an order for twelve copies of the "Age of Reason," and an inquiry as to the various oath laws now in force in the states. The first was the initial step of an attempt to make the Canadian government admit that heretical works are as much entitled to respectful treatment at the hands of the custom officers as a stack of Bibles; the second, the preliminary measure to the introduction of an oath bill in the two Canadian provincial parliaments. In Secular Thought of last week we find the result. Under the heading of "A New Oaths Bill," is this item:

Capt. Robert C. Adams, of Montreal, president of the Canadian Secular Union, has taken some action to secure the passage of a new oath and affirmation bill in the Dominion parliament at Ottawa and the provincial parliament of Quebec.

This, of course, is but the beginning, but judging from the success attending the importation of the "Age of Reason," it may be possible soon for Freethinkers to obtain their civil rights in Canada. The following correspondence explains the situation as to Thomas Paine's great book:

TORONTO, Feb. 3, 1890.

DEAR SIR: We are now importing one dozen copies of "The Age of Reason," by Thomas Paine. We hav received notice, dated January 28th, from the Canadian Express Company, that a parcel containing these books, addressed to Canadian Secular Union, care J. A. Risser, has arrived in bond (Manifest No. 917), and will be delivered on payment of duties and charges.

We understand that previous importations of these books hav been seized and confiscated by the Toronto customs officers, and that delivery of same has heretofore been refused on the proffered payment of duty.

In bringing the above books into Canada at the present time, it is our intention to legally test in the Canadian courts the right of each and every citizen to import them.

Under these circumstances, we consider that you ought to hav notice of our intentions before you render your final decision in the matter.

On Wednesday, the 5th inst., we will instruct the Canadian Express Company to effect a clearance of the same. If, in your opinion, we hav given you too short notice, we will be pleased to grant a few days' further time for you to consider the question if you will write me to that effect; or, if you think we hav information that will be of value to you in your deliberations, our committee having the matter in hand will be pleased to meet you in your office at such time as you may appoint and render you such assistance as may be in their power. J. A. RISSER, Secretary.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS, Toronto

HER MAJESTY'S CUSTOMS, TORONTO, Feb. 3, 1890.

SIR: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this date, informing me of your intention of importing twelve copies of "The Age of Reason," by Thomas Paine; and that in the event of seizure by me you purpose legally testing my right to do so in the Canadian courts.

In reply, I hav the honor to state that I shall submit your letter to the department of customs, Ottawa, for guidance and instruction as to my action in the matter. Meanwhile, it would be better, perhaps, that no customs entry be made until I hav received the instructions asked for.

JNO. DOUGLAS, Acting Collector.

J. A. RISSER, ESQ., Secretary,
Canadian Secular Union, Toronto.

TORONTO, Feb. 5, 1890.

DEAR SIR: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 3d inst., in reply to mine of same date.

We accept your suggestion, and will make no entry of the consignment of "The Age of Reason" referred to until we hav your further communication on the subject.

JOHN DOUGLAS, ESQ., J. A. RISSER, Sec.
Acting Collector of Customs, Toronto.

HER MAJESTY'S CUSTOMS, TORONTO, Feb. 7, 1890.

SIR: In further reference to your letter of the 3d instant re an importation of twelve copies of "The Age of Reason," by Thomas Paine, I beg to inform you that it is not usual for any customs officer to forecast the action which may be taken upon the actual importation of any dutiable article. The book when entered is subject to examination, and the result of that examination will depend as to whether it is wrongly entered as respects value, etc., or whether it comes under the prohibitory clause of the customs tariff.

JNO. DOUGLAS, Acting Collector.

J. A. RISSER, ESQ., Secretary,
Canadian Secular Union, Toronto.

TORONTO, Feb. 8, 1890.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of 7th inst. is received. In my letter of 3d inst. we gave you notice that we would make entry of the importation of "The Age of Reason" on 5th inst. We did not do so, as you suggested delay until you had received instructions from Ottawa.

I now understand you to say that you can render no decision in the matter until entry has been formally made. We will, therefore, giv instructions to the Canadian Express Company immediately to make the entry, and in all probability this will be done on Monday, 10th inst.

JOHN DOUGLAS, ESQ., J. A. RISSER, Sec.
Acting Collector of Customs.

On the 10th of February the books were delivered to Mr. Risser, and the government, as he expresses it, had eaten the leek.

That Blasphemous Heston!

Some little time since Heston had one of his blasphemous pictures representing a priest receiving a dollar from a poor, careworn woman, for which said priest sends a telephone dispatch to yank a cheap soul out of purgatory. The message was being received by a "patron saint."

Now, I ask, why does Mr. Heston misrepresent "the only true church?"

In Lesson Thirty-first of the Catechism, taught in parochial schools, I find the following:

Question. Does the first Commandment forbid us to pray to the saints?

Answer. The first Commandment does not forbid us to pray to the saints.

Q. What do we mean by praying to the saints?

A. By praying to the saints we mean the asking of their help and prayers.

Q. How do we know that the saints hear us?

A. We know that the saints hear us, because they are with God, who makes our prayers known to them. [Italics of the last seven words mine.]

The facts are, you see, his majesty, God himself, sits at the general receiving office, hears the messages, and then dispatches them around to St. Patheric, St. Dick, Tom, and Harry, in their various mansions.

This "revelation" excites a curious class of thoughts, such as these: As the "only true church" declares, "There is but one God," how many wires are there converging at the general office? Supposing that one-half of the Catholics of the United States pray to the saints daily, there would be, at least, some four or five million "Halloes" to attend to from these quarters in twenty-four hours. Now add the rest of the Catholic world, and just think of the business done! Business? Aye! Just listen:

Q. What benefits are derived from the communion of saints?

A. The following benefits are derived from the communion of saints: the faithful on earth assist one another by their prayers and good works, and they are aided by the intercession of the saints in heaven, while both the saints in heaven and the faithful on earth help the souls in purgatory.

It seems that his majesty makes the "saints" a kind of committee of referees; for he, God, "makes our prayers known to them," the saints; and they, in turn, "by their intercession" (to whom it does not say) assist in evacuating purgatory to make room for more. If this doctrin be true, when you find a man complaining that "business is dull," tell him to "go to"—well, either place.

Another thought is this: our sun is only one little speck in the solar system; there are millions of suns, in various states of development, it may be, but the presumption is they hav inhabited planets. Suppose that there is an average of one inhabited planet to each sun, each one having a "fallen race," and "a plan of redemption," with the necessary paraphernalia of popes, priests, saints, relics, etc., just think of the amount of telephone business! Business! yes, sir; let every idle person avoid the upper, and shun the lower region! JOHN DAVEY.

Kent, O.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President, 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia, Pa.
E. B. FOOTE, Jr., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
J. E. REMSBURG, Vice-President, ... Oak Mills, Kan.
JULIET H. SEVERANCE, Vice President, . . . Milwaukee, Wis.
IDA C CRADDOCK, Secretary, 930 North 17th st., Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, 930 North 17th street, Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Secular Union's Monthly Report.

Wm. Smith, Geneva, N. Y.	$100 00
Wm. and Mrs. Lizzie Fray, Verona, Pa.	2 00
John Mahara, Charles City, Ia.	5 00
R. R. Gurley, M.D., Washington, D. C.	1 00
F. J. Porter, Adrian, Minn. (through J. P. Mendum, Boston, Mass.)	5 00
Isaac N. Jones, Cadoxton, South Wales (through A. L Jones, Pittsburgh, Pa.)	1 00
George N. Hill, Boston, Mass.	3 00
Thos. Knight, Ceresco, Mich.	5 00
C. Putnam, Gibbon, Neb. (for Literature fund)	2 00
Hon. N. D. Goodell, Sacramento, Cal.	10 00
Geo. Stephens, Moline, Ill.	10 00
B. G. Morrison, Warren, Pa.	1 00
George E. Andruss, Pleasant Prairie, Wis.	5 00
A. E. Smith, Beres, O.	1 00
Aaron Davis, Frederick, Md.	1 00
Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., New York city	25 00
Neillsville, Wis., A. S. U. Auxiliary, through C. Strange (charter fee)	5 00
Wm. B. Young, Mackinac Island, Mich.	1 00
Luke Wm. Gallup, Westminster, Cal.	50
Louis Wolfes, Martinsburg, W Va.	2 00
Herman Bohda, Martinsburg, W. Va.	2 00
John Leitch, Mazo Manie, Wis. (through THE TRUTH SEEKER)	2 00
M. Reiman, New York (for Publishing fund)	25 00
Wm. H. Pepper, Petaluma, Cal.	10 00
A Friend.	10 00
Robert Stein, Washington, D. C.	5 00
Total	$243 50

F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, per I. C. C.

The Gage Gathering.

I choose words for a headline which express just what I mean. Mrs. Matilda Joslyn Gage has practically gathered herself together and held a meeting at Washington, February 24th and 25th, under the guise of a "convention." The convention was a conspicuous failure, but Mrs. Gage was an illustrious success. She had placarded Willard's Hotel and the hall with the announcement that the "Woman's National Liberal Union" would hold a convention. Who authorized this name I do not know, as the question of a name did not come before the convention at all. Reference was made to an "executiv board," but who appointed such board I do not know. It is certain that the convention did not appoint it, as the subject was never mentioned there. The program for the morning of the second day announced, "Discussion of resolutions," but there was no discussion. They were merely read. The "Adoption of resolutions" was on the printed program of the afternoon, but they were not even mentioned. The "Announcement of permanent officers" by the chair was made according to the program, but the convention was not asked to approve them.

When Mrs. Gage was asked privately why these matters were not brought before the convention, she curtly answered, "It was not thought best." What I want to say is, that the convention had no voice in anything. I attended every session and speak from personal knowledge when I say that but two votes were taken. One was on expressing a preference as to the place of the next meeting, the other was a vote of thanks to the press. There was a preconcerted arrangement that the convention should hav no voice, and everything was cut and dried and executed by Mrs. Gage. One member of her so-called "committee" told me that, although she had attended every meeting, she did not know what was done, as there were matters decided that had not ever been before them.

When Mrs. Gage assumed the chair at the opening of the so-called "convention," she simply said: "By virtue of the fact that I hav been the oldest worker in this cause, and this meeting is, to some extent, the result of my own efforts, I shall assume to act as temporary president this morning. Mr. William H. Aldrich will also act as temporary secretary." The bad grammar of this announcement might be excused if these persons had not continued to act as president and secretary to the last, without a vote of the convention. They were not approved, either as temporary or permanent officers. This notable woman suffragist did not allow the women of the convention to vote, and there were many "curses not loud but deep" among the attendants.

The course of Mrs. Gage can be accounted for only in one way. She had been repressed and suppressed by Susan B. Anthony and her compeers so often through a large number of years that she was determined to hav everything her own way for once.

Her very bad grammar, her monotonous voice, her egotism and lack of manners, could all hav been excused had she not been guilty of such insufferable self-assertion.

Mr. Wm. F. Aldrich, of Alabama, is said to hav paid the expenses of the "Gage Gathering." In the Liberal Thinker, edited by Mrs. Gage, and paid for by the Aldrichs, Mrs. Aldrich is said to hav been known throughout the United States, for years, as Miss Josephine Cables, who edited the Occult World, published at Rochester, N. Y., and who is "a woman of wonderful spiritual insight, occult powers, and humanitarian principles."

Now for the officers not approved by the convention: President, Matilda Joslyn Gage, New York; vice-president, Josephine Cables Aldrich, Alabama; secretary, Mary E. Coues, Washington; treasurer, Wm. F. Aldrich, Alabama. These are all avowed Theosophists, except Mrs. Gage, who is said to hav a way of proving that woman is the Holy Ghost of the orthodox trinity.

The following persons were added, not by the convention, to the officers forming the executiv council: Susan A. Wixon, Eliza A. Conner, Micca Hoffman, Marietta M. Bones, and Clara S. Foltz. This council is, hereafter, to fill all vacancies and to elect all officers without any reference to any convention—a self-constituted and self-perpetuating close corporation, which will not allow of any interference.

We now come to the resolutions. Prof. Elliot Coues was chairman of this committee, but could only hav been a figurehead, as Mrs. Gage told me that she wrote nearly all of the resolutions before she left home, and another person told me that she furnished two, which were revised by Mrs. Gage. Instead of taking up space in details, I would simply say that there are twelve resolutions. Ten of these might hav been passed by any congress of the American Secular Union (excepting the platitudes). They relate mainly to the work of state secularization in which our organization is so successfully engaged. The other two are not true. It is not a fact that "every church, of whatever name, is based on the theory that woman was created secondary and inferior to man, and that she brought sin into the world, and necessitated the sacrifice of a savior." The Universalists, the Unitarians, the Friends (Hicksites), and several other churches, as heartily oppose this view as does Mrs. Gage. Nor is it true that "every church is the enemy of liberty and progress."

One word more. Mrs. Gage was terribly afraid that there was a plot to capture her convention by the American Secular Union. Ida C. Craddock, our secretary, had said something about auxiliaries in a letter published in our Liberal papers, and Mrs. Westbrook has written to Mrs. Gage, suggesting that possibly we might work together, etc.; and she was very apprehensiv on this subject. When Mrs. Westbrook and myself entered a preliminary meeting at the express invitation of Susan H. Wixon, and with the express consent of Mr. Aldrich (in whose room the meeting was held), Mrs. Gage sprang to her feet, and seizing us both by the arm, exclaimed: "You must go out! You are the president of another society, and I don't mean to be the bob to the tail of anybody's kite." We were led out into the hall, and were thus unceremoniously dismissed. This is probably the reason why nothing was permitted to come before the convention for approval or dissent.

Permit me to say that this was an unnecessary fright for Mrs. Gage. I had never thought of capturing the convention. I had no desire to interfere in any way. I am an advocate of woman's enfranchisment, and hav been for thirty years, and am heartily in favor of a woman suffrage society to resist the encroachment of the orthodox church; and I am an enemy to all forms of ecclesiasticism and sacerdotalism. We hav missed a grand opportunity to form such a society. Let every person treat Mrs. Gage's Gathering as a nullity. Let us put a woman suffrage plank in with our Nine Demands of Secularism—and then we shall not need any other "gathering."

How true it is that when the slave becomes master she is the most tyrannical of drivers! Mrs. Gage was to show Miss Anthony how to run a convention, and she has foolishly run hers into the ground!

R. B. WESTBROOK,
Pres. American Secular Union.

Philadelphia, March 1, 1890.

England's Opinion of Our Annual.

From Watts's Literary Guide.

This ANNUAL has now become a recognized feature in American literary Freethought. Skilfully edited by Mr. E. M. Macdonald, it has the good fortune to hav for contributors some of the most capable writers across the Atlantic. The current issue is a remarkably strong number. Besides an admirably compiled calendar and an encouraging record of Freethought progress in the United States, there are several lengthy and brilliant essays, and an ambitious novelet by Miss Helen Gardener, the author of "Men, Women, and Gods." Mr. Macdonald's account of his experiences "In Search of a Spirit" is delightfully humorous; the Ex-Rev. H. O. Pentecost's narrativ of "Why I Left the Church" is deeply earnest; while Mr. W. Stewart Ross's paper, "Mostly Fools?" is terribly pessimistic. Perhaps the two most useful features in the ANNUAL are the illustrated articles on "The Middle Ages" and "The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity." The illustrations throughout—with the exception of the frontispiece, "The Burning of Bruno"—are admirably executed.

Why Am I An Agnostic?

From the North American Review.

PART II.

The Christian religion rests on miracles. There are no miracles in the realm of science. The real philosopher does not seek to excite wonder, but to make that plain which was wonderful. He does not endeavor to astonish, but to enlighten. He is perfectly confident that there are no miracles in nature. He knows that the mathematical expression of the same relations, contents, areas, numbers, and proportions must forever remain the same. He knows that there are no miracles in chemistry; that the attractions and repulsions, the loves and hatreds, of atoms are constant. Under like conditions, he is certain that like will always happen; that the product ever has been and forever will be the same; that the atoms or particles unite in definit, unvarying proportions—so many of one kind mix, mingle, and harmonize with just so many of another, and the surplus will be forever cast out. There are no exceptions. Substances are always true to their natures. They hav no caprices, no prejudices, that can vary or control their action. They are "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."

In this fixedness, this constancy, this eternal integrity, the intelligent man has absolute confidence. It is useless to tell him that there was a time when fire would not consume the combustible, when water would not flow in obedience to the attraction of gravitation, or that there ever was a fragment of a moment during which substance had no weight.

Credulity should be the servant of intelligence. The ignorant hav not credulity enough to believe the actual, because the actual appears to be contrary to the evidence of their senses. To them it is plain that the sun rises and sets, and they hav not credulity enough to believe in the rotary motion of the earth—that is to say, they hav not intelligence enough to comprehend the absurdities involved in their belief, and the perfect harmony between the rotation of the earth and all known facts. They trust their eyes, not their reason. Ignorance has always been and always will be at the mercy of appearance. Credulity, as a rule, believes everything except the truth. The semi-civilized believe in astrology, but who could convince them of the vastness of astronomical spaces, the speed of light, or the magnitude and number of suns and constellations? If Hermann and Humboldt could hav appeared before savages, which would hav been regarded as a god?

When men knew nothing of mechanics, nothing of correlation of force, and of its indestructibility, they were believers in perpetual motion. So when chemistry was a kind of sleight-of-hand, or necromancy, something accomplished by the aid of the supernatural, people talked about the transmutation of metals, the universal solvent, and the philosopher's stone. Perpetual motion would be a mechanical miracle; and the transmutation of metals would be a miracle in chemistry; and if we could make the result of multiplying two by two five, that would be a miracle in mathematics. No one expects to find a circle the diameter of which is just one-fourth of the circumference. If one could find such a circle then there would be a miracle in geometry.

In other words, there are no miracles in any science. The moment we understand a question or subject, the miraculous necessarily disappears. If anything actually happens in the chemical world, it will, under like conditions, happen again. No one need take an account of this result from the mouths of others: all can try the experiment for themselvs. There is no caprice, and no accident.

It is admitted, at least by the Protestant world, that the age of miracles has passed away, and, consequently, miracles can not at present be established by miracles; they must be substantiated by the testimony of witnesses who are said by certain writers—or, rather, by uncertain writers—to hav lived several centuries ago; and this testimony is given to us, not by the witnesses themselvs, not by persons who say that they talked with those witnesses, but by unknown persons who did not giv the sources of their information.

The question is: Can miracles be established except by miracles? We know that the writers may hav been mistaken. It is possible that they may hav manufactured these accounts themselvs. The witnesses may hav told what they knew to be untrue, or they may hav been honestly deceived, or the stories may hav been true as first told. Imagination may hav added greatly to them, so that after several centuries of accretion a very simple truth was changed to a miracle.

We must admit that all probabilities must be against miracles, for the reason that that which is probable cannot by any possibility be a miracle. Neither the probable nor the possible, so far as man is concerned, can be miraculous. The probability therefore says that the writers and witnesses were either mistaken or dishonest.

We must admit that we hav never seen a miracle ourselvs, and we must admit that according to our experience, there are no miracles. If we hav mingled with the world, we are compelled to say that we hav known a vast number of persons—including ourselvs—to be mistaken, and many others who hav failed to tell the exact truth. The probabilities are on the side of our experience, and, consequently, against the miraculous; and it is a necessity that the free mind moves along the path of least resistance.

The effect of testimony depends on the intelligence and honesty of the witness and the intelligence of him who weighs. A man living in a community where the supernatural is expected, where the miraculous is supposed to be of almost daily occurrence, will, as a rule, believe that all wonderful things are the result of supernatural agencies. He will expect providential interference, and, as a consequence, his mind will pursue the path of least resistance, and will account for all phenomena by what to him is the easiest method. Such people, with the best intentions, honestly bear false witness. They hav been imposed upon by appearances, and are victims of delusion and illusion.

In an age when reading and writing were substantially unknown, and when history itself was but the vaguest hearsay handed down from dotage to infancy, nothing was rescued from oblivion except the wonderful, the miraculous. The more marvelous the story, the greater the interest excited. Narrators and hearers were alike ignorant and alike honest. At that time nothing was known, nothing suspected, of the orderly course of nature—of the unbroken and unbreakable chain of causes and effects. The world was governed by caprice. Everything was at the mercy of a being, or beings, who were themselvs controled by the same passions that dominate man. Fragments of facts were taken for the whole, and the deductions drawn were honest and monstrous.

It is probably certain that all the religions of the world hav been believed, and that all the miracles hav found credence in countless brains; otherwise they could not hav been perpetuated. They were not all born of cunning. Those who told were as honest as those who heard. This being so, nothing has been too absurd for human credence.

All religions, so far as I know, claim to hav been miraculously founded, miraculously preserved, and miraculously propagated. The priests of all claimed to hav messages from God, and claimed to hav a certain authority, and the miraculous has always been appealed to for the purpose of substantiating the message and the authority.

If men believe in the supernatural, they will account for all phenomena by an appeal to supernatural means or power. We know that formerly everything was accounted for in this way except some few simple things with which man thought he was perfectly acquainted. After a time men found that under like conditions like would happen, and as to those things the supposition of supernatural interference was abandoned; but that interference was still activ as to all the unknown world. In other words, as the circle of man's knowledge grew, supernatural interference withdrew and was activ only just beyond the horizon of the known.

Now, there are some believers in universal special providence—that is, men who believe in perpetual interferehce by a supernatural power, this interference being for the purpose of punishing or rewarding, of destroying or preserving, individuals and nations.

Others hav abandoned the idea of providence in ordinary matters, but still believe that God interferes on great occasions and at critical moments, especially in the affairs of nations, and that his presence is manifest in great disasters. This is the compromise position. These people believe that an infinit being made the universe and impressed upon it what they are pleased to call "laws," and then left it to run in accordance with those laws and forces; that as a rule it works well, and that the divine maker interferes only in cases of accident, or at moments when the machine fails to accomplish the original design.

There are others who take the ground that all is natural; that there never has been, never will be, never can be any interference from without, for the reason that nature embraces all, and that there can be no without or beyond.

The first class are Theists pure and simple; the second are Theists as to the unknown, Naturalists as to the known; and the third are Naturalists without a touch or taint of superstition.

What can the evidence of the first class be worth? This question is answered by reading the history of those nations that believed thoroughly and implicitly in the supernatural. There is no conceivable absurdity that was not established by their testimony. Every law or every fact in nature was violated. Children were born without parents; men lived for thousands of years; others subsisted without food, without sleep; thousands and thousands were possessed with evil spirits, controled by ghosts and ghouls; thousands confessed themselvs guilty of impossible offenses, and in courts, with the most solemn forms, impossibilities were substantiated by the oaths, affirmations, and confessions of men, women, and children.

These delusions were not confined to ascetics and peasants, but they took possession of nobles and kings; of people who were at that time called intelligent; of the then educated. No one denied these wonders, for the reason that denial was a crime punishable generally with death. Societies, nations, became insane—victims of ignorance, of dreams, and, above all, of fears. Under these conditions human testimony is not and cannot be of the slightest value. We now know that nearly all of the history of the world is false, and we know this because we hav arrived at that phase or point of intellectual development where and when we know that effects must hav causes, that everything is naturally produced, and that, consequently, no nation could ever hav been great, powerful, and rich unless it had the soil, the people, the intelligence, and the commerce. Weighed in these scales, nearly all histories are found to be fictions.

The same is true of religions. Every intelligent American is satisfied that the religions of India, of Egypt, of Greece and Rome, of the Aztecs, were and are false, and that all the miracles on which they rest are mistakes. Our religion alone is excepted. Every intelligent Hindoo discards all religions and all miracles except his own. The question is: When will people see the defects in their own theology as clearly as they perceive the same defects in every other?

All the so-called false religions were substantiated by miracles, by signs and wonders, by prophets and martyrs, precisely as our own. Our witnesses are no better than theirs, and our success is no greater. If their miracles were false, ours cannot be true. Nature was the same in India and in Palestine.

One of the corner-stones of Christianity is the miracle of inspiration, and this same miracle lies at the foundation of all religions. How can the fact of inspiration be established? How could even the inspired man know that he was inspired? If he was influenced to write, and did write, and did express thoughts and facts that to him were absolutely new, on subjects about which he had previously known nothing, how could he know that he had been influenced by an infinit being? And if he could know, how could he convince others?

What is meant by inspiration? Did the one inspired set down only the thoughts of a supernatural being? Was he simply an instrument, or did his personality color the message received and given? Did he mix his ignorance with the divine information, his prejudices and hatreds with the love and justice of the deity? If God told him not to eat the flesh of any beast that dieth of itself, did the same infinit being also tell him to sell this meat to the stranger within his gates?

A man says that he is inspired—that God appeared to him in a dream, and told him certain things. Now, the things said to hav been communicated may hav been good and wise; but will the fact that the communication is good or wise establish the inspiration? If, on the other hand, the communication is absurd or wicked, will that conclusivly show that the man was not inspired? Must we judge from the communication? In other words, is our reason to be the final standard?

How could the inspired man know that the communication was received from God? If God in reality should appear to a human being, how could this human being know who had appeared? By what standard would he judge? Upon this question man has no experience; he is not familiar enough with the supernatural to know gods even if they exist. Although thousands hav pretended to receive messages, there has been no message in which there was, or is, anything above the invention of man. There are just as wonderful things in the uninspired as in the inspired books, and the prophecies of the heathen hav been fulfilled equally with those of the Judean prophets. If, then, even the inspired man cannot certainly know that he is inspired, how is it possible for him to demonstrate his inspiration to others? The last solution of this question is that inspiration is a miracle about which only the inspired can hav the least knowledge, or the least evidence, and this knowledge and this evidence not of a character to convince even the inspired.

There is certainly nothing in the Old or the New Testament that could not hav been written by uninspired human beings. To me there is nothing of any particular value in the Pentateuch. I do not know of a solitary scientific truth contained in the five books commonly attributed to Moses. There is not, as far as I know, a line in the book of Genesis calculated to make a human being better. The laws contained in Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy are for the most part pueril and cruel. Surely there is nothing in any of these books that could not hav been produced by uninspired men. Certainly there is nothing calculated to excite intellectual admiration in the book of Judges or in the wars of Joshua; and the same may be said of Samuel, Chronicles, and Kings. The history is extremely childish, full of repetitions, of useless details, without the slightest philosophy, without a generalization born of a wide survey. Nothing is known of other nations; nothing imparted of the slightest value; nothing about education, discovery, or invention. And these idle and stupid annals are interspersed with myth and miracle, with flattery for kings who supported priests, and with curses and denunciations for those who would not hearken to the voice of the prophets. If all the historic books of the Bible were blotted from the memory of mankind, nothing of value would be lost.

Is it possible that the writer or writers of First and Second Kings were inspired, and that Gibbon wrote "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" without supernatural assistance? Is it possible that the author of Judges was simply the instrument of an infinit God, while John W. Draper wrote "The Intellectual Development of Europe" without one ray of light from the other world? Can we believe that the author of Genesis had to be inspired, while Darwin experimented, ascertained, and reached conclusions for himself?

Ought not the work of a God to be vastly superior to that of a man? And if the writers of the Bible were in reality inspired, ought not that book to be the greatest of books? For instance, if it were contended that certain statues had been chiseled by inspired men, such statues should be superior to any that uninspired man has made. As long as it is admitted that the Venus de Milo is the work of man, no one will believe in inspired sculptors—at least until a superior statue has been found. So in the world of painting. We admit that Corot was uninspired. Nobody claims that Angelo had supernatural assistance. Now, if some one should claim that a certain painter was simply the instrumentality of God, certainly the pictures produced by that painter should be superior to all others.

I do not see how it is possible for an intelligent human being to conclude that the Song of Solomon is the work of God, and that the tragedy of "Lear" was the work of an uninspired man. We are all liable to be mistaken, but the Iliad seems to me a greater work than the book of Esther, and I prefer it to the writings of Haggai and Hosea. Æschylus is superior to Jeremiah, and Shakspere rises immeasurably above all the sacred books of the world.

It does not seem possible that any human being ever tried to establish a truth—anything that really happened—by what is called a miracle. It is easy to understand how that which was common became wonderful by accretion—by things added, and by things forgotten—and it is easy to conceive how that which was wonderful became by accretion what was called supernatural. But it does not seem possible that any intelligent, honest man ever endeavored to prove anything by a miracle.

As a matter of fact, miracles could only satisfy people who demanded no evidence; else how could they hav believed the miracle? It also appears to be certain that, even if miracles had been performed, it would be impossible to establish that fact by human testimony. In other words, miracles can only be established by miracles, and in no event could miracles be evidence except to those who were actually present; and in order for miracles to be of any value, they would hav to be perpetual. It must also be remembered that a miracle actually performed could by no possibility shed any light on any moral truth, or add to any human obligation.

If any man has ever been inspired, this is a secret miracle, known to no person, and suspected only by the man claiming to be inspired. It would not be in the power of the inspired to giv satisfactory evidence of that fact to anybody else.

The testimony of man is insufficient to establish the supernatural. Neither the evidence of one man nor of twelve can stand when contradicted by the experience of the intelligent world. If a book sought to be proved by miracles is true, then it makes no difference whether it was inspired or not; and if it is not true, inspiration cannot add to its value.

The truth is that the church has always—unconsciously, perhaps—offered rewards for falsehood. It was founded upon the supernatural, the miraculous, and it welcomed all statements calculated to support the foundation. It rewarded the traveler who found evidences of the miraculous, who had seen the pillar of salt into which the wife of Lot had been changed, and the tracks of Pharaoh's chariots on the sands of the Red sea. It heaped honors on the historian who filled his pages with the absurd and impossible. It had geologists and astronomers of its own who constructed the earth and the constellations in accordance with the Bible. With sword and flame it destroyed the brave and thoughtful men who told the truth. It was the enemy of investigation and of reason. Faith and fiction were in partnership.

To-day the intelligence of the world denies the miraculous. Ignorance is the soil of the supernatural. The foundation of Christianity has crumbled, has disappeared, and the entire fabric must fall. The natural is true. The miraculous is false.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

I BEGAN to doubt if it was possible that an omniscient God would giv a revelation to men that would set all the world "by the ears" in their efforts to interpret it.—R. C. Adams.

Communications.

The Infidel's Catechism.

Question. What is a doctor of divinity?

Answer. It is one who has graduated in the art of using language to conceal his thoughts.

Q. Why did Talleyrand when asked for what purpose language was given to man, reply, "To conceal our thoughts?"

A. Because that was the prevailing use of language in his day; which usage was then enforced by the combined powers of church and state.

Q. Why did Copernicus withhold from the public his work on astronomy until he was on the verge of the grave?

A. Because he had violated a law of the church by using language to express thought, and he wanted to keep his crime concealed until he was beyond the reach of the church.

Q What was Bruno's crime?

A. Using language to express his thoughts.

Q. For what purpose was he locked up in a dungeon and tortured for six years?

A. To try to make him use language to conceal his thoughts.

Q. Why was he burnt alive at the stake?

A. Because he persisted in shocking Christians by using language to express his thoughts.

Q Why was Galileo imprisoned by the church?

A. Because he violated the law of the church by using language to express his thoughts on astronomy.

Q. Why was he not burnt like Bruno?

A. Because when offered by the church the cruel alternativ of telling a lie by saying that his language had not expressed his thoughts, or to be burnt like Bruno, he weakened and told the lie, and promised that he would use language to conceal his thoughts.

Q Why was the beautiful Hypatia so brutally murdered by a Christian mob of Alexandria?

A. Because she shocked the Christians by using language to express thought.

Q. Why is Thomas Paine so hated by the clerics?

A. Because he used language to express thought, which was against the rules of the church.

Q. George Washington's thoughts on the subject of theology were similar to Paine's. Why do the clerics hate Paine and honor Washington?

A. Because Paine published his thoughts, and Washington concealed his.

Q. Why do the clerics claim that Abraham Lincoln became a Christian about the time that he went to Washington city?

A. Because, like a Christian, he concealed his thoughts after he became president.

Q. For what is Colonel Ingersoll noted?

A. For proficiency in the art of using language to express thoughts.

Q. For what is Talmage noted?

A. For proficiency in the art of using language to conceal his thoughts.

Ever since the establishment of the papal hierarchy hypocrisy has been regarded as a virtue and sincerity a crime. The church regards it as a virtue to conceal our thoughts, and a crime to express them.

P. F. Shumaker.

Slate-writing and Legerdemain.

Brother Macdonald: I hav just read your article in the Truth Seeker Annual, "In Search of a Spirit." It appears to hav been an unsatisfactory search; you ought to hav got better results from slate-writing. But everyone familiar with the so-called Spiritual phenomena knows that the occult power is very capricious. The mediums are too often blamed for what they cannot help.

I am sorry you could not hav had a slate-writing test from P. S. O. A. Keeler, such as I got and described in The Truth Seeker of May 12, 1888.

But now, in regard to your article in the Annual, I wish only to take exception to one statement. You say you "hav seen no display of ingenuity equal to the achievements of those who acknowledge no aid from the spirits of translated men."

The tricks of conjurers are pretty easily discovered. Most of them are known and published. When you once know how the thing is done the performance is no longer interesting. Giv me six successiv private performances of a particular feat of legerdemain and if I cannot tell you how it is done you may call me a fool. And now, in conclusion, I make the following challenge:

TO ANY CONJURER.

Let me write in your presence, but without your seeing what I write, the names of four deceased friends on four slips of paper. Let me fold them up and place them on a table before us. You may handle them, but must not open one of them, and they must remain in sight on the table all the time. I will bring two slates. You may handle them before I tie them, with a bit of pencil between them, and lay them on the table before us. I will wait half an hour for writing on the slates, which you may touch and even handle while on the table, but without untying or separating them at all.

Now, then, if on opening those slates at the end of half an hour I shall find written on one of them a single one of the names I hav written on the folded papers, I will pay you twenty dollars. But if no such name is written you shall forfeit five dollars to me.

And for each, or any one of the other three names written by me on the folded papers, I will pay you twenty dollars if the same shall appear on the slates when opened by me. Nor will I exact any further forfeit for non-performance than the five dollars.

W. H. Burr.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 14, 1890.

A Voice from the West Indies.

Vishnu, the second person of the Hindoo trinity, has become incarnate nine times:

(1) "As a fish, to save the Vedas.

(2) "As a tortoise, to support the earth, which was in danger of sinking into chaos; hence the Hindoos believe to this day that the earth rests on the back of a tortoise.

(3) "As a boar, to draw the earth out of mud and water with his tusks.

(4) "As a lion-man, to destroy a monster who was devastating the earth.

(5) "As a dwarf.

(6) "As a giant.

(7) "As Ram.

(8) "As Christna.

(9) "As Buddha."

The Hindoos are still looking for another incarnation, which is supposed to be his last. They are ignorant of the form that it will assume.

There is an annual rite, practiced mainly by the people from Madras, and which is called "passing the fire." The communicants, with their priests, all nearly naked, pass several times through smoldering ashes. This sacrifice is in honor of an Indian god called Madrivele. This god was endowed with the peculiar faculty of entering houses through the smallest crevice. He is said to hav been very fond of chickens and rum, and it is on this account that rum-drinking and chicken-eating play such conspicuous parts in the annual rite of "passing the fire."

The Mohammedans, or Mussulmans, come next in number. Their creed is, "There is but one God, and Mohammed is his prophet." The Mohammedan prays five times a day with his face turned toward Mecca. The Mohammedans are divided into two branches or sects, Shiahs and the Sunnis.

The Shiahs commemorate the death of Hosien, the son of Ali, by parading about the sugar estates beating drums, and carrying paper houses of different colors, which represent the tomb of Hosien.

Very few East Indians become converts to Christianity. They do not seem to care for this religion. A most barbarous act was committed by this Christian government on the East Indians of the Mussulman faith. A few years ago, these Indians were permitted to parade the streets of the cities on the day of the commemoration of the death of Hosien. The government prohibited these parades, and on these people insisting on their rights, they were shot down like dogs by the armed constabulary. This is a crying shame!

A good joke is told of an officer in India, who, addressing his nativ servant, asked, "What religion are you belonging to, Ramsammee?"

Nativ: "Same church like Sahib; me eat beef and drink grog, sar!" To him Christianity and grog-drinking were synonymous terms. E. S.

Port-of-Spain, Feb. 8, 1890.

Eminent Women.

Anna Letitia Barbauld was born in Leicestershire in 1743, and received an excellent education from her father, Dr. Aikin. In 1772 she published a volume of poems which gave her a high place among her poetical contemporaries, and in the following year she joined her brother in getting out a volume of miscellanies. She published numerous works—"Early Lessons," "Biographical and Critical Essays," etc.

Lady Jane Gray was born 1537 in Leicestershire. Her talents were of a superior order, and by the time she was seventeen she had mastered Greek, Latin, Hebrew, Chaldee, Arabic, French, and Italian.

In 1553 she married Lord Guildford Dudley, and shortly afterward, reluctantly accepted the diadem which the intrigues of her father and her father-in-law had induced Edward VI. to settle upon her. She only reigned nine days, and then was committed to the Tower with her husband, and, in 1554, they were brought to the scaffold by the relentless Mary. Her "Remains" were published after her death, and some of her letters and essays are preserved in Fox's "Martyrology."

Joan of Arc—Maid of Orleans—has been called the greatest of heroins. She was born 1416 in Lorraine. Her parents were poor, and her occupation that of shepherdess and taking care of horses at an inn. Her mind was of a superior order, and she brooded over the wrongs of her country, and the sufferings of the people, and the means of relieving them, till she imagined she heard a voice from heaven commanding her to become the deliverer of France. She was presented to the king and he accepted her services. The idea of her being supernaturally sent by heaven, just chimed in with the superstitions of the age, and inspired her countrymen and depressed the English.

Her first exploit was the relieving of Orleans in May, 1428, after having defeated the besiegers. The tide of her success was rapid. City after city was conquered, and in July, 1429, the Maid led her sovereign to be crowned in the cathedral of Rheims. She now wished to retire, but the king found her services too valuable, and so persuaded her to remain with the army, which she did till 1431, when she was taken prisoner by the Burgundians, while she was heading a sally from Compiegne. Her captors sold her to the English, who cruelly burnt her at Rouen, May 31, 1431, on the charge of sorcery.

Maria Annie Angelica Catherine Kauffman, an eminent artist, was born 1741 at Coire, and was instructed by her father; she was a good portrait-painter at the early age of eleven years. In 1781 she married Zucchi, a Venetian painter. She excelled in poetical subjects; her drawing was good and coloring attractiv. She etched with good spirit, and was also a perfect mistress of music, which, at one time, she intended adopting as a profession. She died in 1807 at Rome.

Ismene was the daughter of Edipus and Jocasta, who, when her sister Antigone had been condemned to be buried alive by Creon, for giving burial to her brother, Polynices, against the tyrant's positiv orders, declared herself as guilty as her sister, and insisted on being punished with her.

Antigone was the daughter of the king of Thebes (Edipus) by his mother Jocasta. After the death of her father and two brothers she went to Thebes to bury her brother, which the king had forbidden. Antigone succeeded in sprinkling dust three times on her brother's body, which was then and there equivalent to burial. For this she was immured alive in a tomb, where she hanged herself.

Haemon, the son of the king (Creon), to whom she was betrothed, broke into the tomb and there killed himself, and his mother—Eurydice—also committed suicide; all of which show the power and influence of woman's love, and strength of will and purpose to die rather than suffer wrong.

Cynisca, a daughter of Archidamus, king of Sparta, was the first woman who ever turned attention to the training of steeds, and the first that obtained a prize at the Olympic games.

Marie de Rabutin-Chantal Sévigné, marchioness, was born 1627, in Burgundy, and left an orphan at an early age. At eighteen she married the Marquis de Sévigné, who was killed in a duel seven years afterward, leaving her with a son and daughter, to whom she entirely devoted herself. To her daughter she was particularly attached, and to her were addressed the major part of the noted letters which hav placed the marchioness in the first rank of epistolary writers. She died in 1696. The best edition of her letters is in eleven volumes octavo.

E. D. Slenker.

Italy and the Church.

From 1866 up to 1880 the Italian government was obliged to confiscate the following amount of property and suppress religious houses and clergy to the number indicated by the table.

Income of real and movable property seized by the government, about	$ 11,000,000
Value of same property	330,000,000
Number of religious sent adrift, about	60,000
" " ecclesiastics deprived	40,478
" " religious houses suppressed	4,244
" " " corporations "	2,179
" " secular clergy foundations suppressed	46,237
Number of other foundations suppressed	50,973

The confiscation of the "Opera Pie" will, according to a report made in 1880, remove from the administration of the Roman church to the government the following charities:

General charities	3,668
Dowry "	2,694
Hospitals	1,139
Institutions furnishing grain to poor peasants	1,965
Congregations of charity	2,633
Miscellaneous	1,553
Shelter asylums	239
Foundations for nursing sick at home	1,028
School charities	508
Infants' asylums	340
For the aged	397
For orphans	463
Monti di pietæ	695
For prisoners	13
For poor nursing mothers	15
For poor laborers	16
For pregnant women nursed at home	41
Maternity hospitals	18
Seaside	10
Lunatic asylums	15
Deaf-mute and blind asylums	26
Nursling and foundling	102
Agrarian loan funds	30
Total	17,608
Gross revenues of these foundations, about	$ 18,000,000
Value of properties in 1861, about	200,000,000

Woman and Maternity.

From the World.

"Education and Maternity. Woman's Proper Sphere. Dr. Montrose Pallen Points Out the Dangers Which Threaten Intellectual and Society Women," and similar headlines were a prelude to an article by this able physician in the Sunday World of February 2d. It seems to me that in discussing no other question in life is there so little logical reasoning and so much arbitrary dogmatism, as in the ones which are usually embraced under "woman's sphere."

In the first place, the doctor assumes that because women are mothers they are nothing else—that because this is her sphere she can hav, should hav no other.

Men are fathers. That is their sphere, therefore they should not be mentally developed, legally and politically emancipated, socially civilized, or economically independent. That would appear to most men doubtless as a somewhat absurd proposition. It appears so to me; but it is not one whit less absurd when applied to women. Yet this is constantly done.

Because women are mothers is the very reason why they should be developed mentally and physically and socially to their highest possible capacity. The old theory that a teacher was good enough for a primary class if she knew her "A B C's" and little else, has long since been exploded. A high degree of intellectual capacity and a broad mental grasp is more important in those who hav the training and molding of small children than if the children were older. The younger the mind the less capable it is to guide itself intelligently and therefore the more important is it that the guide be both wise and well informed. In a college, if a professor is only a little wiser than his class, it does not make so much difference. In a post-graduate course it makes even less, for here all are supposed to be somewhat mature. Each has within himself an intelligent guide, a reasoner, a questioner and one to answer questions.

With little children, the one who has them in charge most closely must be all this and more. She must understand the proportions of things and wherein they touch each other—the bearing and trend of mental and physical phenomena. She must furnish self-poise to the nervous child and stimulus to the phlegmatic one. She must be able to read signs and interpret indications in the mental and moral as well as in the physical being of those within her care. All this she must be able to do readily and with apparent unconsciousness if she is best fitted to deal with and develop small children. More than this, she must be not only able to detect but to hav the wisdom to guide, to stimulate, to restrain, to develop the plastic creature in her keeping. If she had the wisdom of the fabled gods and the self-poise of the Milo she would not be too well equipped for educating—to do the best for the race in her keeping. But more than this the ideal mother should know and be. She must hav love too loyal and sense of obligation too profound to recklessly bring into the world children she cannot properly endow or care for.

It does not appear to occur to the physicians and politicians who discuss this question that it may be due to other causes than incapacity, that educated women are the mothers of fewer children than are the "ideal wives and mothers" of whom Dr. Pallen speaks—the squaws, the Kaffirs and Black Feet Indian women, who devote but a few hours to the "completion of this act of nature."

It is no doubt true that habits of civilization do tend to make the dangers of motherhood greater. So do they tend to render men less sturdy—less perfect animals. A Kaffir or an Indian buck would not find it necessary to stay at home from his office because of a broken arm or a gunshot wound in his leg. He would tramp sturdily through the forest and sleep in the jungle with an arrow imbedded in his flesh; he would sit stolidly down on a log and cut it out of himself with a scalping knife. Yet nobody would think it a desirable thing for a member of the Union League Club to stop on his way up Fifth avenue and attend to his own surgery on the sidewalk. They would expect him to faint and be "taken tenderly to the nearest drug-store" and a doctor would be sent for. He would be put under the influence of anesthetics during the operation and carefully nursed for weeks afterward by his devoted wife and an intelligent physician. Then if he pulled through it would be because of his "magnificent physique, his pluck, and the excellent treatment he received."

Well, now, is he a less "manly man" than the Kaffir or the Indian buck? Is he a less desirable husband or father? Is he deteriorating in his sphere? The fact is that the more sensitiv men hav become to pain—whether it be mental or physical—the more manly hav they grown, the more nearly fitted to be the fathers of a race of men and women who are not mere brutes. The race does not need the brute type any longer. It has already too many mere human animals to deal with—in its asylums, almshouses, prisons, and impoverished districts.

This world is in no danger of suffering from a lack of children. The cry has always been "over population," and even in our new country the cry has begun. Not more children but a better kind of children is what is needed. Who will be likely to furnish these—the ideal squaw "wife," or the educated woman who knows that her obligation to her child begins before it is born, and does not end even with her death, for she must leave it the heritage of a good name, an earnest life, a noble example, even after she is gone?

If by "being unfitted for the sphere of wife and mother" the doctor really intends to say that this sphere is truly that of a mere animal—a healthy animal—if he means that in order to be an ideal wife to civilized man, woman should remain a savage; if to be a perfect mother to an intellectually advancing race, she need not even comprehend the advance, then truly are these arguments against her higher education and intellectual development logical. But even then they are not fair. Why? Simply because she has not been consulted as to her choice in the matter. The argument is still based on the tremendous assumption that man's happiness, man's desires, man's wishes, man's rights, are the sum total of all desire, all right, all freedom, all happiness, and all justice.

If a man does not choose to become the father of ten or twelve children, nobody on earth feels called upon to criticise him as not properly filling his sphere—as out of his proper sphere in case he prefers to spend more of his time on mental development and progress than upon irresponsible physical indulgence and paternity. If he makes up his mind that he can not or does not wish to become responsible for the mental and physical endowment and well-being of more than one or two children, or of none, nobody says that his "college training unfitted him for the holy position of husband and father, which is his sphere." Perhaps the college training may hav had a good deal to do with it in the sense that with his developed mind and wider information his sense of right and of personal obligation to the unborn has tended in that direction. We do not often notice a vast degree of self-disciplin of this nature in the uneducated whether it be man or woman, but is this a reason for deprecating intellectual training for our boys? Why then for the girls?

It appears to me that it is one of the greatest possible arguments in favor of higher education, unless indeed it is desirable to be mere Kaffirs, both male and female—which has its strong points. Kaffirs are healthier, hardier, more irresponsibly, happily, brutal. They hav few nervous moments, I fancy, over the future good of wife or child or friend. Their sense of obligation does not keep them awake nights. They are neither afraid nor ashamed to create helpless human beings simply to furnish targets for another tribe. They hav not even a glimmer of the thought—still embryonic in civilized man—that the woman whose life is risked and the child upon whom life is thrust unasked are of the least consideration in the matter. They hav no rights which the Kaffir lord is bound to respect. I fancy if he were asked a question on the subject he would look at you in stupid, silent wonder, if he did not ask, "What hav they got to do with it? I am the race. What she and it are for are to look after me, to make me comfortable, to be my inferior, for my glory."

Now, suppose a woman would prefer to enjoy her mental capabilities to the full and develop these rather than to be the mother of a large brood; suppose she thinks she should be a developed woman first before daring to become a mother, whose right is it to object? If men prefer Kaffir wives there are a large assortment on hand. Squaws, both white and red, are to be had for the asking. Whose right is it to decide that all women shall be squaws in mental development, in social position, in legal status, and in political and economic relations, if all women do not choose to be such?

Has a woman not the right to be a human being and count one in the economy of life before she is a mother, aside from her maternal capabilities? If not, when and where did she forfeit that right? When and where did man get his? Every man has, and maintains, the right to be a man first, a unit, a responsible human being. After that—aside from it—he may, if he choose, become also a husband and a father. Is it not more than possible that the whole human race has been dwarfed and retarded and hampered in its upward struggle because of this unaccountable effort to climb one side at a time? Because brute force and phenomenal egoism hav always refused to place humanity on terms of equal opportunity and leave nature alone?

We are constantly informed that those who insist on equal opportunities, on equal status before the law for women, are making an effort to subvert nature; that nature has done this and that and the other thing with and for women. Well, if she has, then she will take care of the results in an open field. She does not need special, restrictiv laws placed on the sex she has already placed under the "ban of inferiority." If the superior sex cannot still more than hold its own without putting a high protectiv tariff on itself, then how can it claim to be the superior sex? Nature has managed very well with the lower animals, giving them equal surroundings and opportunities. That nature is not allowed to manage for women is the very point we object to. Men make all sorts of laws for and about women that are not made for and about men. Why not make laws and let them apply to the human being, leaving the sex of the human being out of the question? It is the special, restrictiv, unnatural sex provisions in laws and conditions of life that are objected to. No woman objects to nature's decree that she is a potential mother any more than men object to her decree that they are potential fathers. It is the fact that men insist that women are this and nothing more (which nature did not say) to which women object.

Nowhere else in nature does the male claim all the other avenues of life as his special sex privilege except alone the one which he cannot perform—that of maternity. The sexes stand on an exact equality as to opportunity. The brain of each is developed to the extent of its capacity. The freedom and opportunity for food and pleasure are enjoyed by the sexes alike. When the desire for maternity is strong upon her is the only time the female brute animal becomes a mother. She decides when she is a mere mother and when she is an animal with all the rights and privileges of her genus. With the human race alone is one-half governed upon the theory, and its opportunities fitted to the idea, that the female is never a unit, never a human being, never a person, but that she is simply, solely, and only a potential mother, whose one "sphere" is controled and regulated as to time, place, and conditions, not by nature, not by herself, as with the lower animals, but by the other half of the race which holds itself as first human, individual, and with rights, duties, privileges, and ambitions pertaining to him as such. His sex relations, his paternity, is truly his sphere, but that it is his whole sphere he has never dreamed. There are women who look at life the same way for the other half of humanity and decline to read nature—are unable to read it—in any other way.

But aside from all this Dr. Pallen first claims that it is the intellectual development which cripples maternal capacities, and then proceeds to giv the reasons, which turn out to be poor ventilation at girls' schools—unwholesome sanitary conditions, injudicious physical and mental habits, and a lack of intelligent mothers and teachers who dress and train the girls unhealthily and in vitiated surroundings. How would boys fare under like conditions? Would the doctor say it was the intellectual training which wrecked the health of the boys, or the absurd conditions under which they get their training?

Would he advise less mental work or less vile air? Fewer studies or better light? More healthful clothing and food or that the boys go home and "devote themselvs to the sphere nature marked out for them"—paternity? Again, the doctor appears to confuse society women with college women. As a rule, they are totally distinct classes. The society woman, who "wrecks her health in rounds of pleasure and bears sickly children or none," is, in nine cases out of ten, the very opposit of the intellectual woman—the college-bred girl—who has learned before she leaves college the value of health and the obligation to herself and to others to be well.

It is true that certain of the fashionable schools which fit girls for society and for nothing else on earth call their girls educated; but since no one else does it were futil to confuse the two classes. The society girl as a rule is, so far as real mental development and higher education and capacity to think logically are concerned, as truly a squaw as if she wore a blanket and feathers. Indeed, this is what she does wear mentally. She should be a perfect wife for men who wish wives to be physical and not mental companions—second only to the Kaffir woman in that she wears a bit more clothing.

But even in her case would it not be wise to infer that she has not physically incapacitated herself for maternity by her frivolous life, so much as that she does not care for children and would find them troublesome to a brain which holds nothing more serious and valuable than jewels and reception dates? And if she did reproduce her kind, would this world be benefited?

Why this constant cry for more children in a world crushed by the weight of sorrow and wrong to those already here? Until children can be born into better conditions, let us be thankful that there is one class of women too selfish and another too full of a sense of obligation to add very rapidly to this beehive of misery and discontent and wrong.

The world needs healthier, wiser, truer children, not more of them. And until mothers are both educated and rank before the law as human beings they will never be able to giv that kind to the world. Just so long as men must get their brains from the proscribed sex, just that long will their brains remain an "infant industry" and be in need of a high protectiv tariff in the shape of restrictiv laws on women to shield men from equal competition in a fair field as human units.

HELEN H. GARDENER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - MARCH 8, 1890.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

READY MARCH 10th.

FREETHOUGHT.

The Symposium, concluded in a late issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER, will be printed in pamphlet form at once, and orders may be sent in now. It is seldom that in one little work can be found the opinions of so many writers as in this Symposium. A book by

Col. R. G. Ingersoll,	R. B. Westbrook,
Capt. R. C. Adams,	E. B. Foote, Jr.,
Saladin (W. Stuart Ross),	L. K. Washburn,
H. O. Pentecost,	George E. Macdonald,
Susan H. Wixon,	E. C. Walker,
Samuel P. Putnam,	F. M. Holland,
Lucy N. Colman,	Parker Pillsbury,
Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel,	C. B. Reynolds,
Charles Watts,	J. H. Burnham,
W. F. Jamieson,	Thaddeus B. Wakeman,

is something that every Freethinker will probably want to possess. Price, 25 cents.

The Pictures.

New subscribers on the picture account hav reached us during the past week to the number of twenty-seven, making a total of three hundred and seventy-six toward the five hundred necessary. Besides these the following friends hav contributed their cash:

L. W. Sibley	$1 00	Chas. Geck	1 00
D. Cummins	75	R. D Kinney	1 00
Louis Wolfes	1 00	J. F. Smith	75
N. Mansfield	1 00	Fred Kurfess	75

The total of donations to sustain the pictures is $193 30. The Literature Fund has received but one contribution—namely,

Louis Wolfes $1 00

In accordance with the terms of the offer made by the author of "Try Square" to furnish that book as a premium to new subscribers who send three dollars for THE TRUTH SEEKER for one year either for themselvs or a friend, that premium will be withdrawn on March 11th, and to obtain the book in that manner canvassers must write at once. Friends asking for the book whose letters bear postmarks previous to that date will be supplied. The terms are: Copies of the book to be given as premiums to, or for, new subscribers who pay the regular price of $3 for THE TRUTH SEEKER one year, before March 11th. One copy of the book to be given to every volunteer new subscriber, and one to every old subscriber who procures a new one at the regular price of $3. The price of the book by itself is $1.

It will afford us great pleasure to send out a hundred more copies of this book before the expiration of its author's generous offer.

Practical Work.

On another page is printed the correspondence between the secretary of the Canadian Secular Union and the customs officer at Toronto. The subject was the importation into Canada of Paine's "Age of Reason," which heretofore has been placed by the customs officials on the list of "immoral" works, and refused clearance. As Mr. Risser now expresses it, the government has eaten the leek, and hereafter the book may be freely imported.

On the subject of oaths, to which reference is made in the same article ("Canadian Freethinkers and Their Custom Houses"), Mr. Adams furnishes some additional information in the last issue of Secular Thought. Oath bills are to be at once presented in both the Dominion and Quebec legislatures. In 1886, Mr. Adams recalls, an oath bill was presented by Mr. Robertson, of Hamilton, passed its third reading in the House of Commons, but was thrown out by the Senate. It merely proposed to institute the English law, since superseded by Mr. Bradlaugh's bill. This law left the admission of the testimony of a non-Christian witness to the judge's opinion of the credibility of the person. Mr. Bradlaugh's bill is an advance upon this, but necessitates a declaration of the witness's religious opinions before he may be permitted to affirm. It was urged by some that, on the principle that half a loaf is better than no bread, the Canadians should likewise compromise upon a practicable measure. But they hav decided to strike at once for the ultimate end, and to set up the standard of complete freedom from religious inquisition, which shall be supported until it waves triumphantly over the Dominion of Canada. After a careful study of the oaths laws of England and all the states of the American Union (aided greatly, says Mr. Adams, by the courtesy of the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER and the coöperation of our faithful secretary, Mr. Risser), a bill has been drawn up which it will be endeavored to hav presented to the Quebec legislature and, with the suitable alterations, to the Dominion parliament, at the present sessions. Even if they fail to pass, the discussion they will arouse will hav an educational effect. The following is the text of the bill for the Dominion. The bill for Quebec does not contain article 5, as the punishment for perjury is a matter under the control of the Dominion courts. Otherwise the bills are identical:

"An act to abolish certain restrictions regarding the competency of witnesses and the taking of oaths.

"Whereas the existing restrictions on the competency of witnesses, and the provisions of law regarding the taking of oaths, operate an injustice to many conscientious and respectable persons, by excluding them from the right to testify, or to comply with the said provisions, and, whereas the said restrictions and provisions tend to prevent the discovery of truth in courts of justice and elsewhere, to deprive the said persons, as well as others, from the obtainment of their just rights, and to otherwise interfere with the proper administration of justice, as well in civil as in criminal matters; and whereas, by the laws of this Dominion, the free exercise of religious profession is guaranteed, and no discrimination should be made in favor of, or against any person on account of his religious belief, or disbelief:

"Therefore her majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:

"1. In all proceedings in respect of which the parliament of Canada has jurisdiction in this behalf, the competency of a person to testify as a witness, or to take an oath or affirmation, shall not be affected by any religious test or qualification.

"2. All persons, being otherwise qualified according to law, shall be permitted, if so desired by them, to make a solemn affirmation, instead of an oath, in all places and for all purposes, where an oath is or shall be required by law, which affirmation shall be of the same force and effect as if they had taken the oath.

"3. Every person taking such affirmation shall solemnly, sincerely, and truly declare and affirm to tell the truth, leaving out any words of imprecation or calling to witness.

"4. In all present or future enactments the expressions 'oath' and 'affidavit' shall include the affirmation and declaration above provided, and the expression 'swear' shall include 'affirm' and 'declare,' the right to which is granted by this act.

"5. If any person making an affirmation, either in virtue of the provisions of this act, or under any similar enactment made by any legislature of the provinces of this Dominion, shall willfully, falsely, and corruptly affirm any matter or thing, which if deposed on oath would hav amounted to willful and corrupt perjury, he shall be liable to prosecution, indictment, sentence, and punishment, in all respects as if he had committed willful and corrupt perjury.

"6. All provisions of the law inconsistent with the present act are hereby repealed.

"7. This act shall come into force on the day of its sanction."

We desire to congratulate our friends across the border upon their clear-headed energy in tackling the enemy at the very point where he needs tackling. It seems to us that to win the civil rights of all people, no matter what may be their religious opinions, and to check the encroachment of ecclesiastics, is just what Secular Unions are organized to do. A victory in the courts is something tangible, some practical progress. A defeat of attempted tyrannical religious legislation is at least a holding on to what we hav got; and the influence of a fight made and lost is infinitly more far-reaching and beneficent in its effects than supine inaction.

For these reasons we are sorry to read the report of the hearing before the house committee at Washington on the Breckinridge Sunday bill and miss therefrom the name of any representativ of the American Secular Union. The District of Columbia belongs to the whole people, and a Sunday law there is a matter concerning everybody. And the Secular Union is the proper organization to represent and expound the Secular principles upon which this government was founded, but from which it has gone so far astray.

But, nevertheless, our Seventh-Day Adventist friends were on hand, and with the help of a Knight of Labor, gave the committee to understand that there is opposition to any such laws as that proposed by the Tennessee Congressman. The House Committee on the District of Columbia is composed of Congressmen Grout, of Vermont; Campbell and De Lano, of New York; Moore, of New Hampshire; Ellis, of Kentucky; Heard, of Missouri. The hearing on the bill was held on February 18th. In favor of the bill there appeared and spoke, as we learn from the Sentinel, Rev. George Elliott, Rev. J. H. Elliott, Mr. H. J. Schulteis, Knight of Labor, Mr. Inglis, and Rev. W. F. Crafts. Against the bill were Elders Corliss and Jones, of the Seventh-Day Adventists, Prof. H. W. McKee, secretary of the Religious Liberty Association, and Millard F. Hobbs, also a Knight of Labor. Aside from the conflicting attitudes of the Knights of Labor representativs, the hearing was without special features. The Sunday-law advocates rehashed their illogical arguments, laying, as usual, particular stress upon their sympathy for the poor workingman. The Seventh-Day Advent opponents of the bill had no difficulty in meeting the religious and historical averments of their adversaries. The poor workingman side of the controversy was disposed of by Mr. Hobbs, master workman of the whole federation of the Knights of Labor in the District of Columbia, who said: "No one has been authorized by the Knights of Labor to speak in favor of this bill. Mr. Schulteis is not authorized to speak for the Knights of Labor. It is true Mr. Schulteis is a member of a committee having charge of certain matters, but that committee has nothing to do with this question. The Knights of Labor are virtually opposed to this bill. Some are in favor of some parts of it; some are in favor of all of it; and some are entirely opposed to all of it. For this reason the Knights of Labor of the district, as an organization, hav refused to hav anything to do with it. We are all in favor of a day of rest, some of two days; but we are afraid of the religious side of this question. What benefits the Knights of Labor wish to obtain, we think can be better secured by our own efforts through our own organizations than by the efforts of others, through the church."

This speech by Mr. Hobbs is described as a "stunner" to Mr. Crafts and his party, "crushing to atoms the whole pet theory which they had so nicely framed and so pathetically presented in behalf of 'the poor workingmen who are so cruelly oppressed by being forced to labor on Sunday;' and of the church's gallant effort to liberate them from 'the Egyptian bondage of Sunday slavery.'" "Nothing could hav happened," says Elder Jones, "that would more clearly expose the perfect hollowness of the plea that is made by the American Sabbath Union, that this Sunday movement is in the interests of the workingmen, than did this unpremeditated and wholly unsolicited speech."

The committee is said to hav given the speakers a careful and courteous hearing, and the opponents of the bill feel assured that the individual members of it will at least candidly consider their side. In doing this they will be aided by the pamphlets sent them from this office, as will all of the Congressmen when the bill is brought before the House. In the mean time we suggest that our readers write to their respectiv representativs protesting against the enactment of the Breckinridge bill into a law.

Mr. Harman Arrested Again.

In his paper of the 14th ult., Mr. Harman printed a letter from a New York correspondent of such a vulgar character that he was arrested before Lucifer reached a majority of its readers. He was taken to Topeka, and held to bail in the sum of one thousand dollars. In this case Mr. Harman is entitled to sympathy for his fate, but he cannot be held guiltless of inviting it. The matter complained of in the warrant of arrest is outrageously vile. It is one of the most indecent exhibitions of mental beastliness that ever appeared in print. It is, to us, inconceivable that a man could write it except for purposes of evil; and it is still more inconceivable that an editor should hesitate a second before consigning the article to the fire. Reading it, the conclusion is almost irresistible that the writer is a spy seeking to entrap an editor, and another conclusion equally strong is that any editor printing it is utterly unfit for a public teacher. We do not believe that the slightest shadow of a shaving of good can be accomplished by such publication, while it is certain that it will disgust and offend every person who is not a fanatic on "sex-reform" subjects, or who is not of the lowest and vilest stratum of humanity.

The punishment for this publication is not, however, a matter for United States courts, but rather for the indignant criticism of those readers of his journal who hav a right to expect to be furnished with a paper above the level of bawdy-house inmates. Its publication is an insult to every subscriber to Lucifer, an invasion of his rights, and a damage to the very cause for which Mr. Harman pleads so earnestly. It is no wonder that he has already received "sharp slaps in the face" from "mortified and disgusted" supporters of "whose honesty, earnestness, and friendship he has not the slightest doubt." The wonder will be if anyone can be found to defend his course!

What Mr. Harman has previously printed, and for which he is still under bonds, is as snow to manure, as a crystal spring to a German horse-pond, compared with this letter, which we can never believe was meant to be printed unless its author desired to see Mr. Harman in jail. We hav strenuously defended him heretofore, because the matter complained of did not properly come under any law. Now we can only protest against the manner but not the fact of his prosecution. The United States courts hav no business with him, but we should not say the same of a police court. There is such a thing as obscene literature; its circulation is an invasion of others' rights; and the only way for people to protect themselvs against it is by law. Mr. Harman has printed an article that should, were he other than he really is, earn him an interview with a police magistrate or the contempt of the community—perhaps both.

Having thus expressed our opinion of Mr. Harman's offense, we are quite willing to go to his rescue. He is an earnest, honest, simple old gentleman with one idea, a little fanatical on that perhaps, but sincerely laboring for the good of the world, and ever resolutely pursuing what he sees to be his work. He is everybody's friend but his own, and even entertains kindly feelings for Anthony Comstock—a length to which even the Judean reformer could scarcely hav gone. Indeed, Mr. Harman says: "Anthony Comstock, and all those who are working with and for him, are simply the creatures of circumstances—simply the victims of their heredity and their environment, and we, under like circumstances, would do just as they are doing. We harbor no revengeful feelings toward them, but hope they will see the error of their ways and reform, and we hope and work for the abolition of the laws that giv to these men their power for evil." Mr. Harman often likens himself to Luther, and we fancy he had a still more ancient person in mind when he wrote the foregoing. Jesus is alleged to hav said, "Father, forgiv them, for they know not what they do." There is, however, nothing vicious about Mr. Harman; his intentions are of the kindliest, and even the officers who arrested him took his word that he would not try to escape—something undoubtedly the farthest from his thought. If he should be sent to prison he would bear his cross meekly, and when reviled revile not again.

This is not a case for law; it is not a case for justice even, but for mercy. Every energy of Mr. Harman's friends should be bent to secure leniency for an aged and almost irresponsible gentleman, who has offended, not willfully but unwittingly, and through the best of motivs. It is a pathetic case, and the truth should be made known to all connected with the prosecution. He will be called for trial at the April term of court, at Topeka, Kan. The United States district attorney at that place should be communicated with by all of Mr. Harman's friends.

A Contemporary's Touching Appeal.

The last Christian Advocate has a very edifying and instructiv editorial on "The Christian Advocate in Sing Sing Prison." It is largely made up of letters from the pious inmates of that institution, and the subject is a complaint because their favorit journal—furnished by the generosity of some unknown person—has been discontinued to their addresses. To be deprived of their weekly religious refreshment is a hardship to the devoted and devout sons of the church, and they appeal forcibly for some charitably disposed person to renew their subscriptions. Moved by the cry of his fellow Christians, Dr. Buckley echoes the appeal, and is prepared to receive checks to supply the want.

The testimonials which the Sing Sing Christians write to the virtue and value of the Advocate are certainly very convincing, and no doubt the subscription list will be duly lengthened among a class of citizens whose mental attributes and social standing eminently fit them to appreciate it. We cannot do less than help our esteemed contemporary by republishing extracts from the letters. The first to write says:

"It has been my purpose, if by the favor of God kept to liberty and means, to become a subscriber for the Christian Advocate."

Surely Dr. Buckley will find a new patron in that pious gentleman, who may ultimately graduate from Sing Sing to a deaconship in the Methodist church.

Another writes:

"Being that I was requested to forward to you this note, it givs me great pleasure to do so; concerning your most valulible paper, vis the Christian Advocate. Being a Cathloic I will ashure you its one of the best papers I've ever yet red inside or outside of a prison; for it is a true and God fearing paper."

No doubt he speaks as an expert in religious papers, and Dr. Buckley should feel flattered in winning his commendation. But won't the priests of the Catholic faith wax jealous?

The next one writes somewhat indignantly:

"I would like to know why i cant Hav the Christian Advocate i find things in its Coloms that is very interesting to my mind and i would like to no the Reason i dont get it and oblige"

The brother should be supplied, or he may leave the institution for some place where he can obtain his favorit journal.

The Bible class in Sing Sing must be numerously attended, for here are three gentlemen who refer to it. The first says to the prison chaplain:

"I am sincerely thankful to you for your Christian kindness to me while a member of your Bible class, and during the course of time after the much-prized class disbanded. I received through you a number of periodicals, chiefly the Christian Advocate, in which I was deeply interested up to the time of stoppage."

The next writes:

"Not only do I speak for myself, but of the many others of my fellow-convicts that I hav had the privilege to converse with about the paper. They all think very highly of its merits, especially our late Bible class."

The third testifies:

"DEAR CHAPLAIN: I always took a great delight in reading the Christian Advocate. It always brought back to my mind when reading it the teachings and the sayings of a God-fearing, Christian mother, long since gone to her eternal reward. I must be candid and say that I hav been greatly benefited, since I hav been here, by reading it. I am keenly disappointed in not being able to receive it now. I presume you remember that I was a member of your Bible class, and was sorry that it was discontinued."

Dr. Buckley publishes many more equally devout and pious epistles from his brethren in bonds, and no one without an adamantin heart can peruse them and not wish that soon the persecuted saints of Sing Sing may be able to regularly peruse his paper. It seems the very stones—and there are quite an array of stones surrounding these religious people—cry out for the Advocate. The appeal is pathetic and irresistible.

As a means to arouse the merciful instincts of those Methodists not residing in Sing Sing, the good Editor supplements these letters with a few facts and statistics. These facts and figures are also interesting and instructiv, and we may profitably quote two paragraphs:

"In Sing Sing there are fifteen hundred and fifteen men. Female criminals are not sent to that prison. There are among them about one hundred men who in the past hav been connected with Protestant churches as members. There are at least fifty men who hav confessed their sinfulness, and hav professed to find God's favor, and, so far as the chaplain can discover, are leading exemplary lives in the prison—not, we should suppose, an easy thing to do. There are many others who in conversation with him show that they are not unimpressible by truth.

"Of all those fifteen hundred and fifteen men, fifty-five per cent are nominally Roman Catholics, and forty-five per cent nominally Protestants. Of the whole number, ninety per cent went to Sunday-school when boys."

The fact stated in the last sentence moves the Doctor to exclaim: "Ninety per cent went to Sunday-school! God help the superintendents and teachers to consider this! God help those parents who hav thrown off parental instruction upon the Sunday-school to consider it!" It is indeed a sorrowful thought—a matter for tears and reproaches! But perhaps if the ninety per cent had not gone to Sunday-school and learned from the Bible all about the ancient saints, they would not by emulating them in their own poor weak way hav become inmates of Sing Sing and so acquainted with the superlativ virtues of the Advocate and the Doctor's entrancing tale of travel. Let the Doctor comfort himself with that thought. For is it not better a thousand times, that the world should be in Sing Sing and learn of the goodness of God and the value of the Advocate than to sojourn outside its walls and never worship God nor read the organ of the Methodist church? And surely those who are in the place should hav that which their hearts crave, for is it not written in the good book, "Thou shalt bestow that money for whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, for oxen or for sheep or for wine or for strong drink or for the Christian Advocate—J. M. Buckley, Editor—price, $2 50 per annum—or for whatsoever thy soul desireth?" The Methodists who enjoy opportunities for unrestrained locomotion will be hard-hearted indeed if they do not promptly respond to Dr. Buckley's appeal for his poor brethren.

IN its answers to inquirers the Sun has this:

"Had the twelve apostles been of Jewish faith before their conversion to Christianity? If not, how many had been Jews, and what had the others been? QUAKER.

"The twelve apostles were all Hebrews, and they were not converted to Christianity. Like Christ, they lived and died Hebrews."

That will astonish most Christians, but it's true. There were no Christians in Christ's time.

ONE of the beneficent influences of Christianity is unconsciously described by the Madison, Wis., Democrat in reporting the sentencing of a murderer. John Kuhni had confessed that he killed William Christen, and explains why he did it. We borrow the words of the Democrat: "Kuhni in his confession says Christen was the best friend he had in this country. These men at times would discuss biblical matters. Kuhni was a firm believer of everything found in the Bible; Christen, it seems, was not—that is, according to Kuhni's statement—and used to madden Kuhni by ridiculing sentences in the Old Testament. It was on the night of December 12th, after supper, that they sat down and played a game of cards together. Afterward, Kuhni read in his Bible about David and his life as a king. Christen began to revile the Israelitish king and scoffed at certain of his actions, holding him up to ridicule and calling Kuhni a fool for believing any of 'the nonsense,' as he called it. Kuhni shut the book and went to bed. He reflected there upon Christen's wickedness and grew frenzied in thinking over what a bad man William was. Christen then went to the bedroom and disrobed. After Christen was asleep John thought about his friend's depravity, of his wicked actions, and thought his heart must indeed be black if he could permit himself to talk as he did about sacred matters. Finally he felt persuaded that he ought to kill Christen, and the more he thought of it the more convinced he was that such a wicked creature ought not to liv. So about 10 o'clock he crawled from the back part of the bed, where he was sleeping, over his partner and out into the room where the stove was. Here he seized a stick of wood with a heavy, sharp knot on one end and returned to the bedroom. From the light of the stars shining through the windows he could plainly distinguish the face of his comrade lying on the pillow. He raised the bludgeon deliberately and without hesitation brought it with terrific force down upon the forehead of Christen. The latter was awakened and sprang up with a cry of pain and anger. He attempted to defend himself, but the weapon came down a second time upon his skull and he dropped back. A third blow felled him to the floor, where several more put an end to his earthly existence." Given an ignorant man with a superstitious nature, thorough belief in the Bible, and the result is not hard to determin.

THE lecture before the Manhattan Liberal Club next Friday evening will be by Mr. Albert Stickney, on "The Growth of Democracy."

The Best Description of the Bruno Statue Ceremonies.

From the National Reformer.

The TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL, the American Freethinkers' almanac, for 1890, amongst many interesting papers, has one by T. B. Wakeman on the inauguration of the Bruno statue, the most complete notice of that ceremony we hav yet read in English. Mr. E. M. Macdonald has a quaintly written article on his "Search for a Spirit."

Letters from Friends.

GREEN CENTER, IND., Feb. 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav tried to get a subscriber, but cannot do it. Yours for the pictures, long life, and success,

W. D. BONAR.

IDAHO SPRINGS, COL., Feb. 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $3 for a new subscriber. We all vote for the pictures every time. J. R. RICHARDS.

BELLOWS FALLS, VT., Feb. 17, 1890

MR. EDITOR: I am in favor of the pictures. They are an improvement to the paper. N. MONROE.

BOZEMAN, MONT., Jan. 10, 290.

MR. EDITOR: You will find inclosed $6 for my renewal and one new subscriber; two votes for the cartoons.

G. W. DRAKE

STRONGHURST, ILL., Feb. 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I shall continue to take THE TRUTH SEEKER whether the pictures are continued or not.

WESLEY MILLIKEN.

NOBILITY, TEX., Feb. 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: This is the eleventh year I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER. I am still well pleased with it, pictures and all. Yours for freedom, DAN MAY.

SALEM, ILL., Feb. 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am strongly in favor of the pictures in the good old TRUTH SEEKER. I would feel very sorry to hav them discontinued. S. S. S.

ATLANTA, ILL., Feb. 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER since it first started at Paris, Ill., and I say good-speed, and keep up the illustrations. B. F. GARDNER.

WAMIC, ORE., Feb. 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I want you to place my name on the roll again, sending your paper with the pictures. We cannot do without it. T. J. DRIVER.

GRASS VALLEY, CAL., Feb. 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $3.75—$3 for the good old TRUTH SEEKER, twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL, the balance to go for the pictures. THOS. N. PAINE.

NORTH YAMHILL, ORE., Feb. 15, 290.

MR. EDITOR: If you will send me some sample copies I will try and make good use of them, as I shall take the field again about April 1st. I vote for the pictures.

Fraternally yours, GEO. H. DAWES.

VIRGINIUS, COL., Feb. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $30 for books named and a new subscriber. I am a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and am highly pleased with the paper. The pictures are simply immense. WILLIAM J. LAUR.

MARTINSBURG, W. VA., Feb. 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose you $2, $1 of which is contributed by Mr. Herman Bohda to continue the pictures by Heston, and $1 of which I desire to contribute for propaganda purposes. Yours faithfully, LOUIS WOLFES.

DETROIT, Feb. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $4—$3 for my TRUTH SEEKER, twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL, and the balance for the pictures of both kinds. And I do not care—if you can afford it, put one in the center of the paper as well as at the first and last page. DAVID FLEMING.

KINGSTON, MO., Feb. 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Superstition rules here. We hav some that are partly Freethinkers, but few that can talk their mind without fear. In regard to pictures, I vote for their continuance, though as yet I can get no new subscriber. I hope be able to by and by. W. A. COLVIN.

EDDYVILLE, ORE., Jan. 29, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I think the pictures are immense. I want my part of the business continued. I will get you a subscriber soon or I will send you more than my subscription to continue the work by Mr. Heston. We are doing a good work here in my neighborhood for mental liberty.

Respectfully, Z. S. DERRICK.

MILWAUKEE, ORE., Jan. 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: At first I did not like the pictures in your paper, and am not over-infatuated over all of them yet. But we hav kindergartens for children; why not hav object-lessons for our orthodox infants? With wishes for your success, I remain,

A fellow-worker for those who despise us,

MAURITZ S. LIDEN.

RANDOLPH, MO., Feb. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I regret that I hav not been able to get a new subscriber. I hav the promis of two. I think by showing them a few more illustrations in THE TRUTH SEEKER they will become converted. Next month I will send you some money for the ANNUALS, some tracts, books, and to continue the pictures. W. A. HATHAWAY.

BRUMMARD, MINN., Feb. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $1. Mail me Ingersoll's prose poem, "Life," on board, gilt edges. The other fifty cents goes to help defray the picture expenses. Keep the pictures up if possible, for they are the cream of the paper. It would be a serious drawback to discontinue the pictures now. The orthodox people would laugh at us and claim the Lord had a hand in it. Every lover of liberty should see to it that our cause makes no backward stride. W. A. DUNN.

GRAY, KY., Feb. 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $5.50—$5 to renew my subscription and for one new subscriber, and fifty cents for ANNUALS for 1889 and 1890. I had the ANNUAL for 1889, but it got away from me in some way, and I do not want to break my file of the ANNUALS. Please count my vote first, last, and all the time for the pictures. W. R. BARTON.

ANGOLA, IND., Feb. 19, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am old and very deaf, and read very much, and wish to read THE TRUTH SEEKER while I am able to read. I hav much coming to me financially for past services, but am a poor collector, therefore am poor in purse. I would like to send something to the picture fund, but can at present send nothing more than my approval of the pictures.

Yours for truth always, DR. J. H. MOORE.

GIBSON, GA., Feb. 14, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $5—$3 to pay for subscription, $1 to pay for the continuation of the cartoons, and the other $1 for as many copies of "Try-Square" as you can spare for the money. I hav been a close reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER for the last two years, and the more I read it the better I like it. I hav not yet been able to get any new subscribers to your valuable paper. SEABORN KITCHENS.

IRWIN, IA., Feb. 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hope to get a subscriber or two to join me. We like the pictures well. To be sure, we must expect criticism of them, as we must expect it of all other methods of communicating ideas. Ingersoll has not escaped—that great word-painter—nor John Peck. I hav a very great regard for Mr. Parton, and think when your readers hear from him again they will find that they hav misunderstood him.

Yours, J. K. P. BAKER.

BRIDGEPORT, CAL., Feb. 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been trying to get you a few new subscribers, but as yet hav failed. I hav a half-way promis of one, and shall try again before sending this off. I am for the cartoons first, last, and all the time. I hav never yet shown them to anyone that was displeased with them. I only wish I could help financially to keep them up.

Believe me ever yours for truth, D. M. WALTERS.

PORTSMOUTH, O., Feb. 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: During my sojourn, if such it can be called, in the Sunny South, I never got to see a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER. My return again brings me in contact with its brilliant columns, a portion of which I find taken up with opinions of Heston's cuts. In regard to these I can say they are doing a wonderful good. It cannot be estimated. His work is marvelous, is wonderful. Long may he continue on top of the earth. WILL S. ANDRES.

BRADFORD, PA., Feb. 20, 290.

MR. EDITOR: Your readers in this section think the pictures speak volumes and help to show up religious superstition in its true light. If supposed holy acts and sayings can not bear illustrating because they are so ridiculous, I think it is a good way to get them out of the world. I am very much interested in what our thinkers hav to say in regard to the constructiv and progressiv side of Freethought. I wish every man, woman, and child could read what Colonel Ingersoll said about it, and contrast it with what theology has given us. C. J. CURTIS.

MOSCOW, IDA., Feb. 2, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The pictures will suit the majority, and if you should take them out you would lose subscribers. Such pictures as the one with the inscription, "Jerk a cheap soul out of purgatory," take well with the Protestants, and also giv them a hint of the fiendishness of their own hell. I can usually giv away what TRUTH SEEKERS I hav, for all the pictures. Some of my Christian friends are anxious to see THE TRUTH SEEKER every time it comes, just for the pictures alone, while there are others—few, though—who object on account of the outlandish pictures, as they call them.

Yours for the pictures, A. L. MCFARLANE.

MORVEN, N. C., Feb. 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am the only Freethinker in this community that is not afraid to say so. I know a few people that think as I do, but if they were to say so it would ruin their business. I hear some old fanatic abuse Thomas Paine and R. G. Ingersoll every day or two, but they never heard of any other Freethinking writers, and when I ask them, did they ever read Paine's "Age of Reason," they say no, and also acknowledge that they never read any of Mr. Ingersoll's lectures. By all means keep Mr. Heston at work. I send you $1 for the cartoons, and wish I was able to make it $100. Yours, HENRY R. TEAL.

DES MOINES, IA., Feb. 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am sixty-four to-day, and still I find fools, kickers, etc. There are many of them, but I find fewer fools in the Freethinkers' ranks than in any other body on earth. The sky-pilots and Salvation Army object to the cartoons because they are robbing them of bread and butter and the poor lazy devils will hav to work. But pretended Agnostics kicking is something I cannot account for, unless they are still tadpoles and hav not shed their hind appendage. They had better fall in with the Salvation Army, when they can kick to their hearts' content. The Heston cartoons hav put more people searching the Bible than all of the sky-pilots, periodicals, saints, and Salvationists combined in the last two years.

CAPT. T. J. KENNEDY.

ANAHEIM, CAL., Feb. 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: We, as truth seekers, find so many solid facts that we really need some light romance to season the unpalatable truths by which theology has surrounded us. I think the obscenities and absurdities that are called sacred cannot find a better interpreter than Watson Heston. To-night as I write two young men are looking over a file of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and by the remarks they make, I feel certain they will not accept as sacred the tales told in the Bible. The pictures are doing what all the preachers of all the sects fail to do; that is, to make those that look at them open the Holy Queer and read for themselvs.

LEONARD & K. PARKER.

GANANOQUE, ONT., Feb. 22, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: A word about the pictures. I am decidedly in favor of the cartoons on the first page, and decidedly opposed to the comic pictures on the last page, as I believe they lower the tone of the paper. It matters little what the Christians think of them. I am a great admirer of humorous caricatures when a decided hit is made, but those hits are few and far between, even in our leading comic papers. When our talented artist receives an "inspiration" (do not all the best jokes come by chance?) then let us hav it. Whenever we get a really good first-page cartoon I paste it up in a conspicuous place so that the young may see it.

HENRY SMITH.

WICHITA FALLS, TEX., Feb. 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I was waiting to get a new subscriber on account of the cartoons. I hope to be able to do so soon, and I also hope the pictures will be continued. I think their influence with the young will be very great, and all through life, when they hear the Bible held up for their veneration, Heston's pictures will pass before their mental vision with irresistible effect. Our hope is in the rising generation rather than in changing those who hav grown up under bondage to superstition. Thanking you for your efforts in making so good a paper as the grand old TRUTH SEEKER is, I remain, Yours for freedom from all bonds,

ANNIE E. CUMMINGS.

SALEM, O., Feb. 20, 290.

MR. EDITOR: As a voter I go strongly for the pictures. I think them attractiv, instructiv, and interesting; and also necessary, to be up with these progressiv times. I suppose they are repellant to the rigid righteous, the rigid wise, and such, for some very excellent folks are so unreasonable as to be fooled—even with that irrational delusion called Prohibition. To my mind some are so rigidly nice as to be unconsciously a little dictatorial. Bacon says, "Speaking makes a ready man, writing an exact man, and reading a full man." I am sure Heston must be all of these, a ready, exact, and complete man, to produce the many elaborate pictures you furnish us. JOHN MCDONALD.

PRAIRIE CITY, IA., Feb. 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $10.25 for my own subscription and four new ones. I want the ANNUAL, and I want to vote five solid, positiv, emphatic, and unequivocal votes for Heston's pictures. They are "cute," humorous, and instructiv. We need them in our business. I will giv $10 for a book containing every cartoon up to date of issue, one picture to the page, on good paper, and with proper explanations. I would go forth among the benighted, and endeavor to show them that there was a ridiculous side to their imaginary heavens, hells, devils, and Gods. Who is James Parton? And on what kind of meat doth our giant feed that he must wantonly and meanly insult every Liberal in the land who chances to differ with his lordship in regard to Heston's cartoons? This is Liberalism with a very small l, and the less we hav of such brutal charges the better for our cause. IRA E. DRAPER.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Feb. 16, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: It seems to be a sort of conference, or an experience meeting, as we used to call it—and when I think of the twaddle we would say about the grace (just as well if we said grease) and goodness and mercy of God, and of our hopes of a reward if we held on to the end, it makes me tired. I am ashamed of it, but I plead I knew no better. I saw THE TRUTH SEEKER as it was lying on a table where I happened to be, and the pictures incited me to ask to read the paper, and very soon after I had my own paper, and hav missed it but one week since. It was rulable to tell in times past how we had our orthodox eyes opened, and now I giv vote to Heston's pictures for a wider opener. I shall keep on taking the grand paper, pictures or no pictures, and hav no worry about the shocks to those I mail and loan the papers to. John Peck and I stand about the same on that.

H. C. MANN.

CONNOQUENESSING, PA., Feb. 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: You will please fill bill and find in the inclosed letter $5 for the same. I want the literature for missionary work, as I "go it out here on my own hook." That is why I want the extra volume, with the "Try-Square"—to scatter abroad and to help the good cause along. There are many here that want God and Jesus Christ in the national Constitution, and some hav not been here long enough to get the brogue off their tongue. I should say, let Americans rule America and all those that do not like our Constitution may honor the country with their absence. Giv us the flag above the cross. As regards the pictures, I should say there is nothing wrong in making sportiv jests of the ridiculous. The picture that made the greatest impression on my mind was the historical Judah in Genesis xxxviii. I read it in my seventeenth year of age. It is not much wonder that my parents forbid their children from reading the Holy Queer alone. A. CUTHBERT.

FITCHVILLE, O., Feb. 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am in hopes of getting two new subscribers. If there are those, in the different sections of the country, that feel competent to giv a Liberal discourse at funerals, it would be well for them to advertise in THE TRUTH SEEKER. Then we Infidels will not feel so afraid to die. We in this section could send to Cleveland, Columbus, or Toledo, and feel quite independent of priests in general. As long as it is the fashion for funerals, we should hav a chance to hav one of our own kind.

Another suggestion is: If anyone knows of any opening of any kind, let them tell it through THE TRUTH SEEKER. One hardly knows how hard it is for an openly avowed Infidel to get a position unless he has tried it. I know a young man of high attainments that could not get a school in this country on account of his heretical views. Let us learn to help each other. I wish to say there is a chance in this town for a physician. THE TRUTH SEEKER just suits me, pictures and all.

MRS. MARY MARTIN.

AUBURN, IND., Feb. 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav got one new subscriber on account of the illustrations, and you will find inclosed $7.50 for his subscription and the renewal of mine and a friend's, and we all three enter our votes for the continuance of the illustrations. My TRUTH SEEKER lies on the center-table in our sitting-room with the other papers, and is not removed even if a preacher comes in, and I find that some very pious Christians are attracted by the pictures and will take a file of the papers and look them all over, and I do not see that it has done any of them any harm. The illustrations are what we want. They can be read at a glance, where it would take hours to read in print. And they only illustrate the Bible as it reads, and we do not see why anyone should object to them. We hav many Liberals here, but it is hard to get them to take a Liberal paper. I will try and get you one or two new subscribers in order to keep up the illustrations.

Truly yours, W. H. RAKESTRAW.

P.S.—Since writing the above I hav found another subscriber for THE TRUTH SEEKER, for whom you will find draft inclosed.

W. H. R.

GRANTFORK, ILL., Feb. 17, 290.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. John E. Remsburg has been at Highland, Ill., giving Freethought lectures on the nights of the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th, and the Turners' hall got fuller each succeeding night after the first one, although the first night he had a fair audience of the most prominent and intelligent people of Highland. The last night he had a discussion with a sky-pilot by the name of Vulliet, who could not hold a candle to Mr. Remsburg's arguments, although we must giv Mr. Vulliet credit for having the courage to meet Mr. Remsburg and defend his belief, that has no foundation or argument to help him along. It was, in fact, a one-sided concern. The lectures of Mr. J. E. Remsburg are a decided success. He is a cool, deliberate speaker, and strikes right from the shoulder, and can prove all of his arguments and points, which knocks. We must and will hav him here again next fall. He has done well and taken well in Highland, and will draw a large house every time. He has taken the wool off the eyes of a good many people there, and it is now altogether the topic of the day. Mr. Remsburg has clearly proved that there is not and cannot be a Christian on the face of the earth; not even Jesus Christ was a Christian, or could be one. I think by next fall we will hav a strong local Secular Union at Highland. The cause is booming there. My vote is for the pictures.

Yours truly, ANTON J. KRAFT.

OLD DUQUOIN, ILL., Feb. 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Having from its beginning been a subscriber and reader of your paper, not having missed a number or failed to attentivly read every article therein, I perhaps may be allowed to claim a pretty thorough acquaintance with its contents and appreciation of its merits. For a long time I read my paper and then loaned it to such as would be likely to read it, but as it was not always returned, and I valued it too highly to consent to its loss, I quit lending and hav for the past ten years taken an extra copy for free distribution. My practice is to hand it to such of my Christian acquaintances as will promis to read it, and to send it by mail to others who I hav reason to believe possess sufficient curiosity and fairness to prompt them to peruse it, feeling confident that its unanswerable arguments will favorably impress if not convince them of the correctness of its principles. As to the pictures, I vote unhesitatingly for their continuance. To drop them now would be to rob the paper of much of its influence and interest with its patrons, and would not render it popular with its orthodox enemies. I always call the attention of my Christian friends to the pictures, and take special pains to explain and enforce their fitness and merits, and although at first sight they seem to be greatly shocked and offended at "the horrid pictures," yet but very little argument is requisit to convince them that they are correct object-lessons of the text they are intended to illustrate, and they are forced to admit that their "horridness" consists in the faithfulness with which they delineate the original they are designed to represent.

Truly yours, CHARLES ZEIGLER.

GREENWICH VILLAGE, MASS., Feb. 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $5, for which you will please send the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL for 1890, and the "Agnostic Annual" for 1890, "Maria Monk," and "The Mother of Harlots;" and send one copy of the last issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the herein-named persons; and the balance use toward paying for the pictures, which I think must do a great deal of good by directing attention to the wickedness and absurdity of the teaching of the Bible in many cases. The picture weighing Senator Blair in the balance and comparing him with the traitor Arnold it seems to me must open the eyes of many to see that Blair is just as really a traitor to their government as Arnold ever was. Apparently the religious fanatics see that priestcraft is losing its hold upon the people and they are making greater effort than ever before to get control of the government so that they can force the people to acknowledge their imaginary God, whom they tell us is love, but to whom they ascribe qualities more fiendish than to the devil himself. These fanatics and hypocrits talk about Bible morals, Christian temperance, Christian science, and such. Nonsense! Christianity is opposed to and contrary to science, and afraid of science. And for Bible and Christian temperance, look your Bibles through carefully and candidly and see what is taught there, and look at the examples of Christians and see if they are safe ones to follow. And in regard to Bible or Christian morals it is just as bad. It cannot be the Golden Rule, for that is much older than Christianity itself, and as often practiced by unbelievers, so that I am at a loss to know what Christian morality is unless it is to love the cruel and revengeful God of theology better than the Good and True, and to imitate him in his cruelty.

C. M. P.

MONUMENT, ORE., Jan. 4, 290.

MR. EDITOR: Your invitation to giv opinions about our pictures I accept. The average human being will look at pictures and his brain is impressed with the idea sooner than it would be by words conveying the same meaning. Now, all Christians are human, and would look at pictures, yet could not find time to read about them, and the pictures will set them thinking sooner than Infidel writing. And the way to bring them to their notice is for the Secular Union to induce women or men to come out where the people are few and far apart—some families nine miles distant in the same settlement—yes, and come to stay, where they could teach in the family circle what the people need, and what they would accept from any friendly teacher. It costs these people more to go to hear a lecture than it does to keep a teacher for a week. Again, a lecture once a year does very little good, if any. But making weekly calls would giv opportunity to answer questions, and the people would be instructed.

A picture incident in my life: About twenty years ago I saw in Harper's Weekly the picture of the Russian bear in chains and the British lion with his tail up and his mouth wide open standing guard. Underneath were these words: "Not loose yet." The next week in Frank Leslie's was the same picture, with another in which the bear was loose and the British lion, with his tail between his legs, was crawling into a hole in the rocks. What made me mad? The picture? No, but the truth it conveyed to my mind. But afterward I felt ashamed of my littleness, having no feeling for the Russian people, only, like Christians, all self and one-sided. I could tell you much about people and pictures. But I do say that a good lecture will interest and please the people, but Heston's pictures set them thinking. That is how Liberals are made. My income is $9 a year, with board and lodging. The money I spend for reading matter, and should the subscribers hav to pay that sum to keep THE TRUTH SEEKER afloat I am willing to pay the same, pictures included.

HENRY BURSTOW.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 15, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: Of the countless millions whom the sun daily shines on now, and no doubt has ever shone on, how few indeed hav ever seen him rise in the morning or looked him face to face at noon! Now, is this fair treatment of the old luminary? Well, perhaps it is; as he assumes this indifference to us he can expect no better treatment. He always assumes a perfect indifference to all matters transpiring on the surface of the globe. It is true in history they tell of strange happenings to the old luminary—of its face being darkened; of its turning to blood; of its going backward on the dial of Ahaz ten degrees; of its standing still for the space of a day at the command of Joshua! These stories I am disinclined to believe; for with old King David I think that if all men are not liars, some would in our day make splendid newspaper reporters, or fill a pulpit.

I was struck with the idea that through smoked glass his face would be toned down into a contemplativ condition. Well, here was the old orb still shining in its full majesty of indifference, stolidity, and inflexibility. And it was this provoki: g silence which detracted much from my expected enjoyment. Doubtless to millions in the past thou hast shone as now. Through the influence of thy light thousands of slaughtering battalions, nations, and armies hav met, and are now forgotten as of matters never having occurred. This with stolid indifference thou must hav beheld. But stop; has it not been through thy influence also the artist, the painter, the sculptor, the artisan, is enabled to rise to eminence; and also by thy light and twilight shadings hav there not been committed the greatest of villainies and cruelties?

I had seen enough. My contemplations took another direction and I soon threw aside the smoked glass, little thinking the direction in which my mind was drifting. Motion I concluded was universal. Also were light and darkness, and it is the extremes of these latter two that become offensiv, and I thought and thought and thought and I cried aloud in my bewilderment, O Moses!

D. B.

DANVILLE, IND., Feb. 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Herewith find $3 to pay for THE TRUTH SEEKER to a new subscriber. I think I will be able to get another before long. Please send a sample copy or two to the friend's address inclosed. If you hav one left with the Blair bill in it, please send him that. I am doing all I can, but, as usual, am working under disadvantage. I keep THE TRUTH SEEKER and Independent Pulpit out as long as I can, and hope ere long good fruit may be borne from it. I wish you would please tell me whether or not you hav the ANNUAL copies to spare from the first issue to the last, both inclusiv. I want them very much. I am decidedly in favor of the illustrations, and will endeavor to giv some reasons which appear to me to be valid in support of my preference. This is a fast-going age, and America in particular is a fast-going country. The people of America and some other portions of the globe hav arrived at that stage of mental activity that enables them to grasp at a glance more, and with greater accuracy, than the people of a century ago did in a day's study. The results, or one of the results, of civilized progress is, that people nowadays hav to accomplish a far greater amount of work, both mental and physical, in the same given time than their immediate ancestors did. Therefore it is but natural that, along with this increased industrial and mental activity, must come means adapted to secure the end. The telephone, the telegraph, and the type-writer make it possible to do an amount of transmission of ideas, thoughts, correspondence, etc., in a length of time the very thought of which would take the senses "clean out o' the ancients." We can see how aptly the illustrator of to-day becomes a most available means, in the hands of a publisher, to accomplish an end, that end being the transmission of whole pages of printed ideas, descriptions, and explanations, in a very small space, in a very forcible and impressiv manner. An ordinary person, whose literary pursuits are necessarily limited, can glean a large proportion of the subject-matter contained in almost any periodical, or even in the great dailies which one cannot avoid coming in contact with, by simply looking at the illustrations. Now, if these things be true, and the age of illustrations be upon us, should the publications of progress and reform be lagging? A thousand times no. It would seem to be more appropriate that they should lead the van. Is it not better that THE TRUTH SEEKER illustrate so that it may be productiv of a greater amount of good than without the illustrations? Thus the class of people we most desire to reach and reform can be reached without effort, and compelled through the "bump" of curiosity to read in pictures that which they could not be induced to read in print.

F. E. STURGIS.

ST. CATHARINES, ONT., Feb. 19, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: It is a true saying that a wise man conceals his ignorance. I would say to Mr. J. N. Brown, of Bronston, Ky.: I see in your letter of January 1st that you hav made several strong assertions but given no proof to sustain them. You say you "believe it to be a matter of fact that there is not a sensible man or woman on earth but is perfectly willing to believe that there is a personal God somewhere that hears the prayers of man and can grant or reject them." To this I say emphatically, no, sir; there is not an intelligent person on this earth that is willing to believe any such thing. But it is just the reverse; because I know many rational men and women (and believe there are millions) whose minds are free from invisible and visionary phantoms; who do not believe that there is a personal or spiritual God nor a Holy Ghost, nor winged angels nor a horned or cloven-footed devil, nor dragons or witches, and they not only do not believe, but are positiv beyond the possibility of doubt, that prayer to a Bible God has never been answered, for the simple and very rational reason that they never hav seen the least fact to sustain such a belief. Again you say, "Whether they are willing or not, if sufficient evidence of the above alleged fact is produced it will force conviction;" but you hav not produced one fact, therefore it again proves just the reverse. Lastly you say you "would like to see in THE TRUTH SEEKER frequent calls made on T. De Witt Talmage and others, for the absolute proof that there is a God that can and does answer prayer." This is really astounding, that you want calls made on such an irrational and fanatical ranter as Talmage is, and others like him, to prove such a futil and false assertion. Now, Mr. Brown, if you are candid you must admit that you never hav seen the Bible God or any other god, nor ever known a prayer that has been answered by the God in question. Then why do you harp such ignorant, traditional nonsense? You hav said you believe it to be a fact, etc., that there is a personal God somewhere; but, alas! you and your "sensible believers" do not know where. Well, I can truly tell you and them exactly where your and their God is, and just what your and their God is, for it is just as visible to my mind as the sun is in a cloudless sky at noonday that the Bible God or Gods, ghosts, angels, devils, witches, and all their terrible hosts that are so much harped on by Bible believers are nothing more nor less than visionary, fairy phantoms found only in the minds of ignorant people, and there only hav they their orgies and revelries and nowhere else. This must be obvious to every rational and intelligent person, because just as quick as they are taught or learn that they and all other substances are composed of the existing elements of this world, and during their animate or inanimate existence, like other matter, from dust to the huge mountains, organic, inorganic, material, ærial, and all phenomena, whirlwinds, lightning, floods, epidemics, volcanoes, tornadoes, and earthquakes, are all subject to and governed by the inflexible and invariable laws of this world, and this only; that those sublime, gigantic, and brilliant orbs that are eternally whirling through endless space with inconceivable velocity, are all subject to and controled by the immutable and universal existing laws of nature, then all those visionary, fairy Bible phantoms will vanish from their minds and will then be invisible and nowhere. Then they will see, with delight, everything in this world just as it is; and if they do what is right to every person and animal their heaven will be here, and they will be happy and ever enjoy with exquisit delight the glorious light of Rationalism. Inclosed you will find $1 to continue the pictures.

A. MOOT.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Work and Win.

The sweetest cherries, mind you, lad,
Grow highest on the tree;
And would you win the fairest fruit,
One thing I'll say to thee:
It falls not at the clicking gay
Of an idler's pelf—
You'll hav to climb the rugged tree,
And gather for yourself.

'Tis vain to wait the fruit to fall,
Or pelt the tree with stones—
You'll hav to struggle bravely up,
And risk some broken bones;
You'll only waste your time below,
And get indifferent pay—
If you would reach the ripest fruit,
Just throw your fears away.

'Tis so with everything in life
That's worth the owning, lad—
With learning, wealth, and character—
The best, the good and great hav had:
They come not at the nod or hest
Of any idle hand—
'Tis only those who bravely toil
May hav them at command.

If, then, you want the ripest fruit,
Just labor till you win;
But mind thee, boy, while up you climb,
Keep heart and hand from sin;
The best and grandest guerdon, lad,
If bought with wicked wage,
No peace and comfort yields at last,
But curses on your age.

Mr. Reynard.

Mr. Reynard was a fox, and some people thought it great fun to chase him because he was very sly and smart. Somebody was not smart enough to keep the henhouse tight nights, so he thought it was all right to slip in and carry off a chicken. The dogs got on his track and followed him to the cellar drain of an empty house where he had hid. There half a dozen men, boys, and dogs, and a cage of ferrets worked with teeth and claws and shovels, picks, sticks, and crowbars to dislodge him, but all in vain. Mr. Reynard could not be got at by anything but the little ferrets, and he bit their eyes out as fast as they came. So a trap was set for him, and as the earth was frozen so hard he could not dig round it, he got caught by the hind foot when he came out one night; and he had a strap fastened round his neck and was given quarters in the mealchest, where he makes himself quite at home. It is much better fun to see him alive and doing well than trying to kill him is. There is a great deal of the savage in men yet, or they would not think it such sport to hunt and hurt poor little animals.

JOHN P. GUILD.

Tyngsboro, Mass.

Early Steel Pens.

The earliest notice of steel pens that I hav met is by Wordsworth. In 1806 he and his family were occupying the house at Colerton during the absence of Sir George and Lady Beaumont, and in the month of December the poet wrote to the latter what he calls "the longest letter I ever wrote in my life," and with reason, as it fills eighteen pages. He begins: "My Dear Lady Beaumont: There's penmanship for you! I shall not be able to keep it up to the end in this style, notwithstanding I hav the advantage of writing with one of your steel pens, with which Miss Hutchinson has just furnished me."

The next mention that I hav noted is by Dr. Kitchiner in 1824; when speaking of a friend above sixty he says: "This strain of the eye and occasion for spectacles of a high magnifying power is particularly found in mending pens, so that he has a sufficient number of pens to prevent the necessity of mending any of them until he has finished writing."

To this there is appended a note: "To those who find the mending of pens rather a difficult job, I recommend the occasional use of a steel pen, especially when they wish to write very small and neatly." The steel pen seems to hav been still a rarity at that time, and my own schoolboy experience tends to show that it was. From about 1824 to 1834 I do not remember the use of steel pens in school, and in the earlier years, 1825 to 1830, I hav a distinct recollection of our using quills.

Correspondence.

CHICAGO, ILL., Feb. 12, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: My papa showed me letters in THE TRUTH SEEKER written by little girls to you, and I thought I would write one too. I am seven years old, and I hav two brothers. One is nine years old and one is six. I hav been going to school for a year, and I hav been put in second grade. We traveled all over the United States with papa for two years, and then we went to Europe last year. I like to look at the pictures in your paper so much. My papa and mamma are Spiritualists, but they read your paper every week. Santa Claus brought me a doll like Lord Fauntleroy, and a girl doll and a trunk full of clothes for them, and lots of other things. I think this is a long letter.

Your little friend, ETHEL BIDDISON.

ST. ELMO, TENN., Feb. 9, 1890.

MISS S. H. WIXON: I thank you kindly for the letter you wrote me. I did not expect any. Also for the kind words concerning my album verses. I will send one more for the interest and amusement of the young folks.

Of beautiful thoughts and beautiful things,
From the laugh of a child to butterflies' wings;
From the flower that blooms to the bird that sings,
There is nothing so beautiful in age or youth
As the fragrance of friendship, the balm of truth.

L. B. GOODWIN.

ST. ELMO.

St. Elmo is a suburb of Chattanooga. It lies at the foot of Lookout mountain, and is climbing up the side of the mountain. The Incline railroad commences there and reaches the Point Hotel, three-quarters of a mile above. There a narrow-gage railroad takes people to the top of the mountain. A standard railroad runs from Chattanooga to the top of the mountain. After reaching the foot of the mountain it runs on a gradual rise four miles, then takes a switch-back and reaches the top in another three miles, directly above the point of ascent. L. L. G.

WHEELING, W. VA., Feb. 13, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. Papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. and I like to read the letters in the Children's Corner every week. We hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for years back.

We celebrated Thomas Paine's birthday by giving a small entertainment, having a good program of singing, speaking, essays, and poems by the Secular Union.

I hav four sisters and two brothers, and we do not go to Sunday-school—we do not believe in the doctrin they teach. We are morally good at home. I will be fourteen years old March 8th.

I wish some of the girls and boys would write to me, as I would be very glad to hear from them.

I hav a few house-plants. I like flowers. I like to read in books. I hav the "Story Hour," "Apples of God," and several other good story-books. I cannot think of anything to say, and you must excuse my mistakes. I wish the Corner success. Hoping to see this in print, I will close. From your loving young Freethinker,

FLORA ANDLINGER.

RAINIER, ORE., Feb. 3, E.M. 290.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend: It has been some time since I had a pen chat with you, and I felt just like it last evening after reading your sketches, "A Visit to Philadelphia." I was glad to see you note the injustice of not paying women equal wages with men for same labor performed in Wanamaker's establishment, and even Uncle Sam did not escape. That is right. "Hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may." And, also, the light slap about the official steals, it did come in so cute. How we laughed at your fear of losing your nightgown and new waterproof! I am glad you visited Sada Bailey and Horace Fowler and found them prospering. I hav read Sada's "Irene," and I admire her courage in telling the world what she thinks, and am interested in them and their work. I wish I could go and take lessons in bread-making of them. We use graham altogether, but I hav to put in "humping stuff," as the old man called it, of some kind.

The sketches were very interesting to me. We only got three of them. The papers were sent in by some friends, and of course I turned to the Children's Corner first thing to see how my friends were prospering, and was glad to see that all were well.

We hav lost our Children's Corner in the Investigator, and so soon after losing the dear old editor. It does not seem like the same paper any more. It's like going to the old home with all the loved ones gone and strangers occupying the house that we were born in. Although a stranger personally to Horace Seaver, through his writings he had become beloved by all, from the gray-haired father down to the three-year-old baby girl that called him "My Hori Sevie." And when we told her he was dead, she got up on a stool and looked at his picture cut from the paper and pinned on the wall. She said, "No, he ain't dead nevie (neither). See, his eyes are open!" I did not try to explain and make her understand. She will realize it all too soon.

We are living in the little town of Rainier, situated on the west bank of the Columbia river, about half-way from Portland to Astoria. There are about two hundred inhabitants. This is the second growth. The place was settled about fifty years ago and became quite a town, but that burnt and rotted down or was moved away, and now again it is beginning to put on the appearance of thrift and is being built up some. It extends about one and one-half miles up and down the river bank. The prospect now is that it will not die again, as the surrounding country is all being settled up fast, and small farms and homes, logging camps, and saw-mills are scattered all through the woods. We are here only for the winter, then we will go back to our home in the woods. We moved out so we could all be together, as father and Mr. G. are working here.

You ought to hear the children shout, "Oh, see the sunshine!" as they dance up and down the walk. The sun flashes through the drifts of clouds and plays peekaboo with us now and then. And I tell you, it's a treat to see his smiling countenance after days and weeks of deluge. We are having the highest water for years and still it keeps on raining. We are talking of building an ark, and if the flood proves universal we will put some sails on it and come around and take you in. It will not be such an old scow as Noah built. It will hav all the modern conveniences and good music will be in attendance at all hours. There will be no such painful procession of two by two. I would not want to leave a good woman and take a bad man, or "vice versa, and the same," as "Josiah Allen's Wife" puts it. They say there's luck in odd numbers. I propose to take more women than men, and then maybe we could hav things our way part of the town. I would be like the old lady back East. They had some family trouble, and she told the old man that "this land was deeded to me and my heirs, and that means you, Jimmy [their son]. And George, your name wasn't mentioned in it, but you can stay here and hav a home as long as you behave yourself." And she held the fort.

Yesterday a company of us went up to see the new machinery being put in a saw-mill. It came from Erie, Pa., and is an enormous affair—two engins, four boilers, a large circular saw, pony saw, and a gang of forty-two saws one inch apart, which will cut timber about twenty inches wide up into inch-thick boards. I feel anxious to see the thing running.

Tuesday, February 4th. The flood is at a standstill nearly, and not much rain. The sun shines bright and warm, and there is a smile on Mother Nature's face, and I feel like smiling back. I am so glad to see pleasant weather again, I could go out and skip and run on the knoll with the lambs and enjoy it. I hav made my letter so long I fear I shall weary you. Drop me a line if you are too busy to write more—if only to let me know how you are prospering. Yours lovingly and hopefully, JENNIE V. GRAHAM.

In Contact with Himself.

"Pat, you must be an early riser. I always find you at work the first thing in the morning."

"Indade, that Oi am sorr. It's a family trait Oi do be thinkin'."

"Then your father is an early riser, too, eh?"

"Me feyther, is it? Faix and he roises that early that ef he'd go to bed a little later he'd mate himself gettin' up in the mornin'."

What the Little Ones Are Saying.

Gentleman (to poor little boy): "Well, Johnny, did Santa Claus put anything in your stocking?" Boy: "No, he didn't; but he would if it hadn't a been for one thing." Gentleman: "What's that?" Boy (showing a bare foot through a big hole in his shoe): "That's that."

"Whatever are you doing, hanging up both your stockings?" asked a mother of her little girl. "One is enough; besides, you shouldn't be so greedy, my dear." "I ain't greedy," was the philosophical reply. "You must remember, ma, that I'm a twin."

Miss Wixon's Works.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300pp., $1.50.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383pp., $1.25.

Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-Book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224pp., boards. $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

HISTORY
OF THE
INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT
Of Europe.

Revised Edition—2 vols—Price, $3.

By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER, M.D., LL.D.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ANTICHRIST.

PROVING conclusivly that there was no Christ crucified under Pontius Pilate, but that the real Jesus, the illegitimate son of Mary by Joseph Pandera, was stoned and hanged for sorcery about 75 years B.C. Cloth, 446 pages, with full Index. Price, $1.50. Former price, $2.00. For sale at this office.

Agents for the Truth Seeker.

CALIFORNIA.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco, Cal.
Dr. J. L. York, San Jose, Cal.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearny st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 313 Grant ave., San Francisco.

CANADA.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
W. B. Cooke, 170 1-2 Yonge st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
Knowles, Cor. George and Granville st., Halifax, N. S.

COLORADO.
J. G. Jenkins, 400 Arapahoe st., Denver.

FLORIDA.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

IDAHO.
A. Erwin, Murray.

ILLINOIS.
Post-office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
E. A. Stevens, 558 West Madison st., Room 1, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 302 State street, and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 56 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

INDIANA.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
T. P. Monroe, postmaster, Dunkirk.

LOUISIANA.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Joseph Marsh, Northampton.
Johnson Bro's 5 N. Main st., Fall River.

MICHIGAN.
A. Atwood, Eaton Rapids.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, 138 S. Division St., Grand Rapids.
Swan & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Horace Haynes, Leslie.

MISSOURI.
Phillip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Lang & Co., 709 Olive st., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Eaton & Smith, 1234 O st., Lincoln.

NEW YORK.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
M. B. Edinger, 1243 Third ave., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, cor. Fulton and Nassau. st, New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
A. J. King. 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.

OHIO.
John Jacques, Akron.
J. Hexter, 303 Superior street, Cleveland.
Van Epps & Co., 259 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Emory P. Robinson, Sydney.

OREGON.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
C. H. Wilcox, Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 1106 Leopard st., Phila.
W. F. Schade. 3,706 Butler street, Pittsburgh.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.

TENNESSEE.
Wm. B. Fisher, 331 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

TEXAS.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick. Norse.
H. S. Kratz, 306 Houston st., Fort Worth.

UTAH.
James Ashman, Salt Lake City.
W. F. Reybould, Salt Lake City.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
W. Wedeken, Montesano.

ENGLAND.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet street, London.
Progressiv Pub. Co., 28 Stonecutter st., London, E. C.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

AUSTRALIA.
Mrs. J. Hadfield, Park st., Sydney, N.S.W.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N. S. W.

NEW ZEALAND.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

THE
MARTYRDOM OF MAN.
A COMPENDIUM OF UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

By WINWOOD READE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill.—[Literary World.

You turn over his pages with a fascination similar to that experienced in reading Washington Irving.—[Inter-Ocean.

His history has a continuity, a rush, a carrying power, which reminds us strikingly of Gibbon.—[New Haven Palladium.

The sketch of early Egyptian history, in the first chapter, is a masterpiece of historical writing. He has a style that reminds us of Macaulay.—[Penn Monthly.

Eighth edition. Extra cloth, 12mo, 543pp., $1.75.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.
PRICE, TEN CENTS.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Giordano Bruno.

His Life, Works, Worth, Martyrdom, Portrait, and Monument.

With a complete list of the American subscribers to the fund for the erection of the monument.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, THOMAS DAVIDSON,
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, KARL BLIND,
LYDIA R. CHASE.

Single copies 15 cents; ten copies for a dollar.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ICHABOD CRANE PAPERS.

Daringly witty and inexpressibly laughable onslaughts on Christianity.

Price, 10 cents.

ROMANISM,

OR

DANGER AHEAD.

The Reason Why a Good Roman Catholic Cannot be a Good Citizen of this Republic.

By A. J. GROVER.

Price, paper, 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

NOW READY.

A VOLUME OF THE WRITINGS
OF

HORACE SEAVER.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume comprises some of the ablest and best editorials written by Mr. Seaver during the past forty-five years. It is neatly printed on cream-white paper, bound in cloth, and contains a fine likeness of the venerable editor of the Investigator. Every Liberal should hav this book in his home. It is now ready for delivery.

Price, $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.

It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ON THE WORD GOD.

By Milton Woolley, M.D., Author of "Hebrew Mythology," "The Career of Jesus Christ."

The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. —[Ps. xiv, 1.

Children and fools speak the truth.—[Old Saw.

Paper, 12mo, 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SOCIAL WEALTH,

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in the Acquirement and Apportionment.

By J. K. INGALLS.

Price, Cloth, - - $1.00.

TRY-SQUARE;

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

ROME OR REASON

A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience.

By NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS.

A very critical analysis of both Protestantism and Catholicism, from the vantage-ground of an intimate personal experience with the two systems. It deals the most trenchant blows which pure logic is capable of inflicting.—[Critical Review.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.75.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BIBLE INQUIRER;

OR,

A Key to Bible Investigation.

Containing 148 Propositions
With References to the most Plain and Striking Self-Contradictions of the so-called Inspired Scriptures.

BY A. JACOBSON.

Third edition, carefully revised and enlarged.

Every Liberal needs a copy for ready reference. As a pamphlet to loan to Christian friends, it is the most effectiv Iconoclast ever published.

Price only 25 cents.

THE

CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:

THEIR

Crimes and Persecutions.

8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Reign of the Stoics.

THEIR

History, Religion, Philosophy, and Maxims of Self-Control, Self-Culture, Benevolence, and Justice.

With Citations of Authors Quoted from on Each Page.

BY FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.

Read the philosophers, and learn how to make life happy, seeking useful precepts and brave and noble words which may become deeds.—Seneca.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

This book shows that many Christians might learn much from these ancient heathen.—American Bookseller.

One of the most valuable helps for those who would understand the character of human progress in all ages.—National Quarterly Review.

The author has shown himself a diligent student, an ardent admirer, and a faithful interpreter, of some of the most remarkable monuments of ancient thinking.—New York Tribune.

Reading this book, we find the doctrins of the Stoics to be almost identical with the views held by the broadest and most enlightened minds of the present day.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Lecky says of Marcus Aurelius: "The purest and gentlest spirit of all the pagan world." Merivale says: "Of all the line the noblest and dearest." Taine says: "The noblest soul that ever lived." John Stuart Mill says: "He preserved through life not only the most unblemished justice, but the tenderest heart."

Extra Cloth, 12mo, 248 pp., $1.25.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BINDER for THE TRUTH SEEKER

For the benefit of our readers who preserve their papers we offer a new style of binder, made for the purpose, and with the heading of THE TRUTH SEEKER printed in gold letters on the outside. This binder allows the opening of the papers perfectly flat. It also allows the taking out and replacing of one or more papers from any part of the file without disturbing the other parts.

Sent by mail, postpaid, for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
tf 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

SAKYA BUDDHA.

A Versified, Annotated Narrativ of his Life and Teachings.

With Citations from Buddha's "Path of Virtue."

BY E. D. ROOT.

I take pleasure in speaking in praise of this work.—Prof. J. M. Peebles.

The book has been introduced into Buddhist schools in Ceylon. The "Banner of Light," "Religio-Philosophical Journal," and many Spiritualist papers and lecturers hav spoken highly of the book.

Extra Cloth, 175 pp., $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

WHAT KIND OF A MAN CLARK BRADEN IS.

BY B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 10 cents.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

HOW TO Strengthen the Memory,

OR,

NATURAL AND SCIENTIFIC METHODS OF NEVER FORGETTING.

The Boston Post says: "This book actually shows us how to keep our memories in good working condition and repair them when out of order." Price by mail $1.

Parturition Without Pain.

BY M. L. HOLBROOK, M.D.

Godey's Lady's Book says: "We giv our cordial approbation to this work. The information it contains is most important, and, we are fully convinced, reliable." Price by mail, $1.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY

AND HYGIENE, or, THE MYSTERIES OF MAN. Carefully revised edition, with 111 illustrations. The most perfect book for men and women ever published. 50,000 sold. Price $2, by mail. Illustrated catalog free.

Marriage and Parentage.

In Their Sanitary and Physiological Relations and in Their Bearing on the Producing of Children of Finer Health and Greater Ability.

BY M. L. HOLBROOK, M.D.

The Scientific American says: "This work is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young." $1.

EATING FOR STRENGTH;

OR,

FOOD AND DIET IN RELATION TO HEALTH AND WORK.

The New York Herald says: "Dr. Holbrook's book is among the very best of its kind."

The Home and Garden says: "A study of this book will enable any intelligent reader to make a choice of food which may save the cost of the book every day in providing for a family, besides increasing health, strength, and longevity." $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll

IN THE

TRIAL OF C. B. REYNOLDS

FOR

"BLASPHEMY,"

At Morristown, New Jersey.

Stenographically reported, and revised by the author.

Handsome 8vo, 86 pp., beautiful type, fine paper. Price, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 25 cents, or $2 per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1890.

Edited by CHARLES WATTS.

CONTENTS.

Agnosticism and Immortality.....Samuel Laing
A Sonnet.....Joseph Ellis
Who Was Moses?..H. J. Hardwicke, M.D., F.R.C.S.
The Comfort of Agnosticism.....E. Lynn Linton.
Are Miracles Credible?...Constance C. W. Naden.
The Contest Between Agnosticism and Theology, John Wilson, M.A.
Above: A Poem.....W. Stewart Ross.
The Evolution of the Agnostic Idea, R. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.
The New Fatalism.....B. Russell.
Descartes's Proof of the Existence of a God, F. J. Gould.
A Poem.....W. B. McTaggart.
The Free Expression of Opinions..G. F. Underhill.
Fragments.....William Maccall.

Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

POINTERS:

A POCKET CYCLOPEDIA,

CONTAINING

Tables, Rules, Practical Hints, and Historical Sketches, for Farmers, Mechanics, Machinists, Merchants, Housekeepers, and the Public Generally, with

Numerous Maps, Illustrations, and Diagrams

Illustrating some of the more Important Comparativ Statistics of the World.

More Information for Less Money than has ever been offered.

ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

For $50 worth of "Cold Facts" boiled down in a Nutshell. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by its Fruits; Our Ideas of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism: Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A four days' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. BURGESS, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Paper, 50 cents. Cloth, 80 cents.

Underwood-Marples Debate. A four nights' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Rev. JOHN MARPLES. Fully reported. Paper, 35 cents; cloth, 60 cents.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the prices named.

"Christianity: Defectiv and Unnecessary," by Kate Eunice Watts, is a small book in paper covers just issued from the office of Secular Thought, Toronto. The first chapter answers the question, "Why is Christianity believed?" The second chapter is entitled, "Our Father which art in Heaven," and when through with it the author has left God but a shred of a character. The preposterousness and immoral effect of the doctrin of "The Fall and the Atonement" are set forth in the third chapter. Chapter IV is entitled, "The Basis and Incentiv of Orthodox Morality," and exhibits the superiority of Rationalism to orthodoxy as a principle and source of morality. The concluding chapter givs many reasons why "Christianity is not a Necessity to Mankind." The book, like every work proceeding from the house superintended by the scholarly and sensible Charles Watts, is written with clearness and accuracy. Price, 10 cents.

An objection that Freethinkers will hav to meet about as frequently as any other, is the Christian outcry: "See the horrors your belief of Infidelity produced in the French Revolution." Informed Freethinkers know that the conservativ institutions of church and aristocracy, and not Infidelity, were responsible for the excesses of that period. Anyone who is not possessed of the facts requisit for defense, may obtain them in a pamphlet just written by Charles Watts, "The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes." Price, 10 cents.

THE LAST INCA. A Tale of Discovery in the Vale of the Inti-Mayu. New York: Cassell & Co. Cloth, pp. 288.

Though not of a Freethought nature, this narrativ is interesting and not void of profit. The author is evidently some one who has traveled in Peru, and who now assumes a pseudonym. The scene is laid in the Peru of the present. The narrator of the tale in penetrating the interior discovers a hitherto unknown nation, that turns out to hav been founded by Marco-Capae, the last of the incas, who mysteriously disappeared at the time of the conquest by Spain. This nation has attained a pitch of civilization and happiness such as that to which the enthusiastic reformers of our day and lands aspire to lead their races.

The 136 pages of the North American Review for February are filled with an ample variety of timely matter. The discussion on free trade and protection, begun by Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Blaine in the January number, is continued by the Hon. Roger Q. Mills, representativ in Congress from Texas, and well known as the author of the Mills bill in the Fiftieth Congress, who replies to Mr. Blaine's defense of the policy of protection; and it is promised that in the next number Senator Morrill, of Vermont, the author of the Morrill tariff of 1861, will take up the discussion of the question. Sir William Thomson writes on "Electric Lighting and Public Safety," showing what has been done in the various countries of Europe to guard against danger from electrical conductors. Another topic of the day, "British Capital and American Industries," is treated by Erastus Wiman, Esq. Gail Hamilton contributes a characteristic article on "The Pope and Italy," showing that the pope's claim that he is a prisoner in the Vatican is merely a pretense. Some words are these:

To every liberal-minded man the sight of a pope prone on the floor all day because a statue is consecrated to a man whom that pope's predecessors burnt is simply repulsiv. It would be foolish enough if he were mourning because Bruno was burnt. It is something worse when he mourns because he cannot burn him. The political complication comes from the fact that there are thousands of men in Europe who stand in awe at the pope's tears and take sides with them, without knowing that his tears are needless. It is against this man, with his consecrated past, with his organized present, plotting, planning, scheming against united Italy, that the government must be forever arrayed. How much of the care which has lined the king's brow with untimely furrows is due to the refractoriness of the pope, we cannot know.

There are many other instructiv articles. Price, 50 cents; per year, $5.

"Medical Sense and Nonsense for Ten Cents" is the amusing title of an equally amusing book filled with pictures and rhymes quite as amusing. There is mingled throughout advertising matter of a medical sort, which, though not amusing, is no doubt very profitable and trustworthy, for it is by the old friend of ourself and all Freethinkers, Dr. Foote. This little work of 100 pages is issued by the Murray Hill Publishing Co. at the price—as indicated by the title—of 10 cents.

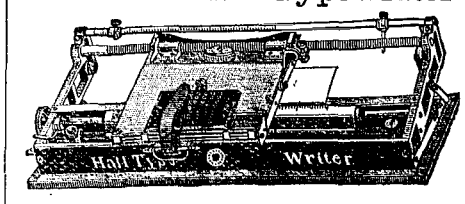
A work on the land and labor question that has, through being written in an uncommonly plain, intelligible style, attained much popularity, is one by Frank Q. Stuart, of Denver, entitled, "Natural Rights, Natural Liberty, and Natural Law: An inquiry into the causes of social maladjustments—the rational, just, and adequate remedy." The fundamental principle whence Mr. Stuart deduces his affirmations as to how land should be held, is the principle of Natural Right. This axiom he states in the words of Herbert Spencer: "Every man has the right to do whatever he will, provided that in the doing thereof he infringes not the equal right of any other man." Proceeding from this principle, the writer thinks it clear that man has the natural right to breathe, to eat, to walk, to work; that in order to breathe, to eat, to walk, to work, a man must be upon the earth, and unless supplied with necessaries by others must be permitted to occupy and use some portion of the earth; that any system of landholding that prevents him from occupying and using such portion, or that exacts from him tribute for thus exercising his natural right, is inequitable, and, consequently and finally, that all so-called titles to land except title by occupancy are void. The book contains thirty-eight large double-column pages. Price, 25 cents.

Not long ago we printed in THE TRUTH SEEKER a preface by Colonel Ingersoll to a work by Lawyer Johnes, entitled, "Circumstantial Evidence of Personal Immortality." The writer throws aside revelation and essays to prove immortality by analogical and other reasoning. The price, 25 cents, is rather high for the size of the book, thirty-seven small pages; if it can demonstrate the likelihood of immortality to any, probably they will think it worth the sum.

"Will Shakspere, Tom Paine, Bob Ingersoll, and Charlie Bradlaugh," is a thirty-two page book published by R. Forder, London. As some hav thought, in regard to the three modern Freethinkers whose names appear last in the title above, that the contraction of their first names is derogatory to them, the author points out that it should be deemed creditable, as the names of the majority of the people's favorits, and the world's greatest men, from Will Shakspere down, hav met like curtailment. Price, 25 cents.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF ATTENTION. By Th. Ribot. Authorized translation. Chicago: The Open Court Publishing Co. Cloth, pp. 121. Price 75 cents.

All Freethinkers look on with gratification and interest at the progress made by the schools of scientific psychologists in investigating the phenomena of the mind. These phenomena of the mind being intangible and more complicated than physical phenomena, their reduction under scientific law has in point of time come after the like understanding of the physical world; and as long as the workings of the mind remained shrouded in mystery Christians claimed the mental domain as the peculiar province of their God, and insisted that the wonderful ongoings therein were evidence of that God's existence and manifestation. But, as our clear-headed and undaunted men of science pushed forward into the physical domain, and showed that all was under natural law and not under the capricious rule of a God, so they are now little by little making conquest on the region of thought and feeling, and demonstrating that field to be equally subject to fixed order and void of aught supernatural. Among the scientific investigators who are doing this one of the most valued is M. Ribot, whose little monograph on the special function, Attention, we now notice. M. Ribot, in his own country, may be regarded as the inaugurator of modern psychological research, now occupies the chair of comparativ and experimental psychology at the College de France, and is the editor of the foremost philosophical review of the continent, the Revue Philosophique. His works upon the Diseases of Will, of Memory, and of Personality, are universally known. What the author distinguishes as Voluntary Attention, he discusses at some length. He observes that it is a product of art, of education, of civilization. Lastly he treats the morbid forms of attention—the most interesting chapter of the book; treating of distraction, hypochondria, the manifold and fantastic forms of fixed ideas, crotchets, notions, etc., ecstasy, with historical illustrations, attention in maniacs and idiots, and attention during sleep and during hypnosis.



PERFECT MOTHERHOOD; OR, MABEL RAYMOND'S RESOLVE. By Lois Waisbrooker. New York: Murray Hill Publishing Co. Cloth, portrait of author, pp. 346. Price, $1.50.

This is a good Radical novel, and will be acceptable to those who like tales with progressiv philosophy intermingled. The Radicalism that is woven into the strand of the fiction, consists of new views on means of bringing into the world better children, sharp criticism of religion, and advanced thought on labor.

A BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF FREETHINKERS of All Ages and Nations. By J. M. Wheeler. London: Progressiv Publishing Co. Cloth, pp. 356. Price, $3.

Nine out of every ten Christians in the country firmly hold the belief, injected into them by their pastors, that all the world's great men hav been believers in Christianity. To counteract the circulation of this monstrous falsehood, Freethinkers hav made good use of Bennett's "Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," and hav derived some service from other works, the calendar in the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL being not altogether without efficacy in that direction. But the more aids we hav the better, and the above work is one that we welcome as an auxiliary of very considerable value. While Bennett's work contains much more information on the persons noticed, the number treated is not so great as that contained in the present volume. This compilation has been made with great labor and research, and is presumed to giv a sketch of every Freethinker of note of whom there exists any record. The total number of biographical sketches is about seventeen hundred. We will select a few names, and occasionally a word or two from the descriptiv matter. Some months ago, while the work was being issued in parts, we dealt with Part I, and hence will begin with: Bebel, Ferdinand, living leader of the Socialist party in the German parliament. Beethoven, musical composer. Bentham, Jeremy, the great jurist who, according to Macaulay, "found jurisprudence a gibberish and left it a science." Brissot, French Revolutionist. Bruno. Buckle, philosophical historian, author of the famous "History of Civilization in England." Büchner, living German Materialist. Buffon, French naturalist. Burns, Robert. Burr, W. H. Byron, Lord. Cabanis, French physician, "the father of the Materialistic physiology," who contended that thought is a property of matter, a secretion of the brain. Cæsar, Julius. Carlyle, Thomas. Castelar, living Spanish statesman. Tchernychewsky, Russian Nihilist. Clifford, William Kingdon, English mathematician, philosopher, and moralist, author of "The Scientific Basis of Morals." Colman, Lucy. Combe, phrenologist. Comte, Auguste, French mathematician, and originator of the famous Positiv philosophy. Condillac, the French philosopher who contributed so much to build up the Materialistic thesis that all mental life is gradually constructed out of simple sensations. Condorcet, philosopher and French Revolutionist. Confucius. Conway, Moncure D. Cooper, Peter. Darwin, Charles. Denslow, Van Buren. Denton, William. Descartes, French philosopher. Diderot, French philosopher. Draper, Prof. John W., author of the "History of the Intellectual Development of Europe" and "History of the Conflict between Religion and Science." Foote, George W., living English Freethinker, imprisoned in 1883 for blasphemy. Fourier. Franklin, Benj. Frederick the Great. Frothingham, O. B. Froude, James Anthony, English man of letters. Gambetta. Garibaldi. Gibbon, Edward, historian of the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Gibson, Ella. Girard, Stephen. Goethe, Germany's greatest poet, who declared himself "decidedly non-Christian," and said his objects of hate were "the cross and bugs." Greg, W. R., author of the "Creed of Christendom." Haeckel, German scientist. Harrison, Frederick, living English Positivist and man of letters. Holbach, Baron, French philosophical writer. Holland, F. M. Holyoake, George Jacob. Hugo, Victor. Humboldt. Hume, Scotch philosopher and historian, whom his friend Adam Smith describes as "approaching as nearly to the idea of a perfectly wise and virtuous man as perhaps the frailty of human nature will permit." Huxley. Hypatia. Ingersoll, Robert. Jefferson, Thomas. Kneeland, Abner, imprisoned in Boston in 1834 for blasphemy. Krekel, Mattie. Lennstrand, Viktor. Lyell, Sir Charles, geologist, whose "Principles of Geology" incurred the resentment of the religious world as containing the germs of that modern scheme of geology that overthrows scripture. Macdonald, Eugene Montague. Macdonald, George, "a genuin humorist." McDonnell, William, American novelist, author of "The Heathens of the Heath" and "Exeter Hall," Freethought romances. Mazzini, Italian patriot. Mendum, Josiah. Mill, James, philosopher. Mill, John Stuart, philosopher. Monroe, Dr. J. R., editor and proprietor of the Ironclad Age. Montaigne, French philosophical writer, who took for his motto and guide of thought, "What know I?" He shares with Voltaire the credit of having effected the disuse of religious persecution in France. Montesquieu. Morley, John, living English man of letters and member of parliament, biographer of Voltaire and Rousseau. Moss, Arthur B. Newman, Francis William, brother of Cardinal Newman. Nordau, Max. Oswald, Felix L. Owen, Robert. Owen, Robert Dale. Paine, Thomas. Palmer, Courtlandt. Parker, Theodore. Pasteur, Louis, French scientist, investigator of treatment for hydrophobia. Proctor, Richard, English astronomer. Putnam, Samuel P. Remsburg, John E. Renan. Reynolds, Charles B. Rousseau. Sale, George, English orientalist and translator of the Koran. Schiller, Germany's greatest poet after Goethe. Seaver, Horace. Shaftesbury. Shakspere, on whom Prof. J. R. Green says: "Often as his questionings turned to the riddle of life and death, he leaves it a riddle to the last without heeding the common theological solutions around him." Shelley, English poet. Slenker, Elmina D. Spencer, Herbert. Standring, George. Stanton, Elizabeth Cady. Strauss. Swinburne, living English poet. Symes, Joseph. Taine, living French philosopher, esteemed the first in France. Tyndall, scientist. Underwood, B F. Volney, Count. Voltaire. Wagner, German musical composer. Wakeman, Thaddeus B. Walker, E. C. Ward, Lester. Washburn, L. K. Watts, Charles. Westbrook, Rich. B. Wettstein. Otto. Whitman, Walt, American poet. Wixon, Susan H. Wright, Elizur. Wright, Frances. Youmans, American scientist. Zola, greatest living French novelist. SUPPLEMENT:—Adams, Robt. C. Schreiner, Olive. Wheeler, J. M., the compiler of this Biographical Dictionary.

New Model Hall Typewriter

The Best Standard Typewriter in the World.
Cheap, Portable, No Ink Ribbon, Interchangeable Type in all Languages, Easiest to learn and rapid as any. Agents wanted everywhere. WARRANTED AS REPRESENTED. Address
National Typewriter Co.,
10 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. P. O. box 5159.
Send for catalog and specimens of work.

CONSTRUCTIVE FREETHOUGHT
IN THE
Kingdom of the Unselfish.
BY JOHN LORD PECK.
The readers of this paper can find some genuine Constructive Freethought, which, in the words of one of their own writers, "reaches forward to grasp some philosophy of life and its myriad uses—some teaching that shall crystallize around this present life and lift it to a pedestal hitherto unknown—some lofty purpose that shall fill and thrill all with a new and glorious enthusiasm." This is what the book really accomplishes. To obtain it inclose price, $1.50, to the EMPIRE BOOK BUREAU, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York

W. S. BELL'S PAMPHLETS.

LIBERTY AND MORALITY.
PRICE, 15 CENTS.
Accept my thanks for your excellent and useful discourse.—James Parton.
I am much pleased with your address, and will notice it in Man.—T. B. Wakeman.
A beautiful pamphlet of 36 pages. It is a very able paper, and deserves wide dissemination.—The Age.

ANTI PROHIBITION.
PRICE, 20 CENTS.
The number of heads under which you hav divided the subject matter of the pamphlet, and the concise manner in which the point is discussed, should be highly commended. Therefore I take great pleasure in recommending "Anti-Prohibition" to the consideration of every person who is interested, not only in the cause of temperance, but in the principles of self-government.—J. J. McCabe.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

GIRARD'S WILL
AND
Girard College Theology.
AN EXPOSÉ
Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.
By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.
Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE UNIVERSE ANALYZED
BY JOHN R. KELSO, A.M.,
Author of "Deity Analyzed," "The Bible Analyzed," "The Real Blasphemers," "Spiritualism Sustained," etc., etc.
The latest and best work of an analytic thinker, who is gifted with those rare powers that render the subtlest conceptions the easy property of the ordinary mind. The book contains many ideas that will be new to the world and productiv of good in furnishing food for thought. We trust it will hav the immense distribution it so richly merits.—[The American Idea.
Cloth, 12mo, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PAINE'S WORKS.

Paine's Theological Works, including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Letter to the Bishop of Llandaff, Reply to Mr. Erskine, Letter to Camille Jordan, etc., etc., with a life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 12mo In paper covers, $1.00; cloth, $1.50.

Paine's Great Works (complete) in one volume. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, $4.50.

Paine's Political Works, including Common Sense, The Crisis, and Rights of Man. Cloth, $1.50.

The Age of Reason. An investigation of true and fabulous theology. Without a peer in the world. Paper, 25 cents, or 5 for $1. Cloth, 50 cents.

The Age of Reason and An Examination of the Prophecies. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Common Sense. Paine's first work. 15 cents.

The Crisis. Containing numbers from I. to XVI. inclusiv. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Rights of Man. For the oppressed of humanity. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

22 Discussion with Elder Shelton. Bennett. 10
23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5
31 God and God-Houses..... 2
35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies.. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No. 2. Rev. Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5
81 Hereafter, or the Half-way House. Sypher. 2
82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps. 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Biblo-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2
107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 5
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10
121 Ingersoll's Review of his Reviewers..... 3
122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wan Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2
158 The Fool's Creed..... 1
159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL.
Price, 25 Cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER,

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photo-engravings of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 40c.; with autograph, 50 cts.

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price, 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.

tf

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 833pp., silk cloth, $3.

Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle from Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

THE

Cosmian Hymn Book,

A COLLECTION OF

Original and Selected Hymns

(Words and Music)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies, For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

PRICE, . . . $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By D. ROSSITER RAYMOND
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Career of Jesus Christ.

An Exposition of the True Meaning of this Character as described in the New Testament. By Milton Woolley, M.D., author of "Hebrew Mythology." Paper. 8vo, 25 cents.

DIAMONDS.

Unprecedented offer. No other house so fair In order to giv my Liberal friends throughout the United States an opportunity to examin, test, and compare my goods and prices with those of other diamond merchants, I will sell any piece of Diamond Jewelry, accompanied by contract that cash in full will be refunded any time within one year from date of purchasing if goods are not entirely satisfactory. No other dealer will do it. None will sell as cheap. Carrying a large stock, being an expert, close buyer, and doing business on smallest possible expense, you will positivly save twenty to thirty per cent by purchasing of me. Diamond Pins and Eardrops, worth $600, for $400; Pins, Rings, Eardrops, Studs, Hair Ornaments, Pendants, worth $300, for $200; do., worth $200, for $140; do., worth $150, for $110; do., worth $100, for $70; do., worth $80, for $60; do., worth $60, for $45; do., worth $40, for $30; do., worth $30, for $22; do., worth $20, for $15. You can wear these goods daily for one year. It will not cost you a cent. If in the mean time you are not satisfied that the goods are better and cheaper than sold elsewhere return and get your cash in full.

Selections sent to responsible parties on approval; to any banking-house or C.O.D., privilege of examination.

The "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

sixteen jewels, finely adjusted to heat and cold, patent regulator, Breguet hair-spring, beautiful double-paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Perfect, and no watch will compete with it! In silverine case, $19; in four-ounce coin silver case, $23.50; five-ounce, $25; six-ounce, $27. In open face, best filled gold case, $27; hunting, $38; do., Louis XIV., $35. In fourteen carat solid gold, $50 to $150. Sent prepaid, and cash refunded if not satisfactory.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established 1857.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can have their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 5th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Admission free. Discussions follow lectures.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257

meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston,

Meets every Sunday (from October to June) at 2:45 P.M., at Paine Memorial Building, Appleton street.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.

Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid, for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

tf

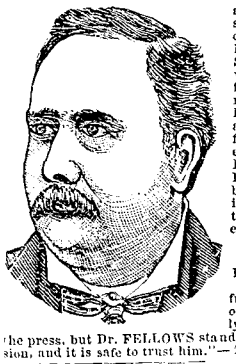
Essence of Religion.

By L. FEUERBACH.

Translated from the German. Cloth, 12mo, 75pp.; 50 cts.

The truth-teller is ill-mannered, therefore immoral.—Extract.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.



SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indescretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

☞ Dr. R. P. Fellows is an outspoken Infidel and a very successful physician. He is worthy of an extensiv patronage.—The Liberal.

News of the Week.

CANADA is preparing legislation against polygamy.

HUXLEY has written in the Nineteenth Century a paper strongly against Henry George's land theories.

FAITH CURERS at Saybrook, Ill., hav made Mrs. Mollie Smith and her sisters Julia and Emma Barnes violently insane.

REV. FRANK KAHLER, of Southington, Conn., and Millersburg, Pa., recently committed suicide at Allentown, Pa.

CARDINAL MANNING has issued a book saying that Christian children cannot be considered children of a state that has no religion.

IT IS thought that Leo XIII. is dying, as he has made a nomination for a successor, a step never taken by a pope except when near death.

LAST Sunday it took forty policemen to prevent a riot at the Greek church at Shenandoah, Pa., which has been the seat of violence for several weeks.

CATHOLICS hav published a book entitled, "Who Was Bruno?" adding defamation in this day to the burning they inflicted on that philosopher in the past.

ONE of the Roman Catholic rioters at Hull, Canada, who interfered with the evangelizing work of Miss Wright, has been sentenced to two months' imprisonment.

PHILADELPHIA doctors are stirred up over the war that the women's branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has begun against vivisection.

IN a high school at Pittsfield, Mass., several Catholic scholars hav refused to study the text-book Myer's Medieval History, and hav consequently been suspended.

THE Congressional committee to irrigate desert tracts in the West has so far set apart reservoir sites in California, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Montana, and New Mexico.

BISMARCK has consented to the admission to the German colonies of Catholic religious orders of all kinds, including the Jesuits, who are denied entrance to Germany itself.

ON the 1st the emperor of Germany spoke to the council of state in a pathetic tone of the difficulties that unfolded themselvs before him in his attempt to solve the labor problem.

AT Sandusky, Ala., the Rev. Mr. Bryant persuaded a girl to leave home, and when her brother called and asked an explanation he knocked him down, and grasping a gun went over and tried to shoot the father.

ON the 28th ult. Ex-Congressman Taulbee and newspaper correspondent Kincaid, both Kentuckians, met in the Capitol and quarreled, and on meeting again later in the day Kincaid shot the other, perhaps fatally.

A PROCESSION in New York city on the 1st was headed by a truck on which was probably the largest volume ever made, five feet each way, containing 57,000 signatures to petitions to the legislature to enact the Saxton ballot reform.

HUGH PENTECOST, speaking at a meeting of the Socialistic Labor party, said that it was a disgrace to the civilized world that such a monster as the czar is alive; and others demanded that our government remonstrate with Russia.

THE other night a woman found kneeling and praying to a "Keep off the grass" sign in a New York park, was arrested, and will be examined as to sanity. Those seen kneeling to other equally useless pieces of wood are still at large.

SOME commotion has followed the publication by Catholics of a book containing the superstitious statement that the Jews still sacrifice Christian children at secret rites—a statement belief in which has in the past caused much bloodshed.

AT Pittsburgh, Pa., the parochial school that Father Sheedy has been permitted to hold in rooms of the public school building for a year, despite Protestant remonstrances, has been removed to the parochial building whose construction is now completed.

AN odd occurrence was the breaking-up of an insufferably poor theatrical performance at St. Louis on the 2d, by the audience, who then mobbed the theater from the outside, and were kept away from the actors only by a police clubbing that broke half a dozen heads.

CATHOLICS complain that in the schools Ireland is not made the subject of instruction so much as it should be—that its history is not taught enough, and that when Christian names are spelled such ones as "Patrick," "Brigid," "Michael," and "Nora" are not selected.

IN Congress, Mr. Anderson, of Kansas, has proposed a United States committee of arbitration, to consist of nine men appointed by the president, who will investigate disputes between railway, steamboat, and telegraph companies and their employees, acceptance of their decisions to be enforced by United States courts when necessary.

THE

Truth Seeker Annual

—AND—

Freethinkers' Almanac,

1890.

(E. M. 290.)

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Calendar for 1890,	5
Freethought in the United States, 1889,	17
Faded Flowers. Poem by J. E. Remsburg,	24
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue. T. B. Wakeman,	26
Mostly Fools. W. Stewart Ross (Saladin),	36
Record of the Spanish Inquisition,	44
Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas,	44
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral. Helen H. Gardener,	45
The Middle Ages. Illustrated,	69
The Priest,	70
The Supernatural World,	71
The Reformation,	73
Future Terrors,	77
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated,	79
Freethought Journals in the United States,	96
In Search of a Spirit. E. M. Macdonald,	97
Why I Left the Church. H. O. Pentecost,	109

NEW YORK:

PUBLISHED AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

GODS AND RELIGIONS ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE SAFEST CREED,

AND

TWELVE OTHER DISCOURSES OF REASON.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

Extra cloth, 12mo, 238pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE NEW GOD.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,

Secretary of the American Secular Union.

Price 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE

Bible of Nature,

OR, THE

Principles of Secularism.

A CONTRIBUTION to the RELIGION of the FUTURE.

BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD,

Author of "The Secret of the East, or the Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline," "Physical Education, or the Health-Laws of Nature," "Household Remedies," "The Poison Problem, or the Cause and the Cure of Intemperance," etc., etc.

Felix L. Oswald is a well-known and vigorous writer on scientific and social subjects.—[Cin. Com. Gazette.

Cloth, 12mo, 240pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LIFE OF

Joshua Davidson:

MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,

As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.

BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,

Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.

Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.

☞ This book was suppressed by the first American publisher. ☜

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

AN HOUR WITH THE DEVIL.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

Price, - - - 10 cents.

BLASPHEMY AND THE BIBLE.

BY C. B. REYNOLDS.

Price, 5 cents.

The Liberty of Printing, and Reply.

BY HUELBUT and WAKEMAN.

Price, 10 cents.

Gems of Thought.

OF all systems the world has ever seen, the philosophies of ancient Greece and Rome appealed most strongly to the sense of virtue, and Christianity to the sense of sin. The ideal of the first was the majesty of self-relying humanity; the ideal of the other was the absorption of the manhood into God. It is impossible to look upon the awful beauty of a Greek statue, or to read a page of Plutarch, without perceiving how completely the idea of excellence was blended with that of pride. It is equally impossible to examin the life of a Christian saint, or the painting of an early Christian artist, without perceiving that the dominant conception was self-abnegation and self-distrust.—Lecky.

COMPARE the mythology of Greece with the mythology of Judea; one covering the earth with beauty, and the other filling heaven with hatred and injustice.—Ingersoll.

THE church is a sort of hospital for men's souls, and as full of quackery as the hospital for their bodies. Those who are taken into it liv like pensioners in their Retreat, or Sailor's Snug Harbor, where you may see a row of religious cripples sitting outside in sunny weather. Let not the apprehension that he may one day occupy a ward therein, discourage the cheerful labors of the able-souled man. While he remembers the sick in their extremities, let him not look thither as to his goal.—Thoreau.

UNDER the influence of sorrow and infirmity, old men become instinctiv pessimists. Monastic tendencies imply an abnormal condition of the human mind. The worship of sorrow has so perverted our moral ideals that for long centuries joylessness and self-affliction ranked among the highest virtues. The municipal codes of many American cities still contain provisions for the suppression of public amusements on the only day on which a large plurality of our workingmen find their leisure for recreation.—Prof. Oswald.

ASK two Christians of what religion they are. Each will answer, I am a Catholic. You think they are both of the same communion; yet one is of the Greek, the other of the Latin church; and they are irreconcilable. If you seek to be further informed, you will find that by the word Catholic, each of them understands universal, in which case universal signifies a part.—Voltaire.

IT is insisted that the unity of the church substantiates its claim to divine origin. This is asserted over and over again, in many ways; and yet in the cardinal's article is found this strange mingling of boast and confession: "Was it only by the human power of man that the unity, external and internal, which for fourteen hundred years had been supreme, was once more restored in the council of Constance, never to be broken again?" Now if this internal and external unity was broken, and remained broken for years, there was an interval during which the church had no internal or external unity, and during which the evidence of divine origin failed. The unity was broken in spite of the divine founder. This is admitted by the use of the word "again."—Ingersoll.

IT is not the fear of God that has a moralizing effect, as is most clearly shewn by that period, replete with the fear of God on the one hand and moral horrors of every kind on the other, which we call the Middle Ages. —Buchner.

THE facts of history, however, and our own observation negativ the conclusion that the moral sanction of theology has been or is so efficient as the great majority suppose. During what are called the Middle Ages, when faith in theology was at its strongest, morality, in the scientific sense, was almost at its lowest—or, in other words, social coöperation existed but in a very imperfect condition. War and violence were predominant. Conduct was such as allowed of a state of military coöperation; but it was almost prohibitory of the industrial. Acts of what theologians call piety were frequent and general—acts, that is, supposed to be personally pleasing to the God, such as praying to and praising him, suffering self-inflicted pain and annoyance of many kinds, giving money and power to men supposed to be his ministers, building gorgeous and costly temples in his honor. These and similar acts which, from the theological point of view, were good, were, no doubt, very prevalent; but, from a scientific point of view, they hav no element of moral goodness. Then, under the influence of theology and justified by deduction from its dogmas, conduct was followed which theologians thought good—viz., persecution even unto death of those esteemed to be enemies of the God, so-called heretics.—John Wilson, M.A.

NOTHING but the most savage barbarity, the most egregious roguery, or the blindest ambition could hav imagined the doctrin of eternal punishments. If there is a God, whom we can offend or blaspheme, there are not upon earth greater blasphemers than those who dare to say that this same God is a tyrant perverse enough to delight, during eternity, in the useless torments of his feeble creatures.—D'Holbach.

PAINE examined the scriptures for himself, and found them filled with cruelty, absurdity, and immorality.—Ingersoll.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 17. No. 11. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY. { New York, Saturday, March 15, 1890. } 28 LAFAYETTE PL. } $3.00 per year.

SOME OF THE ORDINANCES OF GOD.

Notes and Clippings.

SAYS the Cincinnati Enquirer: "When Senator Blair, of New Hampshire, rises to speak, everyone in the Senate chamber, save the clerks, runs away. It would be a saving of both money and time if Congress were to lend him enough money wherewith to hire a hall."

THE government of St. Domingo, which claims to hav the only original bones of Columbus, is desirous of forwarding them to the United States for use in 1892, provided that they be given in return for them $20,000 cash down, and twenty per cent of the receipts on public exhibition of the same.

ONE theological fact that cannot be too earnestly impressed upon the minds of the young, says Saladin, is the enormous population of hell as compared with that of heaven. Sunday-school teachers, in trying to giv children an idea of the relativ magnitude of the two places, should say: "Hell is a tremendous menagerie containing a hundred thousand elephants. Heaven is a pill-box containing half-a-dozen fleas."

THE Hon. F. M. Pfister, of San José, having recently died, a committee of his survivors hav presented to the court, where he practiced, a number of resolutions setting forth that "it has pleased him who is the ruler of our destinies to remove from our midst our late friend and brother," and adding, "The same is a public calamity." This, says Freethought, is a queer view of God—that the bringing about of public calamities pleases him. None but a good Christian could see where the pleasantness comes in.

LAMENT of the Independent: On the Western frontier the devil's missionaries are apt to get the start of the Lord's heralds. A correspondent writes: "I am twenty miles from the nearest church—a small Methodist one in the town of —— on the railroad, and three thousand feet vertically above it. On all sides of me I do not know of a single professing Christian besides myself any nearer than that place, and there are very few there. In this camp most of the people are Ingersollians, and a few years ago, when our population was larger than it is now, the postmaster kept the post-office counters covered with Ingersoll publications."

AT the Woking, Eng., crematory, the number of cremations is steadily increasing. In three years, from 1884 to 1887, the annual average was 8. In 1888 there were 26. In 1889 the number increased to 46, the total number at the end of the year having been exactly 100. This year there hav been several every week. In France, at the new crematory in Paris, there were 35 ordinary cremations in 1889, but the number of still-born children and the bodies from the hospitals and anatomical schools is so large that incineration is continually going on both night and day. The Journal d'Hygiène says that the total number was nearly 3,000 in the year. At Rome the numbers were 119 in 1886, 155 in 1887, and 202 in 1888. At Milan and other Italian towns the numbers are increasing, as also in Germany.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, of Boston, has been preaching to immense congregations of men in Old Trinity, this city, at the noon hour, between 12 and 1 o'clock. One day he told his hearers that the precise form of creed held by a man is of comparativly little moment; that in all stages of development men hav worshiped some sort of divine being, and that the surrender of self involved in such worship is "the first design of God" regarding his children. Of this Mr. H. O. Pentecost, who has been a minister himself, says: "If this is so, of course missionaries to heathen lands are unnecessary. But what I would like to know is, How did Dr. Brooks learn what 'the first design of God' is? Is he consciously humbugging the people? How does he know what God's designs are?" And he might hav asked, Does he know anything?

DUNLAP'S Cable Agency, under date of February 28th, forwards the following: Mrs. Annie Besant, the well-known Agnostic and advocate of social reform, said to-day that labor unions, whether of or for women, were stupidly organized. "What can you expect," said she, "of trade unions, organizations that accept, nay, solicit, contributions from disinterested people? Certain collapse awaits all such institutions that are not self-supporting and independent of outside aid. But the difficulty is to find a woman capable and willing to undertake the drudgery and unrewarded toil of the management in order to make unions self-supporting. Cardinal Manning is simply an Arcadian dotard who speaks nothing but Christian twaddle, Burns is really a great man. Mrs. Ashton Dilke seeks political notoriety, and her real sympathy is with free dinners for school-children and such pretty nothings. No, the women of England are abject slaves; there is no force in the national character so far as women are concerned, so that I and other women who chance to be gifted with backbone are disheartened and disgusted with the labor of trying to rouse them to action."

THE statutes of Massachusetts provide that, when a person to be sworn before a court or magistrate declares that a peculiar mode of swearing is in his opinion more solemn and obligatory than by holding up the hand, the oath may be administered in such a mode. It also permits Quakers and other persons who hav conscientious scruples against swearing to affirm. It provides "that every person believing in any other than the Christian religion may be sworn according to the peculiar ceremonies of his religion, if there are any such." So far, comments the Christian Register, the statutes are liberal enough; but, when it comes to deal with non-religious believers, Agnostics, or Atheists, it makes a flagrant discrimination. It declares that "every person not a believer in any religion shall be required to testify truly under the pains and penalties of perjury, and the evidence of such a person's disbelief in the existence of God may be received to affect his credibility as a witness." This is a direct intimation to a jury that, because a man is an Agnostic, they need not credit his testimony. Experience, on the other hand, shows that some of the most conscientious and veracious persons living, whose word is incontestable without oath or affirmation, are persons who hesitate to declare their belief in the existence of God. The statute in its present shape instead of helping justice is really a measure to obstruct it.

Communications.

"The Lord's Money."

On the second day of February a Rev. I. W. Read preached a sermon in Seattle in which he tried to make the people believe that the Lord was sadly in want of money, and that they ought to hand over to him without ceremony their hard-earned shekels.

The sermon has been sent to me by the friends in Seattle for review and comment. It is only noticeable because it is a fair specimen of thousands which are preached every year. The text is from 2 Corinthians ix, 7:

Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him giv, not grudgingly, or of necessity, for the Lord loveth the cheerful giver.

I shall take some extracts from this sermon and make such comments as occurred to my mind from the reading.

If every sermon that is preached, were submitted to a critical analysis, the people would soon find out what a vast amount of chaff they pay for to get a little wheat.

From every quarter of the country comes the cry of "hard times." Factories are shutting down, merchants are closing out their business, mechanics are out of employment, and their families are suffering. Farms are being sold out under foreclosure, and general want prevails.

But I was not prepared to hear that the hard times had reached the confines of heaven. But according to the statement of the Rev. Mr. Read, such is the fact—God has given us all we hav, and kept giving, until now he is straitened circumstances, and asks us to giv back a part of our substance, since he is in sore want and cannot help himself.

What his necessities are I am unable to say. The people do not roast as much beef and mutton for him as in times of yore, and perhaps he has got hungry. It cannot be that he needs clothing, for he livs in a country where nothing is worn but white robes, and as he furnishes one to every new-comer he must hav an endless supply on hand, and one would think that he might appropriate one when the old one wears out, or gets a little soiled.

Perhaps his old throne is getting a little rickety and needs repairs, but as he made a universe in six days, one would think that he might arrange a little affair of that kind on his own hook, without calling upon us poor wretches for help.

It may be that he has started in to make another world out of nothing, and has run short of material, and wants money to lay in a new stock. It is possible that he is sick and wants a little money to buy physic. It may be the grippe; if so, a hot whisky lemonade is said to be a most excellent remedy. If he is a little short of change I would furnish the whisky and the lemon until Brother Read can send forward the proceeds of his begging sermon.

While I am unable to state just what God's great want of money is, the Rev. Mr. Read says he wants some and must hav it right off. It would hav been better for God if the Rev. Mr. Read had stated just what his great want of money is; the people would hav more readily responded. But the Rev. Mr. Read knows just what the great necessity is and that is enough. We must not ask questions; all that is required of us is to giv.

A minister is never out of his sphere so completely in the minds of many, as when urging the duty of giving.

That is to say, that you begin to mistrust that the people are finding out that you are the veriest hypocrit in the world when you pretend that you want money for the Lord. They begin to know that when money passes into your pocket it sticks fast, and God will never get a nickel. Again, who are you to be urging the "many" to duty? When you discharge your duty to your fellows, and stop begging for God, and earn honest bread, and stop sucking up the substance of the people like a Christian leech, without giving anything in return, you will be more potent to urge others on to duty. Besides, if we should follow the scripture injunction, and "take no thought of the morrow," nobody would hav anything to giv.

No man who does not use a part of his money for the Lord, can be a full, influential Christian.

But what does the Lord want of money? Are his creditors pressing him? Is he likely to be sold out under foreclosure, or is he getting miserly in his old age and trying to get money just to hoard up? Now suppose the church and the ministry were out of the play, how silly it would be to talk about money for the Lord. I once heard of a man who worked a blind man on shares, and every night after the day's begging was over they divided the money. The Rev. Mr. Read is playing a more dishonest game, for he knows that the Lord does not want money and will never get a cent of what the people giv. A man at this enlightened day who pretends to be begging for the Lord ought to be "whipped naked through the world." If these lazy ministers would go to work and squarely earn their own living, the Lord would need less, and they would respect themselvs much more.

If everyone who has professed the name of Christ would appreciate the grace of giving, the cause of the redeemer would prevail mightily over every opposition.

"The cause of the redeemer"—you mean the church and the ministry. These are what you want to "prevail mightily over every opposition." Then would not ministers wax fat, but how about the people? Has not that experiment been tried? Did not the church own all the property, or hav the power of controling it, for more than a thousand years? It would seem as though the Lord must hav got about all the money he wanted, for the people had none.

During that thousand years the church literally held the lives and the fortunes of the people in its clutches. When the church condemned a man to death he had to die. When the church said the word, all that a man possessed went down into its capacious maw. The church was rich, the people were poor, ignorant, ragged, and degraded. The Lord must hav been tickled over the condition of things. And if Mr. Read could only make the people giv a sufficient amount to the Lord, the good old days would return. The church would become rich and powerful; the ministry would control the people, and take the "fat of the land." All would be lovely, and the theological goose "hang high."

Well, Mr. Read, it will be a happy time for the people when men of your ilk are compelled to earn the money they so much crave, and then you will find out that the Lord does not want money half as much as when others giv and you receive.

For the Lord to ask for his own is not begging, and great is the pity if his servants hav to beg for it.

"His own!" If all we hav is "his own," why is Mr. Read begging for him? "His servants"—that is the ministers. Mr. Read a servant of the Lord! How very modest. You want the people to understand that the Lord has commissioned you, that there is a peculiar relation existing between you and the Lord which does not exist between him and other men, that you know his wants and desires, and that he has given you power to carry out his designs. This is about what you like to hav the people believe. Nobody knows better than the Rev. Mr. Read that such a claim is a hypocritical pretense. Because they are dishonest enough to practice these shams and liv out a big, black lie before the world, is the reason why these "servants of the Lord" hav a larger representation in the jails and prisons of the country, according to their number, than any other class of people.

Witches hav been hanged, women whipped, eyes bored out, noses slit, ears cropped, and tongues bored with hot irons or pulled out. Men hav been branded, quartered, burnt alive, imprisoned, broken at the wheel, and cruelly tortured in every conceivable way by these same self-constituted "servants of the Lord."

God has recognized the use of money in carrying forward his work in all ages.

How did you come by this information? How do you obtain knowledge about God—his wants, desires, and plans—when the information is shut out from everybody else? My knowledge of God is just as good as yours, and I know he has had nothing to do in the matter. He has never called on me for money, and he has never called on you or anybody else. It is the clergy, not God, who want the money. Now they beg for it. In years before, when they had sufficient power, they compelled the people to "stand and deliver."

Since the church has lost its power different tactics hav been adopted. Now you giv your brother to understand that if he wants to play the part of the "big Indian" in the church, and sit in the amen corner, he must come down handsomely. In years before, the priesthood took what they wanted. Nothing would please you more than to return to the good old times when God (the clergy) got nearly all that was produced. When you claim that you want money for God's sake, you are practicing a deception which would shame a brigand. This is about the way that you and your profession will be sized up when the world outgrows its childhood.

Giving is a test of our love to God.
He demands the first and best.

Just substitute Mr. Read's name for God's and then you will understand just what he means. And then you will know why he demands the first and best. If Mr. Read did not get the first and best, God might carry on his own business and get his own money as best he could. But as long as he can bamboozle the people into believing that they are giving to God, he will eat roast turkey, liv on the fat of the land, and play pulpit puppet, of course. Some day the people will see through all this clerical trickery, and such as Mr. Read will be compelled to lay down their spiritual tools, and to take up such as will giv them hard hands and honest bread.

Mr. Read complains of a young man who gave twenty-five cents for foreign missions and spent a dollar a week for theaters and other amusements; and of another whose entire giving to the Lord was not half the amount of his tobacco bill.

As for the first young man, I think he showed good sense in spending his money at the theater instead of giving it to ministers under pretense of sending Christianity to the heathen. For if Christianity has ever made any nations or peoples better, Spain, Portugal, Italy, and India, Mexico and Peru, are not among the number. As for the second, buying tobacco is about the worst use that money could be put to, unless it is to giv it to a Christian crawfish who prefers Christian darkness to the light of science, and is ever trying to lead the people back to the ignorance and superstition of two thousand years ago.

He takes account of the widow's mite.

Did you ever examin his account book? No doubt you know all about God's business; preachers generally do. When you tell what God does don't you assert as a fact what you know nothing about? Can a truthful man do that? Rightly interpreted you mean that you would take the last cent that a poor widow has got. You ought to be careful about losing your little, shriveled-up soul, for once lost God almighty himself with a double-barreled telescope would never be able to find it.

Giving is to be as the Lord has prospered.

The Lord does not prosper anyone. Prosperity depends upon intelligence, industry, and economy. If prosperity depends upon God, then he has prospered some of the worst cutthroats and freebooters that ever cursed the world, while he has neglected some of the most unselfish and deserving, and allowed them to be imprisoned, starved, and tortured in the most cruel manner, and in many instances by Christian bigots.

Does the Lord prosper a man and make him rich and then damn him because he is rich, as he did Dives? Pretty business, for God to make men rich only to damn them! For has he not said that it was "easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven?" The time will come, Mr. Read, when you will no longer be able to play your holy hocus-pocus arts upon the people.

You must be rich in order to giv, and then damned if you are rich. Queer doctrin that.

He dodges in and dodges out,
And leaves the people still in doubt;
You cannot tell, to see his track,
If going south or coming back.

Mr. Read even argues that it is wrong to be in debt when it debars a man from giving to the church, for he says:

Who gave me the right to cumber myself with debt and then excuse myself from doing anything for the Lord?

It is plain enough, Mr. Read, that, if you are so much interested in the welfare of your Lord, you care very little for his word, for your Lord commands us to "render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's," and givs the further positiv command, "Pay what thou owest."

The treasury of no church should be overdrawn at the end of the year.

Yes, there should be a full church treasury if every man's pocket is empty and children grow up in ignorance. No matter if the people are robbed, if the church is only rich. For more than a thousand years there was just this condition of things. There was a bloated priesthood, and a degraded, ignorant, poverty-stricken people. This has ever been the theory of the priesthood. When the clergy fit a man for heaven he is not fit to liv on earth. The more unlimited the power of the church has been the worse the people hav fared.

A poor girl who worked for a living gave $1 upon a special appeal.

O you contemptible specimen of littleness! No doubt you will get to heaven, for you will hang around the gate until St. Peter falls to sleep and then crawl through the keyhole. May the Lord hav his spectacles on when you enter, so that you will not be overlooked. It has been said that it takes "nine tailors to make a man," but the man who would take a dollar from a girl who is compelled to work for a living, is too small to make the ninth part of a tailor. Three drops of the milk of human kindness could not be extracted if he were put into a lemon-squeezer.

Regularity has great power in bringing the presence of the Lord.

There is no power in prayer at all, and everybody knows it, and ought to be honest enough to own it. Was not the whole nation on its knees when Garfield was shot? Did it hav power to save his life? When the grasshoppers were likely to produce a famin in Kansas, the whole state united in prayer, and God did not call off a single grasshopper.

In the Johnstown disaster did not hundreds go down into the surging waters with their hands lifted in prayer? It is all easy if you shut your eyes and open your mouth and swallow whatever the priest puts into it.

God does not withhold from us his daily bounties.

When a man stands up in public and lies like a Christian rake, it is no breach of courtesy to tell him of it.

Only a week or two ago a family of eight starved to death in Pennsylvania. There are thousands of miners there out of work and in a state of starvation. In every city are hundreds of dirty, starving, neglected children, and you know it. And you knowingly deceive the people when you represent that God daily showers his bounties upon them. Talk about God's daily bounties! He generally bestows his bounties on human hogs and lets the poor suffer.

There never was a time when money would not materially assist in the cause of Christ.

What does Christ want of money? When he sent out his disciples did he load them with money? Did he tell them to beg and grind the last dollar out of a poor hired girl, or did he tell them to go without money and without staff or scrip? When Christ wanted an ass to ride he took it, and when he wanted corn to eat he took it. And I presume Mr. Read and other ministers would like to see the time when they could imitate Christ in this regard, and take whatever they want without earning it.

The world is calling upon us to giv the gospel of Christ to the perishing.

Is there a word of truth in that statement? Would it not put Mr. Read in a corner to be compelled to tell what people had been calling for the gospel? Are the Mohammedans calling for the gospel? If there is anything which a Moslem holds in utter contempt it is a Christian. Are the people of India calling for the gospel? They hav been reduced to a state of vassalage by one of the most Christian governments on the globe. Throughout the Eastern world your religion and those who hav tried to introduce it hav been despised. The few converts you boast of hav cost you millions and millions of dollars, and are among the lowest and most beggarly of the race. Did Christianity prove a blessing to Peru and Mexico? Did your Christian "fire water" prove a blessing to the American Indians? Did the people of Africa call upon Christians to come and fire their villages and capture them and transport them beyond the seas and doom them to a life of slavery? I tell you the gospel has never been called for. In many cases it has been forced upon an unwilling people, and the worst vices and most loathsome diseases hav followed in its wake. It is high time such lies, told in the interest of the church, were hurled back into the teeth of those who tell them.

One thing is clear, no common man
Can lie so boldly as an honest preacher can.

To the church of Jesus Christ the world is more indebted than to anything else.

When you uttered that lie you thought there was nobody to call you to account.

Let us see. We are indebted to the church for the rack, the thumbscrew, iron boot, ripping-knife, spiked chair, and almost every instrument of torture known for the last fifteen hundred years. To the church we are indebted for the witch-hunters, and witch hangers, and women-whippers. We are indebted to the church for the persecution of Copernicus and Galileo, for the burning of Bruno and Servetus. We are indebted to the church for the destruction of some of the most valuable libraries, books, and manuscripts that the world ever saw. To the church we are indebted for the suppression of science and schools of learning, and for the filth, ignorance, poverty, and diseases of Europe for more than a thousand years. Our position to-day is only that which we might hav accepted a thousand years ago were it not for our "indebtedness" to the church. I hav only space to draw the outline; the student of history will fill out the picture.

When people begin to curtail expenses, they begin at the church and school, two institutions to which they owe more than to anything else.

I once heard of a man who ran another through with a hot poker, and then asked him to pay for heating the poker. That man had cheek enough to make a very successful minister. Christianity has been fighting the schools from the first day of its power up to the present time, and is fighting them to-day. The whole Christian fraternity, from Blair down to the last yelping pup in the pack, are trying to turn the schools from their high aims and purposes and make them subservient to the superstitious whims of the church.

"Godless schools," is heard from every yelping Christian coyote in the land. They want to get their God into the schools. A Christian is never satisfied unless he is using his God as a battering-ram, and he butts him against everything. He must hav him in the schools, in the Constitution, in the legislature, army, and navy. And then the Bible must follow the Christian's God and be the first book in school. Superstition before science, prayers before lessons. The young mind must be so warped and distorted as ever to preclude the idea of independent thought.

The kind of schools that ministers are interested in would soon hasten us back to the midnight of the Dark Ages, when the church controled everything, and even the lives and fortunes of the people were subject to the nod of the priesthood. Giv ministers the control of the schools, and in less than half a century they would demand of the people what they now beg for.

He holds all things in his own hands—are not the silver and gold his? The cattle upon a thousand hills are his. Had we the world at our command, we would fall short, even though we were to lay it all at his feet.

There you hav it. Let this idea be thoroughly inculcated into the minds of the young, in the schools as well as in the pulpit, and the minister will then say, "The Lord hath need of it," and take whatever he wants.

When will the people learn that ministers, and church dignitaries generally, are the most selfish, designing, hypocritical, and corrupt people in the world?

Before this language is pronounced unwarrantable, I would ask if they hav not more representativs in the jails and prisons according to their number than any other class of people. Is it not a fact that they liv upon the unpaid toils of the people without giving back anything in return except drafts on the world to come, and promises which they know they never can redeem?

Think of this holy blatherskite, one day telling the people that "his kingdom is not of this earth" and the next day begging for money.

O you whining, begging pulpit nincompoop! What must the people think of you, dodging and bobbing around like a trained monkey—teaching the people that they must not "lay up treasure on earth," while your hand is ever extended for filthy lucre, and "backsheesh" ever upon your lips?

We hav four churches in our village, which hav cost the people at least one hundred thousand dollars in the last twenty years, and all because three or four shirkers were too lazy to take their fair turn at the oar in pulling up life's stream. And what can the people show to-day for this great outlay?

They hav built neither houses nor factories, they turned no spindles, they hav neither plowed nor sowed fields; in short, they hav been mere parasites, devouring like a swarm of locusts and leaving nothing behind. They hav tried to make the people believe that the most perfect men in the world lived in old Bible times.

The people hav been made to believe that if they imitated David and Solomon, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, they would be so near like God that they would get a front seat in the New Jerusalem and an extra string on their harps.

These old patriarchs hav their representativs in Palestine to-day. Their landmarks are the same—their houses the same—they tend their flocks the same—thresh, winnow, and grind their grain the same—draw and carry their water the same and from the same wells as they did in old Bible times.

There they stand. They hav not budged one inch in thirty centuries. And a more unpromising, sickly, sore-eyed, worm-eaten, nasty, forbidding, ignorant, ragged race of beggars cannot be found on the face of the earth. All they can successfully do is to shout "backsheesh" to every passer-by.

Is it any wonder there were prophets—that dead men jumped out of their graves—that there were virgin-born saviors, and that all manner of miracles were performed, among such people? Here is the preacher's ideal. The nearer the people get back to the condition of these patriarchal representativs, the surer they will be of heaven.

Now I say these old moral barnacles hav impeded our progress long enough. They understand that the more ignorant they can keep the people, the easier they can govern and gull them, and the more "backsheesh" they can extort.

It is high time that we let them know that we fully understand their begging schemes and selfish designs—that their high-sounding claims and hypocritical pretenses are mere nickel-plate. Let us boldly face them—tear off their sheep's clothing and expose them to the world. JOHN PECK.

Naples, N. Y.

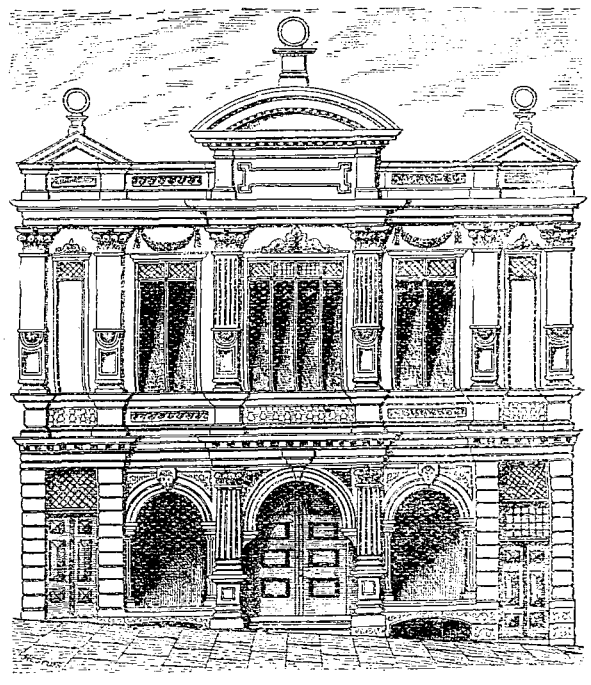
The New Sydney Freethought Hall.

From the Melbourne Liberator.

A special meeting of the shareholders of the above company was held in Tattersall's Hall, Hunter street, on Monday evening, December 2d, the object of the meeting being to authorize the board of directors to proceed with the erection of the hall. About one hundred shareholders were present.

The chairman, Mr. E. Skinner, in opening the proceedings, briefly reviewed the progress made by the company since its incorporation two years ago. The share-register showed that nearly two thousand two hundred shares had been taken up, and nearly sixteen hundred of these were fully paid up.

The total expenditure, including the cost of the land, was about £1,890, and the total income about £1,840, leaving a debit balance at bank of about £50.



The average monthly income since the date of the last annual balance sheet, January 22d last, was, in round numbers, about £70, and if this average were maintained until the end of the financial year our deficit would be cleared off and we should hav a small balance to our credit at the bank.

In order that no time should be lost the directors had offered a bonus of £30 for the best designs for the proposed building, and four architects entered the competition. The several plans were very carefully considered by the board of directors (some of the members of which are practical builders), and other shareholders known to be in the building line were invited to attend the board meetings and giv the directors the benefit of their opinions and experience. The result was the adoption of the plans sent in by Mr. E. Evans, and which were now on view. It now remained for the shareholders present to ratify the action of the board, and if they were pleased to do so, they would next be asked to express their opinion on the following points: 1. Does the present position of the company justify the directors in proceeding at once with the erection of the building? and, 2. Should the building be completed without delay? or would it be advisable to erect the main hall, leaving the back premises to be gradually erected as the company's finances will permit?

Mr. E. Tye moved and Mr. W. Young seconded that this meeting of shareholders fully indorse the action of the board in the selection of the plans for the hall. Several shareholders spoke in support of the motion, which, when put to the meeting, was carried unanimously.

Mr. Tye moved that, in the opinion of this meeting, the present financial position of the company fully justifies building operations being at once proceeded with. Mr. J. Whalley seconded the resolution, which was supported by many of the shareholders and carried without dissent.

Mr. C. H. Ellen moved and Mr. J. G. Rose seconded, that the whole of the building should be completed without delay. Considerable discussion ensued on this motion, and ultimately an amendment was moved by Mr. Tye, seconded by Mr. J. Smith, that the matter be left to the discretion of the board. A show of hands being taken, the amendment was declared carried, but a division was called for, which resulted as follows. For the amendment 281 votes; for the motion, 184 votes. Majority for the amendment, 97.

THE SYDNEY LYCEUM.

Mr. J. Redwood moved that the chairman, Mr. E. Skinner, be invited to lay the foundation-stone of the hall. Mr. Skinner thanked the mover for the honor he sought to confer upon him by this motion, but he declined to accept any distinction in which his colleagues could not participate. Most of his colleagues on the board of directors had worked as energetically as himself, and he strongly objected to any act which would tend to place him one single step in advance of those of his colleagues who had worked side by side with him so long. Moreover, he was of opinion that the most fitting person to select for this ceremony was our lecturer, Mr. W. W. Collins. This latter suggestion met with general approval, and on the motion of Messrs. J. Smith and Redwood, it was unanimously resolved to request Mr. Collins to perform the ceremony.

Mr. Collins in a few well-chosen words thanked the shareholders, and said that after being for four years amongst them he felt proud to hav this distinction conferred on him. He reminded them, however, of his intended visit to New Zealand, that he would leave Sydney about the end of January, and would probably remain in New Zealand for three or four months, and it would therefore be necessary to hav the foundation-stone of their hall laid some time in January, if not earlier.

Mr. John Nullington then moved and Mr. Tye seconded, that the hall should be named "The Sydney Lyceum." After some discussion the motion was carried.

It was next resolved, on the motion of Messrs J. Smith and E. Tye, that the committee of the Australasian Secular Association be requested to make the necessary arrangements for a fitting celebration of the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone, and to undertake the management of the proceedings on that occasion.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President, 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia, Pa.
E. B. FOOTE, JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 98 Nassau street, New York city.
J. E. REMSBURG, Vice-President, ... Oak Mills, Kan.
JULIET H. SEVERANCE, Vice President, . . . Milwaukee, Wis.
IDA C CRADDOCK, Secretary, 930 North 17th st., Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, 930 North 17th street, Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

From the Secular Union's Secretary.

W. J. Datton, of Kilmer, O., writes us as follows:

Your encouraging letter of the 13th was duly received. . . . I never fail to "bear testimony" to the truth of my belief on all proper occasions, especially when there is a chance of aiding the cause by it. . . .

This is a rural district, with no town of any size near here. Farmers as a rule are very conservativ, and while the more intelligent portion of them are not believers in orthodoxy, yet they do not interest themselvs in Radical thought, and do not see the importance of resisting the encroachments of the church. Unfortunately it is a fact that farmers' wives and daughters are superstitious—much more so than the farmers.

While his family is engaged in revival services John will laugh at the ridiculous proceedings; but he never attempts to persuade or offer objections, and usually contributes his mite when the hat is passed around. When a person openly opposes the popular faith, the female portion of the community regard him as a contemptible specimen of humanity, and John says nothing about it. I do not know whether our community is a representativ one or not, but I am inclined to think it is, to some extent at least. However, this was our condition two years ago, and is now, except that John sometimes ventures to mention his disapproval, and that the ladies are not so enthusiastic in their work. This change has been made by hard work by a few Liberals. We hav had six Freethought lectures in the community within the last two years, and hav succeeded in getting six or eight subscribers for Liberal papers. You see we are making some progress, but I do not believe we can get the requisit number to identify themselvs with the movement to make it practicable for us to organize as an auxiliary to the American Secular Union.

We young people of Elba . . . hav succeeded in keeping up a social organization which damages the church very much in that locality, and this is the best we hope to do at present.

This letter is not only interesting, but instructiv, as showing the three chief methods of educating people up to the necessity of resisting the encroachments of the church, viz., Freethought lecturers, Freethought literature, and social organization of "the young people." The last of these three methods, social organization, cannot be dwelt on too persistently by those of us who hav the aims and principles of the American Secular Union at heart. If state Secularization is ever to wage a really successful battle against the encroachments of the church, its forces must be trained, not alone in intellectual, but also in emotional warfare. The dictum of Lord Chesterfield has always been, and probably always will be true—that men are swayed, not by their reason, but by their impulses. And, however much we Secularists may pride ourselvs on the logic of our position, the fact remains that, when we win converts, we do so because we instinctivly appeal to an emotion which is so universal in the human heart as to rank among the great passions—the desire to grow toward our intellectual and spiritual ideals, unchecked by human dictatorship. The protest against those religious bigots who would deprive us of our right to this unhampered growth toward the light is a noble protest, and should, if rightly presented, hav the sympathy of all young people whose hearts are aflame with the longing to act some worthy part in the battles of life. It is natural and beautiful in the young to crave a chance for heroic action. And their enthusiasm is one of the great moving forces of the world.

American Secular Unionists, what are you doing, practically, to recruit our army from these coming heroes and heroins?

IDA C. CRADDOCK,
Cor. Sec. American Secular Union.

C. B. Reynolds's Lecture Trip in the Cold, Cold North.

I was at Lynden, Whatcom county, Wash., February 14th, 15th, 16th. Whatcom county occupies the extreme northwest corner of Washington, and covers some two thousand square miles of territory, most of which is comparativly level and densely wooded. When cleared the soil is found to be very fertil and highly productiv.

Lynden is within a few miles of the border—"British, yer know"—and about twenty miles north by northeast of the city of Whatcom. It is on the right bank of the wild Nooksack river. A steamboat runs from Whatcom to Lynden, but on account of uncertainty of time of starting the stage carrying the mail is most patronized.

About the only really bad thing in Whatcom county is its roads. They are execrable—the roughest of corderoy, or deepest quagmires. In a new country, sparsely settled, this is inevitable, but with the wonderful influx of population, and magical uprising of flourishing cities, where less than a year ago was a dense forest, good plank roads will speedily be built, only briefly preceding railroads.

Lynden is a clean, pretty, thriving little place, making solid growth. The real estate fiends hav not yet cursed it with a boom.

It has no saloons, no rowdies, no loafers, no use for police, no rows, no robberies. Crime would be almost unknown only for the occasional advent of rough specimens from the outside world, and the very devout with some other man's rib, en route to the other side of the border.

The inhabitants are energetic, kindly, and hospitable, happily leavened with a goodly number of genuin Liberals, who are among the very best and most respected citizens.

I had hoped for fine weather; but no, on Friday evening, the time of my first lecture, the storm king was in wildest fury, blowing the snow in blinding drifts, while the thermometer fell below zero, something unprecedented in this region. Saturday evening it was much worse, and beyond question the most savage, cold windstorm during which I ever lectured. It reminded me of that miserable time I had in Fall River, Kan., only here the Liberals were Liberals, and alive. They had engaged the Opera House for the lectures, and it was clean, well warmed and lighted. It is a very handsome hall, well fitted up, with capacious gallery, good stage, etc; the finest Opera House, for a place the size of Lynden, in the state, and its proprietor is a Liberal.

There was quite a good attendance of men. Even the women, who scorned to yield to Mrs. Grundy, had to yield to rude Boreas. It was expected Sunday afternoon would end the storm, but it did not. Yet despite the very worst weather conceivable, we had a grand, good, enjoyable time, and very much of enthusiasm was enkindled by the lectures. Thirteen signed the constitution of the Washington Secular Union and paid six months' dues in advance. They then elected C. M. Tobiassen as vice-president, to be the executiv officer and representativ of the state society at Lynden. He is a young man of education, unblemished reputation, fearlessly independent, yet modest and genial.

On Sunday afternoon we organized the Lynden Secular Union. The following officers were elected by written ballots without nominations: president, Frank O'Neil; vice-president, I. F. Miller; secretary, C. M. Tobiassen; treasurer, W. Lauckhart. They also elected an executiv, an educational, and a social committee.

To R. A. Brown, the indefatigable and self-sacrificing worker for Liberalism, I was under especial obligations. While all were kindness itself, he excelled in endeavors to offset the unpleasant weather by insuring me every comfort.

I should hav had twice as many names for membership of the state organization had it been possible for those at a distance to hav been present. But the gathering them in is confided to Vice-president Tobiassen. The work could not be in better hands.

After the lecture and completion of the organization on Sunday afternoon, I had to go to Roeder, about six miles southeast. The roads for wagons or horseback were impassable, so friends R. A. Brown and J. A. Delander accompanied me as guides, and carried my heavy grip. Snowdrifts were away up over the fences, but with light hearts and merry speech we trudged and waded through, reaching Nooksack a little after 6 P.M. The Roeder school-house, where the lectures were advertised for, is on the other side of the river, and although the weather was greatly moderated from what it was at Lynden, yet it took a good deal of courage to face the savage, freezing blast crossing the river. But on arrival we found the house warm and brilliantly lighted, and our tired feeling all dispelled by the hearty greeting of the friends, D. E. Rice, one of the most highly respected citizens of the county, despite his pronounced Infidelity; Dr. J. W. Bell, the scholarly physician, and ever-genial Chas. Shea, Jr., a worthy son of his ever-jolly, generous-hearted sire. Some anxiety was arising lest the severe weather should hav prevented my keeping the appointment. Friend Rice had, on receipt of my letters, gone at once to work. The sickness of his son and the severe storm crippled his efforts, but he had secured ten good members to the Washington Secular Union, and the friends elected Dr. J. W. Bell vice-president for Roeder.

I delivered three lectures, and on the last night organized the Roeder Secular Union, and they elected D. E. Rice president, and Charles Shea, Jr., secretary, and adjourned to meet on the first Sunday in March to elect the balance of the officers, committees, and adopt by-laws, etc. I shall be glad when the time comes to again visit Roeder.

On my return trip I took passage from Whatcom to Seattle on the steamer Skagit Chief. When about four miles from Seattle, at 8 o'clock in the morning, she was run into by the steamer Evangel, and two-thirds of her larboard side above the hull smashed to splinters.

It is astonishing how the pious shook with fear, and rushed and scrambled for life-preservers. Evidently they had more real faith and hope in cork, or even, as it proved in some cases, a life-preserver stuffed with straw, than they had in their God.

It looked, for a few minutes, as though the end of the Jersey blasphemer had come, but it seems I am not to be knocked out by any evangel afloat or ashore, so I am working zealously for the practical organization of the Liberals of Washington that their power for good may be recognized, and all unite in keeping the flag above the cross.

I expect to open office and headquarters next week. On Monday I take a trip to New Castle among the coal miners, and am expecting a rousing good time, and a large list of members to the Washington Secular Union.

I shall lecture, when required, anywhere in the state, but letters addressed to me at headquarters, Sixth Street Hall, 1,526 Sixth street, Seattle, Wash., will be sure of prompt reply.

C. B. REYNOLDS,
Secretary Washington Secular Union.

Freethought in Sweden.

During the imprisonment of Victor Lennstrand, Mr. Henry V. Berghell has taken upon himself the duty of traveling Infidel preacher, and intends to giv lectures and hold Secular "revival meetings" in various cities of Sweden, while Captain Thomson, A. Hentzer, a Swedish lawyer, and the poet E. Hellberg will keep things interesting for the orthodox in Stockholm.

The Stockholm Freethinkers' Christmas celebration was a decided success. Music, speeches, and singing made up the program. The large hall, vestibule, and stairway were filled with people, many of whom for the first time in their life listened to a Secular Chrismas service, and when the echo of the last words of "Ottesangen," "Our greeting! Bright time of truth," composed by E. Hellberg, slowly died away, there were tears in many an eye. The second day after Christmas the Sunday-school had its "tree," two tall spruces, which fairly groaned under the weight of small packages and over a hundred bright lights.

New Year's day Captain Thomson gave a lecture, "The New Emancipation."

Dec. 12, 1889, a complaint signed by Messrs. Henry V. Berghell, E. Hellberg, F. Rahm, Lindenau, and Hentzer, on behalf of the Utiliska Samfund, was sent to the minister of justice requesting him to show justice toward Lennstrand. The complaint states that the lecture on "God," for which Lennstrand is now imprisoned, has been printed and published; that the "impious" passages were read November 3d at the protest-meeting by Mr. H. V. Berghell; that the lecture in full was delivered by Mr. A. Hentzer December 1st, and that none of these gentlemen hav been prosecuted, hence the liberation of Lennstrand is called for. The answer of the bigoted minister was, "'God' can be delivered no more."

Mr. Lennstrand himself is compelled to content himself in prison. Yet he has his pleasant surprises even there. He received on New Year's day, besides numerous letters and telegrams from friends, both at home and abroad, an autograph album containing the greetings and congratulations of one hundred and thirty Swedish Freethinkers, and from a country minister of the gospel of "love your enemies," a letter from which I subjoin the following extract, taken from Fritänkaren:

It is with utmost pleasure that I hear you hav succeeded in procuring so excellent and suitable a home, in which I hope you will remain until judgment day arrives. Then you hav done what is worse than murder—robbery and theft. You hav disturbed the peace and led astray souls of poor human beings.

Fritänkaren No. 2 contains among other good things an excellent poem, "Sta Stach" (stand firm), by Isodore K.; a letter from the Norwegian Rationalistic writer and poet, Bjornstjerne Bjornson, in which he reads the text to a minister, Friend Breen, because the latter at the funeral of a Freethinker quoted the words of St. Matthew, "He that believeth shall be saved, he that believeth not shall be damned." All honor to Mr. Bjornson, and shame and despisal on that Christian pulpit-pounder. It contains, too, a short biography of the late Horace Seaver, an announcement of President Westbrook's "Manual," and an article, "What Do They Say Abroad?" in which a synopsis is given of letters received from foreign journalists and individual Freethinkers. The paper, which appears in a new dress, we heartily recommend to our Swedish-American friends.

It must be a great satisfaction for Col. R. G. Ingersoll to know, that not alone several of his writings are translated into Swedish, but that even in that far-off land the clergy fear him and as a consequence lie about him. For this a small Methodist pulpit-pounder, Berg, is severely taken by his long ears by Mr. Lennstrand in the last number of Fritänkaren.

Sweden is a God-fearing and God-loving land, hence its officials, following the example set by the Jehovah, delight in self-contradictions. Three courts find V. Lennstrand guilty of blasphemy, while a fourth and higher court decides he has not committed this crime. Then the church authorities, taking their stand on a funny old paragraph in a still fun-nier law of 1873, refuse to erase Lennstrand's name from the member-list of the state church. Perhaps the reason for this strange refusal may be sought in the fact that the church needs a few honest members to keep up her reputation, hence cannot spare even an outspoken Atheist. And to cap the climax, the lecture, "Why I Am Hostil Toward Christianity," for which Lennstrand has received nine months' imprisonment, and which is prohibited in four cities, among these Stockholm, has been delivered in this city by Mr. E. Hellberg, and the authorities hav not troubled this gentleman any more than they hav the sale of the printed copies of the same lecture.

The Stockholm branch of Utiliska Samfundet has taken a very important step. February 2d an address to Lennstrand, signed by Messrs. O. Thomson and A. Hentzer on behalf of three hundred members present, was written. In the address, which is a protest against the imprisonment of Lennstrand, occurs the following passage: "We will openly testify that we fully agree with you in your belief and that we are ready to publish it to the whole world, and we will to a man demand that the legal and spiritual authorities, the true guardians of superstition and falsehood, shall either punish us with you or also desist from persecuting you." Similar addresses are to be issued by the other local branches, and when all hav arrived at Stockholm they are to be forwarded to the great little king. Our brethren evidently mean business. May the spirit and shadow of Utiliska Samfundet never grow less in quality or quantity.

G. N.

Our London Letter.

The new president of the National Secular Society bears no love for Christians and their creed, and will use his utmost endeavors to concentrate all the forces of the Freethought party in a fierce and persistent attack on their position. It will be, as far as he can make it, war to the knife—no mercy will be shown and none expected. His plans for the future are not yet fully divulged, but there is every reason to believe they hav been well thought out, and if he is well supported by other Freethinkers, Christianity will ere long hav a severe blow which will accelerate its downward progress more speedily than ever. For the past few years there appears to hav been no well-sustained series of attacks, and it was hoped and believed by the orthodox party that militant Atheism was gradually dying out. It will be speedily discovered that such is not the case, and a rude awakening is not so very far off as some may hav thought. Academic Freethought has not been apparently so efficacious in killing the superstition as might hav been wished. It has certainly modified belief in the doctrin of damnation and other like pleasant theories, but it only appeals to the educated classes, and fails to reach those who hav but little time and opportunity for metaphysical studies. For these the Atheism of the Freethinker is more appropriate, being more easily understood and appealing more forcibly to their grade of intelligence. The masses will always better appreciate forcible, straightforward language, going direct to the point, in showing the absurdities and contradictions of the Bible, than learned disquisitions on the logos. No doubt this is much to be deplored, but so it is, and must be made the best of.

There will soon be a fierce struggle between Freethought and Roman Catholicism for the possession of the minds of the great artisan class, and it behooves Freethought to be up and doing, so as to be fully prepared to counteract the insidious attacks of the Romanists. These latter are well drilled in the art of proselyting, and are ready to assume any guise and form to gain their ends. Their power and numbers appear to be greatly increasing in so-called Protestant countriss, more especially in the English-speaking races; in Asia they make little or no headway. As dissenters get more "respectable" they tend toward the retreat of the Episcopalian church, which again leans toward Rome, and there is situated the bitter and implacable enemy of civil and religious liberty. The ultimate result is by no means doubtful, but there will be hard fighting before the pope and his myrmidons are finally crushed out of existence. The centuries of injustice to Ireland hav well aided the Catholic church, and in consequence of this injustice the Irish cling all the closer to their creed and its priests. The race is extremely prolific, and the children are carefully trained in the faith of their parents, from which they rarely revert. The diabolical land laws in the "Green Isle" will yet cause much misery in England and the States, owing to the advantage taken by the Catholic church. Though if the prophet Baxter be correct this time, and the world comes to an end early next year, we need be under no alarm as to the future conflict.

Curiously enough, the belief in faith-healing is greatly discredited by the press, religious and otherwise, and it is no uncommon thing to find a professed believer in the Bible deriding those who act up to the instructions given by the "apostle" James on the treatment of disease.

Messrs. J. M. Robertson and Sam. Standring are giving a course of Sunday evening lectures at the ill-fated Claremont Hall, though, up the present, they hav not proved a financial success. It certainly speaks well for men who giv their time, money, and brains, continuously working for a cause in which they believe. If Freethought was only taught because it paid, like supernatural religion, we should hav very little of it, and even the very name would cease to exist; it is a poor game as a speculation, and many of the lecturers and writers for the cause must, at times, feel very disheartened. There is no prospect of making a competency here, and no reward hereafter. They hav all the pains and penalties, and none of the inducements of the Galilean fisherman to preach what is distasteful to the multitude.

J. D.

Atheism and Agnosticism.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: I esteem your paper a very valuable one in our search after knowledge through investigation, particularly on the subject of immortality; hence among your subscribers you hav many Spiritualists, among which class I may be enumerated.

The writer a few days since was surprised by some one in your paper making the assertion that Agnosticism and Atheism were one in meaning. Never was there a greater blunder. The Agnostic modestly asserts, I do not know, but am open to conviction. The Atheist with great assurance asserts what is impossible from his standpoint to know—that there is no immortality for man, and thus stultifies himself.

To the remarks of many jeering Atheists Spiritualists as a general matter hold it unnecessary to reply further than to state that Spiritualism is the outgrowth of science and has a scientific basis and when freed from the fraud of tramping charlatans is perfectly demonstrable.

How many thousands of years the terrific peals of thunder must hav rolled on the mounts of Horeb, Sinai, and other lands ere Franklin with his kite or Morse with his wires utilized a once terrific element as an agent of intelligence in illumination or the turning of a domestic sewing-machine!

Yes, I am a Spiritualist, and at the same time a Materialist of the most enduring fiber. Some Spiritualists with a predisposition to Mosaic and Christian imaginings may, and do, work themselvs into ancient Bible absurdities, but as a class we can join heartily in the humor of Brother Heston's pictures.

D. B.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Lincoln's Religion.

I lived for about twenty-six years in Springfield, Ill., and was well acquainted with Abraham Lincoln. I was present at a meeting previous to the celebrated Lincoln-Douglas debate when Lincoln was expected to define his position in respect to slavery. The band, of which I was leader, played a piece, and the speaker was introduced. In the course of his remarks, pointing with outstretched arm to the center of the floor, he paused a moment, and then said: "We will suppose a bucket of shot to be standing on the floor. In the bottom of the bucket is a stick of wood. The stick, being the lighter substance, rightfully belongs at the top, but the weight of the shot, if left undisturbed, will in all probability keep the stick in the same position for all time. But if you shake the bucket and agitate the shot, the stick will eventually come to the top. Truth will prevail."

Shortly after the meeting referred to I chanced to be talking with Lincoln, and quizzingly inquired how he could reconcile this and similar utterances with holy writ. Without committing himself, he inquired if I had read Gregg's "Creed of Christendom." I informed him that I had not. "Then," said he, "read that book and perhaps you may ascertain my views about truth prevailing." I never conversed with Lincoln afterward, but I obtained the book, which I keep treasured in my library. I am well convinced that no man who is used to weighing evidence, especially of Lincoln's humane and unbiased disposition, can read the book in question without truth coming to the surface.

Edward Butler.

Lyons, Kan., Jan. 16, 1890

Reformed Spelling.

On January 13th, a definit resolution looking toward amended spelling was introduced into the House of Representativs by the Hon. Frank Lawler, of Illinois, which is so modest and sensible that it deserves to be thoroughly considered and urged to an immediate passage.

The resolution is as follows:

Resolved, by the House of Representativs (the Senate concurring), That the public printer be and is hereby directed, in all work for Congress and for the departments begun after passage of this resolution, to adopt the following rules for amended spellings, except in educational and other works where a different orthography may be required:

1. Drop ue at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc. When the preceding vowel is long, as in prorogue, vogue, disembogue, retain final letters as at present.
2. Drop final e in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., when the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc. When the preceding vowel is long, as in polite, finite, unite, etc., retain present forms unchanged.
3. Drop final te in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, videt, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final me in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change ph to f in words like phantom, telegraph, phase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute e for the diphthongs æ and œ when they hav the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, e'ofagus, atheneum, etc.

N. B. No change in proper names.

Now, all persons, men and women, who appreciate the need of a simpler mode of spelling than we now hav, should write a few lines to the member of Congress from their district, or section of country, asking him to specially examin Mr. Lawler's resolution in favor of using, in government printing, short spellings for certain classes of words, and requesting him to cast his vote in favor of the same. This will cost but little trouble and a two-cent stamp.

Petitions in favor of the resolution are being circulated, which hav the following preamble:

To the Senate and House of Representativs, in Congress assembled: Your petitioners would respectfully represent that our present American orthography, though much improved within the last hundred years, is cumbersome, illogical, unhistorical, and misleading; that millions of dollars are wasted, each year, in writing and printing unnecessary letters, while the progress of our children in their education is greatly retarded by the difficulties in the way of learning to spell. Your petitioners recognize the fact that, in the future, as in the past, changes in our written language must be made by gradual steps. The modifications herein suggested hav the indorsement of the highest scholarship in the land, and, if adopted, would serve as an entering wedge for the introduction of other reforms. Your petitioners believe, moreover, that these changes should be made at once in the printing done for the government; and they therefore pray that your honorable body will adopt the following resolution, which was offered in the House of Representativs, Jan. 13, 1890. Then follows the resolution above printed.

Lectures and Meetings.

The lecture at the Manhattan Liberal Club on Friday evening, March 14th, will be by Mr. Augustus A. Levey, on "The Events of 1923, Chap. I."

A public reception was given W. F. Jamieson at Holstein, Ia. He was greeted at the depot by a brass band and escorted to a large hall, where he had fine audiences for three nights. He next went to Carroll, Ia., where he is to lecture several nights. Address at Des Moines, Ia.

The Brotherhood of Moralists.

The following is a report of the work done by the propaganda committee of the Brotherhood of Moralists at Hannibal, Mo., in January, 1890:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Number of members at last report	802
" " " enrolled during month	39
Total enrolled	841

Those enrolled this month are: From Idaho, 17; Ohio, 5; Georgia, 4; New York, 4; Michigan, 2; Colorado, 2; Indiana, 2; New Jersey, 1; Arizona, 1; Wisconsin, 1.

F. H. Rau, Sec.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Balance on hand, January 1st	$6 75
Received from John L. Moore, Illinois, and Copley Cottrell, Michigan, each, $1.00	2 00
J. G. Hertwig, District of Columbia; Wm. Mathews, Indiana, and J. D. Berger, Indiana, each, fifty cents	1 50
E. P. Lawton, New York	10
	$10 35
Mailing constitutions, etc	3 45
Balance	$6 90

A. R. Ayres, Treas.

The following is a report of the work done by the propaganda committee of the Brotherhood of Moralists at Hannibal, Mo., last month, February, 1890:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The number of members enrolled during the month was 52. From Massachusetts, 1; Indiana, 1; Maryland, 1; New Mexico, 4; Missouri, 5; Ohio, 5; Idaho, 6; Texas, 10; Dakota, 3; Tennessee, 4; California, 3; New York, 9. Fifty-two membership certificates were issued during the month. The total number of members on the last day of the month was 893.

F. H. Rau, Secretary.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Balance from last report	$6 90
RECEIPTS.
Thos. Weaver, Indiana	10
Ida and J. W. Swaysgood, Indiana	10
Mrs. Wortman, Colorado	20
A. B. Graham, Michigan	25
H. L. Baker, Michigan	25
W. A. Wilkins, Michigan	25
A. E. Smith, Ohio	1 00
Total	$9 05
EXPENDED.
Mailing constitutions, membership certificates, etc.	$5 75
Total	$5 75
Balance in treasury	3 30

Since November 1st we hav enrolled 167 members at a cost of $13.40. The committee's services are gratuitous. Donations to the propaganda fund are needed very much just now.

A. R. Ayres, Treasurer.

You can hardly convince a man of an error in a lifetime, but must content yourself with the reflection that the progress of science is slow. If he is not convinced, his grandchildren may be. The geologists tell us that it took one hundred years to prove that fossils are organic, and one hundred and fifty more, to prove that they are not to be referred to the Noachian deluge.—Thoreau.

Women's Rights.

Women hav no rights peculiar to themselvs. Each individual woman has the same rights as each individual man. Neither sex can be properly entitled to any special privilege or advantage. Neither can claim any benefit denied to the other, or be bound to the performance of a duty not obligatory upon both.

The equality of the whole human race is the foundation on which must be erected the equality of all human rights and responsibilities.

An arbitrary distinction has been made by which men are supposed to be superior to women in physical and mental power. The higher occupations in life hav been allotted to the male, the lower to the female. Personal qualifications are ignored or sought to be obliterated if they do not correspond with our ideas of what is becoming in the sex. Having made the distinction we create a difference to justify it. We educate up or down to the standard we hav ourselvs set up. We do not cultivate in the individual she characteristics most capable of being utilized for the general good, but those we fancy most appropriate for the sex to which that individual belongs.

This is a system which we hav inherited from the Dark Ages. It had its origin in the necessities of savage existence which made men masters and women slaves. It was continued under the indorsement of a savage theology which constituted man the representativ of a tyrant divinity who chose through him to reveal his will to woman. But now the light of truth is dispelling the darkness. The rights of women are freely spoken of, and to some extent asserted, but before they can be established on a solid basis we must recognize that they do not differ from the rights of men. We must admit each individual to the position his or her personal qualifications render suitable, irrespectiv of sex or any other accident of birth.

We hav made great progress in this direction during the last few years. A woman is no longer condemned to be a pauper or a slave. She is no longer necessitated, because she is a woman, to depend upon man for support. Many occupations in life are open to her. Still in almost every case she is placed at a disadvantage. Her labor may be as productiv as a man's, but she is generally compelled to sell it cheaper. She is allowed a voice on some public questions, but denied it on others, only on account of her sex. This is unjust and inconsistent. It is in opposition to the general good. It results from combating singly the effects of an erroneous idea, instead of eradicating the idea itself.

Whether men are willing to admit it or not—whether women generally desire it or not—the time has almost arrived when all political rights will be enjoyed by both sexes equally. The never-varying tendency of progress is to remove class qualifications to the full privileges of citizenship. The qualification of sex is doomed to go, as other qualifications hav gone. One man's vote is as good as another's. It counts the same whether he be a sage or a fool. Unless we maintain that all women are intellectually inferior to the male voter of the lowest mental condition, we cannot consistently draw a sex line as a limit of voting power. It is well to accept the inevitable and wise to prepare for it. It is not wise to unfit those for the use of power who must come into its possession. In many places women voters will constitute a majority. It is suicidal policy for men to bind that majority into a class with interests differing from and opposit to their own. Yet this is what we are doing by making artificial distinctions between the sexes in education, occupation, and social life.

We begin the mischief early. We try to shape the ideas and to fashion the behavior of a child according to a model we consider becoming in its sex. And in this the female gets all the worst of it. We allow the boy's character to form according to its nature, plucking up, perhaps, where we can, ill weeds that spring around it. We force the girl into a mold of our own construction and train her for the artificial, meaningless, useless thing that habit and a corrupt morality springing from a false religious training hav led us to consider "proper" in women.

All educational establishments in which the sexes are separated, or in which provision is made for the instruction of one sex only, tend to perpetuate the evil. From the primary school to the university inclusivly all classes should be open to both sexes together and taught by professors of either sex, selected without reference to any considerations but their ability to teach. All professions, offices, and employments should be equally open to every competent person. All political rights should be equally enjoyed by every individual. It is a wicked mockery to oppose the introduction of an element as hysterical when we do our best to train it to be so.

But it is not in childhood only that we develop female weakness where we should cultivate human strength. Nor is it only in public life that we debar women from a position for which we hav done our utmost to disqualify them. We carry the same principle into our social relations and nurture its ill fruit to the end. We daily hear of conduct that is called "improper" in women. That is impossible if the same conduct be proper in men. We invent a fantastic code of morality which no man but a monk or a lying hypocrit ever professed to adopt for his own guidance and expect the noblest and broadest-minded women to follow it. Men pretend to believe women to be different from what they know they are. Women carry on the farce because they hav been led to consider appearing different from what they know themselvs to be the "proper" object of their existence.

Women who are, as Count Foseo declared them all to be, "grown-up children," are so in most instances because their physical, moral, and mental energies hav been stunted by this false training. If a puppy's growth is stopped by the forcible administration of alcohol, he is not to be blamed if he never becomes a noble dog, but remains all his days a weak little animal, without the power of protecting himself in the ordinary casualties of canine existence. If a young girl's mind is inoculated with the false proprieties of an artificial society, only by the strength of an innate guard and powerful human nature can she ever expel the poison from her system and become a true, good woman of common sense and sound judgment. What powerful drug can purge her of all the hypocrisy and deceit, the affectation and cant, that hav vitiated her system? What tonic strengthen her will and energies to do right in a straightforward, legitimate way when they hav been constantly trained to outwardly bend to those of others, and gain their own ends by trickery? What exercise develop the good points in her nature, when that nature has been so long buried beneath a mass of artificiality that its features are no longer recognizable, and she has almost forgotten the date of its funeral and the spot that was its grave?

Yet there is so much good in humanity that many noble, honorable women hav delivered themselvs from the chains that ages of tyranny bound around their sex. They hav braved the monster custom that, too long, kept them in awe. They hav contemptuously brushed away the venom that his many heads of false religions, false moralities, and false proprieties spat upon their skirts. They hav left the old serpent gnashing his filthy fangs in the dirt from which he sprung. Grand, glorious, beautiful women these! Their grandeur is not in queenly robes, but elevated thoughts. Their glory is not in bright coronets nor sparkling jewels, but in the liberty that they hav won for themselvs, and are winning for their oppressed and degraded sisters. Their beauty, unlike that of mere form and feature, is imperishable, for the sun of equality, which will one day shine on all, has first touched their faces with its morning beams, and gilded them with its own bright light of immortal truth and justice.

And when such women ask to be heard in affairs of state and nation, they are asking for that which is freely given to unlettered rustics and degraded brutes, if only they were the shape of men. They are asking for justice, and it cannot long be denied them. They will win it for themselvs and for all their sex. They will win it, and they will keep it, for the prize so hardly fought for, and so long withheld, will not be lightly lost.

We hear loud boasts of the freedom of mankind, and sometimes flatter ourselvs that the prize is within our grasp. We hav not even reached the spot where the foundation-stone of the temple of liberty must be laid. Not in the valley of despond, darkened by the evil shadow of the churches, may we hope to build it. Not where the teaching of a dying religion is believed, which would silence the voice of woman for good abroad, and compel her to remain in ignorance, or receive knowledge filtered through the brains of man. The bright sun of nature could not gild its towers in such a spot. Its walls would sink into the marshy ground formed by a corrupt mass of rotten tyrannies. On the mountain's summit must we lay the corner-stone of human freedom. It must be the "city over hill-tops, which cannot be hid," and the mountain to be made glorious must be that which long-denied justice is raising before our eyes in this our day—the equal rights of men and women.

E. J. BOWTELL.

The Catholic Church and the Bible.

Did Helen M. Gardener utter "a clear-cut falsehood" when she said that the Catholic church does not allow its people to read the Bible? Such is the charge made against her by the editor of the Press Register, of Newark, N. J., who cites papal authority in favor of allowing Catholics to read, not the heretical and corrupted translations of the holy book, but the authorized Catholic versions.

In 1855 Father Chiniquy, pastor of a church at St. Anne, Ill., whose members were Canadian, Belgian, and French immigrants, was summoned to appear before Bishop O'Regan, of Chicago, and answer the charge of distributing Bibles and Testaments among his flock. Chiniquy confessed that the charge was true.

"And instead of blushing at such unpriestly conduct, you seem to be proud of it," angrily replied the bishop.

"I do not understand, my lord," said Chiniquy, "why a priest of Christ should blush for distributing the word of God among his people."

"This is sheer Protestantism," said the bishop.

"My dear bishop," replied the priest, "if to giv the Bible to a people and invite them to read and meditate on it, is Protestantism, then our holy pope Pius VI. was a good Protestant, for in his letter to Martini, which is probably in the first pages of the beautiful Bible I see on your lordship's table, he not only blesses him for having translated that holy book into Italian, but invites the people to read it."

The bishop, assuming an air of supreme contempt, replied: "Your answer shows your complete ignorance on the subject. If you were a little better informed you would know that the translation by Martini, which the pope advised the Italian people to read, formed a work of twenty-three big volumes in folio, which, of course, nobody, except very rich and idle people, could read. Not one in ten thousand Italians has the means of purchasing such a voluminous work; and not one in fifty thousand has the time or the will to peruse such a mass of endless commentaries. The pope would never hav given advice to read the Bible, such as the one you distribute so imprudently."

"My lord," said Chiniquy, "do you positivly tell me that the pope gave permission to read Martini's translation because he knew that the people could never get it on account of its enormous size and price; and do you assure me that he would never hav given such advice had the same people been able to purchase and read that holy work?"

"Yes, sir. It is what I mean," answered the bishop, "for I know positivly that this is the fact."

"I hope your lordship is mistaken," said the humble priest, "for if you are correct, the stern principles of logic would force me to think and say that the pope and all his followers were deceivers, and that the encyclical was a public fraud; for we Catholic priests make use of it all over the world, and reprint it at the head of our own Bibles to make the people, both Protestants and Catholics, believe that we approve of their reading their own versions of that holy book."

"Now I see the truth of what I hav been told," said the angry bishop, "that you are a disguised Protestant, since the very day you were ordained a priest. The Bible! the Bible! is your motto. For you the Bible is everything. and the holy church, with her popes and bishops, nothing. What an insolent, what a blasphemous word I hav just heard from you! You dare to call the encyclical letter of one of our most holy popes a fraud?"

Father Chiniquy tried to explain, but his bishop silenced him saying: "If our holy church has, in an unfortunate day, appointed you one of her priests in my diocese, it was to preach her doctrins, and not to distribute the Bible. If you forget that, I will make you remember it."

With this threat on the head of the humble priest he withdrew. The above account of the interview is copied verbatim from Chiniquy's "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome," 35th edition 1889, pages 614–616.

The struggle between the bishop and the priest resulted in the transfer of Bishop O'Regan by the pope, to a diocese extinct more than 1,200 years ago, called "Dora." But he consoled himself for his misfortune by taking away with him hundreds of thousands of dollars that he had fraudulently acquired as bishop of Illinois, with which he established a bank in Ireland, where he died in 1865. It was not for forbidding Chiniquy to distribute Bibles that the bishop was removed, but on account of his general rascalities.

Chiniquy remained faithful to his church for three years longer. He wrote his submission to O'Regan's successor, Bishop Smith, of Dubuque, promising "to obey the authority of the church according to the word and commandments of God as we find them expressed in the gospel of Christ." The unsuspecting bishop accepted the submission, saying: "How happy I am to see this submission. How happy the pope and all the bishops of the United States will be to hear it, for we feared that both you and your people would separate from the church by refusing to submit to her authority."

Chiniquy promised to be a more faithful priest than ever and all was peace between him and his church. But by and by a critical Jesuit eye discovered that the submission was not what the church required. Chiniquy was summoned to Dubuque to see his bishop, and the following dialog ensued:

"Hav you the testimonial letter I addressed to you?"

"Yes, my Lord?"

"Please show it to me."

"With pleasure; here it is."

The bishop took it and threw it into the stove. Chiniquy tried to save it from the flames, but it was too late. He then said:

"How can you take from me a document which is my property and destroy it without my permission?"

"I am your superior and hav no account to giv you."

"Yes, my lord, you are a bishop and I a poor priest; but there is a God in heaven who is as much above you as he is above me, and in the presence of God I protest against this iniquity."

"Hav you come here to lecture me?"

"No, my lord; I hav come at your command, but I want to know if it is to insult me, as you hav done, that you requested me to come here again?"

"I ordered you to come again because you deceived me the last time you came here. You gave me an act of submission which you know very well is not an act of submission. I accepted it then, I reject it to-day."

"How can you say I deceived you? The document was written in good plain English. It is there on your table. If you were deceived it was by yourself. Read it."

"What do you mean, Mr. Chiniquy, by the words, 'We submit ourselvs to your authority according to the word of God as we find it in the gospel of Christ?'"

"I mean what you see there—that neither I nor my people will ever submit ourselvs to anybody, except according to the eternal laws of truth, justice, and holiness, as we find them expressed in the Bible."

"Such language is sheer Protestantism. I cannot accept such a conditional submission. Giv me one in which you simply say you will submit yourselvs to my authority and promis to do anything I bid you."

"That would be not an act of submission, but of adoration. I do absolutely refuse to giv it."

"Then you can no longer be a Roman Catholic priest."

"May God almighty be forever blessed."

Thus ended the interview, and Father Chiniquy returned to St. Anne, where on the next Sunday he narrated the facts to his congregation in a sermon two hours in length, at the conclusion of which every one of the thousand persons present signified their intention of quitting the church of Rome by rising up. That was in 1858, and now Father Chiniquy, in his eighty-first year, has been lecturing in various cities, Baltimore, Washington, and Pittsburgh, claiming that the number of converts he has made from Romanism to Protestantism, chiefly through the reading of the authorized Catholic version of the Bible, is not less than thirty-five thousand.

His "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome," 832 pp., price $2, is as entertaining as a novel. And among other things in it he proves by documentary evidence that the assassination of Abraham Lincoln was planned and executed by Jesuit priests. Lincoln successfully defended Chiniquy in two trials, while yet a faithful Roman priest, in 1856—malicious prosecutions instigated by tools of Bishop O'Regan and maintained by the testimony of perjured priests. And three times did the grateful ex-priest come to Washington to warn President Lincoln of the Jesuit plot to murder him. Some of the convicted assassins pretended to be Protestants, but that was only a ruse to cover the criminality of the Jesuits who planned the murder in the house of Mrs. Surratt. And to show how well the Jesuits knew when the murder was to take place, a landlord in the Catholic town of St. Joseph, Minn., who was a purveyor for the priests, told two of his guests on Friday, April 14th, at 6 30 P.M., that Lincoln and Seward were assassinated. This was three hours before it happened, and the fact of the announcement was not only published at the time, but is now proved by the affidavits of the two men to whom it was told, and by the unsworn statement of the Catholic landlord who told it, but couldn't remember who told him! BURR.

Spiritualistic Phenomena.

A few days ago I was induced to accompany a friend on a visit to the Keeler brothers, residing at 321 Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn. I found them kindly, unassuming people. We made known to them that our object was to hav a sitting for slate-writing. After some running talk about Spiritualism in its various modes and tenses, the medium, Mr. P. L. O. A. Keeler, my friend, and I repaired to an adjoining room, in which were a few chairs, and a table on which were five or six ordinary school slates. My friend was requested to wash all the slates thoroughly, and wipe them with a towel. They were then a pile under my friend's arm. He was then asked to write upon four small slips of paper taken from a pad, the names of those deceased friends with whom he wished to communicate, and ask those questions about which he was seeking information. These slips were not read by the medium unless he was argus-eyed. They were then each folded in a small compass and placed in a heap upon the table. He was then directed to take up any two of the slips, to hold them in his hand, then to take one of the slates, place a small fragment of slate-pencil on it, and cover it with another slate. The medium then asked for my friend's handkerchief, which I tied tightly around the two slates. Up to this point Keeler had not touched the slates, and at no time the slips of paper. We were then told to hold up the slates say about a foot above the table, my friend and I holding them. Then Keeler also seized the slates, when the writing immediately commenced, which was clearly heard. Soon three raps were made, indicating that the writing was finished. I was then asked to untie the handkerchief, when to my astonished vision appeared two different messages nearly covering one of the slates—one from the aunt and the other from the father of my friend, they being the parties addressed upon the slips which my friend held in his hand, signed with their names in full at the bottom of the messages, which were fair, if not quite complete, answers to the questions written on the slips.

Two other slates were then taken, tied together (a fragment of pencil placed between), held up as before by all three of us, when louder sounds were made, the messages finished, the slates untied as before with two messages written thereon.

One was from my friend's uncle, and the other from his mother, which corresponded with the names and questions written on the slips held in my friend's hand.

The character of the writings was unlike in them all. That which purported to come from the women was written in a cramped, delicate style, as is usual with old women. That of the men was done in an off-hand manner.

All this occurred in broad daylight. There was no shuffling of slates under or around the table—no gymnastics with the feet or legs, as was your experience.

Now, Mr. Editor, I do not know that I shall hav a continued, conscious, personal existence after I hav stepped off the edge of the earth, for I hav not had that experience yet; neither do I know where I shall be, what I shall do or think of, to-morrow, for the same reason. Neither do I know that there is in England a city of London, and for the same or similar reason.

But I do know, if I know anything, that those slates were clean and clear of any writing on them when placed together and I tied the handkerchief around them; I do know they were not touched by the medium until they were tied together and held up.

I do know that all was done in full view of my friend and myself, and that no visible hand, dead or alive, did that writing, and I do know, or think I know, that if I ever held full possession of my wits, the time was then and there. And if it should, upon further investigation, turn out that I was played upon by trickery, collusion, or fraud, of any kind, I will shut up, lay down my pen, and never take it up again to describe anything. I will hav a guardian appointed to look after me for fear I might be induced, by mistake, to follow a wagon off some day, or walk into a mill-pond and drown.

My object in writing this is not to boom Spiritualism as such, but simply to state the facts as I saw them.

It will not do for the Büchners, the Huxleys, the Tyndalls, or any other great men, however large the niche they fill in the temple of fame, to attempt the killing of a fact by broadly saying that it is all fraud and delusion, that the phenomena do not occur. Or for the great writers on cerebro-physiology, with its marvelous doctrins of unconscious cerebration, automatic action, the correlation of thought with other forces in the universe, to sit down upon the theory of Spiritualism without explaining, or accounting for, to an inquiring world, how such forces can, and do, move an inanimate piece of stone without physical contact, placed between two slates, to write an intelligent reply to a question asked.

As a matter of fact, philosophy has its dreams and romances, as well as religion, history, and poetry. Even science has its dogmas and speculations. The fact still stands erect that that which I witnessed was as much a physically demonstrated reality as it is when you receive a telegram that somebody was at the other end of the wire. But enough for the present. Let us hav more light. TEN EYCK.

Matteawan, N. J., Feb. 1, 1890.

Been to Church.

This morning I attended church—Campbellite—for the first time in ever so long.

They had sent way off to Pennsylvania and hired a new "pastor," and as I knew all would be talking of his first sermon, I thought I would go and hear it. He is a pleasant and portly-looking man and very cordial and friendly-appearing. His text was "God is Love." He did not attempt to prove there was a God, but took him for granted, and then gave Bible proof of his loving kindness—said he created man intending him to remain pure and perfect, but man was not satisfied. He wanted to know as much as God did, and so ate the fruit and fell, and then when God could no longer stand the sins and crimes of the race, the flood was sent. Finally he sent his son to take upon himself the sins of the world that man might be saved.

Now, to me, none of the sermon proved that a good God could possibly do as he claimed his God had done. "A loving father," as he called him, would not place temptation before his children when he knew they had no power to resist it.

Who of us would leave a plate of poison candy in a room with our children, knowing an enemy would come and tell the children it was not poison but was really good for them to eat?

Who of us would create a world and fill it with helpless creatures, full of faults, weakness, and imperfections, and then drown them all but a mere handful, because they could not do as we demanded they should do?

A God would know exactly what each one he created would think, say, or do all through his life. Then think of the harmless babes who could do no wrong, and little children who could not know wrong from right—would we call an earthly father "good" if he had done these things? If a man knew that nine of his children would go to endless suffering while only one was saved, would he be willing to become a father? Aye, a good man would rather be childless than doom one of his children to endless woe, though he knew all the rest would be saved. This pastor has twin babes—would he not rather hav been childless than know one of these little helpless innocents would taste eternal misery? They make God all-wise, all-powerful, and all-knowing, and yet claim he does not know who will be saved and who lost, because man is a free agent; that he cannot help famin, war, pestilence, and crime from coming to his children; that he is the creator of all things, yet can not help the devil claiming a majority of his children. If some villain was leading away our children, and dooming them to eternal woe, and we had power, would we not change this villain into a loving, merciful, and good individual?

A good man is better than any God who ever existed. A good man does the very best he can. A good man tries to reform and regenerate, while a God could right-generate and be sure of his work. A good man would demand that all his enemies be made into friends, while a God, a Jesus, exclaims: "But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither and slay them before me." ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

Snowville, Va., Feb. 16, 290.

A Coming Man of England.

Writing in the North American Review of the "Coming Men of England," Justin McCarthy says: Mr. Bradlaugh is, to all appearances, a coming man. Mr. Bradlaugh has carefully cultivated the House of Commons. He came in with the reputation of being, among other things, a great platform orator—a very Boanerges of the East-End meeting and the provincial meeting. He has a powerful form and a most tremendous voice. When, after a long struggle, he was at last allowed to take his seat in peace, the House assumed that it was in for frequent and ponderous rhetorical exercitations. Mr. Bradlaugh gave the House nothing of the kind. He never, so far as I know, made a long speech. He always goes straight to the point, and when he has said what he wants to say he always sits down. He is really a very eloquent and powerful speaker, with a remarkably impressiv voice, and it must be a temptation to such a man to let himself fully out now and then. But Mr. Bradlaugh is always concise, and the House now knows perfectly well that he, at least, will never bore his audience. Then he has devoted himself very closely to what we call the "business of the House"—to committees, and private bills, and all that sort of work which your popular orator generally disdains with a lofty disdain—and the House likes a man who looks after its work. Moreover, he is a man of the most winning courtesy of manner. He has disarmed the dislike of all his former political and religious opponents—and he had a good many of them—by his anxiety to oblige, by his willingness to make graceful concessions, by his genial toleration of difference of opinion. He is, I should think, destined before long to be a member of a Liberal administration, and even of a Liberal cabinet.

Any American who really knows England's political and social life, and who has known both for the last ten or a dozen years, will agree with me that such a probability—such a possibility even—is a marvelous phenomenon in English political history. It is not so many years since Mr. Bradlaugh, struggling like a man fighting for dear life, was dragged out of the lobby of the House of Commons, dragged down the stairs of the members' private entrance, and thrust into Palace Yard by a whole cluster of policemen. No such scene had ever before taken place in our generation. The one which nearest preceded it was when the gallant seaman, Lord Cochrane, afterward earl of Dundonald—one of the very last of the brood of sea-kings—escaped from the prison where he was lodged on an unjust charge, and boldly assumed his place in the House of Commons; was ordered to be removed, resisted with all his gigantic strength, and was dragged away at last by sheer force of numbers, carrying with him a large portion of the woodwork of the bench to which he was clinging in a desperate spirit of resistance. Cochrane afterward passed into the House of Lords. I venture to predict that Mr. Bradlaugh will pass into a Liberal cabinet. And, as Mistress Meg Dods says in Scott's romance, "What for no'?"

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - MARCH 15, 1890.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

FREETHOUGHT.

The Symposium, concluded in a late issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER, will be printed in pamphlet form at once, and orders may be sent in now. It is seldom that in one little work can be found the opinions of so many writers as in this Symposium. A book by

Col. R. G. Ingersoll,	R. B. Westbrook,
Capt. R. C. Adams,	E. B. Foote, Jr.,
Saladin (W. Stuart Ross),	L. K. Washburn,
H. O. Pentecost,	George E. Macdonald,
Susan H. Wixon,	E. C. Walker,
Samuel P. Putnam,	F. M. Holland,
Lucy N. Colman,	Parker Pillsbury,
Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel,	C. B. Reynolds,
Charles Watts,	J. H. Burnham,
W. F. Jamieson,	Thaddeus B. Wakeman,

is something that every Freethinker will probably want to possess. Price, 25 cents.

Pictorial Arguments Against the Church.

We hav all along been aware that a great many of the Freethinkers of the country view with enthusiastic eye the pictorial style of warfare upon superstition, but we must confess that three months ago when the continuing the cartoons was a matter of financial doubt, and the case was plainly stated to our friends, we did not expect to find such a large majority of our subscribers supporting the picture plan. Since then our doubts hav flown. Not only do most of our readers desire the pictures continued in the paper, but a great many hav expressed their anxiety to possess them in permanent form, and hav asked that a book or books be made of those which hav appeared. In THE TRUTH SEEKER of January 11th, Mr. Joseph Wolff, of Boulder, Col., in sending a new subscriber to help continue the pictures in the paper, said:

"I hav filled my part of the contract for the pictures, and hope all the other subscribers will do as well, or better. I would rather pay $4 a year for the paper than do without Heston's splendid productions. I renew my suggestion that the cartoons should be placed in a volume with sufficient explanations. It would be the best Freethought missionary in the world. If so published, put me down for a copy at $10."

In THE TRUTH SEEKER of only last week Ira E. Draper, of Prairie City, Ia., said in his letter containing cash for four new subscribers for the same purpose:

"Inclosed find $10.25 for my own subscription and four new ones. I want the ANNUAL, and I want to vote five solid, positiv, emphatic, and unequivocal votes for Heston's pictures. They are 'cute,' humorous, and instructiv. We need them in our business. I will giv $10 for a book containing every cartoon up to date of issue, one picture to the page, on good paper, and with proper explanations. I would go forth among the benighted, and endeavor to show them that there was a ridiculous side to their imaginary heavens, hells, devils, and Gods."

And here are some expressions which our readers hav not yet seen. Mr. H. S. Goff, who keeps a hotel at Arch Beach, Orange county, Cal., writes:

"I hav in my hotel a scrap-book with the cartoons that hav appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER. It has been the means of making several converts to Freethought as well as setting hundreds to thinking for themselvs. Now I would like to know if they can be produced in book form, the first volume to contain the cartoons up to the 1st of January of this year. I would giv $5 for a bound book of the cartoons that hav been published."

And here is a letter from an eminent physician of Boston, Dr. Rufus K. Noyes. He says:

"I sincerely hope you will not on any account discontinue the illustrated feature of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Certainly not until it will hav shown up every absurd, lunatic, barbaric, and disgusting spot in the Bible and in everything connected with popular religion. If you decide to publish the pictures in book form, I am ready to take a large order to distribute to my Christian friends."

During the four years that the pictures hav been a feature of the paper, many others hav written similar words. And it is about this matter that we are making this explanation.

Heretofore the expense of publishing such a book has been the obstacle. We had reasonable doubts whether a sufficient number could be sold to pay the heavy cost of production; and as we hav only that capital which comes from subscriptions and book sales, it behooves us to be cautious about putting too many eggs in one basket. The pictures are large, and for good effect require very heavy and costly paper, and necessitate expensiv electrotyping, presswork, etc. But so much encouragement has been received during the past three months that we hav resolved to undertake the task, and the book is being prepared and will be ready as soon as the mechanical part can be executed.

For this book we hav taken the pictures published in the first page of THE TRUTH SEEKER during the past four years, and to each picture (unless such matter be entirely superfluous) we hav added explanations. The book will contain nearly four hundred pages, and each picture will not only teach a lesson by itself, but will be supported by the facts which make it true. These facts are gathered from the most eminent writers, historical and theological authorities, statistics, etc., so that whatever is needed to maintain the artist's conception will be found on the page opposit the cartoon. The pictures will be classified under separate chapter headings, and those bearing upon one subject grouped together. In this way, with the text to aid, the book will be an argumentativ and historical volume so plain that no one of fair mind can fail to be convinced that Freethinkers are right in their estimate of the Christian religion and the churches organized to support it. In subsequent issues of THE TRUTH SEEKER we will giv the titles, and further explain the matter.

As before intimated, this will be a very costly book to produce, and until sold will tie up a good deal of money; and we therefore desire to receive as many orders in advance as possible to help along in the publication. It will not, however, cost our friends as much as the writers of the foregoing letters and others hav signified their willingness to giv. It can be sold for $2, and that is the price, and no book has ever been published better worth this money. The reading matter alone is worth it; with the pictures, the value is quadrupled. Later on, if this book meets with favor, we will gather together the biblical cartoons, and make up a pictorial Bible, so far as the artist has illustrated it. But now we want orders and cash for this volume, and such orders will also materially aid in keeping up the cartoons in the paper. The book will be rapidly pressed to completion, and we guarantee that it will not only be a beautiful specimen of the printer's art, but a volume which will corner all the parsons in the country. They never can answer its statements, nor remove the impressions the pictures produce. Even a man who cannot read can be reached by it. It will be forwarded postpaid for $2.

The Mormons and the Catholics.

The reason why the United States Supreme Court deems the Idaho law disfranchising Mormons to be constitutional is, to put it broadly, that the Mormons are really treasonable persons, inasmuch as they place their allegiance to God above their loyalty to the state; that the Mormon hierarchy is an imperium in imperio, a state within a state, and a government within a government; and that this being incompatible with due submission and allegiance to the secular government, as the religious state is regarded by the Mormons as above the secular state, it is constitutional and right to refuse to permit the Mormons to hav part in the latter.

This is a very pretty sort of reasoning, but we wonder if the Supreme Court would be consistent enough to apply its own logic and punishment to any sect of which the same could be proved? For instance, supposing the Puritans of New Hampshire should enact the Idaho law, and the Roman Catholics should resist it in the courts, how would the Supreme Court treat them? The case against the Catholics under this decision is very plain. The evidence is overwhelming, nor need we go further back in the history of the church than the recent encyclical of Leo XIII. In it he teaches precisely the opposit of the American doctrin. The fundamental principle of our republic is that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. The pope, on the contrary, declares:

"That there is no true and lawful authority except that which comes from God, the sovereign lord of all, who alone has power to giv man authority over his fellow-man."

This is the authoritativ utterance of the head of the Roman church, spoken ex cathedra, and therefore bound to be held infallible by all Roman Catholics. But this is not all of the case by any means. The pope says:

"The natural law wishes one to love deeply the country where one is born and has grown up; and a good citizen should also know how to die for his nativ country, if she asks this supreme sacrifice of him.

"Christian citizens should do the same for the church, that is to say, the Roman church. They should also hav a much greater love for her, because they ought to prefer the soul to the body.

"For this reason, when the laws of the state are such as oppose the laws of God, creating a conflict which proceeds from political chiefs who do not know how to respect the church, then there are struggles, but the Catholic should remember that it is better to obey God than man.

"It is not permitted us to blame Christian firmness when it chooses between two contradictory duties; and one can not say that the Catholics are insubordinate or rebellious when they prefer obedience to the laws of God, rather than obedience to the laws of their governments."

The voting duties of Catholics are thus outlined:

"One knows that in many states Catholicism is violently attacked, and in those countries religious errors are favored with impunity.

"To oppose one's self to this war against the Roman church, CATHOLICS SHOULD ACT SO THAT MEN DEVOTED TO THE CHURCH AND HER INSTITUTIONS WILL BE CALLED TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE DIFFERENT STATES.

"This union one obtains by obedience and authority, which is in the hands of the pope and of the hierarchy of the bishops.

"If the church is a society superior to the others, it follows, in consequence, that all Catholics should first favor the interests of Catholicism and not make use of them for their party and political struggles.

"On her part the church cannot cease to occupy herself with what is done in the civil and political institutions. In doing that, she does not go beyond the limits of her attributes and does not pretend to usurp the rights of the state, because she ought to preoccupy herself as to whether the laws are or are not conformable to morals and to religion.

"IT IS A DUTY OF THE CHURCH, ASSIGNED TO HER BY GOD, TO RESIST THE ACTS THAT GOVERNMENTS MAY COMMIT TO THE PREJUDICE OF RELIGION.

"This is the ground on which one finds the relations between church and state, and it is the ground on which Catholics should combat to put men into government who do not profess principles contrary to religion."

It will be observed in these extracts that God is the one to please in all men's acts. Who the pope means by "God" is very fully described in another paragraph of the encyclical. Leo says:

"Since the Christian faith rests on the authority, not of human, but of divine reason ('we believe the truth not on account of the intrinsic truth of things made clear by the natural light of reason, but on the authority of God himself revealing, who can neither deceive nor be deceived'), it follows that everything which is understood to be the direct teaching of God must be received by us with equal assent, and that to refuse belief to one of such doctrins is clearly to deny the whole. For they overturn the very foundations of faith who deny that God has spoken to man, or who doubt of his infinit truth and wisdom. Now to declare what is the divine teaching is the function of the teaching church to whom God has intrusted the guardianship and interpretation of his words. But the highest teacher in the church is the Roman pontiff. Hence, as the union of mind necessitates a perfect agreement in one faith, so it calls all wills to be perfectly submissiv and obedient to the church and the Roman pontiff, as to God."

Is there anything in the Mormon theology and polity more inimical to a republic than there is in this encyclical, which it must be remembered is infallible in the eyes of all Catholics? Here the doctrin is plainly and repeatedly taught that men must obey God and not the government; that religion is above secular things, and that the pope's orders take precedence of all else, even should they necessitate rebellion! What would the Supreme Court say to the plea of the Catholics that they are good citizens if this infallible encyclical were introduced as evidence against them?

But if the Mormons are to be disfranchised for holding to their church against the state, why should not the Roman Catholics be also? And if the Roman Catholics are not disfranchised, why should the Mormons be? Will not some good pious Christian persecutor stand up and explain?

Some Anarchical Philosophy.

Mr. E. C. Walker, Anarchist, of Fair Play, has for some weeks past been paying considerable attention to the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER—endeavoring to convince that individual that he is wrong in his conception that government is necessary—and now Mr. Frank Q. Stuart, of the Denver Individualist, has introduced the same individual's name and ideas to his readers. By his Eastern friends Mr. Stuart has hitherto been regarded as an Anarchist, or at least fast drifting into that wide waste of opinion, and he has been approvingly quoted by Messrs. Tucker and Pentecost, the brilliant Eastern exponents of that alleged philosophy. But the fun of it all is, that Mr. Stuart and Mr. Walker now differ materially in their estimate of the unfortunate Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, the one maintaining (with what we are bound to consider great ability) that his head is pretty tolerably level, and the other holding (with what we are bound to consider very limited ability) that his mental equipment has led him into "the morasses of despotism" where he has "sunk into the mud" and "become a spectacle for Secularists and Anarchists."

This disagreement between two honorable and able brother editors places the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER in an embarrassing position. He cannot tell whether he is an idjit or a wise man; whether he knows nothing at all, or whether he can see as far into social millstones as the original Anarchist himself; whether he is an upholder of governmental notions beside which Russian despotism is absolute freedom, or whether he is a pretty fair defender of liberty from a common sense standpoint. Perhaps the better way, therefore, is to let the Messrs. Walker and Stuart do most of the discussing, especially as Mr. Walker has shackled the Individualist and THE TRUTH SEEKER Editors together. Mr. Walker says:

"I hav found a yoke-mate for Mr. Frank Q. Stuart, of the Individualist. It will be remembered that the latter gentleman wrote that Anarchists were opposed to the state, but 'willing to compromise on voluntary associations,' as though those whose whole fight is against authority and for voluntaryism would for a moment think it necessary to 'compromise' their principles in order to favor voluntary associations! Well, would you believe it possible for two intelligent and fair-minded editors to make the same break? Incredible as it seems, nevertheless it is a fact that Mr. Eugene M. Macdonald of THE TRUTH SEEKER puts his foot through the same open coal-hole. In that paper of the 28th inst., replying to Mr. Pentecost of the Twentieth Century, Mr. Macdonald remarks:

"'The Socialists hav their organizations, and, strangely enough, so hav the Anarchists.'

"'Strangely enough,' does Mr. Macdonald say? Why should he deem it 'strange' that the Anarchists, whose cry, morning, noon, and night, is for liberty to choose their own associates, hav organizations? Antagonizing the pseudo-organizations called governments, the binding agencies of which are race hatreds and taxes and prisons and bayonets, does it not logically follow that the Anarchist favors voluntary associations, whose binding forces are reciprocal attractions and mutual interests? If not, why not?"

Mr. Stuart replies:

"When I spoke of so-called Anarchists 'compromising on voluntary associations,' I did not intimate that they compromised their principles. They compromise on a stubborn fact, and that fact is 'majority rule.' Mr. Walker has complimented me by using my name in connection with that of the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER. 'Strange,' as it may seem to you, Mr. Walker, not a few intelligent and not at all disinterested people hav made and do make the same 'break' that Mr. Macdonald made in the sentence quoted. Do the Anarchists, then, countenance 'organizations?' Organization for what? Does not 'organization' imply individuals as component parts? In that organization, so composed, who decides when you shall meet? when you shall adjourn? what you shall do? etc. Is it not the 'majority?' Then what of the reviled 'majority rule?' Then what of the word 'Anarchy' which scholars tell me means 'no ruler,' and if 'no ruler,' 'no rule?' Are you quite sure you are an Anarchist, Mr. Walker, or are you about like the rest of us common mortals who are skirmishing for the nearest approach to absolute justice that very smart, but still imperfect, creatures may attain?"

That settles Mr. Walker on that point, and Mr. Stuart will please stand up for the benediction.

In the next issue of Fair Play, however, Mr. Walker pillories the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the extent of nearly two pages, because the aforesaid Editor cannot see that public schools supported by voluntary coöperation, and teaching no religion at all, are inequitable. The meat of his reply, and the nub of the whole matter, is found in this statement by Mr. Walker of the fundamental difference between his ideas and those of THE TRUTH SEEKER Editor:

"Mr. Macdonald continually assumes that government is a necessity—he even goes so far as to say that anyone who denies that it is, is insane. Some very clear definitions were in order before this sweeping assertion was made. The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER does not need that I should tell him that it is an evidence of non-acquaintance with the principles of argumentation or of defiant disregard of them when a disputant assumes as proven the very proposition which is at issue. Is a government—an invasiv paternalism—a necessity to-day? is the moot question between authoritarians and Anarchists. If it is so, as Mr. Macdonald assumes, then the door is closed upon discussion; it is merely a waste of time to debate upon any constituent factor. The whole is equal to the sum of all its parts. If we are insane if we refuse to accept the whole it is an evidence of absolute imbecility if we kick against any one of the parts. But we cannot adopt as a text-book Mr. Macdonald's 'Short and Easy Method to do up Anarchists.'"

Declining any pedagogic comparison of the respectiv technical reasoning qualifications of Mr. Walker and his opponent, we may proceed to the question at issue, which may be stated thus: Is government a necessity? If it is, then Mr. Walker surrenders; if not, he calls upon the other party to capitulate.

If this question could be summarily disposed of by saying No, the other party would be quite willing to oblige Mr. Walker. Years ago, in endeavoring to impress upon Mr. B. R. Tucker, Mr. Walker's teacher, that he was wrong in his social notions, the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER said, plainly, that when every person in the world had become as good as the angels in a supposed heaven are supposed to be, then Anarchy as a social system would be possible and practicable; but that until everyone in the world had attained that beatific state, the scheme was not worth considering. And this statement we respectfully recommend to Mr. Walker's attention. Until then, government must be maintained for the protection of the weak against the strong, for the protection of personal rights, for the protection of all in the right of equal opportunity to obtain happiness—in which word is included all that man desires to enjoy.

There are, of course, a good many kinds of governments, and Mr. Walker must not understand us as meaning the kind he describes, "a despotism ever trying to make men religious, or moral, or temperate, or prosperous, or all of these, by taxations, prohibitions, penal statutes." Such governments are just what Mr. Walker describes them—man's greatest enemy. But the very fact that such governments exist, that they are but the reflex of the dispositions of the people who institute and maintain them, and that therefore such people are by no sort of means fitted to enjoy the Anarchical millennium, is the very strongest argument why government of a protectiv kind is indispensable. There could be no king of the cannibal islands without the cannibals; and it is going to take many a century to evolute those cannibals into respectable, never-eat-your-neighbor Anarchists. A man-of-war is a better convincer with them than all the arguments Messrs. Walker and Tucker can invent between now and the advent of their millennium.

To drop into the talk of the scholastic shop for just a sentence. Mr. Walker knows that to successfully maintain a theory, it must hav the support of induction—that is, certain facts must be shown before deduction is allowable. Now, Mr. Walker, to successfully argue that government is not a necessity, must show us that the no government theory has been put into practice and found sufficient for human needs. We maintain that government is a necessity. This, from human experience, knowledge of the human character, and reasoning from the past. A record, Colonel Ingersoll once said, is better than a prospectus. The record of the world is our induction; where is Mr. Walker's? Government by voluntary coöperation is the social utopia for which we may work, but at present there is no hope of soon arriving at it. A pretty good illustration of this truth is the latest news from the Coöperativ Association located on Puget sound, Washington. A suit has just been begun in the court at Clallam county, Wash., in the name of a majority of the stockholders against the directors for fraudulent issue of stock, for unlawful conversion of the company property, and for admitting into the corporation aliens who are not legally eligible and who are not in sympathy with the objects of the colony. And then the petitioners go on to say that the objects, designs, and purposes of the colony cannot be carried out; that the plaintiffs hav long since been convinced that the innate selfishness of the human race and the perverseness of the kind by centuries attested and by generations acknowledged can neither be cured by any attempt of the Utopian policy of mutual interest or fraternal coöperation.

When we add that every such voluntary organization known to history has failed unless founded on authority of some sort, either financial or religious, we think this discussion might well be laid on the table, to be taken up possibly five hundred years hence, when evolution has had a chance to improve humanity still further. Beginning at zero, as Beecher said, the race has been on the steady rise, but it is not yet far enough away from savagery to people a paradise.

The Slate Writer.

We hav received a letter from Medium Reid, of Grand Rapids, Mich., explaining why, when he was East, he did not call at this office and giv the Editor a slate-writing séance under certain advertised conditions. The failure to do as he said he would do was an accident of business; he had not the time to stop in New York.

On another page is a communication from Mr. Ten Eyck relating some marvels of Spiritualism witnessed through the mediumship of Mr. P. L. O. A. Keeler. This is the same medium through whom Mr. Burr, of Washington, received such wonderful assurances of another life, and it is also the same medium that refused to hav anything to do with Mr. Charles McArthur and the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER when they were in Search of a Spirit, as related in the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL for this year. Mr. Ten Eyck's communication is partly written as an "answer" to that article; and when he brought it to the office Mr. Ten Eyck had a great deal more evidence at his tongue's end with which to confute the writer, to none of which do we object.

However, we might as well explain that this is all wasted effort. The article in the ANNUAL is simply an account of a few experiments in slate-writing. It is a plain narration of facts, of the doings of the two experimenters, and of the mediums. The writer does not say that there are no spirits; he only says he does not think that he found any. Of course a sufficient number of strange tales to fill the whole issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER for a year can be related by other experimenters, but they hav no more power to convince one who did not see them than the bread Mr. Burr or Mr. Ten Eyck ate last year has to satisfy a man's hunger to-day. What the writer of that article in the ANNUAL was after was, fact!—and his article tells what he found.

But we may be allowed, we hope, to add that if Mr. Keeler can do what Mr. Burr and Mr. Ten Eyck credit him with doing, it is a trifle singular that he should so flatly refuse to giv Mr. McArthur and the Editor a sitting under the simple conditions imposed by the latter; and which every Spiritualist with whom we hav conversed—including Mr. Ten Eyck—admits to be only just. Indeed, everyone except the mediums maintains that thousands of communications hav been received under those precise conditions, and every medium allows it to be advertised for him that he gets writing under them. Why, then, do the mediums make an exception of the writer of that article?

Letters from Friends.

PARK CITY, UTAH, Feb. 26, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I wish you all health and happiness, and a long life to Watson Heston. JOHN MCLEOD.

EUREKA, WIS., Feb. 27, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav tried hard to get a new subscriber, but failed. I vote for the cartoons. WM. ALLEN.

CLAY, CAL., Feb. 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5 for renewal and one new subscriber. Put down two votes for the pictures.

Respectfully yours, G. BASSI.

PINN BRIDGES, MONT., Feb. 16, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5, for which continue THE TRUTH SEEKER and send the herein-named books; credit the balance to Heston's good work. FREDERICK KURFESS.

MADISON, KAN., Feb. 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5 25—$5 to renew my subscription and for one new subscriber, twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL of 1890; two votes for the pictures.

Yours for truth, WM. CROGHAN.

MURRAY, IDA., Feb. 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I send a new subscriber. This is another vote for Heston. There is a majority in this camp of Freethinkers, but they are careless. But I may get you some more subscribers yet. A. ERWIN.

MULVANE, KAN., Feb. 27, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $3, for which please send me THE TRUTH SEEKER and "Try-Square." Keep the illustrations going. They will reach some people that sound doctrin would not possibly affect. D. F. KEITH.

WALLA WALLA, WASH., Feb. 14, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I would like to send a new subscriber, but am not able to do so. I am very much in favor of the pictures. I think they are good object-lessons for children and those who cannot read and think. SMITH W. SWEZEA.

BRISTOL, VT., Feb. 26, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find $14 25 for renewals, a new subscriber, books, and ANNUALS. The above names are all in favor of the cartoons being continued. I hav been sick, or I should hav attended to this matter before.

Truly yours, S. F. HASELTINE.

ESTES, WASH., Feb. 13, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav succeeded in getting you another subscriber for your valuable paper. We like the pictures very much, and would be pleased to hav them continued. If any side issues go with the paper, please send them along.

Yours respectfully, THOMAS WISEMAN.

BAVARIA, KAN., Feb. 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I should certainly miss the pictures. The picture on the first page is always a dead shot, and speaks more than words, and the one on the last page is just ridiculous enough to giv a fellow a good laugh.

Fraternally yours, D. W. ARMSTRONG.

MOLINE, ILL., March 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3. Send THE TRUTH SEEKER to the friend whose address I inclose. If he is already taking the paper, apply the money for any other purpose you wish. Keep up the pictures. Do not forget the "Try-Square." Yours truly, GEORGE STEPHENS.

KOKOMO, IND., Feb. 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Continue the pictures if possible. They alone induced me to subscribe for the paper. Nevertheless, I appreciate the paper otherwise. It is the best Freethought journal I ever read. I wish THE TRUTH SEEKER, with the cartoons, prosperity. J. T. WESER.

ROCTON, N. Y., March 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I see there is a great fuss over a few subscribers objecting to the pictures. I am sorry to learn that it is a struggle to keep them up. I cannot get a subscriber around here, but when I renew my subscription I will send $1 for one vote that they may be continued.

Yours truly, JOHN REDMOND.

COUPEVILLE, WASH., Feb. 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hope to meet the weekly greetings of your paper the rest of my life. I place myself on record as fully indorsing Mr. Heston's cartoons, and would like very much to see him go into the New Testament and dish up the mythical Jesus for a while. Send me the ANNUAL.

Yours for truth, J. J. STRAUB.

OENAVILLE, TEX., Feb. 21, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $2—$1 for the continuation of the cartoons by Heston, and $1 for copies of "Crimes Against Criminals," by Robert G. Ingersoll, to be used as the leaven of humanity among our Christian ministers, that their influence may be secured to disseminate injustice to our unfortunate fellow-man. R. D. SHINNEY.

WEST UNION, IA., Feb. 28, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $4—$3 for THE TRUTH SEEKER, twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL, and seventy-five cents for the pictures. Any person opposing the pictures has strayed from camp. Continue them by all means. Heston must be one of the noblest characters living at the present time. I will try and get at least one new subscriber.

Yours and the cartoons', J. F. SMITH.

BAKER CITY, ORE., Feb. 19, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Heston's pictures are curious and instructiv, and I would dislike to miss them. I hav taken the pictures off my papers and made them into two large books, and the children spend much time looking them over and explaining to one another about Moses, Joshua, Joseph, Noah, Ham, Samson, Elijah, Balaam, everyone indeed; and it is interesting to listen. D. B. SCOFIELD.

LEADVILLE, COL., Feb. 26, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $3.50 for a new subscriber as address inclosed, and for two ANNUALS for 1890. Please send "Try-Square" to my address. I hav been a silent watcher of the picture movement, because I could not get a subscriber sooner, but am glad to notice that there are about one hundred to one in favor of the pictures. With two votes for Heston, I am, Truly, JOSEPH HENRY.

LOTUS, CAL., Feb. 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: In regard to the pictures, I will say that I want to see them continued, and with that end in view, hav been making rather a protracted hunt for that "new subscriber," and am pleased to be able to say, I hav found him. Mr. N. Mansfield joins with me in remitting for renewal. He, too, has been trying to find a new subscriber, but had to giv it up. However, he donates $1 to the picture fund.

G. W. RAMSEY.

PRAIRIE CITY, ORE., Feb. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed two subscriptions—one for myself and one for a new subscriber. This delay has been caused by trying to get a few new subscribers. I hav only succeeded in getting one, as usual, but think I will do better in future. I am decidedly in favor of the pictures. I hav taken this paper from soon after its first publication in New York city by the noble D. M. Bennett.

Yours truly, W. B. DAVIS.

CELINA, O., Feb. 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed fifty cents for two TRUTH SEEKER ANNUALS. Now, in regard to the pictures, let them come by all means. They are just the thing. Show the preachers up. Let them from every pulpit set up the howl. Show the old slow hypocrits that we hav no respect for them. They are not entitled to any. Now let this be in place of the Golden Rule, as it is my maxim: Treat all persons with all the respect due them. HENRY T. NICOUM.

DETROIT, MICH., Feb. 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav not yet put in my vote on the pictures question, and will say that I am heartily in favor of them. I am so situated that I hav no way of pushing the paper in a way to get new subscribers, but I am truly in accord with everything that can arrest the attention of the superstitious believers, and I hav stirred up some of the pulpit defenders a number of times by sending them some of THE TRUTH SEEKERS. I sent the picture of Satan receiving the priests and ministers at his palace gates about a year ago to the First Baptist minister, and two weeks ago I caused him to giv all his morning sermon to the subject of Infidels. So I hope to still be able to use the pictures. J. H. WOOD.

FRENCHTOWN, NEB., Feb. 19, 290.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose seventy-five cents for the pictures, and with due regard for the opinion of Mr. Parton (the greatest living biographer), we still want the pictures, as even church-members hav been seen to smile over them, and fifty years more or less of good, healthy smiling will relegate all superstitious nonsense to the shades of oblivion where it belongs. The four lectures delivered by Mr. Jamieson this winter in Clearwater made quite a flutter behind the scenes, but a good attendance was secured, and many started on the way that will lead to thinking for themselvs. There is more inquiry now for Liberal books and papers in one month than there had been in the last eight years.

Very truly yours, MARY BAIRD FINCH.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: On behalf of the readers of your journal in this city, and the remaining members of the Cleveland Secular Union, I hav to thank you for your notice of our meetings. We closed our meetings on Sunday last, so wish the notice discontinued. So many of our activ workers hav left the city, and so many others hav joined single tax, Spiritualist, and Nationalist societies, that it does not seem possible to carry on any propaganda here. The theaters are open here on Sunday, and the restrictions are so very slight that we seem to hav but little claim on the public attention. Even of the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER many hav made no effort either to attend or induce others. Several of us take THE TRUTH SEEKER through local agents, as they put the cartoons in the windows. ALFRED SEE, Pres. C. S. U.

GOLDENDALE, WASH., Feb. 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am somewhat diverted to read the different ideas advanced in regard to the Heston pictures. For myself, I had been a subscriber to the Freethinkers' Magazine and Freethought, and had sample copies of the other Liberal publications; no other papers publishing the cartoons, I decided to take THE TRUTH SEEKER. My first curiosity when getting the paper from the office is to read the pictures. My children are delighted with them. My experience with piety convinces me the more the erroneous, unreasonable hobbies are outreasoned and ridiculed the better. The Christians do not hesitate to advance the doctrin of eternal punishment for the Freethinkers, and no Freethinker can return such a cruel foreboding for the pietist or anyone else. Giv us the pictures if you can, although "God would not smell their sweet odors." I hav seen nothing offensiv or too ridiculous in them. JOSEPH PARROT.

SULLIVAN, ILL., Feb. 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: As there is a vote being taken on the continuation of pictures, I shall express my vote in this way. I came here several years ago, and found this country very much Christian. I hav been talking Freethought and distributing THE TRUTH SEEKER till the Christians say I hav spread Infidelity all over this country, and when I take your paper and start on the hunt for a Christian I am always careful to see that it is loaded on both sides, and when I see my bird fluttering I know that I hav made a good shot. I see some are in favor of pictures on one side only. Now, it would be very hard for me, after hunting with a double-barreled gun, to hav to take a single-barreled one. I hav tried hard to get some subscribers, but hav failed on account of hard times. SERENUS CARTER.

CONNEAUT, O., Feb. 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Do not stop the pictures. They attract attention and show up the absurdities of the Bible when reading matter for the same purpose would go unnoticed. I wish they could be more artistic, but that is a small matter. I think, however, they are improving in that respect. Also, I think sometimes they are down on the Catholics out of proportion. Instance, when the confessional was illustrated lately. There is a Protestant confessional just as certain, though not so universal or regular, in its working. Yet if you were to illustrate it as it often occurs, I think Comstock would be after you. One of the best you hav published, to my mind, was, "Raising a church debt." It would bear publishing again any time when Heston was short. Inclosed find $1—send me the ANNUAL and devote the balance to the pictures. Yours, etc., D. CUMMINS.

DAVENPORT, WASH., Feb. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Your call for assistance to continue publishing the pictures in THE TRUTH SEEKER is at hand. I am sorry that you are so situated that a call of that kind is necessary, and will say that I will help you all I can in getting new subscribers. That at the present time is almost out of the question on account of nearly all of the roads being blockaded, and it is very difficult to get around. But I will send you $1 to begin with, to be applied to the expenses of the pictures providing they are continued. And I will get you a new subscriber or more as soon as I can get around. It seems that some Christians feel hurt about the pictures. It is the same in this instance as with Mr. Ingersoll hurting the feelings of Mrs. Wheeler Wilcox and the preachers. If you are willing to let me hav any say in the matter, I say, go for them and giv us the pictures by all means. Some want the pictures modified. In this case all that Heston has to do is to reproduce some from the pictorial Bibles and work in with the Christians and be done with it. PETER SELDE.

COLVILLE, WASH., Feb. 16, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I want to put in my vote in favor of the pictures. I cannot see how anyone can be displeased with a fair representation of any subject, as Watson Heston makes it appear in his pictures. I think I get a far better illustration—that is, a more original one—than I get in my Bible that cost me $15. Some people hav the idea that it is wrong to show up what they call sacred in any light but what they can see it in themselvs. I never like to dictate to an editor what way he should run his paper. I always think he knows best himself. All I can say is, THE TRUTH SEEKER as it is conducted suits me. John Peck's communications are like red-hot shell hurled into the camp of the enemy. I wish he was young and in the flower of his youth, that his time would be long to destroy the superstition of the past. Christians would show us no mercy if they had the power. We hav no way of judging the future but by the past, and judging by the past, what might we expect if Christianity had all the ruling power? Should we be any better here than they are in Russia? What few papers we hav need our support and aid. We need them all to watch the encroachments that are made against our liberties. We should hold what we hav got with a jealous care and try to gain more. I think there never was a nation that had too much liberty. I tell you that the Christian is not satisfied that we should think no more of his God than we do of Woden or Thor. But by the signs of the times, our children may see the day that there will not be one hundred thousand men, as there is now in this country, preaching about a myth in the sky, and keeping neighbors at variance with each other. I oftentimes wonder if the Methodist and the Baptist will agree any better in heaven than they do on earth. If not, I am afraid there will be some troublesome times. For my part, I should prefer the other place, where there are no creeds. Christ said, "I come not to bring peace but a sword." How do we know that he did not go to heaven with the same idea?

Yours respectfully, MAGGIE HOPE GRAHAM.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Feb. 29, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav read with a great deal of pleasure the notes and different ideas in your paper by all the noble men and women on the affirmativ, positiv, constructiv, and destructiv sides of Freethought, and hav concluded it all is a great step in advance of saying we know all about a God—or any other subject—without demanding one particle of evidence in regard thereto. I will take for my subject the first sentence in the Bible, as this should not fail to interest both Christian and Secularist alike. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." As this is a positiv assertion, we should demand a positiv proof on this subject. If not, we shall be misled in regard to God all through the Bible. Until this answer is given, I claim the same right to myself as though there were one million of us. This shows very plainly that the idea of majorities on a subject like this is entirely overvalued when taken as a fact. To show my honest standing on this point, I challenge the one million—if this is not enough, the entire world—as evidence against me to prove I am wrong. Until they do this I claim this truth is more than equal to the entire world without it. For the constructiv side of this idea I take every truth and ennobling thought in the Bible or any other book wherever found that can possibly be produced for the elevation of mankind. I will further say I hav never found a paper or book that contains more elevating and ennobling thought than the dear old New York TRUTH SEEKER; when I do I will abandon that, and adopt the more beautiful. I will giv a few truths in regard to the church. The church has almost the entire weight and force that can possibly be produced by the world and its wealth. It has churches almost without number furnished to its wants for the elevation of man and all his needs. It has had every school-house, hall, or place whereby it could do much for the elevation of man, and would really be the best place to benefit our race if it only contained truth, holding all these requisits free and entirely untaxed. It has almost the entire press and monopolizes that to its own aggrandizement in every way possible. And with it all what does it giv to the poor in return? It seems this is entirely for the rich, not one of whom has any right to ever expect to enter the kingdom of heaven, as it is said it is easier for a camel to pass through a needle's eye than for one of them to enter the kingdom of heaven. O ye rich, will ye continue this monstrous fraud further or will you seek a truth? I giv you one rich man's own words. He said he gave $500 a year for a seat in one of our Protestant Episcopal churches, but did not believe one word in their doctrin. In conclusion let me say, for all this monstrous fraud in the past I do not hold one particle of hate toward anyone, but only toward their teaching, which has cost many a poor and rich man their lives, when they might hav had love and good will instead. CHARLES SACH.

BYRON, MINN., Dec. 4, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: I hav had the pleasure of attending a few revival meetings at the Methodist Episcopal church, and to say it was disgusting is a mild way to express it. The minister told us to come forward and God would forgiv any sin, no matter what it was. A few went forward, but some hav gone to sinning on a larger scale, as they hav a promis of forgivness at the next Halley pow-wow, and why not sin, looking at it from a Christian's standpoint, as long as there is a fountain filled with blood and as all sins but blasphemy shall be forgiven?

I notice a good deal said about the Bible in schools. I believe that the best way to advance the cause of Freethought and to get that inspired book knocked out, would be to put it in the schools, as children do not generally attend schools until they are eight years old, and at that age a child with ordinary sense would in a very short time see through or understand the absurdity of its teachings. Again, to place it along with the studies of science will show it up to be out of keeping with scientific teachings.

I am trying to arrange to hav Mr. W. F. Jamieson to speak at this place. I will try and secure for your paper some subscribers, as it is worthy of more praise than my feeble pen is able to express. WALTER JOHNSON.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 16, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: James A. Ruthven, of Scotch descent, a prominent lawyer of this city, residing at 144 West Twenty-third street, at one time associated with Charles O'Connor, died recently, at the age of sixty-eight years. He was a man of the highest character, a true friend, a genial companion, faithful in his domestic relations, a good citizen, a most worthy gentleman. He had made a request that his body should be cremated and that no religious services should be held over his remains; for he was an Agnostic. The former part of the request was complied with, and his remains were cremated, at Fresh Pond, on Monday, November 28th last. The latter part of the request was not complied with, for, at his funeral, a prayer was offered and two religious hymns sung. There are many thousands every year of just such cases, where the rites and ceremonies of the Christian church are held over the remains of those who hav utterly repudiated Christianity, and very many of whom hav expressed an earnest wish, as had Mr. Ruthven, that no religious services be held over their remains, but which wish is totally disregarded by religious, Christian, fanatics. Is there no way in which a person's wishes in this respect can be carried out? Cannot something be done to compel the living to respect the wishes of the dead? As well might the Jewish or Mohammedan ceremonies be performed over Christians who die, as Christian ceremonies over those who utterly reject the Christian's faith. What mockery to hold a religious service over the body of one who was known to be a disbeliever in religion, and what hypocrisy on the part of those who insist on such religious service! AGNOSTICUS.

ROCKPORT, Mo., Dec. 6, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: My thinker, like Banquo's ghost, will not down. The thought that first presents itself is that in the case of the young lady in Philadelphia that gave $5,000,000 to the church, all that money has gone out of taxation, and the blacksmith will hav to pay that much more on his anvil and hammers that he hammers out a living for his family with. Then the big meat trust that is crushing the small meat markets out of existence, and the dealers in puts and calls and futures—in other words, the gamblers that gamble on the very marrow in the bones of the farmer and stock-raiser and producer—the priesthood that hobnob with our government officials and get them to cheer the sentiment or toast, "The Hierarchy of the United States of America"—I think that these are some of the evils that should be ventilated so that the masses will understand them. That hierarchy means a great deal. It means a government by the priesthood. Now, if the people knew it they would rise en masse and squelch it at once. Church and state must be forever separate. But when our great statesmen will cheer a toast like that, we the people must take the government into our own hands and elect men that cannot be handled by the pope of Rome. I hav always been a Republican and voted the ticket, but in the light of all these things I am ready to help organize a new party with the Nine Demands for a platform. The time has come that such a party is a necessity. The old parties are so close that they will both bid for the church vote just the same as the present administration has. The "Rum, Romanism, and Rebellion" episode of 1884 has to be overcome, hence the actions of our pets of the administration at the dedication of the Catholic University in Washington on the 13th of last month.

G. G. BECK.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 25, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: I was on a visit in August of this year at Skaneateles lake, New York. When at the head of the lake in the town of Fair Haven a Catholic priest from Courtland, N. Y., came to the town and gave notice that he would lecture at night on "What Ireland Was and What It Will Be." There was a saloon kept there by one Mr. Sweeney, so the priest, the Rev. Father Edward Colman, commenced to hunt up his dupes and run them in the saloon and hav them treat, and sell them tickets for the aforesaid lecture on the condition of the fatherland. And in order to show the condition of poor Ireland he got gloriously drunk toward lecture time, thus representing at once the two things, drink and priest, that are the greatest curse of Ireland. A few minutes before the time to go to the school-house to open fire he was staggering around on the docks in front of the saloon, and made a misstep into the lake. He went into the water clear out of sight and came to the surface again, and we helped him out. He then went home with a friend whom we will call "Con," and forgot to return and show what Ireland would be in the future. Next morning very early I went down to the dock to see the outgoing steamer, and returning back to the house where I was stopping I met this Father Colman in his shirt sleeves wearing Con's pants and an old hat. He looked hard. He stopped me and inquired if Sweeney had the saloon open yet, and said to me: "I had a bad thing happen me last night. I got a little too much and lost me balance and fell in the lake, and I am near froze this morning, and I will hav to wake Sweeney oop to git me a dhrop to worrum me oop. God forgive me! But I will lecture this evening." But too many times to Sweeney's rendered him unable, and we are at a loss to know what Ireland's future will be. He represented what it is. A. B. FOX.

NATIONAL SOLDIERS' HOME, WIS., Dec. 5, A.S. 289.

MR. EDITOR: I saw in my last paper, November 30th, that "hundreds hav not paid a cent for THE TRUTH SEEKER that they hav been receiving and reading for the past year." This neglect on the part of subscribers must surely be one of the greatest misfortunes that can befall an editor of any paper. If there be some that cannot pay, why in the name of goodness do they not tell the Editor in time, lest through carelessness they destroy "the goose that lays the golden egg?" Nevertheless, every editor by this time knows, or should know, that

> Mankind are unco weak,
> An' little to be trusted.

And our Editor must know that some Liberals, at least, are not exceptions to this truthful proverb. Right here seems a place to say to the Editor, when Nelson Hunt's subscription doesn't materialize on time, stop his paper right then, for you may swear he's dead—which being interpreted means that you may affirm with hand in pocket that he has gone to the summer-land, where the snow never ripeneth and where the bright waters will never congeal.

I hav striven for many years to get subscribers for the matchless old TRUTH SEEKER, and cannot say that I hav altogether failed, for Isaac C. Brown through my direct influence is on your list, to stay. He is a worthy old philosopher, gentleman, and scholar, has been a mayor of the city, and a commissioned officer under General Scott in the Mexican war, and has always been a useful member of society and an unflinching and uncompromising lifelong Infidel. Now, all who hav received THE TRUTH SEEKER here, in their own name, owe this blessing to my influence, for I hav urged unceasingly the great necessity of its circulation both here and in Milwaukee. I was the first here to subscribe for this most valuable Freethought journal, and circulated it everywhere throughout the Home to enlighten others, while ignorance, fanaticism, and imbecility removed it from our reading-room table about five years ago, I think. There is not a sensible man living who has read and become acquainted with THE TRUTH SEEKER that will do without it if, by hook or crook, he can manage to pay for it. So, now, my Liberal friends, let us be wise in the matter of prompt payment in this case, lest it turn out in the end that we destroy the source from whence we derive our greatest comfort.

NELSON HUNT.

CAMBRIDGEPORT, MASS., Dec. 8, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: I feel it my duty to say a word in regard to the last congress of the American Secular Union. I hav had the honor of sitting and voting in several congresses of the National Liberal League. I hav had the extreme pleasure of sitting in said meetings with that nobleman Elizur Wright; that unflagging worker for Liberalism, Leland, and others of similar minds—men whom I loved and who loved mankind and the cause, men that would ennoble and lift up the human race, male and female, from the low and degrading depths of superstition into which the church for generations has brought them. Were I going to make a pilgrimage to any shrine to worship I know of none more worthy to kneel to than theirs. Has the last congress taken the least thought of what such minds would say? No—emphatically no. It has trampled on their life-work. Would they hav invited their greatest enemy, the church, into their congress to sit, speak, and vote on Liberal work? No, they would not. They had no use for any person—pope, king, priest, or parson—who could not heartily subscribe to the Nine Demands. The last congress has sounded the loudest funeral knell for the Secular Union that has ever been sounded. Get the church-members into the Union! It is monstrous; it is absurd. I was a church-member for several years, and I know the inwardness of them. What did their pet apostle Paul say? "I would be all things to all men, that I might thereby gain some." So will these dupers do to the present day. They will pretend to side with the Liberal congress until they get a voting majority, then good-bye, Secular Union. McGlynn may be a very fine man, but while he is a Catholic I would not trust him. He is a man of too much sense not to know that the church is rotten to the core. His knowing all that and still clinging to the church shows me that he is not honest. Why doesn't he do like Bruno when he saw the falsity of the thing—get out and leave it forever? That, the Bruno kind, is the kind of men and women that is wanted in the Secular Union. Now, for the sake of the Union, don't ask or admit Christians to this board. Don't hav any but the Nine Demands, and believe me, they will come out all right. Let them truckle to the church and it will be the death of the American Secular Union. Believe me, my dear sir, to be a sincere well-wisher to the cause of free speech, free press, and free mails. I. W. ARCHIBALD.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 10, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: I did not propose to wrangle with Mr. Perry on any subject but Spiritism. I understood him to say, in his second letter, that he had enough of wrangling with me on that subject. He then had no further claim on my attention except in response to reasonable objections, civilly and intelligently offered to my theories. His letters do not meet that requirement in any respect. Therefore, having sustained the reputation of an obliging disposition to a greater extent than I proposed, and wasted as much of my time and your space for the amusement of your readers as we can well afford at present, I think it expedient to suspend such nonsense and get down to business.

The person who can read my letters and then charge me with saying that I hav neglected to investigate the cause of phenomena in nature, is evidently either intellectually or morally, or both intellectually and morally, unqualified to discuss any question with intelligence and fairness, and will likely be a hindrance rather than a help to investigating the cause of phenomena in nature. Therefore, I think it expedient to thank Mr. Perry for his proffered assistance, and dispense with his services. If science is knowledge, his letters do not indicate that he has reached the threshold of her temple. He should giv us a clear and correct explanation of whether spirit is an organic and personal individuality, independent of physical matter, or an inorganic and universal property of physical matter, before he addresses Mr. Tuttle any further on the subject of Spiritism.

When a school-boy, taking my first lessons on the cause of phenomena in nature, I found the statement in one of my school-books that when the discoverers of this hemisphere endeavored to sail into and explore the gulf of Mexico, they were intercepted by a river-like current of warm water flowing out of the gulf at the rate of four or five miles an hour. The savants of that time jumped to the conclusion that the current was caused by subterranean springs in the gulf. That was the popular theory in my boyhood days, and no effort has been made to popularize any other. It has been suggested that the Mississippi and grand rivers are more likely to be the cause than subterranean springs. To that proposition it is pertinently objected that the water of those rivers is fresh and muddy, and much below the temperature of the current, whose water is clear and salt as any in the ocean.

Referring to the chart of ocean currents, as traced on the map of the globe in my school atlas, I found that they all begin at the equator; hence they, and all their branches and meanderings, are equatorial their entire length. The ocean current in the north Atlantic begins at the equator and passes circuitously through the gulf of Mexico, and thence northward until intercepted in the northern ocean by formations of the polar basin. It has two branches that cross the ocean, indicating a declivity from west to east as well as from the equator to the pole, and two trough-like depressions that cross the ocean. From the equator to the gulf this ocean river is labeled the "equatorial current;" thence, northward, it is labeled the "gulf stream." The chart being the result of actual survey, it is indisputable authority, except the name on the northern part of the current—that being a relic of a once popular vagary, it should suggest the application of a damp sponge.

The discovery of this hemisphere led to the circumnavigation of the globe, demonstrating that long "established facts in science" were false, and theories based upon them were vagaries. Hence, I learned with my first lessons on the mysteries of nature to hav no respect or regard for pretended established facts in science that are liable to be refuted by positivly ascertained facts in nature. It was to establish such pretended facts in science that Giordano Bruno was chained to a stake and burnt to death, and Galileo was compelled to recant or share a like fate. "Established facts in science" forsooth! No facts are established in science until positivly ascertained to exist in nature.

J. A. TUTTLE.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Lovingest Face in the World.

"I love you, mamma," my little one said,
As close to my heart crept her golden head,
"I love you lots," with a clasp and kiss,
"The best of all mammas my mamma is."

"And I think," said she, looking up in my eyes,
With a glance that was tender and grave and wise,
"That you've got just the lovingest face. Oh, Oh,
I'm glad you're my mamma, I love you so."

What was the praise of the world to me
To the love of the little one throned on my knee?
And this was my prayer as I kissed the eyes
That were smiling up to me, pansywise,
"May the face of thy mother forever be
The 'lovingest' face in the world to thee."

—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Handbook of Freethought.

BY W. S. BELL.

Here it is. Just what has long been wanted. This handsome book of 384 pages fills the bill exactly. Nicely bound, well printed, it is bristling with undeniable and unimpeachable evidence against the superstitions of the times, culled from the works of the best known writers and thinkers.

You know when you are arguing you frequently want a reference to establish a point. You cannot always think at the moment just where to find it. For any such purpose this Handbook is a precious treasure. It contains special allusion to all biblical questions, heaven, hell, miracles, Jesus Christ, and the devil, as well as the myths and the mysteries out of which they hav grown.

The book is excellent. Every Liberal should possess it. And oh! would it not be fine to introduce it into Sunday-schools! What an uprising there would be. The scales would drop instantly. Let us do all we can to start it that way, and encourage the noble author for his good work. I hope ten million copies may be sold. The price is reasonable, only $1.25. SUSAN H. WIXON.

A Pair of Gods.

For many years I hav denied all the gods of every kind and degree. But since coming to Tennessee, I find it absolutely necessary to hav a god. Here a man with a god, no matter how notorious a liar he may be, can make out a bill against a man without a god, no matter how truthful and worthy of confidence he may be, and collect the same even if no debt was due him. The liar can swear by his god and get it. So I hav been casting about me for a god and hav got one. I thought I would hav to advertise for one, but remembering my luck in advertising for a ghost some years ago, I feared I would not succeed any better.

I got no ghost, nor any tidings of one, although I asked for correspondence concerning them. I thought it very strange, since some eighty thousand men get their living, in the United States alone, in the ghostly business.

But I hav got a god, and this is the way of it: Having to do some swearing in court, and not wishing to prejudice the poor man's case, I took the oath like a little man.

"Why, I thought you didn't believe in any God."

"Oh, well, I believe in the God of the statute."

"The God of the statute? And what kind of a god is that?"

"Just any kind you please. You just pay your money and take your choice."

And, on further consideration, I hav concluded to adopt another one, for fear the first one might be lonesome. And the two cost no more than one, nor take up no more room. My second one is the Presbyterian God. He has not any body, so he will occupy no room; he has no arms or legs, no hands or feet, no head or heels; he loves nothing, hates nothing, has no joy or sorrow, never laughs or weeps, is without body, parts, or passions; knows nothing, feels nothing, is nothing. He occupies just about as much space as the hole in the river from which a fish was taken ten years ago, and is about as potent as the smoke now left in a sieve caught full from the sacrificial fire of Cain and Abel.

How proud a mother would feel of a son without body, parts, or passions. I wonder how much it would cost a father to educate such a son in a full graduating course in Princeton College.

Yes, now I hav two gods—a pair of them. How proud I do feel of my possessions.

St. Elmo, Tenn. L. L. GOODWIN.

Nothing Saved.

A little boy was walking with his father one day. As they trudged along the father saw an old horseshoe lying in the road, and bade the boy pick it up and take it along.

The lad looked at the shoe carelessly and replied that it was not worth carrying, whereupon the father said nothing more, but quietly picked it up himself. He pretty soon sold the old iron for a penny at a roadside smithy and invested the coin in cherries.

The day was hot, and presently the man noticed that his son was beginning to cast longing eyes upon the box of cherries, but did not offer any to his son. He made pretenses of eating them, and dropped one to the ground as if by accident.

The boy picked it up quickly and ate it with a relish.

A little further on another dropped, and this, too, the lad lost no time in securing. So, one by one, all the cherries were dropped and picked up.

"Well," remarked the father, when the last one had been eaten, "it did not pay to pick up that horseshoe, perhaps, but if you had stooped once for that, you wouldn't hav needed to bend twenty times for the cherries."

The moral of the story is an old one, but more generally known than heeded: "Lazy folks take the most pains."—Youth's Companion.

The Old Man.

Bow low the head, do reverence to the old man, once like you. The vicissitudes of life hav silvered his hair and changed the round, merry face to the worn visage before you. The heart beat with aspiration, that is crushed by disappointment, as yours, perhaps, is destined to be. Once that form stalked proudly through the gay scenes of pleasure, the beau ideal of grace; now the hand of time that withers the flowers of yesterday has bent that figure and destroyed that noble carriage. Once, at your age, he possessed the thousand thoughts that pass through your brain, now wishing to accomplish deeds equal to a nook in fame; anon imagining life a dream that the sooner he awoke from the better. But he has lived the dream very near through, the time to awaken is very near at hand; his eye never kindles at old deeds of daring, and the hand takes a firmer grasp of the staff. Bow low the head, boy, as you would in your old age be reverenced.

Practical.

According to the philosophers everything has two uses, a lower and a higher. Some very common people find this out for themselvs, so far, at least, as the practical application of it is concerned.

The daughter of the rector of a parish in East London over the border taught the choir boys a new tune at a Monday evening's rehearsal, to be sung on the following Sunday. Sunday morning came.

"Well, Johnny," said Miss X., "I hope you havn't forgotten the new tune, for we depend much on you."

"Naw, mum, not a bit. I've been a-skeering crows with it all the week."—Youth's Companion.

In and Into.

Discriminate between in and into. Into should be used and not in after a verb of motion, or when insertion or entrance is denoted. Thus, "He went into the house." "They rode into the park." In, denoting presence or situation within limits, should be used in such sentences as, "They had a pleasant drive in the park." In is frequently used for into when the noun is omitted to which it properly belongs; as, "They hav come in," i.e., into the room. "The steamer has come in," i.e., has come into port. We may say, in general, that into indicates entrance, change, or motion in a more marked degree than in.

Correspondence.

MISS WIXON: I hav never written for the Corner, but I admire the efforts of the children and never fail to read them. My brother, a pronounced Infidel, takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. In looking over the Corner news, I noticed Master G. J. Remsburg stated in THE TRUTH SEEKER No. 5 that James G. Blaine, who is appropriately styled the "Plumed Knight," was given that title during the Blaine-Cleveland campaign. Now, the TRUTH SEEKER boy did not get the truth. Colonel Ingersoll styled Mr. Blaine the "Plumed Knight" in 1876, at Cincinnati, O., when he put him in nomination for the presidency of the United States, and the following are his words. "Like an armed, like a Plumed Knight James G. Blaine marched down the halls of Congress and threw his shining lance full and fair in the brazen foreheads of the defamers of his country and the maligners of her honor. For the Republican party to desert this gallant leader now is as though an army should desert their general upon the field of battle," or as Uriah's army did under the instructions of the "man after God's own heart." Your little friend,

MOLLIE RANDOLPH.

MONO LAKE.

BRIDGEPORT, CAL., Jan. 25, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Your kindness in publishing my last has encouraged me to try again. I would like to tell the little readers of the Corner something about Mono lake, the great Dead sea of America. It lies in a great basin surrounded by ridges of sand, sage-brush, greese-wood, wiltons, etc. The water is beautiful to look at, clear and sparkling, but oh, what a wretched taste it has. I cannot tell you all the different minerals or salts it contains, but, judging from the taste, I should say it contained a little of everything in creation that was nasty and disagreeable. Although many people drink it believing it to contain great medicinal qualities, others ship it to different points and sell it, much of it going to San Francisco, while others still use it for bathing purposes. It seems to me a disease must be bad indeed if it is worse than the remedy. I hav bathed in it myself, and it is fine for that purpose, being very buoyant, although you feel, on coming out, that you hav been swimming in an oil tank.

Notwithstanding the water is so clear and sparkling, there is not a living thing to be found in it. I think God, in his fifth day's work, must hav forgotten that he had made such a lake, for I am sure that it has not brought forth abundantly moving creatures. But the fowl of the air is a grand success, for there seems to be almost millions of ducks during the fall and winter months, besides geese and other fowl. In the summer months there are great quantities of worms gathered all round the margin of the water and thrown up in ridges by the action of the waves, of which the Indians, Payutes and Diggers, gather great quantities, digging them for their winter's food. Chickens and hogs eat them with greediness, the former often dying from the excessiv use of them. In the center of the lake is an island owned by a Frenchman, engaged in the business of raising goats (which reminds me that I must tell you some time about my adventures with a billy). I hav never been on the island myself, but many go there every summer to gather gull eggs, which are deposited in great numbers.

There are many strange and wonderful stories told of things that hav happened around the lake. Of people that hav been murdered and thrown into it for concealment. Of one man who had killed many Indians and sank them so they would petrify, intending to use them for gateposts and doorsteps. I do not know whether there is any truth in the story or not. No one, as far as I know, has ever seen any doorsteps and gateposts of that description. Still, the same man did hav much trouble with the Payutes. And only last winter one of them, that he had had a difficulty with, took the liberty of deliberately murdering him with his own (the murdered man's) rifle; shot him down while he was out feeding his pigs, and got his squaw to help him pack him in the house, where they shot him a second time after the man was helpless. And because the poor woman was frightened and did not want to help him in his murderous work, he undertook to kill her, shooting her twice, neither shot, however, proving fatal. She was, after a long and hard struggle for life, nursed back into health, only to meet a fate a thousand times worse.

She was brought into court as a witness, her evidence, of course, sending the man to the state's prison for a long term. No sooner had he been sent away than, by command of the chief, her own tribe took her out and stoned her to death. So it seems that a few of the relics of the good old Bible days still remain.

How I wish that you could spend one summer in this glorious climate—camping out, trout-fishing, and bathing in some of the many hot springs. What a grand opportunity you would hav to study some of the magnificent scenery of the Sierras. There is talk of building a railroad through this part of the country in the near future. Should they do so, then you could come and see for yourself. You could make your home with us. We liv east of the mountains, and near the foot of Castle Peak, one among the highest mountains of the Sierras. We could take horses and, in three days, could go to the top, from which can be seen the Pacific, as well as many of the beautiful valleys on the other side of the range, and back again, camping out one night. We might, in our wanderings, run across a big gold mine and make our fortunes. Then, I suppose, you would be a gold-bug, wouldn't you, instead of an editor? But my letter is too long, for there are so many things to talk about. LILLIE.

SISTER LUCY
AND
HER AWFUL DISCLOSURES.
AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.
And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.
Price, 10 cents.

POSITIVIST CALENDAR.
Each day and month of the year being named after the great benefactors of the race, whose portraits are given. Instituted by Aug. Comte.
Cards, 11x14; printed on both sides, 25 cents; on two cards, 35 cents.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH.
J. E. REMSBURG.
Price, 10 cents; per dozen, 75 cents.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE.
Liquor-Drinking Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.
By E. C. WALKER.
10 cents.

ECONOMIC EQUITIES.
A COMPEND OF THE NATURAL LAWS OF INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION AND EXCHANGE.
By J. K. INGALLS.
Price, 25 cents.

Science and Theology.
ANCIENT AND MODERN.
By J. A. FROUDE.
Price, . . . 25 cents.

Ingersoll on McGlynn.
35., 30c. per dozen, $2 per 100.

LAY SERMON.
On the Labor Question.
By R. G. INGERSOLL.
Price, 5 cents; 50 cents per doz.; $1 for 25.

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL'S
OPENING SPEECH TO THE JURY
in the suit of the Bankers' and Merchants' Telegraph Company against the Western Union Telegraph Company
Price, 10 cents.

THE STAGE AND THE PULPIT.
By R. G. INGERSOLL.
Price, 3 cents; 30 cents per dozen; $2 per 100.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.
By R. G. INGERSOLL.
Price, 3 cents; 30 cents per dozen; $2 per 100.

Is the God of Israel the True God?
Narrative of the Five Books of Moses, Joshua, Judges, and the New Testament.
Price, 25 cents.

Masonic Vindication of Right.
PROTEST AGAINST PERSECUTION.
By O. B. WHITFORD, M.D.
Price, 15 cents.

MIRACLES
AND MIRACLE-WORKERS.
By JOHN PECK.
Price, . . 10 cents.

THE
ORDER OF CREATION.
A DISCUSSION BETWEEN
GLADSTONE, HUXLEY, MULLER, LINTON, REVILLE.
On the Conflict between Genesis and Geology.
12mo, 178 pages, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

"Our Father in Heaven."
By CHAS. STEPHENSON.
1 cent; 50 cents per hundred; $3 per thousand.

PERSONAL EXISTENCE AFTER DEATH IMPROBABLE.
By L. R. SMITH.
10 cents.

WHAT LIBERALISM OFFERS IN PLACE OF CHRISTIANITY.
By B. F. UNDERWOOD.
Price, 10 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.

PRICE, TEN CENTS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Giordano Bruno.

His Life, Works, Worth, Martyrdom, Portrait, and Monument.

With a complete list of the American subscribers to the fund for the erection of the monument.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, THOMAS DAVIDSON,
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, KARL BLIND,
LYDIA R. CHASE.

Single copies 15 cents; ten copies for a dollar.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ICHABOD CRANE PAPERS.

Daringly witty and inexpressibly laughable onslaughts on Christianity.

Price, 10 cents.

ROMANISM,

OR

DANGER AHEAD.

The Reason Why a Good Roman Catholic Cannot be a Good Citizen of this Republic.

By A. J. GROVER.

Price, paper, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

NOW READY.

A VOLUME OF THE WRITINGS

OF

HORACE SEAVER.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume comprises some of the ablest and best editorials written by Mr. Seaver during the past forty-five years. It is neatly printed on cream-white paper, bound in cloth, and contains a fine likeness of the venerable editor of the Investigator. Every Liberal should hav this book in his home. It is now ready for delivery.

Price, $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.

It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ON THE WORD GOD.

By Milton Woolley, M.D., Author of "Hebrew Mythology," "The Career of Jesus Christ."

The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. —[Ps. xiv, 1.

Children and fools speak the truth.—[Old Saw.

Paper, 12mo, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SOCIAL WEALTH,

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in the Acquirement and Apportionment.

By J. K. INGALLS.

Price, Cloth, - - $1.00.

FREETHOUGHT

IS IT

DESTRUCTIVE OR CONSTRUCTIVE?

A SYMPOSIUM

BY

COL. R. G. INGERSOLL,	R. B. WESTBROOK,	CAPT. R. C. ADAMS,
E. B. FOOTE, JR.,	SALADIN (W. Stewart Ross),	L. K. WASHBURN,
H. O. PENTECOST,	GEO. E. MACDONALD,	SUSAN H. WIXON,
E. C. WALKER,	SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,	F. M. HOLLAND,
LUCY N. COLMAN,	PARKER PILLSBURY,	MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL,
C. B. REYNOLDS,	CHARLES WATTS,	J. H. BURNHAM,
W. F. JAMIESON,		THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.

SUBJECTS OF PAPERS:

Is there an Affirmative, Positive, Constructive side to Freethought?
If not, the reason why?
If there be, in what, in your opinion, does it consist, and in what should it consist?

PRICE 25 CENTS.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

TRY-SQUARE;

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

ROME OR REASON

A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience.

BY NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS.

A very critical analysis of both Protestantism and Catholicism, from the vantage-ground of an intimate personal experience with the two systems. It deals the most trenchant blows which pure logic is capable of inflicting.—[Critical Review.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.75.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BIBLE INQUIRER;

OR,

A Key to Bible Investigation.

Containing 148 Propositions
With References to the most Plain and Striking Self-Contradictions of the so-called Inspired Scriptures.

BY A. JACOBSON.

Third edition, carefully revised and enlarged.

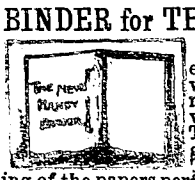
Every Liberal needs a copy for ready reference. As a pamphlet to loan to Christian friends, it is the most effectiv Iconoclast ever published.

Price only 25 cents.

THE

CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:

THEIR



Crimes and Persecutions.

8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BINDER for THE TRUTH SEEKER

For the benefit of our readers who preserve their papers we offer a new style of binder, made for the purpose, and with the heading of THE TRUTH SEEKER printed in gold letters on the outside. This binder allows the opening of the papers perfectly flat. It also allows the taking out and replacing of one or more papers from any part of the file without disturbing the other parts.

Sent by mail, postpaid, for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
tf 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

POINTERS:

A POCKET CYCLOPEDIA,

CONTAINING

Tables, Rules, Practical Hints, and Historical Sketches, for Farmers, Mechanics, Machinists, Merchants, Housekeepers, and the Public Generally, with

Numerous Maps, Illustrations, and Diagrams

Illustrating some of the more Important Comparativ Statistics of the World.

More Information for Less Money than has ever been offered.

ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

For $50 worth of "Cold Facts" boiled down in a Nutshell. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BLASPHEMY AND THE BIBLE.

BY C. B. REYNOLDS.

Price, 5 cents.

The Liberty of Printing, and Reply.

BY HUBLBUT and WAKEMAN.

Price, 10 cents.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales, SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

HOW TO

Strengthen the Memory.

OR,

NATURAL AND SCIENTIFIC METHODS OF NEVER FORGETTING.

The Boston Post says: "This book actually shows us how to keep our memories in good working condition and repair them when out of order." Price by mail $1.

Parturition Without Pain.

BY M. L. HOLBROOK, M.D.

Godey's Lady's Book says: "We giv our cordial approbation to this work. The information it contains is most important, and, we are fully convinced, reliable." Price by mail, $1.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY

AND HYGIENE, or, THE MYSTERIES OF MAN. Carefully revised edition, with 111 illustrations The most perfect book for men and women ever published. 50,000 sold. Price $2, by mail. Illustrated catalog free.

Marriage and Parentage.

In Their Sanitary and Physiological Relations and in Their Bearing on the Producing of Children of Finer Health and Greater Ability.

BY M. L. HOLBROOK, M.D.

The Scientific American says: "This work is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young." $1.

EATING FOR STRENGTH;

OR,

FOOD AND DIET IN RELATION TO HEALTH AND WORK.

The New York Herald says: "Dr. Holbrook's book is among the very best of its kind."

The Home and Garden says: "A study of this book will enable any intelligent reader to make a choice of food which may save the cost of the book every day in providing for a family, besides increasing health, strength, and longevity." $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

SAKYA BUDDHA.

A Versified, Annotated Narrativ of his Life and Teachings.

With Citations from Buddha's "Path of Virtue."

BY E. D. ROOT.

I take pleasure in speaking in praise of this work.—Prof. J. M. Peebles.

The book has been introduced into Buddhist schools in Ceylon. The "Banner of Light," "Religio-Philosophical Journal," and many Spiritualist papers and lecturers hav spoken highly of the book.

Extra Cloth, 175 pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

WHAT KIND OF A MAN CLARK BRADEN IS.

BY B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 10 cents.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts.... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H..... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by its Fruits; Our Ideas of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism: Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A four days' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. BURGESS, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Paper, 50 cents. Cloth, 80 cents.

Underwood-Marples Debate. A four nights' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Rev. JOHN MARPLES. Fully reported. Paper, 35 cents; cloth, 60 cents.

Obituary.

J. S. Thomson died at his home in Camptown, February 6th, after a long and painful illness, in his seventy-fifth year; his companion of nearly fifty-two years survives to mourn the loss of a kind and loving husband and father. His two children, M. M. Thomson, of Binghampton, and Addie M. Reed, were at his bedside when he fell asleep. The Odd Fellows of Wyalusing Lodge 503, of which he was a charter member, kindly assisted during his illness, and officiated at the grave. Rev. J. C. Johnson, who is a member of the order, delivered an appropriate address.

J. S. Thomson was bound by no creed or society; what his reason told him was true and right, that he advocated, regardless of popular opinion. He knew not whether there was a continuation of life beyond our ken, but was ready to accept what nature had in store for him.

OAK MILLS, KAN., Jan. 30, 1890.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir:

It is with a sad heart that I announce to you and the readers of your paper the death of a noble young man, my honored cousin, George W. Eiler. He died of that horrible disease, pneumonia, at the home of his uncle, Mr. H. O. Fisher, in this vicinity, on January 28th, aged twenty years. Thus the icy hand of death has deprived this vicinity of one of its most honored and highly respected young men. His untimely death is a great calamity to the host of admiring friends who followed him to his last resting-place on the sunny slope of Round Prairie. George W. Eiler was a good young man in every sense of the word. His life was without blemish, and although he died hard, he met death with an undaunted spirit and without fear. George was an honest, kind-hearted, and charitable young man. He was a stranger to selfishness and always tried to see how much he could do for those he loved. The basis of a high character, unsullied integrity, and unimpeachable honor belonged to him. Those who knew him best loved him most, and now that he has been taken from us we feel that it has left a void which time can never fill. A more industrious, a more intelligent, a more honest, a kinder-hearted young man has never lived. The curtain of futurity—that impenetrable curtain—has fallen, and we see him no more, but he leaves to his sorrowing relatives and friends a legacy in the remembrance of his virtues, his services, his honor, and his truth.

GEO. J. REMSBURG.

CONSTRUCTIVE FREETHOUGHT.

In "THE KINGDOM OF THE UNSELFISH," by John Lord Peck, the readers of this paper can find some genuine Constructive Freethought, which, in the words of one of their own writers, "reaches forward to grasp some philosophy of life and its myriad uses—some teaching that shall crystallize around this present life and lift it to a pedestal hitherto unknown—some lofty purpose that shall fill and brill all with a new and glorious enthusiasm." This is what the book really accomplishes. To obtain it inclose price, $1.50, to the EMPIRE BOOK BUREAU, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

New Model Hall Typewriter

The Best Standard Typewriter in the World. Cheap, Portable, No Ink Ribbon, Interchangeable Type in all Languages, Easiest to learn and rapid as any. Agents wanted everywhere. WARRANTED AS REPRESENTED. Address

National Typewriter Co.,
10 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. P. O. box 5159.
Send for catalog and specimens of work.

The Candle from Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

W. S. BELL'S PAMPHLETS.

LIBERTY AND MORALITY.

PRICE, 15 CENTS.

Accept my thanks for your excellent and useful discourse.—James Parton.

I am much pleased with your address, and will notice it in Man.—T. B. Wakeman.

A beautiful pamphlet of 36 pages. It is a very able paper, and deserves wide dissemination.—The Age.

ANTI PROHIBITION.

PRICE, 20 CENTS.

The number of heads under which you hav divided the subject matter of the pamphlet, and the concise manner in which the point is discussed, should be highly commended. Therefore I take great pleasure in recommending "Anti-Prohibition" to the consideration of every person who is interested, not only in the cause of temperance, but in the principles of self-government.—J. J. McCabe.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I., and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two Volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

Thirty Discussions, Bible Stories, Essays, and Lectures. 700 pages. Paper covers, 75 cents;

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity, between D. M. BENNETT and Rev. G. H. HUMPHREY. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price. $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. BENNETT and CYRUS ROMULUS R. TEED. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents;

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. BENNETT and G. M. MAIR, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion.

2. Miracles and supernatural achievements hav been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus.

3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history.

BENNETT affirms; MAIR denies. This is an exhaustiv discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This givs a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon MR. BENNETT. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cents.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist Church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. Cloth, $1.00

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers 10 cents.

The Great Religions of the World. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Sinful Saints and Sensual Shepherds. 10 cents.

Christ of Paul; or, the Enigmas of Christianity.

Frauds of the Churchmen of the Second Century Exposed.

By GEORGE REBER.

12mo, 400pp., - - Price, $2.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN.

A Compendium of Universal History.

By WINWOOD READE.

Sixth edition, 544pp., - - $1.75.

SCRIPTURE SPECULATIONS.

With Creation, Stars, Earth, Primitive Man, Judaism.

By H. R. STEVENS. 419pp., $1.50.

ETHICS OF POSITIVISM.

A Critical Study and Survey of the Moral Philosophy of the Present Century.

By GIACOMO BARZELLOTTI,

Prof. of Philosophy at the Licco Dante, Florence.

Price, $1.50.

OLD FAITH AND THE NEW.

A Confession.

By DAVID FRIEDERICH STRAUSS.

Authorized translation from sixth German edition by Mathilde Blind.

Price, - - $1.50.

HEALTH HINTS TO WOMEN.

Important Information for All, and "Danish Cure." With Portrait.

By MME. W. SCHOTT. Price, $1.50.

The Legends of the Patriarchs and Prophets.

By S. BARING-GOULD.

Will be seized with avidity by all students of the Bible.—[Congregationalist.

Price, $1.50.

RADICAL PULPIT.

Discourses of Advanced Thought.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM and FELIX ADLER.

Price, $1.

INSTITUTION of MARRIAGE.

And Remarkable Divorce Cases.

By PHILANTHROPUS.

446pp. - - - - Price, $1.

The Contrast: Evangelicalism and Spiritualism Compared.

By MOSES HULL.

Paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

PERSONAL IMMORTALITY

AND OTHER PAPERS.

Candid Arguments for and Against Immortality.

By JOSIE OPPENHEIM. Price, 75 cents.

SIXTEEN SAVIORS OR NONE.

By KERSEY GRAVES.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Truth Seeker Collection of Forms, Hymns, and Recitations.

For Organizing Societies; for Marriages, Funerals, Naming of Infants, Obituaries, Epitaphs, etc. Also 525 Liberal and Spiritualistic Hymns for Social and Various Public Occasions.

18mo, 550pp. Price, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Nunneries.

By W. HOGAN.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Shelley: Philosopher and Reformer.

By C. SOTHERAN.

8vo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Lithograph of D. M. Bennett.

Heavy plate paper 22x28. Price, 50 cts.

Lithograph of Bennett Monument.

In 4 colors, 22x28. Heavy plate paper.

Price, 50 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

With Remarks on Rousseau and Comte.

By CALVIN BLANCHARD.

Paper, - - - 40 cents.

SOUL PROBLEMS.

WITH

Theological Amendment and State Personality.

By JOS. E. PECK.

Price, - - - - 25 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

MATERIALISM AND CRIME.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.
Price, 5 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

French Revolution

ITS CAUSES AND RESULTS.
By W. S. BELL.
Paper, 12mo, 25 cents.

MORTALITY OF THE SOUL.

IMMORTALITY OF ITS ELEMENTS.
By A. S. de Pellegrini.
Paper, - - 15 cents.

PHILOSOPHY of SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.
By F. R. Marvin, M.D.
Cloth, . . . 50 cents.

POCKET THEOLOGY.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms.
Price, 25 cents.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY EXPOSED.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.
15 cents.

PRO AND CON OF

Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?
By E. E. GUILD.
Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

PYRAMID OF GIZEH.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.
By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D.
Price, 15 cents.

QUESTION SETTLED.

BIBLICAL and MODERN SPIRITUALISM.
By MOSES HULL.
Price, 60 cents.

Rational Communism.

THE PRESENT AND FUTURE REPUBLIC OF NORTH AMERICA.
Advocates associate life and employment as a preventive of vice, crime, poverty, etc.
By A CAPITALIST.
Paper, 498pp., 50 cts.; clo., $1.

Relation of Witchcraft to Religion.
By A. C. LYALL.
Price, 10 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.
By Dr. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant.
25 cents.

TRUTH. A Poem. By E. N. Kingsley. 10 cents.

POVERTY: Its Cause and Cure.
How the Poor May Attain Comfort and Independence.
By M. G. H.
Price, . . 10 cents.

Religion of Inhumanity.

With a Glance at the Religion of Humanity.
BY FREDERIC HARRISON.
Price, 15 cents.

RELIGION:
The Gibraltar of the World, as Now Constituted.
By George T. Bondies.
With
Exceptions to the Character of Christ as a Gentleman.
By W. T. Purviance.
25 cents.

IMAGE BREAKER.

By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Six Lectures.
Decline of Faith.
Protestant Intolerance.
Washington an Unbeliever.
Jefferson an Unbeliever.
Paine and Wesley.
Christian Sabbath.
Each, 5 cents; bound, pap., 25 cents; per doz., 40.

SABBATH BREAKING.

By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Price, 25 cents.

St. Matthew Before the Court

FOR THE CRIME OF FORGERY.
By SECULARIST.
Price, . . . 10 cents.

SEMITIC GODS AND THE BIBLE.

Including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, Bible.
By D. M. BENNETT.
(From Vol. II. "Gods and Religions.")
333pp., pap., 60 c.; clo., $1.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

22 Discussion with Elder Shelton. Bennett. 10
23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5
31 God and God-Houses..... 2
35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No. 2. Rev. Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5
81 Hereafter, or the Half-way House. Sypher. 2
82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps. 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Biblo-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2
107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 5
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10
121 Ingersoll's Review of his Reviewers..... 3
122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2
158 The Fool's Creed..... 1
159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL
Price, 25 Cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

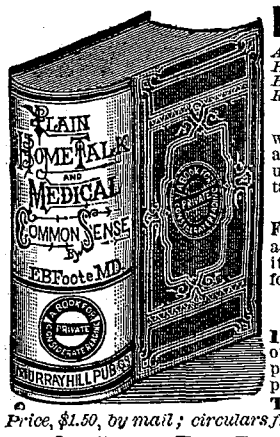
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.



If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

It seems hardly worth while to call attention of old-time radical thinkers to "Plain Home Talk," since probably most of them are familiar with it. Yet there may be some such who hav lost or loaned their copies of the work and who would be glad to get a new copy of the latest revised edition. To the younger generations of Liberals and to recent converts to Freethought literature "Plain Home Talk" is a book that offers much of interest in the line of radical thought on marriage and social relations, besides much very valuable instruction concerning physiology, hygiene, and what it is well for everyone to know concerning disease, its causes, prevention, and treatment.—Truth Seeker.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

All about the human body, in health and disease, nature's secrets revealed. How life is perpetuated, health maintained, disease induced, death delayed, How to marry your own mate, and transmit wealth of health to posterity; Read the most popular, comprehensive and useful book treating of which Dr. Eadon declares to be "priceless in value, new, startling and very instructive." The latest edition is more complete and valuable than ever, having been re-written in important parts. It contains AN APPENDIX of great practical utility made up of

MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

OVER 200 PRESCRIPTIONS OR RECIPES

For Acute and Chronic Disorders Common to Adults and Children, a complete table of poisons and their antidotes (from highest authorities), illustrated directions for resuscitating the drowned (prepared for Health Boards), and hygienic rules for care of infants; also

ORIGIN OF LIFE AND DEVELOPMENT OF MAN,

tracing the embryo from conception, through all stages to birth,

Illustrated by Over 20 Beautiful Colored Lithographs, on fine plate paper, such as are to be found only in high priced, imported medical works; and to illustrate the anatomy, and relative positions of important parts, each book is also embellished with

THREE ELEGANT CHROMO CHARTS of VITAL ORGANS.

Price, $1.50, by mail; circulars free; agents wanted. Murray Hill Pub. Co., 129 E. 28th St., N. Y.

ONE "PLAIN HOME TALK" FREE to any one likely to make a good agent, and who send $3.00 for two books; we will send one more free, or three altogether.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Career of Jesus Christ.

An Exposition of the True Meaning of this Character as described in the New Testament. By Milton Woolley, M.D., author of "Hebrew Mythology." Paper, 8vo, 25 cents.

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 833pp., silk cloth, $3.

Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SPECIAL SALE
OF
WATCHES AND DIAMONDS.

Good American Nickel Stem-winders, $2.50, $4, $6. Best grades in silverine case, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; adjusted, $16. For 3 ounce coin silver case, add $3.50; 4 ounce, $4.50; 5 ounce, $6. In best open-face filled gold, dust-proof case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; adjusted, $24.50; hinged cases, $3 more; hunting cases, $6 more.

The New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

All modern improvements: in silverine, $19; 3 ounce coin silver, $23.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25. BEST open-face filled screw case, $27; hinged, $30; hunting, $26; Louis XIV style, $2 to $10 more. Ladies' best gold filled, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18.50; 15 jewels, $25; adjusted, $35; 14 kt solid gold, $10 to $20 more. Ruby and diamond ornamentations up to $100 extra.

DIAMONDS.

An elegant 3 stone, 8kt., solitaire pin and drops, $600, worth $900; a magnificent hair ornament and pin and pendant combination, rosette, 29 brilliants, $200, worth $300; one do., heart-shape, sapphire and ruby in center, same price and value. Pins, rings, drops, studs, from $300 down to $10; same proportionate discounts. All bought before late advance.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 5th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Admission free. Discussions follow lectures.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston,
Meets every Sunday (from October to June) at 2:45 P.M., at Paine Memorial Building, Appleton street.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.

Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid, for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
tf

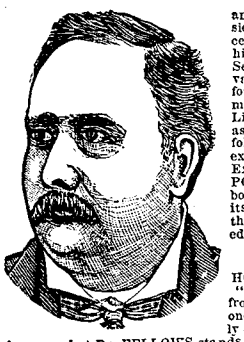
Essence of Religion.

By L. FEUERBACH.

Translated from the German. Cloth, 12mo, 75pp.; 50 cts.

The truth-teller is ill-mannered, therefore immoral.—Extract.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.



SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT.

"Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. R. P. Fellows is an outspoken Infidel and a very successful physician. He is worthy of an extensiv patronage.—The Liberal.

News of the Week.

A BILL has been introduced in the New Jersey legislature requiring employers to allow their workmen two hours after the polls open on election day, in which to vote.

THREE policemen had to be called into a St. Louis church the other Sunday to subdue two of the brethren who were racing over the building, one chasing the other with a shovel.

YOUNG Abraham Lincoln is dead.

THE question of secular or denominational schools is vexing the British Parliament.

A SMOKELESS powder has been tested in Europe, and is being experimented with at Washington.

THE French agent in Dahomey, Africa, asks for more troops, as the situation of the French there has become critical.

THE dissensions in Canada hav given rise there to the coining of a new by-word of political strife, "Race and religion."

THE engineers commissioned to report on the Panama canal state that the work to be done is of discouraging magnitude.

THE divine right of monarchy is still claimed in Europe, Emperor William speaking of Germany as "the land intrusted to me by God."

AT Hamburg, N. Y., on the 6th, a train broke in two, and by the fore part coming to a standstill and the rear part crashing into it, ten persons were killed.

LAST Sunday the workingmen of London held a great mass meeting in Hyde park to protest against the cruelty of Russia to political prisoners. Annie Besant, John Burns, Michael Davitt, and others spoke.

THE opinions of prominent men upon the jury system hav been gathered, and all favor reform of it. The change most generally, though not unanimously, concurred upon, is reduction of the number of jurors who must agree.

THE shopkeepers of Elizabeth, N. J., formed an organization to combat the mayor's enforcement of Sunday closing, and intended to defy the law and keep open, but at the last moment submitted, and will try to secure repeal of the statute by the legislature.

IT is said that Herr Tisza, the premier of Hungary whose Liberal policy has for fourteen years vastly benefited not only his province of Hungary but the whole of Austria, will resign. As the two archdukes who stand next to the throne are bigoted Catholics, the clericalism that Tisza overthrew will regain its place, and disaster will overtake the enlightened schemes of education and government that he established.

WILLIAM III. of Germany in his latest speech arrogated to himself substantially absolute power, disregarding the rights of the people and parliament, and saying that those who opposed him he would dash to pieces. Among the ultra-Conservativ papers one advises him to establish a dictatorship, and others urge the suppression of universal suffrage, and, if the Opposition in parliament grows too violent, the suspension of the body.

RECENTLY at New York an audience of 2,000 listened to an expostulation by labor representativs against the conduct of the city schools. It was stated that in accommodations New York ranks lowest among American cities; that "the cost of the machinery of repression (asylums, courts, police, armories) far exceeds the expenditure for education;" that the compulsory education law is a dead letter, 100,000 children who should receive schooling being without, while 20,000 that actually applied last year were refused admission.

THE fair of 1892 depends upon the action of the Senate. If Chicago cannot raise sufficient money the fair may not be held at all. She claims, however, to hav $5,000,000 subscribed, and to be able to raise the guarantee of $10,000,000. The Republican party fears that New York state voters will deem it responsible for the action in the legislature that lost the fair to New York city, and giv the next election to the Democrats. In England the opinion has risen that "that supremacy, social and commercial, which New York has always claimed, is challenged, and would seem to hav passed to its young rival in the West."

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

A DISAGREEMENT—WHICH IS RIGHT, THE MONKEY OR THE PARROT?

THE

Truth Seeker Annual

—AND—

Freethinkers' Almanac,

1890.

(E. M. 290.)

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Calendar for 1890,	5
Freethought in the United States, 1889,	17
Faded Flowers. Poem by J. E. Remsburg,	24
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue. T. B. Wakeman,	26
Mostly Fools. W. Stewart Ross (Saladin),	36
Record of the Spanish Inquisition,	44
Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas,	44
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral. Helen H. Gardener,	45
The Middle Ages. Illustrated,	69
The Priest,	70
The Supernatural World,	71
The Reformation,	73
Future Terrors,	77
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated,	79
Freethought Journals in the United States,	96
In Search of a Spirit. E. M. Macdonald,	97
Why I Left the Church. H. O. Pentecost,	109

NEW YORK:

PUBLISHED AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Gems of Thought.

WITH a more enlightened understanding of the laws of heredity, and a more rational and universal system of education, we shall find the tendency to crime diminishing.—R. C. Adams.

THE moral actions of men are not the product of their volition, but of their antecedents. —Spencer.

THE Koran is a rhapsody, without connection, without order, and without art. This tedious book is, nevertheless, said to be a very fine production, at least by the Arabs, who assert that it is written with an elegance and purity which no later work has equaled. It is a poem, or a sort of rhymed prose, consisting of three thousand verses. No poem ever advanced the fortune of its author so much as the Koran. It was disputed among the Mussulmans whether it was eternal, or God had created it in order to dictate it to Mohammed. The doctors decided that it was eternal; and they were right: this eternity is a much finer opinion than the other, for with the vulgar we must always adopt that which is the most incredible.—Voltaire.

IF religion were more clear, it would hav less charm for the ignorant, who are pleased only with obscurity, terrors, fables, prodigies, and things incredible.—D'Holbach.

IF the God is infinitly good, in the human sense, he must desire that moral evil should not exist; and if he is infinitly powerful, he could make his will prevail. The theologian has often made the most desperate struggle to get off the horns of this dilemma, but always in vain. It has been argued that moral evil comes, not from the good God, but from an evil spirit called the devil. But, then, there is no answer to the question, Why did the good God create the devil? Another attempt at explanation has been the theory that God, having granted free will, could not interfere with it even to prevent evil. But then, again, comes the unanswerable question, Why—the effect that must follow being known—why was free will given? This, even granting that such a thing as free will exists, is fatal to the explanation.—John Wilson, M.A.

WHY should God make those whom he knew would be criminals? If I should make a machine that would walk your streets and take the lives of people you would hang me. And if God made a man whom he knew would commit murder, then God is guilty of that murder.—Ingersoll.

To develop to the utmost our genius and our love, that is the only true religion.—Winwood Reade.

To found the future in the highest sense,
Humanity must be our ever-present end and aim.
Through the human is it, that our heaviest ills are healed.—Goethe.

PERSECUTION is the deadly original sin of the Reformed churches, that which cools every honest man's zeal for their cause in proportion as his reading becomes more extensiv.—Hallam.

THE spirit of early Protestantism was as undoubtedly intolerant as the spirit of Catholicism.—Lecky.

EXPERIENCE has proved that the most religious ages and nations hav not always been the most moral. On the contrary, religious fanaticism has such an array of sins of commission and of omission to answer for, that all other offenses that history tells us of are a mere nothing in comparison with them. Is it not a fact that in the very countries in which the church holds an undisputed sway and no freedom of thought is tolerated, a very much lower standard of morality prevails to this day than in those in which enlightenment has raised its victorious banner? —Buchner.

I WISH some one would undertake to show how public morals are promoted by the doctrins of deathbed repentance, election, and reprobation, and the final salvation of backsliding saints.—Dr. Thos. Cooper.

THE Christians say, that among the ancient Jews, if you committed a crime you had to kill a sheep. Now they say "charge it." "Put it on the slate." It will not do. For every crime you commit you must answer to yourself and to the one you injure.—Ingersoll.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 17. No. 12. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 22, 1890. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

PARALLEL CASES.—FAITH AND WORKS.

When Halley's comet came in 1456, so tremendous was its apparition that it was necessary for the pope himself to interfere. He exorcised and expelled it from the skies. It slunk away into the abysses of space, terror-stricken by the maledictions of Calixtus III., and did not venture back for seventy-five years!—Draper's Conflict, chap. x, p. 269.

Notes and Clippings.

MARCH 5th there was presented to the Senate of the United States a petition carrying 308,377 names in opposition to the Blair Sunday bill and the Blair resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution respecting establishments of religion and free public schools. This makes more than 658,000 bona fide signatures that hav been presented to the Senate in opposition to these measures.

SAYS the Better Way, Spiritualist: "We hav been assured by a number of people that the Better Way exerts a healthful influence on them; that by handling or reading its contents they hav been made to feel better after severe suffering; and that they hav been cured of some ailments and relieved in other instances by regularly taking the same for some months. We hav reasons to believe this true to a large extent and therefore would like to hear from some of our readers who may hav noticed this fact, giving their reasons for believing so; how they first experienced it, and the difference in their health from the time they began to improve in consequence up to the present time." This is the most unique bid for subscriptions we remember to hav ever seen.

IT is gratifying to see, says the Denison Gazetteer, that the people of the country are waking up to the importance of resisting the attempts now making in certain quarters to induce Congress to force religious observance and instruction upon the people by law. On the 4th inst. Senator Stockbridge presented two remonstrances against the passage of any bill in regard to the observance of the Sabbath or Lord's day, or any other religious or ecclesiastical institution or rite, against the adoption of any resolution for the amendment to the national Constitution that in any way givs preference to the principles of any religion above another, or that will in any way sanction legislation upon the subject of religion. The remonstrances contain the individual signatures of 308,377 citizens from different states and territories.

REV. DR. TOBIAS SCHAEFFETBAR, of Baltimore, lectured recently on "Religious Movements in Congress." He said that the introduction of bills savoring of religion will shake the very foundation of our government and work for the establishment of Anarchy. The legislators forget, in their zeal for the establishment of their religion, that they are endangering the existence of a grand structure. The standards of their religion are pessimistic, full of gloom and darkness. Where its precepts are not strong enough for required adherence they would call in the strong arm of the government for their heavenly work. Not by all the Blair Sunday rest and education bills that were ever devised will a condition of affairs be instituted to the credit of the government and mankind; not by joining our free public schools to the church will the millennium be brought about. We hav enough law, we want more liberty. Chain the mind of a free-thinking man and it will soon break through and hurt the tyrant.

THERE hav come to the knowledge of the Leadville, Col., Argus within the past few weeks, the details of a case in Roman Catholic circles in Leadville which aptly shows the cunning and greed of the priestly agents of the Romish money-making machine. The story as given us is as follows: Some time since an old gentleman living near the outskirts of the city with his aged wife, was taken sick and died. He and his spouse were members of the local Catholic parish and of course the obsequies took place from the Catholic church. The deceased left a small estate and one of the local priests was appointed administrator. The estate, it was ascertained, would net about $600. A short time afterward the priest learned, through the medium of the confessional, that the widow was not at peace respecting the progress of her deceased husband's spirit through purgatory. So it was ordered by the priest that quarterly masses for such journeying be said at Rome and that one mass per week for one year be said at the local church. These latter, at $10 each, would, in a year, amount to $520. Rating the quarterly masses at $20 each, it will be seen that in one year the old lady, now sixty years of age, will be practically penniless. It will strike the average reader, says the Argus, as rather significant that the amount required for masses so nearly "sized up her pile." What will be the result? At the end of the year, when the old lady's money has been safely gathered into the coffers of the church, she will become a charge upon her relativs or upon the taxpayers of this or some other community.

HE was a solemn-visaged, gray-polled, slow-pacing son of sorrow, says the Philadelphia Record. His features were stolidly set, and there was not a glint of hope in his pale face. Disappointment and discouragement were written there. He was a Second Adventist who had for the sixth time awaited the Lord's coming in vain. The excitement of his hope had driven him almost to distraction, and the reaction had driven him almost to the grave. "I'll never try again," he said plaintivly, with a long-drawn sigh. "I began it in 1843. I was sure I was going heavenward then. In 1844 they said the world was coming to an end at Darby and I went down there so as to be on hand. I tried it again in 1859, up in New Hampshire, at a camp-meeting; and the next time was in the centennial year. Mother Shipton's prophecy that "the world to an end would come in 1881," I believed to be gospel truth. But though I began with New Year's day and watched and waited for fifty-two weeks, the end was as far off as ever. I had about given the whole thing up when the preachers began to tell of Oct. 25, 1889. I thought it was all true until Saturday morning came. Then I got mad and swore I'd turn heathen. I hav got tired of waiting, and my plans hav been spoiled so many times that I made up my mind I wouldn't stand it no longer. I've been reading Ezekiel, and from what he says in the forty-seventh chapter I guess the end won't be for mor'n two thousand years yet. There's another place where the good book says the gospel must be preached to all the world before judgment day. Well, I reckon there be millions of poor heathen critters who havn't had a chance to be preached to; that means the world an't a-going to bust for ages yet. So I'm not a-botherin' my head. I don't care a snap what the preacher folks say. Why, if the biggest preacher in Philadelphia should yell to me to-morrow that Gabe was flappin' his wings over my hen-roost, I wouldn't take the trouble to look out of my window."

Communications.

Woman's Right to Reason.*

It has always seemed to me that right was derived from capability. I am aware that this assertion, unqualified, might be construed to mean the right of the stronger to oppress the weak. But using the word "right" as meaning freedom to work for a good end, I infer that woman has a right to reason so far as she is capable of reasoning. But is woman capable of reasoning? Can she thoroughly comprehend the relation of cause and effect? The general opinion of men seems to be, as it has always been, that she cannot. That her answer to their "Whys" is a simple "Because." That the fact that things "are as they are," is a sufficient reason to women why they are, and also sufficient for her, as a rule, why they should continue to be so. But is it woman alone who connects events which hav no relation to each other, as cause and effect? Is it woman alone who puts faith in luck instead of forethought, and in a supernatural providence instead of in due preparation? Is it woman alone who carries a rabbit foot in her pocket to ward off accident, or a horse-chestnut or small potato to prevent an attack of colic or rheumatism? The fact is, that the unreason which is so largely prevalent in the world is far from being confined to our sex, and, as a cause for this general unreason, we should remember that it is not so many centuries since the people—that is, the men—"We, the people," as the Declaration of Independence has it—themselvs laid claim to the unrestricted right to reason. How many men do much independent thinking now? Those who do are making considerable stir in the civilized world. But in what a small minority are they compared with the hordes of men who populate this earth; beings to whom we must perforce, on account of their shape and functions, giv the appellation of men, but to whom, if we define "man" as a free thinking and reasoning being, we must deny the right to the name. Slaves are they to tradition, custom, and habit; not the savage races races alone, but the nations that call themselvs civilized.

Until four hundred years ago the right of any man to reason ad libitum was restricted by those in authority; notably, by priests supported by the state. Socrates suffered for free thought and free speech long before the Christian era, as Bruno did three hundred years ago. Up to the time of the Reformation no man or woman dare think, and no member of the Catholic or Greek church dare freely think or speak to this day. Witness the late anathematizing of Dr. McGlynn by the Catholic hierarchy, even here in so-called free America, simply for expressing his individual opinions on social questions, and that while still affirming himself to be a devoted son of the church. Four centuries ago the monk Luther denounced the vicious practices of the Roman church and carried his revolt to a successful termination. He broke the spell that had been put upon man's mental powers for a thousand years; he protested against the shackles of ecclesiasticism which had fettered human reason; he burst asunder the iron bands of authority with which both men and women had been manacled by the Romish church, and then he forged the chains anew and fastened the last link to a book, instead of to the pope.

The Bible then became the oracle before which the Protestant soul bowed in awe, and whose literal commands it did not dare to question. And so when on the pages of that book was found the declaration that, "The powers that be are ordained of God," independence in the soul of man was crushed, and the doctrin of the divine right of kings was promulgated and defended; and man was degraded, and the rights of humanity trampled on by despots and tyrants, who styled themselvs "vicegerents of God." At length the revolution in England under Cromwell, which declared that subjects hav rights which kings are bound to respect, decided the question for that country, and the declaration was sealed by the decapitation of Charles Stuart; and a hundred years later France emphasized the new doctrin that "governors exist for the benefit of the governed" by a blow on the neck of Louis XVI. so severe that, it is said, every sovereign in Europe felt of his own neck to ascertain if it was intact.

Thus the principle of the right of revolution against tyranny and injustice found lodgment in the minds of men, without authority from the Bible, and even in spite of its injunctions, and a way was opened for further disobedience to its literal commands. Some of its most devout believers refused to return fugitiv slaves to their owners, notwithstanding that Paul returned Onesimus to his master. Christian nations now maintain standing armies to bring desolation and death upon other Christian nations in case of affront—both nations professing belief in the divinity of him who said, "But I say unto you, that ye resist not evil; but if a man smite thee on the right cheek turn to him the other also." Christian merchants buy and sell and bargain and provide comfortable homes for their families, regardless of the injunction, "Take no thought for the morrow; sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Astors and Vanderbilts sit under the ministrations of Dr. Dix and Dr. Deems on Sunday, and perhaps, occasionally, catch a sound-wave from the uttered words of the oracle, to this effect, "Lay not up for yourselvs treasures on earth;" but on Monday, and all through the week, they go on adding thousands to the millions they already possess. To come nearer home; women put on their richest apparel, bedeck themselvs with gold and jewels, and fix their hair in the most artistic and becoming fashion, and all this when they are preparing to attend a Christian church, to whose congregations Paul wrote, regarding the women, "Whose adorning, let it not be the outward adorning of gold, or of plaiting of hair, or of putting on of apparel, but let it be the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit."

Now, in what I hav just said in reference to the open disobedience of Christians to the plain commands of the Bible, I am finding no fault with the revolutionists of England, France, and America, nor with the hiders of fugitiv slaves, nor with the Astors and Vanderbilts, nor with my sisters who appreciate the artistic and beautiful in dress. I wish simply to call attention to another decision of that revered book, which says, "He that offendeth in one point is guilty of all;" and thus to show that since the Christian world has dared to construe certain portions of the Bible in such a way as to harmonize with the present nineteenth century development of the Christian world, and to ignore some portion of the scriptures altogether, it is perfectly right and reasonable that we should take that venerable volume and adapt its teachings as a whole to the present development and present needs of society, and especially to the development and needs of woman. To do so will leave the Bible intact as to its ethical teachings, which I think are found with finer expression and in greater abundance in the Christian scriptures than in the sacred writings of any other religion. Feeling as I do now, and hav done all my life, the debt I owe to the many Bible verses committed to memory during my childhood, and which, on every needed occasion, still present themselvs as prompters to good, and deterrents from evil, as inspirers of hope and sustainers of patience, the thought presents itself to me, as if has often done before, Will not some pure, loving soul, with deft intellect, extract those precious moral gems and put them in suitable form for giving instruction in ethics, devoid of all dogma, and thus aid in cultivating those reverent, religious emotions which are a part of our spiritual nature?

But this is a digression. To return to my first proposition that woman's right to reason inheres in her power to reason. I affirm that she has this power. It is not necessary to call up the shades of Mrs. Somerville or Caroline Herschell to prove this. We find all around us women who, having wakened to their own capabilities, are taking up the work of life in spheres hitherto occupied solely by men, and making such a success in carrying on that work as to astonish themselvs even more than their friends and the world at large. Women in shops and offices; women as heads of business houses; women as presidents of banks and insurance companies, and even of railroad corporations. Women superintending farms and riding over their cattle ranches. Woman professors, woman doctors, and woman lawyers; woman teachers, woman preachers, and woman lecturers; and with all these avenues of employment open to then, a far greater army of woman mothers and woman wives. Does it require no reasoning powers to manage these businesses and professions, and make the success of them that women hav made? Especially, does it require no reasoning power to bring up a family of boys and girls so that industry, virtue, and honor shall rule their lives, and to do this, as many a mother has to do it, with the responsibility forced upon her of seeing every day that there is meal in the barrel? Friends, we will ask no more if woman has a right to reason. She has reasoned, she does reason, and, in virtue of her reasoning powers, she claims and will soon receive a share in making the laws which she has to obey.

And now that we hav touched the suffrage question, I desire to say, with all earnestness, that I trust this association or society, whatever the form it may take as an organization, will plant itself fairly and squarely upon the basis of the demand for an educated suffrage. No person, nativ or foreigner, white or colored, should be allowed to hav a vote unless he or she can read the ballot which he or she votes, and all the ballots printed, distinctly and intelligently, and sign his or her name in a clear, legible hand that can be unmistakably read. More than this, in case of doubt, the party desiring to vote should be challenged to read, intelligibly and understandingly, at least ten lines from some newspaper published on the day of voting. Why? Because reason, guided by intelligence, is the only safeguard for our free institutions.

But before we can in justice require this educational qualification of our foreign and nativ illiterate population, it is the duty of educators to see to it that the way to reading and writing is made easy. Perhaps you think they are already easy. You read without the slightest effort and write—well, some of us do not boast much of our good penmanship, and we manage to spell so that we hope there are not many errors discoverable—when slightly in doubt as to whether there is one l or two in a word, and when hesitating over ce or ci, si or ti, we run the letters together and let them stand for either combination as the reader chooses.

I expect, my friends, you are wondering what point I am trying to reach. I mean just this, that in consequence of our cumbersome, illogical, unhistorical, misleading, monstrous orthography, reading and writing, so far from being arts of easy acquisition, are, as Prof. Martineau says, "among the most difficult of human attainments." In the first place, it is a solemn truth that there are not sixty words in the English language pronounced as they are spelled; that is to say, the alphabetical name of each letter in the word furnishes no clue to its sound in a combination or to the pronunciation of the word as a whole; so that a child or foreigner has to see and learn by a sheer effort of memory, and as a distinct lesson, every word and syllable in the language, hence the consumption of four or five years' valuable time in learning to read, and hence it is that nobody ever learns to spell with uniform correctness. Listen to the school-boy's plaint:

Spell—spell—spell,
Till the brain begins to swim;
And spell—spell—spell,
Till the eyes are heavy and dim!
'Tis slay—and sley—and sleigh,
'Tis pare—and pair—and pear,
Till in the confusion I lose my way
And impatiently tear my hair.

'Tis "dolt!" or "blockhead!" or "dunce!"
From a teacher deep flushed with passion,
If I do not arrange each letter at once
According to honored fashion.
I've studied, and wrote, and thumbed,
Like the veriest drudge in the land,
Till the heart is sick, and the brain benumbed,
As well as the weary hand.

O teachers, with ferule and strap,
Just think what you're about.
It is not wisdom you're driving in,
But reason you're driving out.
In figures there's always reason,
In grammar, good judgment will tell;
But neither taste, judgment, nor reason,
In the style we are taught to spell.

Such being the facts, how is it possible for the nation to arrive at the object toward which it is directing its educational energies, namely, a universal ability to read? It simply cannot be reached, with the present orthography of our text-books. It never will. The only possible method by which it can be accomplished—and by that means success is sure—is by the adoption in elementary school-books of the Anglo-American print. In this print the words are spelled phonetically—that is, by sound, the number of letters of the alphabet being increased by using the ordinary digraphs like th, sh, ch, etc., to represent the sounds for which they are at present most commonly employed; and marking the vowel letters, as in dictionaries, to denote the long vowel sounds. These devices, with the omission of silent letters and the occasional use of the letter e as a modifier, produce a phonetic print which so closely resembles the common that any person can read it at a glance who can now read, and a child or foreigner can learn to read it in a sixth of the time required to learn by the common method.

Nor is it necessary that the child or foreigner, who can attend school but a few months, should trouble about the ordinary spelling. He can make his writing perfectly well understood by using the phonetic spelling, and will soon learn of himself to read ordinary books and script, from their similarity to the phonetic.

There is no method but the Anglo-American which can be thus adapted to the wants of the illiterate, and of children who can go to school but for a limited period. The pure one-letter-for-a-sound phonetic alphabet with new characters, produces a print and script un-English in appearance, foreign-looking, and unreadable off-hand by the uninitiated, or by those who hav not made a study of that special alphabet; whereas, in the Anglo-American, every single letter and digraph is used to designate the sound it most commonly has in ordinary print, and hence the difference in appearance is reduced to a minimum. The Anglo-American alphabet, with a specimen of the print, can be had by sending a two-cent stamp to the Spelling Reform Rooms, 24 Clinton place, New York.

Now all persons who hav given any real thought to the subject are agreed that a simplification of English spelling is highly desirable. A conviction has been reached that a reform must come some day. Within the past ten years the philological associations of England and America, composed of men whose lives are given to the study of languages, hav pronounced decidedly in favor of a revision of the spelling of many classes of words; and they hav declared that the simplified spelling would aid rather than obstruct the study of etymologies. Like woman suffrage, spelling reform has passed the stage of ridicule. The general conclusion is that the present mode of spelling is unreasonable, absurd, and a disgrace to the English-speaking people, and that it certainly must some day be reformed; but in most persons this conviction is combined with the feeling that, since the change may be inconvenient to them personally, they would rather it was postponed to the next generation.

*Address by Eliza Burnz at the Women's Liberal Convention at Washington, D. C.

Up to this time the dictionary has been regarded as a literary Bible. Its dictum has been law, its decisions not to be disputed. The very mystery and unreasonableness of its teachings hav given it a kind of sacredness; yet, like the attainment of perfection in godliness, perfection in spelling has been unattainable. One way our absurd spelling works mischief is that many persons, after attending school for years, find it impossible to spell correctly; and, as they do not wish to expose their shortcomings in this respect, they giv up writing letters altogether; because, you see, it is only when a person writes that his friends discover his bad spelling. But the person who only reads and never expresses his own ideas in writing is but half educated and developed. I think this enervating, retarding influence upon mental development by the current orthography has not been sufficiently considered by our educators.

My friends, I hav taken the liberty of calling the attention of this audience to the subject of simplified spelling, which may seem to be a topic apart from the objects of this convention, because I think that, at this day, every public association which has a chance for existence must be more or less an educational society. Progress is the watchword of this era, and there can be no real, solid progress without universal education.

Christian Criticism Criticised.

[To The Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: My recent article in The Truth Seeker so excited the religious sensibilities of a good Christian sister in Cincinnati, that she sent to me the following letter of criticism. As this letter truly reflects the sentiment of modern Christianity, I ask you to giv it a place in your columns with my subjoined answer to the same.—Warren Smith.]

Warren Smith, Sir: In an Infidel paper published by Antichrist with Satan and his minions as assistants, is an article purporting to be written by you entitled "Christian or Heathen, Which?" I am candid in saying that I cannot conceive of the lost and wretched condition of a man who could write such an article as the one referred to. It contains such rank heresy and offensiv blasphemy as is well calculated to call down the wrath of an injured and offended God at the head of the writer. I can place you only as one whom God has given over to hardness of heart, and I fully believe that one who is thus alienated from God and religion, has no legal right to liv in this Christian country. In fact, I doubt if you hav the right to enjoy the blessings of life which you hav forfeited by insulting its great author. As a scoffer you are insufferable, and it seems that hell itself has licensed you to go farther in fulminating sickening blasphemy than anyone else, and for your heartless attacks on our blessed religion God will yet grind you to powder. Those who provoke him cannot escape his wrath. You branded our gospel as "infamous." Our gospel! the only hope of a serpent-beguiled, and sin-cursed, and dying world! That you were not consumed at once is due to the fact that Jesus died that burning brands like you might be plucked from hell's devouring flames.

I would not try to answer your horrid philippic. It cannot be properly answered except by copious draughts of God's wrath poured down on your impious head. Your apt reasoning proves that you hav received five talents from God's bounty, and for enlisting these talents in the service of the devil, you must suffer the awful retribution so vividly set forth in our sacred hymnal:

> Eternal plagues and heavy chains,
> Tormenting racks and fiery coals,
> And darts to inflict immortal pains
> Dipped in the blood of damned souls.
>
> And all the redeemed will say, Amen! Allelulia!

Mrs. Kate Marvin.

MY REPLY.

Mrs. Kate Marvin, Dear Madam: Your letter of criticism on a recent article of mine, published by "Mr. Antichrist, Satan & Co.," has been received and carefully read, and constitutes further evidence to prove that the Christian religion is most pernicious and demoralizing in its effects on the minds of its devotees. A woman capable of expressing the cruel and vindictiv sentiment contained in yours, is in every way qualified to accept the contaminating vagaries of church theology. Your charge against me of "blasphemy" is utterly groundless, as in the article referred to, I expressed no opinion of my own relativ to the character of God, but only referred to the ideas bearing on the subject, set forth in the Bible. That these biblical ideas of God are most blasphemous I admit, but then please do not forget that the so-called "inspired writers" are wholly responsible for them.

Believing you to be uninformed as to the real teachings and tendency of the Bible, I ask your permission to refer to a few passages for your own special enlightenment and edification. We will begin with the subject of God's personal appearance as described by the sacred psalmist, of Bathsheba notoriety.

"And out of his mouth proceeded fire, and out of his nostrils proceeded smoke, and he rode upon a cherub and did fly" (2 Sam. xxii, 11–15). What a grand and awe-inspiring spectacle! The supreme ruler of a million worlds astride of a celestial hippogriff and riding through the vast empyrean with lurid flames flashing out of his furnace-like mouth, and vast volumes of smoke rolling out of the labyrinthian depths of his capacious nostrils! Who could not admire the divine excellence and exquisit loveliness of such a bewildering exhibition of deific grace and beauty? But we are told by the same authority that this God of yours "dwells in darkness" and "has made darkness his secret place," and that "clouds and darkness are around about him," such being the case, the emanation of fire from his mouth may be for an economic purpose, as is the headlight on a locomotiv. Of course the man or woman who cannot believe this delectable description of our "heavenly father," "has no right to liv in this Christian country."

Then the Bible represents that your God swore in his wrath:

"Unto whom I swear in my wrath that they should not enter into my rest" (Ps. xcv, 11).

That he violated his oath:

"Say unto them as surely as I liv, saith the Lord, thou shalt not enter the land concerning which I swore to make you dwell therein" (Num. xiv, 26).

That he broke his promis and boasted of it:

"And you and your children shall wander in the wilderness for forty years, until your carcasses shall be wasted, and you shall know my breach of promis" (Ibid.).

That he made a mistake in creating man and was grieved about it:

"And the Lord saw that the imagination of the thoughts of man's heart was evil and only evil continually, and it repented God that he had made man and grieved him at heart. And he said, I will destroy man whom I hav created, both man, beast, and the creeping thing, for it repenteth me that I hav made them" (Gen. vi, 5). Now, Sister Kate, laying all jokes aside, don't you really think this was a small business for a God that knew everything from the beginning? In fact, don't you think it would hav been more creditable for God, and immeasurably better for man, if he had repented in the start and never undertaken the job, leaving man undisturbed amidst the shades of annihilation or non-entity?

That God is partial and contemptibly mean:

He hardened Pharaoh's heart so that he would not let the people go, and then sent on him and his subjects plagues of blood, and frogs, and lice, and flies, and boils, and murrain, and fear, darkness and death, to compel him to do the very thing he hardened his heart to prevent him from doing—hardened his heart, and then mercilessly scourged him for being hard-hearted. See Ex. ix.

I should think that the fellows that wrote such stuff as the above certainly must hav had an attack of the jimjams, and the deluded orthodox masses who accept such driveling rot about God ought to be most heartily ashamed of themselvs. But I would enlighten you still further on the teachings of the blessed book relativ to the character of God.

It represents him as accepting human sacrifice:

"And Jephtha vowed a vow unto the Lord and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into my hand, then shall it be that whatsoever cometh forth from the doors of my house to meet me, shall be the Lord's, and I will offer it up as a burnt offering. And Jephtha came from Mizpeh unto his house and behold his daughter came out to meet him—and she was his only child. . . . She returned to her father, who did to her according to the vow which he had vowed" (Judges xi, 30–39).

In 2 Sam. xxi, we are told that the Lord afflicted the people with a plague, and for a relief measure "the seven sons of Saul were hung up before the Lord in Gilgal;" after which "the Lord was entreated for the people." It seems the Lord had a special grudge against the "bloody house" of Saul, and, as usual, he punished the people for it until the seven sons of Saul were sacrificed to appease his wrath.

Your orthodox ministers rave and horrify their good Christian congregations about the altars of the heathen gods being stained with the blood of human sacrifice; but would it not be well for them to cleanse the altar of their Jehovah from the blood of innocent human victims, before fabricating these sensational stories about the heathen gods—who are mostly tutelary and harmless in their character?

It represents God as sending lying spirits out of heaven:

"I saw the Lord sitting on his throne and all the host of heaven standing by him. And the Lord said, Who will persuade Ahab that he go up to Ramoth Gilead and fall? And there came forth a spirit and stood before the Lord and said, I will persuade him. And the Lord said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go forth and be a lying spirit in the mouths of all his prophets. And he [the Lord] said, Thou shalt persuade him, go forth and do so" (1 Kings xxii, 19).

Here, madam, we hav a glimpse into your heaven, and find your Lord and his angels engaged in the meanest kind of a conspiracy against poor old Ahab. Treachery and falsehood were the agencies used by the Lord and his co-conspirators in securing the destruction of Ahab, and how you or any other Christian can read this revolting account without having your sense of truth and decency shocked, is, to me, a most perplexing mystery.

It represents God as deceiving his own prophets:

"And if a prophet be deceived when he has spoken a thing, I, the Lord God, hav deceived that prophet" (Ezek. xiv, 9).

"O Lord, thou hast deceived me" (Jer. xx, 7).

If you ever had any faith in the prophecies, how can you retain it in the face of evidence like this?

Now, madam, the above are only a few of the passages out of hundreds of a similar character I could quote, and I ask you to ponder them well and candidly ask yourself if they can possibly be true. You may search all of the mythologies, theologies, and religious traditions, ancient and modern, and you will never find within the broad range of human literature such low, crude, and shocking ideas of God and a future state as are contained in your Bible; and how you, or anyone else of sane mind, can believe in these appalling and sickening theories, constitutes a curious mental phenomenon of the age.

You are shocked at the fact that I attached the prefix "infamous" to your gospel. Your gospel plan rests solely on the "fall of man," or the doctrin that on account of Adam's sin all men contracted a fearful load of guilt, passed into a state of condemnation, and became subjects of God's eternal wrath. Now, in all candor, I ask you if it is not "infamous" to criminate, condemn, and expose to never-ending torments the whole human race, simply because Adam and Eve committed the world-wicked crime of eating an apple six thousand years ago. What had the present inhabitants of our world to do with the apple-eating episode in Eden, anyway? Why condemn them without a hearing, and a chance to defend themselvs? Another revolting phase of your gospel is that it is based upon the principle of punishing the innocent for the offenses of the guilty, and then insults morality by calling this outrage by the sacred name of justice—"divine justice." Madam, if that does not smack of the "infamous," I hav never comprehended the meaning of the English language. But the most appalling phase of your gospel is its hell and damnation feature—a fiendish provision of ever-enduring torment—of "arrows inflicting immortal pains dipped in the blood of damned souls," and all as a penalty for the sin of unbelief during this short life. Yes, your gospel—"the only hope of a serpent-beguiled, sin-cursed, and dying world"—provides that "strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leads to eternal life, and few there be that find it," while "wide is the gate and broad is the way that leads to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat." Nothing infamous about an arrangement of that kind when originated and engineered by a God of infinit wisdom and infinit power to perform anything he wished? Don't you think it is inappropriate to call this horrid and sickening scheme of wholesale damnation, the gospel, "glad tidings," when it rushes nine down the "broad way" and through the "wide gate" into hell, while it lifts only one by the lever of faith up through the strait gate into a seven-by-nine heaven? If you are a mother (I hope you are not), would you not do better than that for your children? Or has a belief in these appalling theories of a heaven for a few of the meanest ones, and a hell for the many of the best ones, so eliminated and driven out all kindness and love from your nature that, like the Rev. Jonathan Edwards, your enjoyment in heaven "will be to witness the torments of the damned in hell?" I thank you for your candid letter, as it convinces me of the urgent necessity of substituting secular teachings for the god-defaming, man-degrading, and woman-enslaving doctrins of church theology, and I now feel the necessity more than ever of wresting the youth of the land from the foul clutches of church superstitions.

You coolly inform me that those who "provoke" your God "cannot escape his wrath." When you made this threat did you not lose your scriptural reckoning, or do you know anything about your Bible anyway? As it declares: "The tabernacle of robbers prosper and they that provoke. You are secure unto whom the hand of the Lord giveth abundantly" (Job xii, 6). Comment is unnecessary. I hope you will accept this candid answer to your letter in the same spirit it is written, and honestly consider the lessons it contains. I would not cause or sanction the suffering of a single human being on earth—in this life or the life that may succeed this. And contrasting my desire for the happiness of all mankind with the cruel and vindictiv sentiment of orthodox Christians, I am truly glad I am not one of them. In fact, if the sentiment expressed in your letter is a fair index of Christian spirit and heaven is peopled with your kind, I don't desire ever to go there. Hoping the masses may soon be emancipated from the thralldom of ignorance and church theology, and embrace the principles of justice and truth for their life standard, and pledging my best effort to compass this much-deserved end, I am fraternally,

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 19, 1890.

WARREN SMITH.

The Sign of the Cross.

The story of the cross is as old as that of man.

From the night of the traditional ages, within which flourished the mysterious civilization of Ethiopia, and later that of Egypt, the substance or the shadow of its familiar form stands forth, either incorporated in unrecognizable designs of massiv architectural ruins or variously wrought in metals or in stone; and through the succeeding eras its almost universal presence may be clearly traced, wherever the race has lived and loved, warred and worshiped, and left aught of its tale behind.

That it symbolized religious ideas centuries before the Christian era, is seen in its frequent appearance in and near the temples and shrines, sacrificial altars and burial-places, of prehistoric peoples; and the forgotten race which first dwelt upon the continent of America molded upon it many of the mystic mound sepulchers which are all that now remain to prove their existence to the modern world.*

The date of its first use by the Romans as an instrument of capital punishment is unknown, but it seems to hav been an outgrowth of the simpler device of impaling the victim upon a stake (crux), the superior convenience of its form, together with the frightful agony of the death which its agency entailed, seeming to hav recommended it to the refined barbarism of later times.

In the time of Christ only slaves and the most abandoned malefactors died upon it, a tablet (album) always being hung above it, relating the name of the culprit and the history of the crime which he expiated.

Its use as the implement by means of which the gentle peasant of Nazareth suffered under Pontius Pilate naturally led to its adoption as the symbol of the central fact of the Christian faith, and through the centuries which hav followed under the merciless reign of that terrible superstition it has eloquently continued to typify the bloody significance of its Latin purpose.

Wherever the wickedest passions of men hav had fullest sway; wherever the blackest deeds in the calendar of sin hav darkened and withered human life, its grim shadow has fallen, a talisman to which the glaring torch of the incendiary and the red hand of the heartless slayer of innocents hav again and again been pointed, alike a sufficient cause and convenient pretext for unwritten saturnalia of debauchery and countless carnivals of crime.

Under star-gemmed skies of night its cruel arms, dyed with the lurid crimson of funeral fires upon which perished martyred braves, hav thousands upon thousands of times been raised by the fierce hands of men in the name of almighty God; and upon unnumbered sunlit fields of carnage where the blood of sublime heroism, spilled for contending creeds, has mingled in a common tide, its trenchant emblem, floating above bannered hosts, has lent holy sanction to savage slaughter.

No more ruthless or cruel warfare was ever waged among mankind than in that series of conflicts, covering two centuries, which were fought beneath the crescent and the cross, and the modern student of history is frozen with horror as he reads that black page which recites the details of atrocities perpetrated alike by Christian and Moslem, and in the name of two jealous and martial Gods.

Under the banner of the cross the remnant of the Waldenses, in the south of France, were driven into the mountains of the Cottian Alps; hundreds of their wives and babes slain; their homes destroyed. The Albigenses of Spain, a peace-loving people, who simply refused to embrace the bloody faith it symbolized, were put to the sword and exterminated. In its name were committed the crimes of a succession of assassin and libertin popes and a lecherous and brigandish priesthood. Under its benediction that chamber of incredible horrors, the Inquisition, was organized and maintained. For its cause the bloody holocaust of Bartholomew left its foul blot upon the race; and the masters of the revels during those high carnivals of license which culminated in Christian England in the court of that crowned monster Henry VIII (Defender of the Faith), were divinely selected standard-bearers of the holy cross.

Peter Waldo, a merchant of Lyons, in the twelfth century dared to cause the gospels to be translated, and contended that laymen had the right to read them to the people. His was the first voice raised for religious freedom and Freethought under the Catholic hierarchy.

Francis I., of France, a Christian monarch, ordered Waldo and his followers extirpated. They were burnt alive, their women ravished and slain, their children tortured to death—a noble work carried on later by Charles Emmanuel II., another of God's anointed, until but a handful of these brave spirits were left in the mountain fastnesses, whither they had flown.

The heretics of Spain, classified under the generic appellation of the Albigenses, were slaughtered in the name of the messiah and holy cross, until forty thousand had gone down in the awful sanguinary sea. Drunk with blood, the avengers were directed by their pious masters to kill Catholics and all, for "God will know his own."

Upon Bartholomew's awful day seventy thousand fell like beasts in the shambles, while cowled priests and black robed nuns, with crucifix aloft, sanctified the slaughter. "The king himself fired upon the fleeing crowd."

In the Crusades thousands of brave hearts fell beneath the Christian sword, and at Antioch the demoniacal deeds of the bearers of the cross paralyze the pen of the historian who essays to recount them. Yet in these wars the Christian world was astounded to find itself confronted by two civilizations superior to its own, the Greek and the Saracenic, and the sole good result of these terrible campaigns was the improvement which the disciples of the true faith derived from contact with two systems of heathen philosophy.

Among the most remarkable of the races which hav appeared upon the earth, hav reached a distinct and individual nationality, attained to commercial power and splendor, and hav passed away leaving few traces of their existence, the Moors may be said to take first rank. Only the few monumental ruins of their magnificent and original architecture, which are to be seen and studied in Spain, are left to commemorate them, and surely there is no such depth of pathos and sadness connected with the cemeteries of surviving peoples as is associated with these silent remains of a dead race.

The Alhambra, the royal home of the Moorish kings, may still be examined in detail. And no more lordly dwelling ever sheltered royal blood than this splendid work of barbaric hands.

That incomparable descriptiv writer, Washington Irving, devotes an entire work to the Alhambra, and his graphic pen and vivid imagination bring its gorgeous halls, noble domes, delicate pillars and minarets, and breathing bas-reliefs before us, and people it with the ghosts of its robed and turbaned dead with magical realism.

The Moors, though they were surrounded by Christian nations, were in many respects the most advanced people of their time. They possessed many valuable libraries in which were stored thousands of priceless manuscripts. They sent their emissaries to trade with far-distant lands, and were in some ways the most progressiv commercial power of their age. Their tapestries, carpets, and other fabrics were of unsurpassed durability and beauty, and many other of their manufactured wares found their way through trade channels to the remotest corners of the earth.

Ferdinand the Catholic conquered these people, and forced many of them to embrace the faith. Later Philip II., a church hero, bearing aloft the standard of the cross, invaded their country and began a system of such cruel persecution that the Moors were driven from their nativ land, their cities, their temples, their farms, and their homes desolated, and a small handful of their people driven into Africa, where their unconquerable spirit survives in the warlike states of Algiers and Tunis.

Hernando Cortez, entering Mexico with his fanatical followers under the banner of the cross, carried ruin and destruction in his cursed path to a happy and prosperous people. And their beautiful and blossoming land was mercilessly wrested from them, and thereafter became a legitimate prey to the fanatical hordes of the true church.

Joseph Smith, a fanatic, founded Mormonism. He was tarred and feathered by Baptists, yet preached an eloquent sermon to enthusiastic listeners on the succeeding day in his pitiable condition. He was shot, with his brother Hyram, by an allied mob of Methodists, Baptists, and Campbellites, who, with envenomed hatred, persecuted his sect until, braving the perils of an unknown wilderness, its devotees sought refuge beyond the reach of other followers of the cross.

"The blood of the martyr became the seed of the church," and Mormonism of to-day numbers more than one hundred thousand believers. When the mists of time hav wrapped themselvs about the memory of the prophet Smith, and the story of the exodus from Missouri has acquired all the venerable attractions of antiquity, remembered by man only in the cherished traditions of the Mormon church, its great founder will sit with Moses and Mohammed; and the history of the Mormon persecution and migration through the desert will take its place in the hearts of true worshipers of that faith, as the tale of the Jewish escape from heathen bondage has done throughout the remainder of the Christian world. May the day soon come when, instead of a forest of spires in our cities representing the bloody apocrypha of the crucifixion of God and the atonement, free schools of learning and temples of art and philosophy, libraries and instructiv museums, shall everywhere be found within reach of all the world.

It has ever been maintained by the church that there could be no morality without religion. Kings once said there could be no morality without kings. Yet the world has largely shaken off the trammels of autocratic tyranny, and the founders of the American republic, divorcing church and state, established a government of the people, by the people, for the people, which now, overshadowing every star in the constellation of nature, is a beacon-light in the firmament of truth, before which the priestly and the royal lie alike sink into the shades of eternal oblivion.

A. H. H.

* Among the Toltec remains in Central and South America the cross is frequently met with, and the Spanish conquerors were astonished to find it an object of religious veneration among the nativs of Central America and Mexico.

Jephtha and Gladstone.

In the North American Review the Hon. Mr. Gladstone, in replying to Colonel Ingersoll, says: "Although there is no argument as to Abraham or Jephtha expressed, we must assume that one is intended, and it seems to be the following: 'You are not entitled to reprove the Hindoo mother who casts her child under the wheels of the car of Juggernaut, for you approve of the conduct of Jephtha, who probably sacrificed his daughter in fulfillment of a vow (Judges xii, 31), that he would make a burnt offering of whatever, on his safe return, he should meet coming forth from the doors of his dwelling.'" Now the whole force of this rejoinder depends upon our supposed obligation, as believers, to approve the conduct of Jephtha. It is therefore a very serious question whether we are so obliged. But this question the Reply does not even condescend either to argue or even to state."

The honorable gentleman continues: "I am aware of no reason why any believer in Christianity should not be free to canvass, regret, condemn, the act of Jephtha."

Now, it is evident that no believer in Christianity has any right to reject or condemn that which God inspired and approved—which he did, as I intend to prove by the record, although the honorable gentleman says, "So far as the narration which details it is concerned, there is not a word of sanction given to it." But right here I wish the reader to note the casuistry of the gentleman. "So far as the narration which details it." Suppose there were no sanction to that notion in the narrativ given in Judges xi, 29–35, but there was in other portions of the Bible. Then the gentleman would be correct in his allegation yet false in the main gist of the controversy. He is expert in this species of ignoratio elenchi. But there is sanction to the notion that God approved the vow and the sacrifice, both in the detailed account of it in (Judges x, 29) and in other portions of the Bible.

Now for the proof. Judges xi, 29: "Then the spirit of the Lord came upon Jephtha, . . . and he passed over unto the children of Ammon. And Jephtha vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering. So Jephtha passed over to the children of Ammon to fight against them, and the Lord delivered them into his hands. And Jephtha came to Mizpeh unto his house, and behold his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances."

Now how could the honorable gentleman assert that there is nothing in the detailed account to sanction the idea that God approved the sacrifice when he made the vow when the spirit of God was upon him? It appears, too, that he anticipated that it would be either his daughter or his wife, for we are told (verse 34) she was his only child; besides her he had neither son nor daughter. And from his grief on the occasion at meeting her he must hav anticipated meeting his wife and hav been greatly disappointed. And we are almost driven to believe that he purposed to relieve himself of her, else why dedicate so specifically some one who should meet him from out the doors of his house? There is but one other hypothesis to explain this horrible conduct in this man of God, and that is the abominable superstition that prevailed amongst all the nations in that day, that the more dear and valuable the victim offered was to the devotee, the more availing it would be with the Lord. Hence we read in 2 Kings iii, 27, that the king of Moab was hard pressed by Edom, and that "He took his eldest son that should hav reigned in his stead and offered him for a burnt offering upon the wall." Still the Lord sanctioned and inspired it, as shown above.

But God had already legislated on that subject before Jephtha made that vow. The Lord had said, Num. xxx, 2, "If a man vow a vow unto the Lord, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond, he shall not break his word. He shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth. No devoted thing that a man shall devote unto the Lord of all that he hath of man and of beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed—every devoted thing is most holy to the Lord. None devoted which shall be devoted of men shall be redeemed, but shall surely be put to death" (Lev. xxvii, 28, 29).

Here, then, we see how the Lord had already hedged Jephtha in by his law. And yet his spirit came upon him and under that inspiration he made the vow. No wonder he says to his daughter, "I hav opened my mouth unto the Lord and I cannot go back." Compare that language with God's law (Num. xxx, 11). And she replies, "Do unto me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth, forasmuch as the Lord hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon [has performed his part of the covenant literally]. And she returned to her father, who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed" (Judges xi, 39).

Now, how any man with moderate sense can read this plain narrativ without prejudice and not believe that God sanctioned and enjoined the sacrifice of Jephtha's daughter, is more than I understand. And when a man of world-wide fame for wisdom and logical acumen attempts to cover it up and envelop it in the mist of sophistry, I am constrained to conclude that he feels the overwhelming necessity of rescuing his God from a character that is so damaging to him in the eyes and hearts of the enlightened men and women of the nineteenth century. Surely much learning has made him mad, but he can never with it make sane people fools. Many of the apologists of this God of Jephtha effect to believe that he condemned her or she devoted herself to a life of celibacy. But the record says plainly he sent her away for two months, and she went with her companions and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains. "And at the end of two months she returned to her father, who did with her according to the vow which he had vowed." No, gentlemen, you cannot clear your God of authorizing, nay, making obligatory by his own special enactment, human sacrifice. He did it, or else his own word is false. Stand by it and defend it, if you can, but do not skulk and dodge and deny it, for in so doing you become Infidels.

I cannot refrain from noticing another obliquity of the honorable gentleman—for I think that is the proper name for it, when one reprehends in another what he is guilty of himself—although by so doing I may prolong this article beyond its proper length. The distinguished statesman charges Colonel Ingersoll with looseness and inaccuracy of statement, a galloping, unreliable method of quotation, and seeks to make the impression that his declarations ought not to be received on that account, or at least should hav but little weight. He instances the colonel's statement that "the apostles conceived the idea of having all things common." This he calls an interpolation—"no such statement in the narrativ." Now, whilst this is true, yet it is but a slight inaccuracy of reference. We find this distinguished statesman indorsing another quotation from the Bible made by the colonel, which is absolutely not where he, Gladstone, refers it, nor denounced for the fault that he says it is. The quotation made by the colonel is, "They who believe and are baptized shall be saved, and they who believe not shall be damned; and these shall go away into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels." The honorable gentleman says the latter section of that quotation is out of another gospel and another connection, and is really written not of those who do not believe, but of those who refuse to perform offices of charity to a neighbor. He gave no reference to the chapter, but evidently had allusion to Matt. xxv, 46, which says nothing about everlasting fire. Indeed, the entire quotation, as quoted by the colonel and indorsed—though in piecemeal—by the honorable gentleman, according to his quibbling criticism is an interpolation. There is no such passage literally, yet it does giv the teaching of the Bible. I suppose I must be as polite as I can under the circumstances, and say, "It would be wrong to call this intentional misrepresentation; but can it be called less than somewhat reckless negligence?" Would it be too much to call it "a habitual and dangerous inaccuracy?" He is again guilty of what he charges against the colonel in imputing to Mr. Ingersoll that he taught that Paul named Jephtha and Rahab and Gideon and Barak as worthies on account of their crimes, whilst the truth is, the colonel only charges that God enrolled these among his friends, because they believed in him, although they were murderers, whores, whoremasters, and guilty of every evil.

Madisonville, Ky., Feb. 7, 1890.

COLFLY A. SMITH.

Why Am I an Agnostic?

A SHORT REVIEW OF AN ANSWER REV. DR M. C. LOCKWOOD, OF CINCINNATI PREACHED AGAINST THE ABOVE THEME OF COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

As no reply to Rev. Mr. Lockwood's pretended answer upon Hon. Robert G. Ingersoll's beautiful lecture has been published as yet, I feel called upon to try, herewith, at filling the want. In such important cases it is probably better late than never.

The said article, as inserted in the December issue of the North American Review and our TRUTH SEEKER, has created a profound sensation, causing the holy Christian institutions to tremble at their very foundations. Their reverend pastors looked at each other in utter amazement. "Oh, never mind! I shall go for him next Sunday and will shut his blasphemous mouth forever," were the consoling words of the shining star of local preacherdom.

On said Sunday evening, after slandering and abusing the colonel to his heart's content, Rev. M. C. Lockwood's great answer ran essentially as follows: " . . . We walk by faith and not by light. . . . Faith is something higher than a mere science, . . . it is the conception of the consciousness apart from the media of the senses. . . . If Columbus had been an Agnostic he would never hav discovered America. . . ."

Verily, verily, Mr. Rev. Dr. Lockwood, whoever teaches such a doctrin is led indeed by a blind faith and not by light, or else he is a full and brazen hypocrit. First, it is ill-covered nonsense to claim that faith, without light, led to the discovery of this continent. Columbus had enough of a well-lighted reason to undertake his trip anxious to find a shorter way to the East Indies, instead of dragging around the Cape of Good Hope. The teachings and demonstrations of the great Nicholas Copernicus convinced him, beyond any reasonable doubt, that the earth is round, and not flat, as the holy, God-inspired Bible teaches. His faith rested upon science, on a pure, unadulterated conception of the "media of the senses," and this brought him to the Bahama islands, still believing, probably, that he reached the longed-for Asiatic peninsula.

Now, regarding your own faith, reverend sir, it consists in believing Jehovah, the Christian God, and his holy Bible. And who is, pray, the Jehovah of the said code? Who is the Christian God—father, son, and the Holy Ghost? "He is the almighty ruler of the universe, all-knowing, most holy and just. He is pure and most sublime," answer the Christian teachers. He is, as I am to understand, the only creator of everything, and nothing has been made but by him. He has, therefore, made the man, the angel and the devil, the heaven and the hell. God knew, as he "knows everything, past, present, and future," that the infernal rascal, the devil, would steal away some seventy-five per cent of Jehovah's own images as soon as the hungry woman would bite at one of the forbidden apples. God knew this ages before, consequently it was his "holy" will that Eve should commit the "awful" sin and plunge a full majority of her sons and daughters into the blazing pit. Or could God know anything without or against his "holy will?"

He knew, also, that Cain would kill Abel; that Noah would get beastly drunk; that Moses would slay the Egyptians; that his chosen David would commit murder and adultery; that Solomon would dance with a thousand prostitutes; that every one of his special and choice friends and ministers would hav to render a high tribute to the roaring infernum.

Not only did God know of the crimes to be committed, but he specially commanded his people to follow the devil. Listen: He informed Abraham to enter a bond of, I might call it, provisional or supplementary matrimony with Hagar, his servant, in order to secure his posterity's doubtful link; and when, after all, Sarah found herself in a fair way of becoming a mother, God ordered his great patriarch to chase away, into the parching desert, the poor Hagar and her ill-begotten Ishmael. This same God advised the daughters of Lot to render their father drunk and hav him assume the part of their husbands, to prevent a total extinction of this chosen family. He inspired Rebecca to cheat the blind Isaac of his blessings for her pet Jacob; and God blessed him, indeed, for from his family came the "savior and redeemer of the sinful world." These are only a few instances of the abominable crimes said to hav been perpetrated by the manifest will of God.

Now, please tell me candidly, what is your opinion of such a God? Is not the belief in and the worship of such a monster the very lowest possible blasphemy—the slimiest calumny raised against the true and sublime power, the real and pure God, if there is any?

The promised and craved-for redeemer came in the shape of God's only son, his Christ—nay, his holy self, for "son and father are one," teaches that blessed writ. A transfiguration, therefore, must hav taken place. It did, and how was it accomplished? The Bible says, By an overshadowing of the Virgin Mary.

Nothing filthier could hav been conceived by the meanest of the black devils themselvs. Imagin a God descending from his lofty heaven to commit a rape upon a chaste woman, upon a virgin, to beget a son, a holy redeemer, without first procuring a license at the proper court and marrying her. If this was a holy act at that time, it surely must be a holy commemoration nowadays, just as well; and prostitution would be the very essence of the holy worship of the holy Christian religion. Oh, shame! unredeemable shame!

"But this was not the full consummation of the holy redemption act," answer the long-faced reverend sirs; "God had to die upon the cross for the world's sins, after having become one of the world's actual inhabitants himself when born." So he had to die by being innocently nailed to the cross? Had to be murdered? But murder is a crime; and crime is the devil's own and exclusiv power and property, his only revenue and means of existence. Consequently God had to step down into the hell and implore and kiss the devil to kindly condescend and render his satanic assistance in committing the said crime, the said murder upon God's only son, in order to redeem the world—from whom? From the very devil himself.

Must he not be a consummate lunatic who preaches and teaches such theories? Is he not a hypocritic devil himself who, with a full consideration of facts, defends such a God?

Finally, what was to be the promised, glorious result of this grand act of redemption? The devil had to be slain, his head crushed; he had to be disabled forever. In plain words, the people had to enjoy entire freedom from every temptation and sin; a holy innocence and sweet peace had to henceforth reign supreme, just as it was before the Eden's larceny was committed. And what do we observe at a moment's honest reflection? It shows that the world is even more wicked, the devil's eyes more cunning and his claws more efficient, than ever before.

This proves, conclusivly, that all the promises of the Christian God were "good for nothing;" that all were either pure and simple deceptions, or premeditated lies.

This is why we reject the God of the Bible as being unworthy any belief and trust. I am loath to accept as granted what he teaches of his eternal heaven or damnation. We hav not the slightest proof of any personal future life save the promises of the self-convicted liars of the "holy" scripture. Upon liars I shall not rest my belief and faith; my conscience is not so enslaved.

These are the simple reasons why I am, also, an Agnostic. I do not know what will become of me after I am gone; neither do I care as long as my life is led in a pure and honest light, according to the supreme laws of the true and honest God, as laid down so beautifully in both nature and conscious reason.

N. T. TANSKI, M.D.

Cincinnati, O.

Senator Blair Dumfounded.

A delegation of women went to the national capitol, February 27th, to interview members of Congress with a view of having two females appointed, as well as two male delegates, to represent industrial and educational interests at the World's Fair, in 1892. Senator Blair, being a woman's-rights man, received the delegation with suavity, and began to talk about his educational bill. "I hope," said he, "that you are in sympathy with this measure?"

As no other woman seemed ready to answer the question, Miss Susan H. Wixon, after a pause, responded:

"Well, I do not appreciate the religious part of it."

Senator Blair then said:

"Think of the thousands and thousands of children in this country growing up without knowing whether there is a God or a devil!"

Another pause ensued, when Susan replied:

"Who does know, Senator? Do you?"

Here again was a pause. Such a question had probably never before been put to him by a woman, and perhaps not by a man. What could he say? He appeared to be dumfounded. But fortunately for him at this moment a messenger entered announcing that Vice-President Morton was ready to receive the delegation.

At the Woman's Liberal convention, in Washington, Miss Wixon twice read an original poem, each stanza of which ended with "When woman wakes." It is to be hoped that Senator Blair will soon realize the fact that there are many women besides Susan H. Wixon who are already awake out of the sleep of superstition.

A WASHINGTONIAN.

Religion in the Schools.

A boy of eight, who attends school in the suburbs of Montreal, came home late the other day. "Why, Bobby," asked his mother, "what makes you late?" "Oh," replied Bobby, "the teacher asked us what we must do to save our souls, and I said, 'Walk on our heels.' She didn't like the answer, and made me stay in after school."

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY'S Catalog of Freethought, Reform, and Scientific Books will be mailed free.

Communications.

Those Slate-Writing Experiments.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: I must first acknowledge your courtesy in forwarding me proof-sheets of your article, "In Search of a Spirit," and then apologize for not having answered it sooner, as per my promis.

But La Grippe prevented my doing so at that moment, and extra business cares consequent to this sickness kept me so busy that I hav not, till now, been able to spare time.

There are three ways of looking at our slate-writing experiment, for we are dealing with a fact, as the writing did take place. The Christian claims, without proof, that it is produced by his devil; the Materialist, that it is chicanery on the part of the medium and hallucination on the part of the sitter; the Spiritualist, that it is done by excarnated beings, and calls it spirit power.

We will not discuss the first; the second, your theory, will fill our bill.

Now, I will presuppose that neither you nor I claim omniscience, consequently we will discard the word "impossible" and view this in the light of "probability."

That we met with several disappointments in our attempts to obtain sittings with various media, has, I submit, nothing to do with the points at issue, and while I hav no objection to offer to the "facts," as you presented them on your side of the case, yet I claim the right to object to an inference being given that amount of importance which properly belongs only to a fact.

Now it is a fact that both of us were honest in our investigation. A fact, that as far as I was concerned I gave you every facility and allowed you to make your own conditions, and it only remains for me to prove, if I can, that the medium, Slade, was equally honest.

My recollection of the sitting is vivid, and I will say now, just as I told you before, that in all my experience in this line, I fail to remember one sitting that impressed me more favorably than this. It may be I was hallucinated. It may be that you were, for, at the time, you expressed yourself dumfounded at the results we obtained.

It may be that Slade is a trickster and we were fooled. So let us examin this.

We brought our own slates. They were placed on a table that had been previously examined by us and pronounced to be an ordinary table, devoid of machinery or of any appliance that could be utilized in the production of raps or slate-writing.

We agree that Slade cleaned the slates before our eyes, and in the ordinary way; that he broke off a small piece of pencil, placed it between them, and, after joining the slates together, held them under the table. But "under" should be explained. You sat next him and I at the other side of the table, and although the farther one from him, at no time did I not see at least one-quarter of the slate and his entire thumb.

Now, in the light of "probability," let me ask you: How could Slade hav written this message?

Try to hold, with one hand, one slate, not two, in any position you may elect, and see if you can so manipulate as to write a message covering the entire surface.

I will not deny for one moment that Hermann, et al, could, with machinery, produce writing under these conditions, but, if Slade had any appliances, they were concealed under his nail.

But, under which nail? The thumb was always in sight, and the other four fingers were under the slates and were used to hold them in place. So, to hav produced this writing, Slade, having his left hand all the time on the surface of the table and joined with ours, must hav opened these slates, while they were under the table, written the message, and done all with one hand.

You admit he was talking with us on various subjects during the entire sitting. This only complicates your case. For now we hav a man holding with one hand two slates under a table; consequently in the dark. We find him opening these slates, writing a coherent message on one of them, and the upper one, too, keeping the alignment of the letters, then closing them so quietly as to make no noise, and all the while talking on some subject other than the one written upon, and doing this in the presence of two investigators, one of whom was not six inches from him. And he did this without discovery.

Given all the appliances he may select, there is no conjurer in the world who could duplicate this. At least, not one I hav ever seen, from Anderson to Hermann.

My dear Macdonald, you hav unwittingly given Slade the greatest puff he has ever received. I believe you did it honestly, else I should not be writing this letter.

Neither you nor I believe that theory. We are full-grown men and had our wits about us.

But this message may hav been written before we arrived at Slade's rooms. Let us examin this.

You bought the slates. I was so very particular about it that, when you exhibited them to me in your sanctum, prior to visiting Slade, I positivly refused even to take them in my hand. You rewrapped them in the paper, carried them to Slade's, and they never were, and I can say this honestly and conscientiously, they never were out of your possession, or in Slade's possession or in mine, for one moment.

You yourself laid them on the table and at Slade's request you took two and held them under the table. Writing not being produced, you were told to place them before you, on top of the table, and press your hands on them. We then heard a scratching noise and it sounded as if it were between the slates. According to your theory, this noise was produced either by yourself or by Slade, as you two alone were in contact with the slates. You, with both your hands pressed on them; Slade simply touching the rim of the upper one with his fore-finger.

The slates were opened and we found a message containing fifty-two words.

The chirography was not excellent, that I will admit, but, if produced by either you or Slade, under these conditions, it would be excusable even if it were worse.

Now, my dear fellow, in the light of probability, where does Slade come in? Where were his appliances? What part did the pencil under his nail play in producing this writing?

Let us now examin into that little scene which finished the sitting.

Two of your own slates were taken from the table by Slade. They were perfectly new, as you had just bought them. They had never left your possession. You had placed them on the table. They had always remained in sight.

With a small sponge Slade wiped off the dust, and joining them together held them under the table. We agreed in after conversation on this point, that not more than one minute elapsed before he withdrew them, and as his entire thumb and at least one-fourth of the upper slate were always in sight, neither you nor I can conscientiously say that he wrote on either of them, for, had the upper one been moved in the slightest degree we would hav noticed it, as both of us were anxiously and carefully watching. This, if you remember, was our pre-arranged agreement. We may surmise what we please, but we are dealing now with facts, not with inferences.

Simply because we do not understand a certain something, we hav no right to infer that it is other than it seems, other than as it would appear to the majority of mankind. Good, sufficient, and if necessary, scientific reasons should be given for a condemnation. In short, we hav no right as men, as Liberals, to impute that to others which we would consider as an insult if directed toward ourselvs.

These slates were then tied with the same cord that you used to tie them in your office.

Now, up to this point there was, to the best of our knowledge and belief, no writing on them. And you can only surmise that Slade wrote on them either when he was holding them under the table, practically in full view, or when cleaning them with a sponge. Either hypothesis would place him far, far above any known conjurer.

After being tied they were handed to you, and you placed them on your chair and sat on them.

At this point and until the finish you were the only one in the room in physical contact with these slates. In talking with me afterward you agreed with me that a scratching noise was heard on, near, or about the slates. When this noise ceased, you withdrew the slates, opened them, and inside found the following message, an answer to a question you had written on a slate, which slate had never left your possession, at least not while your question was on it.

The message or answer was as follows:

> Never doubt this power. We do and can return. Try us.
> (Signed) S. P. A.

Now, again, in the light of "probability," where does Slade come in? These are facts. Fight them with facts, if you can.

There is still another point. When you were experimenting with the two slates and holding them under the table, Slade took one of your slates, and without first placing it under the table, put it on your head. He then asked the spirits if they would try to write on the slates you were holding, and in answer came back the following written on the slate that was on your head, and, strange to say, written on the under side, the side nearest your head:

> We will try to do so.

The slate was in full view. It was one of your own. If it had writing placed on it in advance Slade most certainly did not put it there. He had no opportunity even if so minded.

I hold it to be "improbable" that he could take a slate from the table before our eyes and write a message such as this, the slate always being in our view, without our discovering the fraud. So, the only time he could hav done it, if he did it, was when it was on your head.

This brings in the "nail machinery" theory again, and I candidly ask you if you consider it, under the circumstances, a solution to the question? If you do, I do not, and I should like to hear further from you on the subject.

But you lay great stress on the twitching of Slade's foot—which, by the way, I did not notice—the similar chirography exhibited in the various messages, and the ready reading by Slade of undecipherable parts.

If I had time to enter into this, I could giv philosophical and scientific reasons for all these. The reasons are not original with me, but are the results of experiments made by scientific investigators. I hav thoroughly tested and proved them to my own satisfaction.

Now, let us pursue this a trifle further. Slade sat facing you with his left side toward the table. You must remember that at one stage of the sitting he placed a slate under the table and it was passed to you and then to me. You also remember remarking that whoever or whatever held that slate possessed almost as much strength as yourself, and that you found it very difficult to retain the slate in your grasp.

I know this, that when the slate was passed to me under the table I took hold of it firmly, and with great difficulty and only after violent exertion managed to retain it. And both of us know full well that only a part of the force that either of us exerted would hav pulled Slade from his chair, had he been on the opposit side of the slate.

Slade said it was his Indian guide (Owasso, if I remember correctly). But by your theory it was done either by Slade's left foot which he had quietly worked out of his slipper or by some machinery, as we both agreed that it was not his right hand, which we could plainly see from his thumb upward, nor his left hand, which was on the top of the table grasped in ours.

Of the two, and the only two theories you present, the machinery appeals more strongly to me, for the "toe" theory was exploded in Henry Ward Beecher's time.

So now we hav Slade with machinery or appliances of some kind under his finger-nails and under his toe-nails.

And another curious point which you omitted.

You may remember that, wherever the writing was done, under the table, on the table, or on your head, whether with one or two slates, the point of the pencil always rested on the last mark made, thus showing that whoever did the writing, as he finished the last scratch, and having no further use for the pencil, quietly dropped it.

But mayhap there may be another reason.

It may be, and is not altogether "improbable," that the power writing through Slade did this habitually in order to disprove your theory that the writing was done by Slade.

But let us look at it from our side of life. The mechanical ingenuity exercised in the getting up of anything which would always work to such a degree of nicety, most certainly is far ahead of anything I hav ever heard of, and if Slade be the master mechanic he is wasting his time, as he could make a better living elsewhere. And how small it must hav been to hav escaped our joint observation.

Now, candidly, should not this little fact destroy, to a certain degree, the "pencil under the nail" theory?

No, Brother Macdonald, you hav not as yet given us the solution. I enjoyed your article very much, but I saw at a glance that you were off—away off.

Ridicule, at times, is very effectiv. I often use it while arguing with a religionist. It is the most potent weapon when dealing with a fraud, but it stands powerless in the presence of a "fact."

We will meet again on this question, and I will make it my business to see that you hav all your conditions, in fact, everything just as you choose.

You hav not convinced me of the "probability" of Slade being loaded with machinery or carrying writing implements under his finger-nails. Hav you convinced yourself? I think not, and moreover I know this, that if you will pursue your investigations of Spiritualism in the same spirit in which we started out, you will eventually land where I am, and with me will sing:

> Out of darkness into sunlight,
> All untrammeled, glad and free,
> I hav passed from mystic twilight
> Into glorious certainty.
> I hav cast earth's doubts behind me
> As the swaddling-clothes of youth,
> And I walk with naught to bind me
> In an atmosphere of truth.

McArthur.

A man's real faith is never contained in his creed, nor is his creed an article of his faith. The last is never adopted. This it is that permits him to smile even, and to liv even as brave as he does. And yet he clings anxiously to his creed, as to a straw, thinking that that does him good service because his sheet anchor does not drag.—Thoreau.

A Nugget.

Two hundred years ago the belief was common that persons could make a bargain with or enter into a league with the devil. Thousands hav been tried, convicted, and executed on account of such belief. Picture to your minds a crowded court-room, and the one on trial a wrinkled old woman, and men and women standing high in society swearing upon their solemn oaths that they had seen her flying through the air on a bridled broomstick, or that they had known her to be changed into a horse, dog, wolf, or cat, or perhaps all of them.

Then think of a jury of "competent men, good and true," seriously deliberating on such testimony. Then after the verdict was rendered, a grave judge upon the bench pronouncing the sentence of death upon her. Then after she had been subjected to the most cruel tortures, and every indignity had been heaped upon her, put to death in the most unnatural way that Christian ingenuity could devise.

It may be said that rational men and women could not be made to believe that such things were possible. But men and women are made to believe at the present day that dead men could jump out of their graves, and that children could be in a fiery furnace and not get scorched, and that the walls of a city could be blown down with rams' horns. When the mind becomes thoroughly impressed with the idea that there is a great being somewhere "beyond the bounds of time and space," who can do things in violation of natural law, there is no end to the wonderful and miraculous.

It is equally hard to understand at the present time how rational men and women could be guilty of bloody practices which would bring the blush of shame to the cheek of a barbarian.

But it must be remembered that those people believed every word and line of the Bible to be inspired, and therein it was written, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to liv." And it was believed that those proved to be witches had absolutely bargained, sold, and transferred their souls to the devil.

Hence the indignity, the torture, and the cruel death were not regarded as being inflicted upon a human being, but rather as a measure to rebuke and put out of the way a child of the devil, and checkmate and curtail the works of the "prince of darkness," who "wanders up and down through the earth seeking whom he may devour."

Every traveler knows that the city of Constantinople is infested with dogs. Although they are a great nuisance nobody kills them. "If Allah was not pleased with the dogs, he would kill them," so the people believe.

A man was sitting in a hotel in Ramnavid, and heard the frightful screams of a woman. He rushed out and found a Jew girl about eighteen years of age, stripped to the hips and tied to a post, and a burly fellow laying a heavy whip upon her naked back.

"Hold, hold," said the man, "what has that woman done?"

"She is a Jewess," he replied, and coolly proceeded with the flogging.

In his mind that explanation was sufficient to satisfy any rational man. He knew that God hated Jews and would consign them to a place of punishment, and he believed that if he tortured and punished them, God would look with favor upon the cruelty.

Here is the trouble with the God idea. No matter how savage a man may be in his disposition, he will clothe his God with the same attribute. What he hates God will hate, what he likes his God will like, and he will always be trying to make men subservient to the will of his God.

Now, if the Bible is a sure moral guide and all that is required to keep our feet in the path of rectitude, why did it not teach these people better? Why does not it teach the people that Liberals hav the same rights to speak their minds that Christians hav to speak theirs? Why does not it tell the Christians of Sweden that it is a great outrage to keep Lennstrand in prison? How long will it take for the Christian dugongs to learn that there is no wickedness in the expression of an honest thought?

Christians ever hav stood and ever will stand in the way of morality and human progress. Do they not virtually teach that a multiplicity of wives and concubines is in keeping with morality and virtue? Do they not teach that a devout Christian, however ignorant, is more pleasing to God and of more importance in the world than the most enlightened scientist? Do they not teach that some of the worst tyrants and most bloodthirsty wretches who ever disgraced the footstool were heaven's special pets? They teach that a man may violate every law of decency and make his life a scene of debauchery and excesses, and then shift the whole burden of crimes and wickedness upon the shoulders of an innocent party, and stand before the world as pure as though his garments had never been touched with a stain, and be ushered into the courts of heaven where none but the undefiled can enter.

They virtually say that spooks, ghosts, witches, evil spirits, and devils were not only possible, but that they could be made to appear and disappear at pleasure by certain persons whom God had commissioned to perform these hocus-pocus tricks.

It will not do to say that Christians no longer teach these superstitious absurdities, nor that they belong to a former and ignorant age. For do they not claim that the Bible is the holy word of God, and does it not contain all of these absurdities and impossibilities, and more and greater than I hav alluded to.

By indorsing the Bible as the word of God, the whole catalog of obscenity and absurdity and immorality is indorsed, and some of it would shame a savage. It must be plain to every Liberal worker that the most important thing to be done is to disabuse the Christian mind in regard to the sanctity of the Bible.

The God idea must also be wholly obliterated from the mind before that grand onward movement can be inaugurated, the object of which shall be to promote the happiness of the race.

Let us pound away at the old superstition until sensible men become ashamed of it, and weak-kneed Liberals no longer feel "shocked" when earnest reformers attempt to drag these superstitions out into the light of day.

Christians say, "Let us alone, what we hav failed to do we will yet accomplish." Will they ever start the race on the highway of progress by instilling into the minds of the young a firm belief in a brutal, revengeful, angry, vacillating and repenting God? Will they do it by teaching that a book written thousands of years ago by a people whose ignorance was a disgrace to surrounding nations even in that early day is to be taken as a guide under all circumstances? No, no, these pretended teachers are only blind guides; their influences must be rendered of no effect. However sincere they may be, the fact remains that in every age and country when and where the people hav been the most subjected to their rule, there they hav been the most superstitious, ignorant, and degraded. JOHN PECK.

Naples, N. Y.

Religion in Our Schools.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

For twenty-five years I hav been fighting against the teaching of religion in our schools, and though often derisivly asked by my Christian neighbors, "What hav you gained by it?" I am not yet ready to giv up the fight. Though churches are being built all around me where revivals with nightly howlings for weeks and months disturb our slumbers, making night hideous up to the midnight hour, and where the meek and saintly Christians frenziedly pray to their almighty God to "either kill or convert" us Infidels, I yet, in spite of all these drawbacks, feel we are gaining ground. The local press now willingly opens its pages for the discussion of the question, which it dared not do only a few years ago. The inclosed clippings from our county papers will show the nature of my fight, and also the position of officials on the question. "Up! Freethinkers everywhere, and at them!" In the schools is sown the seed that in the future bears fruit. The awe and veneration that are infused in the tender mind of the child who with folded hands listens to the not-to-be-questioned untruths of the "holy scriptures" often through life cling to the man and woman, making them the easy prey of the vampires who from churches and colleges swarm over our land, threatening to blot out our religious liberties so displeasing to their sovereign God. The politician who in our Congress and our legislatures with bowed head listens to the man of God, the chaplain; the witness who in the court room kisses the "holy Bible" or reverently points his finger to heaven, had their first awe-inspiring lesson in the school-room, learned their always ready submission to the church from a teacher in our public schools. The church is making itself ready for battle. It is marshaling its minions to a crafty attempt to strangle Freethought. With the rule of the majority it intends to enslave the nation. In the name of God it intends to undo the work of the men of the Revolution. With the ballot it intends to reinstate the Christian God as the sovereign of the republic. It intends to set up the Christian religion—its creeds, its savior, its Bible, its church, its clergy—as the teachers and guardians of the American people. It intends to reinstate the Puritan Sabbath, and mold the thoughts of coming generations in conformity with the teachings of the Bible savior and his church, and thus place the cross above the stars and stripes. RUDOLPH HELLSTROM.

To the Editor of the Journal: At beginning of school term I commenced remonstrance with district board, teacher, county and state superintendent, and what follows is the result of the nearly three months' struggle for the rights of non-believers.

BOND, DOUGLAS COUNTY, KAN., Nov. 25, 1889.

State Superintendent of Public Schools, Sir: Please inform me:

1. Did Mr. Darnold, director of school district No. 22, Douglas county, Kan, this fall write to you asking advice in regard to the reading of the Bible by teacher in opening of school and receive no answer?

2. Does not the habitual regular reading of the so-called "holy scriptures" giv a Christian coloring to the schools, and are unbelievers forced by law to send their children to these Christian schools and to pay taxes for the teaching of a creed that their reason rejects?

3. Does not the ringing of the bell and calling scholars to order virtually open the school, even if done five minutes before 9 o'clock?

4. Is not this taxing of unbelievers for the support of "Christian schools" and then compelling them by law to send their children to those schools, a usurpation unwarranted by the constitutions of both state and nation?

5. Does not the total exclusion of religion from the schools place all creeds and beliefs on a basis of equality?

Respectfully yours, RUDOLPH HELLSTROM.

To this I received the following answer:

DEAR SIR: Your letter of November 27th received, and in reply will say that I hav no recollection whatever of receiving such a letter as the one to which you refer. The only letter I received on the subject, called for an opinion which has been published in the official opinions in the school law of 1889, and I herewith inclose a copy of said opinion. Very respectfully,

GEO. W. WINANS,
State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The opinion was a copy of the school law, marked on page 103, which was as follows:

35. Question: What is your opinion in regard to reading of the Bible in public schools? Answer: In the absence of any law upon the subject, were I a teacher I should regard as my duty to be governed by the advice and directions of the school district board; and if I were a county superintendent I should, in every case, refer this question for settlement to the board of the school district, in which it might become a matter of controversy.

From our broad-minded, genial Christian county superintendent, with whom I hav had three different interviews, I had advice in fragments as follows: "You must try to get rid of your narrow, old-country views. Remember that you now liv in the United States. A free Christian country with a Christian people, a Christian president, Christian governors, Christian schools—a country where the majority rules—and you ought to submit to the will of the majority." What! the majority to decide my religious convictions and direct the religious training of my children? "Your religious conviction, sir, must submit to the laws." The government has just put its big foot on the "religious convictions" of the Mormon. Liberty we must hav, but not license. I am no champion for the Mormons, and do not intend to break any civil law, but I most earnestly protest that the government does not put its big foot on my "non-religious" convictions as our Christian friends propose to do in the Blair bill. The county superintendent graciously permits me to keep my children in the school-yard while our teacher gratifies her sacred duty of entertaining the children with the legends and miracles of the "holy scripture." The state makes no provision for the children of unbelievers, I am told, but as to him who fails to pay his share of the funds for supporting the schools of his Christian neighbors, his property would soon go under the sheriff's hammer. In conclusion, I must say that my Christian friend, the superintendent, may be right; that I do not properly appreciate my fortunate escape from my former bondage in the despotic Old World, and am unable to understand the glorious freedom of these United States, where the majority rules.

RUDOLPH HELLSTROM.

Bond, Douglas county, December, 1889.

EDITOR GAZETTE: In a recent communication published in the Journal by me on the question, "Shall the Bible be Read in Our Schools?" I did not bring out all the matters involved in the trouble in district No. 22, so I desire now to supplement my former remarks with the following facts:

When I started this fight for the rights of unbelievers I did not consult or seek coöperation from other "Liberals," as I considered the religious rights of individuals based on immutable justice, not on the will of the majority, and the rights of one as sacred as the rights of multitudes. But other unbelievers, hearing that I was tauntingly called in a board meeting the only "rebel," hastily drew a petition which at once obtained sixteen signatures, and the day before county election it was handed to the director. This so aroused the ire of the pretended followers of him who is credited with the saying, "If one smites you on one cheek, turn him the other, too," that on the suggestion of the majority of the board a counter petition was started election day, and on December 6th, at a meeting of the board, it was presented to the directors, having seventy-five signatures. Whereupon the majority of the board passed a resolution that the "sacred scriptures should continue to be read in school." An order for money for the teacher was also demanded at this meeting, which the clerk refused to draw before having had some advice. The majority of the board at once took out a "writ of mandamus," but before serving said writ the county attorney sent for the clerk and made the following proposition for compromise: My duty to the county, as its attorney, is to settle such matters as this peaceably, not to create litigation. If you will either resign or draw the order I will write to the director and teacher, advising them to stop the reading of the Bible and thereby remove the cause for strife and discontent in your district, but if they cannot do that—if they must read the Bible—the teacher must every morning, ten minutes before 9 o'clock, announce to scholars that she is going to read the Bible five minutes—attendance being altogether voluntary—no compulsion. Then after reading pause five minutes so none could possibly be annoyed thereby. Then at 9 o'clock ring the bell for school. This being satisfactory to the clerk, he promised to draw an order for money for the teacher, which was accordingly done. But the teacher totally disregards the agreement and advice of the county attorney and goes on as before, first ringing the bell and taking up school with the reading of the "holy scriptures." I then called on the county attorney and he read to me his letter to the director agreeing with the above statements. Thus the stubbornness of a teacher, the perversity of a district board, and confusing advice of superintendents will farther prolong strife, ill feeling, and discontent in our district.

Yours for justice, RUDOLPH HELLSTROM.

Bond, Douglas Co., Kan., Dec. 20, 1889.

I WAS once reproved by a minister who was driving a poor beast to some meeting-house horsesheds among the hills of New Hampshire, because I was bending my steps to a mountain-top on the Sabbath instead of a church, when I would hav gone farther than he to hear a true word spoken on that or any day. He declared that I was "breaking the Lord's fourth Commandment," and proceeded to enumerate, in sepulchral tones, the disasters which had befallen him whenever he had done any ordinary work on the Sabbath. He really thought a god was on the watch to trip up those men who followed any secular work on this day, and did not see that it was the evil conscience of the workers that did it.—Thoreau.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - MARCH 22, 1890.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

About the Cartoon Book.

"MONTREAL, March 15, 1890.

"DEAR MR. MACDONALD: I am delighted to hear that the first-page cartoons of THE TRUTH SEEKER are to assume book form—a manifest destiny that every reader of the paper has foreseen. I predict for it the greatest success that Freethought literature has yet achieved. Put me down for five copies to begin with.

"This book is what will be effectiv with the masses, who need concise, demonstrativ teaching; but the masses are poor and a two-dollar book is beyond their reach. When this edition has had its run and has awakened enthusiasm, then, if you are willing—as has always been your devoted practice—to sacrifice gain for service, let the Freethinkers of the country raise a fund to print the book in cheap form so that it may be sold at the bare cost, or less, and be circulated by the hundreds of thousands. The children will inspect it on Sunday instead of Fox's 'Book of Martyrs'—my sole resource as a youth for pictorial entertainment—and the result will be the inculcation of a horror of all religion and every form of political tyranny, and not merely a narrow hatred of Catholicism. With hearty congratulations I am,

"Yours sincerely, ROBT. C. ADAMS."

We shall be quite willing to do anything that may increase the circulation of this book, for it will be one of the keenest weapons ever directed against superstition and theological tyranny and greed. We hav put the price as low as possible on the first edition, and we must sell many hundreds of copies to get the money back. And we desire to receive orders from now on. The price $2.

The Pictures.

The announcement of the new picture-book last week crowded out the acknowledgment of the new subscribers and donations for the continuance of the pictures in THE TRUTH SEEKER. We hav now to receipt for seventy-seven new friends on the list, making four hundred and fifty-three additions to the list on this account. The Literature Fund has received from S. B. Latham $1.50, and the following donations are to help pay for the pictures:

John Gibson	$1 00	Chas. Henshaw	1 75
T. H. Rowland	25	R. Brown	1 00
H. A. Beamer	50	R. A. Webb	1 35
J. R. Selbe	50	M. Bleha	1 00
W. L. Gray	25	Jas. S. Foss	50
Warren B. Orchard	25	Jas. M. Cosad	1 00
Jas. Henry	1 00	Thos. Oakley	25
J. M. Rounds	1 00	Pierre Foristell	35
Wm. Fray	50	J. L. Tompkins	1 00
Andrew Jacobson	1 00	Mrs. Duncan McMillan	1 00
T. R. Burrows	30	W. F. Thayer	25

The total of these donations amounts to $209.30. It will be seen from these figures that we hav good reason to be thankful to our friends for their efforts, and we assure them that they are fully appreciated. We are anxious to supply our readers with the strongest arguments against superstition, and in such shape as best pleases them. The pictures answer these requirements, and considering the willingness of those who like them to pay for them we feel sure that the new book will be a success.

That Search for a Spirit.

Mr. McArthur, who was associated with the writer of an article in the current TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL entitled, "In Search of a Spirit," has in this issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER some criticisms upon the conclusions drawn by the relator of the story from the result of their experiments. Mr. McArthur writes with the utmost good feeling, and it is evident that there are at least two men in the world who can agree to disagree and preserve their respect and friendship for each other.

The author of the article under criticism refuses peremptorily to be drawn into a controversy on Spiritualism. The affirmations implied in the word Spiritualism are propositions about which he knows nothing. The burden of proof is on those who affirm them. He does not deny them; he but considers them not proved. Of the alleged manifestations of spirits that writer also knows little. But concerning those things which happened when he and Mr. McArthur were endeavoring to find out something about both spirits and spirit manifestations he does know something, because the experiences were tangible realities, human and comprehensible. Confining himself, then, to the human part of the subject, and to the things which he saw and knew, he trusts that without offense he may correct some erroneous statements and unwarranted inferences of his friend McArthur.

In the first place, memory in regard to the details of anything which transpired twelve months ago is a treacherous dependence. Differences of opinion as to the order of events at the séances arose when comparing notes within a few days of the occurrence. It would be thoroughly unscientific to deduce theories from inductions so imperfectly substantiated, and the facts used now regarding the séances must be those noted at the time. There were then only too great opportunities for error. Bearing these things in mind, let us consider Mr. McArthur's criticism.

One of the first slips of memory is the statement that a message of fifty-two words was found upon one of the slates taken to the medium by the writer of "In Search of a Spirit." When it is known that this was Slade's slate, as can be attested by the slates now in possession of the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, Mr. McArthur's circumstantial account of the marvelous transaction falls into innocuous desuetude. That slate was in Slade's possession from the time he purchased it to the time it was taken away from his house. The long messages were all upon Slade's slates, and it is the opinion of one of the experimenters that he had ample time and opportunity to align his letters. The messages of a few words obtained upon the experimenters' slates were not remarkable for uniformity of adjustment. They were, in fact, scrawled.

Another lapse of memory may be mentioned. Mr. McArthur says:

"When this noise ceased, you withdrew the slates, opened them, and inside found the following message, an answer to a question you had written on a slate, which slate had never left your possession, at least not while your question was on it.

"The message or answer was as follows:

"'Never doubt this power. We do and can return. Try us.
"'(Signed) S. P. A.'"

There are two errors here. First, this message was not in answer to a question. Second, the slate upon which appeared an answer to a question was out of the writer's possession. If Mr. McArthur will turn to his TRUTH SEEKER of March 2, 1889, he will find an account of the séance signed "McArthur." The record reads:

"Mr. Macdonald then said that he would like to write to a friend who was dead. He took a slate and wrote a private message. This slate was then placed under the table by the medium. In a short time writing was heard.

"The question was, 'Will S. P. A. write here?' and the answer, 'S. P. A. will.'"

The message, "Never doubt this power," etc., was not an answer to a question, but was a general remark, or exhortation, as it were. The way it was obtained was this: The skeptical experimenter handed Slade two of his slates, and Slade held them under the table. Mr. Slade was jerking around, legs and arms going, and consequently jerking the slates around. This he explained by saying the power was very strong. Then he pulled the slates out from under the table and laid them upon it. Then he asked the writer for the twine with which the package had been tied. He did not separate the slates while on the table to let the experimenters see that they were clean. He tied them together; then took another slate, held it under the table, saying he would ask the spirits what they wanted done with the tied slates. He obtained a line, "He will sit on them." Then the junior experimenter did sit on them, and when opened, the message, "Never doubt," etc., was found.

As to where Slade "came in," it is the opinion of the junior experimenter that his opportunity presented itself when he held them under the table. But this cannot be proved without Slade's cooperation, and this will probably be difficult to obtain. Hermann or Kellar would also probably object to letting the audience into their secrets. As to how Slade did the writing in this and other instances, the objecting experimenter offers no new opinion. In Mr. John Truesdell's "Bottom Facts" several methods are indicated as being used by Mr. Slade. The experimenter can only say that he did not see any of his paraphernalia, and does not know that he had any. But when a thing can be done humanly he fails to see any good reason why it should be attributed to superhuman agencies. Hume's argument against miracles applies with equal pertinence to the material manifestations of Spiritualism.

Another point upon which recollections differ is concerning the amount of slate remaining in sight when Slade held them under the table. Mr. McArthur's friend sat next to the medium, and his recollection is that all he could see of the slates was Slade's wrist, with the cords therein working as though the fingers were moving. And his recollection is that all of the slates, without exception, were out of sight when written on, or had been previously out of sight before the writing was found on them. If the event had been as Mr. McArthur states it, and so much of the slate was constantly exposed, why could not all of it be exposed? Why must a slate go under a table (where in this case the light was fully as strong as on top), even though it afterward be withdrawn and placed on top, where the medium alleges that the writing sometimes occurs? The conditions on top of the table are the same as under it, and it must inconvenience the spirits to keep dodging about at the whim of their instrument. But the fact remains, though it may or may not be suspicious, that all slates are handled by the medium before spirits write upon them.

The recollections of the two experimenters differ in other particulars, unimportant perhaps, but enforcing the conclusion that errors may be made inadvertently. The person whom Mr. McArthur is endeavoring to set right does not recollect that the pencil used always rested upon the last word written. He recollects that it sometimes did and that the medium was prompt in calling attention to the fact. He seemed to regard it as a triumph of his skill. Just what is proved by this, however, at least one of of the experimenters is confessedly too obtuse to discern. The theory is that spirits are people who hav just stepped out, and returning maks their presence known by writing upon slates. Why, then, should not they and those who hav not stepped out hav the same habits in regard to leaving pencils around after using them? The person spoken of also fails to remember that he said he was dumfounded at Slade's productions. The experiments with Slade were not considered by him to really count in the proposed investigation. This was explained, and the reasons given were that the junior experimenter possessed grave doubts as to Slade's genuinness, owing to information concerning him previously acquired. It is the recollection of Mr. McArthur's friend that he said at a very early stage of the proceedings that if the mediums were given their conditions writing would undoubtedly be obtained, as producing it was their business, trade, or profession, whether they did it by sleight-of-hand or by the aid of spirits. No one doubts that writing is actually produced; the question undertaken to be solved was, how? In the article, "In Search of a Spirit," the writer acknowledged himself puzzled, and also did so privately to Mr. McArthur. But dumfounded by Slade's performances, never! Slade's success was no more surprising than the success of any artisan in a trade which he has learned. And if one could sit lowly and look under Slade's table, the opinion is still held by at least one person that much of the mystery would disappear.

It is also submitted, respectfully, that the "several disappointments" met with in the attempts to obtain sittings with "various media," hav something to do with the point at issue. As previously remarked, the question is not, Does writing occur upon slates? but is, How is it done? There are two theories about it, and the investigations under consideration were to be undertaken to find out which theory is true. One medium was visited; he was allowed his conditions; writing was produced. When, however, it was proposed that the conditions be made such that the medium could not hold slates away out of sight and otherwise manipulate them, the media refused the sittings as one man. The excuses were various, but the decisions were unanimous. It may be wrong to regard this as significant, but the fact cannot but exert an influence when one is thinking upon the subject.

The searcher for light may be off—away off—as his friend pleasantly observes, but he is just so stupid as not to see it. Like the paternal relativ of Little Breeches,

> "He don't go much on religion,
> He never ain't had no show;
> But he's got a middlin' tight grip, sir,
> On the handful o' things he knows."

And one of that handful is that when he obtained writing on slates there was opportunity for human intervention, and that when it was proposed to shut out such opportunity he got no writing. He also knows that while one medium can puzzle him, that same medium also endeavored to deceive him by the use of a prehensil set of toes, which destroyed his confidence in the gentleman in a marked degree.

But no one is more willing to learn than that same searcher; and he rejoices greatly that Mr. McArthur will yet find a medium who will let him hav everything just as he chooses. If any results are obtained the readers of this paper shall know of them. Truth is what we are all seeking for. It may be that spirits exist; if so, it is worth a little trouble to convince one's self of that fact.

Up in Canada.

Of the oath bill which the Canadian Secular Union will introduce in the Dominion Parliament the Montreal Daily Witness says:

"It is very improbable that it will become law as it stands, though we are told it will hav some prominent supporters in the House of Commons. The number of people who are willing to see oaths abolished in Canada is not, we believe, very great, and if this bill became law the utility of oaths would be completely wiped out. Under a law which enabled the substitution of an affirmation for an oath at the simple desire of the testifier few would take the oath. Those who took it would either be those whose affirmation would be equally good or willful perjurers, while those on whom an oath would be a check would most naturally want to escape taking it. With large classes of people, especially in this province, the taking of an oath makes the duty of truth-telling a far more solemn and binding thing than it is otherwise. In the lower courts the truth of this is illustrated almost every day in the attempts of witnesses to avoid, as they imagin, the responsibility of the oath, by refraining from kissing the Bible, by 'kissing their thumbs' instead of the Bible, and by other like tricks. The judge and clerks in many of the courts watch the witnesses very closely and insist upon their carrying out each particular of the ceremony, and they do this knowing by long experience the value of the oath in extracting the truth from such people. If this bill becomes law these people would be able to escape the oath, as the judge would be precluded from requiring them to take it, even when convinced of the necessity of their doing so. It may, on the other hand, fairly be said that those who feel absolved from a solemn asseveration taken in God's presence by a subterfuge, such as a denial of the validity of the particular Bible used or the trick of not kissing it, are sunk in the lowest depths of fetichist superstition, and it is quite probable that this formality encourages the general disregard for truth, creating as it does an apparent distinction between the times when one is and when he is not religiously bound to be truthful."

The condition of mind of the man who wrote that is deplorable. Does he think that legislation of any sort or ceremonies of any kind can make those rascals who evade "kissing de book" honest? Supposing they do let their fine distinction in rascality salve their consciences, do they not evolve some other when cornered?

These comments, however, if true, furnish ample evidence, if any more were needed, that religion and honesty are very far apart. It is admitted that these rascals are religious even to superstition, and also that, notwithstanding, they are rascals. But must honest people be lowered to their level in legislation? Must the president of the Secular Union be put on the same plane as a Catholic peasant who can neither read nor write; whose idea of life is to eat, beget children, lie on the floor of his cabin with his face in the sun, and occasionally go to church?

Again, the affirmation allows no perjurer to escape, and if a few of the fetichists who take it as a trick to escape telling the truth are sent to prison, they and their fellows will hav learned a lesson in morality which centuries of religion hav not been able to teach them. With affirmation, the courts would rely on human probabilities of a man's telling the truth, and not upon a superstitious reverence for a ceremony. In this way, the truth would much oftener be arrived at. "Oaths" are silly performances any way you look at them.

But regarding the possibility of this bill becoming a law in Ontario at no distant period there are two opinions. Captain Adams writes to Secular Thought:

"It will gratify your readers to know, as it givs me pleasure to state, that our Oaths bill is making encouraging progress at Ottawa. Sir Donald A. Smith, M.P., has spoken about it to the honorable minister of justice, Sir John Thompson, who expresses the opinion that he is 'favorable to its becoming law,' and Sir Donald has kindly consented to introduce and support the bill, either at the present or next session of Parliament, according as the minister of justice recommends, he having expressed a doubt as to the possibility of putting it through this session, owing to the lateness of the date and the amount of work before Parliament. It is certainly encouraging to hav the principle of the bill approved in the highest quarter, and it givs assurance that Canada is to step to the front place among the nations in guaranteeing the rights of mental freedom.

"The member of the provincial parliament at Quebec who has had the bill placed in his hands, has raised objections to it on the score of its being legislation of an unusual character, which there could be no hope of carrying. But his suggestions of amendment are not satisfactory, and we hold out for the full liberty, even though it be delayed, rather than accept a compromise."

Going further west in the territory of our British-American neighbor, we find that the legislature of the province of Manitoba has set the Parliament of the Dominion and all other legislatures a splendid example on another Secular point. The Winnipeg Tribune of March 4th relates:

"In the local legislature yesterday, while the bill respecting assessment and collection of taxes was under consideration in committee of the whole, Attorney-General Martin rose from his place in the House and moved to strike out the portion of the clause exempting churches from taxation, or as he put it, all exemptions except such as would be taking money out of one pocket and putting it into another. The attorney-general said with regard to churches that the only fair way was to tax them. Exempting them was practically compelling the people to support a particular church, which was antagonistic to the generally received principles of government in Canada. The principle here was to hav entire separation of church and state, and by exempting them from taxation such a principle could not be carried out. Mr. Martin referred to the fact that some people were content to worship in a church costing $2,000, while another congregation worshiped in a church costing $100,000. The result of exemption was that the citizen who worshiped in the costly church received far greater benefit proportionately. An argument for exemption was that churches are works of art. On the same ground any man who builds a private residence should be exempt. The attorney-general said the true principle in matters of religion was for each man to be a judge for himself. It had been argued that taxing a church was an act of desecration, but this had been practically abandoned. In closing, the attorney-general cited instances where Christians, especially the Baptists, had come out against church exemptions. He suggested that on these matters the province should start early in its history. A division in committee showed a vote of sixteen for and eight against the amendment, so that church exemption is a thing of the past.

"At the evening sitting of the house the question of church exemption was reconsidered on motion of Mr. A. F. Martin. He said the taxation of the church was one of the godless ideas that ought to be stamped out of the country. Mr. Thompson, a stanch Presbyterian, thought the step was in the retrograde direction. Mr. Wood thought the same. Hon. Mr. Smart, the Baptist member of the cabinet, and the attorney-general spoke in refutation of the arguments brought forward. The house divided with the result that twenty-three members against seven declared again that churches should not be exempted from taxation."

This is emphatically a step forward, and puts Manitoba far ahead of the rest of Canada in Secular affairs. This taxation issue is bound to make the churches everywhere tremble ere long, for taxation is pressing so heavily upon the people that relief will be sought in all directions, and the religious organizations which hav piled up so much unproductiv wealth cannot escape an interview with the tax assessor. There are more people probably ready to vote to tax churches than to grant any other one of the Nine Demands.

The Church in Two Republics.

The Catholic Review reports a little scene which occurred in the French Chamber recently showing that this country is not any longer the standard by which church and state separation is measured, but has become rather an example and argument for church and state union. Bishop Freppel was addressing the Chamber when the scene occurred:

Mgr. Freppel (on the tribune speaking): "It is fair to say that in all republics except this——"

A member of the Left: "They hav no concordat!"

Mgr. Freppel: "They recognize that the clergy hav the right to instruct the faithful of their obligation never to vote for men hostil to the rights of the church and the interests of religion. I do not speak of the United States, for every one knows that there is not a country where the clergy interfere more in elections."

M. Philipon: "But the clergy of the United States are not paid by the government."

M. Leydet: "Union of church and state does not exist there."

Mgr. Freppel: "You tell me that church and state are separate in the United States. Permit me to tell you that this separation is not as complete as you think, and does not exist in the sense in which you understand it. Each year the president of the United States ordains a day of fasting and prayer for the country." [Cries from the Left.]

A member of the Right: "That's perfectly true!"

M. Jumel: "We know how they observe that fast!"

A member of the Left: "We are not obliged to fast, we hav to pay."

Mgr. Freppel: "In the United States, before each sitting of Congress, the chaplain offers prayer, which I would be happy to do for you with your permission" (cheers and laughter from the Right). "And you call this separation of the civil from the religious order?"

M. Pelletan: "Yes; because the United States has no Budget of Worship."

Mgr. Freppel: "I know very well that the clergy receive no indemnity from the United States for a very simple reason: in that country they hav not, as in ours, despoiled the church of its property" (cries from the Left and applause from the Right).

In another portion of his speech the bishop enunciated the same principles that the pope has put into his latest encyclical. "In the exercise of his ministry," says the bishop, "while the priest is bound to avoid personalities, he has the right to remind the faithful of their obligation to vote, and of their duty never to vote for men hostil to the rights of the church and the interests of religion."

In reporting these words, the Review uses the opportunity to add an opinion which may be taken as the opinion of the Catholic hierarchy in America. "No matter how pleasant it may be," says the Review, "to hav the clergy keep their fingers out of the political pies, it will not always be possible for them to do it, because the border-land between interference and non interference is pretty extensiv.' And the clergy are doing all they can to keep this border-land extensiv by pronouncing politics and the exercise of the franchise to be matters of morals, over which the clergy claim the right of supervision and the right therefore to instruct the laity.

We hope those who think that church and state are separate in this country will ponder long over the scene in the French Chamber; and that those who imagin there is no danger from the Catholic church will weigh the words of Bishop Freppel and the Catholic Review.

Editorial Notes.

RELIGION does not play a very important part in the courts of New York nowadays. A juror in the Flack conspiracy case, on his examination, was asked:

"Hav you any religion?"
"No, sir. We liv to-day and die to-morrow."
"Then you hav no fear of the future?"
"Not at all."
He was sent to the box as a juror.

A few years ago the man would hav been discharged from the jury panel as incompetent to serve.

PITTSBURGH Truth requests its contemporaries to write its obituary, as the February number is the last that will be issued. Mr. Pierce says: "While our circulation is growing steadily, it is not growing fast enough to check the large assessments on our very small bank account necessary to meet the expenses of the paper. Therefore, on account of insufficient support, we hav decided to withdraw the paper from the field. The appeal in our December number for $250 did not bring us quite $45. This feeble response shows, we think, that a majority of our readers do not care much for the paper. The unconcernedness of Liberals in general, and of our subscribers in particular, about the financial success of this journal, drives us from the field, but we leave very reluctantly." Truth was a bright little paper and we are sincerely sorry that it could not be supported. Freethought has none too many advocates, and the withdrawal of even one will be seriously felt.

Letters from Friends.

LEBANON, PA., March 7, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: By all means continue Heston's pictures.
TRUTH SEEKER.

WACO, TEX., March 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav not had time to contribute to your Symposium. I think it is splendid. J. D. SHAW.

GREELEY, COL., March 4, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $4, for which send THE TRUTH SEEKER and the ANNUAL, the balance to go for the pictures.
JAMES HENRY.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., March 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5. I would like the ANNUAL, and hope you will continue the pictures. I think they speak for themselvs every time. A. B. SMITH.

MIDDLEFIELD, N. Y., March 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $9 for two new sub scribers and renewal, with book, "Try-Square." All vote for the pictures. ANGUS GRIFFIN.

COVINGTON, GA., March 5, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Here is $10 for new subscribers. Send the "Try-Square." I will send some more names soon. Hurrah for Heston forever. W. A. I. ANDERSON.

ASPEN, COL., March 5, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $3.50—$3 for my vote for the continuation of the cartoons, and fifty cents for last year's ANNUAL and this year's ANNUAL. JOHN ENGSTROM.

HONEOYE, N. Y., March 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $5.50 for renewal and for ANNUALS for 1889 and 1890. I am in favor of the pictures, but shall not stop the paper if the pictures are not continued.
FRANK WATEROUS.

ATHENS, TENN., March 4, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I would favor the continuance of Mr. Heston's pictures by all means. I know of no genius more competent of casting light on superstition than Mr. Heston.
JOHN T. MCMILLAN.

PARIS, TEX., March 4, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: A sample copy, March 1st, of THE TRUTH SEEKER, has just reached me. Those pictures! Long may they wave! I inclose $3.25 for the ANNUAL and subscription.
R. PETERSON.

VIRGINIUS, COL., March 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $3, for which send THE TRUTH SEEKER and the "Try-Square" to the inclosed address. This is my new subscriber. Long liv THE TRUTH SEEKER, and Heston to illustrate it. C. A. DOLLARHID.

LEAVENWORTH, KY., March 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please send for the inclosed $1 your invaluable guide to light, THE TRUTH SEEKER, through which alone the human can be elevated to that standard where the eye will become competent to read man's soul. F. LEBER, SR.

ALBION, MICH., March 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find subscription for my friend and myself. We both vote for continuing the pictures on both pages, and two in the middle. Long liv John Peck, Heston, and the cartoons. Yours truly. W. BIDWELL.

CARBONDALE, KAN., March 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Long may THE TRUTH SEEKER wave—yes, and Heston and all the writers that help to make it immense. I am using each paper to do what good I can in these parts. I will try and send you a list of Liberal names soon. Yours for human improvement without superstition,
JOHN G. COOPER.

NORWICH, N. Y., March 5, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $3, for which send me THE TRUTH SEEKER and "Try-Square," as advertised by you. I vote for the pictures, or Bible illustrations, by Heston, and would advise as means come to hand to improve the style or rather the cost of the illustrations.
Yours respectfully, J. R. NEWTON.

YOCUMVILLE, CAL., Feb. 7, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5, for which please renew my subscription and place the balance to fund for the distribution of books and Liberal literature. I am sorry that I cannot send another subscriber toward THE TRUTH SEEKER, in order to keep the pictures a-going, and am willing to pay $3.50 or $4 a year rather than see the pictures suspended.
Respectfully yours, H. DANNENBRINK.

DUCK LAKE, MICH., March 5, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I should like to send you some new subscribers, but as I am just recovering from a fit of sickness, I am unable to. My vote on the cartoon question is, Continue the cartoons if possible. They speak plainer than words. Of course our Christian friends would like to hav them stopped, as they would like to hav THE TRUTH SEEKER stopped. Yours for truth, L. COURTRIGHT.

COHOES, N. Y., March 5, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $2 in payment of the ANNUAL, and credit the balance on subscription. When your bound volume of THE TRUTH SEEKER for the year 1889 is ready, please send me one by express C. O. D. You see that I am a double subscriber by taking the bound volume at the end of the year, which I would not be if you discontinued the pictures. I am glad to see our friends rallying to the support of them. D. MCELWIN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5.75 for renewal of my subscription, one new subscriber, and books named. Two votes for Heston. I look forward with great pleasure to the time when he gets into Revelation, where St. John had snakes in his boots and imagined he saw that wonderful beast. In fact, every chapter could be illustrated with excellent effect. I enjoy the pictures on the last page. They are so true to the times and the age in which the Bible was written.
H. M. BURFIELD, M.D.

MORVEN, N. C., March 4, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I send you $15 for books. If you will send along some copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER, I will try to get you a few subscribers. I like THE TRUTH SEEKER very much, and will never do without it again just as long as we both liv and I can get the money to pay for it. I feel just as though a friend had come when it gets here every Monday. Long may it liv and keep the cartoons in. I want to see them until Mr. Heston has finished the Revelation. I show the cartoons to Christian friends, and when the next paper comes they want to see the pictures. H. R. TEAL.

OMAHA, March 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I feel glad and proud to hav my head level enough to be one of the grand host of thinkers; not worshipers of myths, but of solid truth, which is our rock. Heston must be double-sighted to what those pulpit-pounders are. I tell you I feel glad to read of so many of one mind concerning the pictures. I am on the side of the majority. Yea or no, I like the paper. I loved the founder. My mind beholds his face. I once met him in Omaha, with a hand-shake. Peck is a brick, a granit rock. Send me this year's ANNUAL, and use the balance for the pictures.
W. L. GRAY.

ORANGEVILLE, PA., March 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $5, for which send as per inclosed list. I hav at last secured one subscriber, just in time to be entitled to the "Try-Square." I hav the promis of some more, but they cannot get the money till later in the spring; but I shall keep on trying and think I shall succeed. I find Liberal ideas are growing, and there is not so much fear of Mother Grundy as there was. Religious revivals are scarce here, although they still try to keep up the usual big meetings. There is no more "getting stiff" or shouting and otherwise acting the fool or hypocrit to attract a crowd. The show has played out, and we hear no more of the old hell-fire. Even the church-members say they do not believe in fire, but only in remorse—and to judge by the actions of many of them there is very little of that. Hoping you will succeed in getting enough to keep up the pictures, and even add more of them, I am,
Yours for the truth, M. S. HAYHURST.

ELK GROVE, March 6, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: After a "long pull and a strong pull," W. R. Grimshaw and myself succeeded in sending eight subscribers nearly two months ago. I hav been writing letters and anxiously waiting for answers, hoping to get a few more names. One man tells me he likes the paper but dare not take it in the house. He says: "If I did my wife would giv me hell. I tell you, she is a terror." Another man writes me: "I think about as you do upon this subject, but 'a house divided against itself cannot stand,' and Mrs. —— threatens to burn the papers you sent me if I bring them into the house, and I guess I had better return them." The papers came back without being opened. Another man tells me: "You know how I stand, and I hav been that way all my life, but my wife is a church-member and it wouldn't do." At the same time he gave his head a significant shake, and the woebegone grin that covered his face convinced me that he was telling the truth. The preachers and the women come very near running things here. J. H. ATKINS.

DES MOINES, IA., Dec. 10, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: Since the middle of August the Secular Union of this city has been favored with three noted speakers, viz., Remsburg, Jamieson, and Charles Watts. Mr. Remsburg was first of the trio, and led out with his famous lecture, "False Claims," which he presented in a pleasing manner. He speaks freely and easily. His language is stripped of all unnecessary verbiage and yet withal his work is thorough. The compilation of his lecture indicates close attention to detail, and a complete mastery of the same enables him to present it in a clear and concise manner and with good result. He certainly possesses a happy talent for collecting statistics and historical facts, and also for weaving them together in such manner as to make their presentation telling in effect, and the lecture, in its entirety, unanswerable. Mr. Remsburg is admirably suited to the work he essays.

W. F. Jamieson favored us with two lectures in October. Subjects: "Liberalism—Its Strength and Weakness," and "The Conflict between Science and Religion." The attendance upon both occasions was good and the audience for the most part were delighted. Mr. Jamieson is a good man for missionary work, or, in fact, for any kind of work in the line of Freethought. He is a gentleman and far enough advanced to extend charity to those who are sincere in any belief whatever. He is a free, easy, earnest, logical speaker, with some dramatic ability and with a style peculiar to himself, which withal is a pleasing one and consists in variety, both of attitude and expression. In a word, he is one of the few who occupy every second of time to such purpose that the audience is not conscious of the fleeting moments. Every Liberal organization and Liberals in every town where there are no organizations should secure the services of this man for a course of lectures.

Now comes the last—shall I say the best? What should I say of Charles Watts? Well, really, his genius is the combined excellence—I was about to say—of all others; but Ingersoll's ghost arises here and we stick the peg in next to the top hole, though as a logician he excels all whom it has been my good fortune to hear. Mr. Watts is an unmistakable Englishman, with large, full eyes, a stout frame, and a florid complexion. He possesses a strong voice, also great dramatic ability, which enables him to use his voice in such manner as to produce the finest effects. His greatest power, however, does not lie in eloquence and dramatic display, but in convincing logic; which, fortunately, is not of that incomprehensible type which characterizes very many profound thinkers; for he handles the most abstract problems in an easy, fluent manner, making his points with the fewest words possible, yet with so much clearness and force as to cause the audience to burst into laughter—not on account of an excitation of mirth, but by reason of the simplicity, clearness, and conclusivness of the argument. He is one of the most convincing speakers that I hav had the opportunity of hearing. Indeed, there is but little hope for the Christian who can listen to him through an entire course of lectures without having his faith shaken. Should you secure his services to lecture or debate, he will inspire you with the feeling that he is master of the situation. He is able, earnest, eloquent, pleasing, and impressiv. His every word possesses weight, and his arguments are fraught with convincing logic, which, in the end, must do good. The subjects of his lectures were: "Christianity and Secularism—Which is Preferable?" "Unbelief—What It Has Done for Mankind," "Christian Evidences Tested," and "Is the Bible Divinely Inspired?" all of which were given before large audiences.
N. ZEDIKER,
President Des Moines Secular Union.

EAU CLAIRE, WIS, Feb. 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Edward L Starck thinks the term "moral sense" a pendant to the belief in the soul as separable from the body. He admits, however, "it is true that the moral sense may be understood differently and the unhappy term retained after it has been placed on a rational basis." In my opinion the American Secular Union hav done well to regard the moral sense as the basis of moral instruction. Without a musical sense musical rules would be very useless, and mutatis mutandis—see it? Darwin, who was not generally supposed to be ecclesiastically inclined, expounds as follows the origin of the moral sense, or, as he calls it, conscience, in his "Descent of Man." The purely selfish emotions are, at the time of their greatest activity, more intense than sympathy. But they are less persistent. If, therefore, they are gratified at the expense of the higher feelings the result is remorse or regret. Hunger satiated, danger avoided, vengeance accomplished, is soon forgotten, but the memory of wrong done remains. It is because memory is so much more activ in man than in the other animals that the moral sense appears peculiar to him. For example, says Darwin, birds of passage which hav hatched their eggs later than the others, sometimes get so impatient, as the season advances, that they fly away, abandoning their brood. If the mother bird's memory were as good as a woman's, what agony she would experience afterward at the thought of her young perishing from cold and hunger in the bleak north! In this way, he explains, men come to learn that they are often tempted to do what they will be sorry for if they do it, and hence arises the idea of sin and of remorse. But according to the theory of evolution, experience becomes organically registered and hereditary. Thus very young children exhibit the moral sense before they hav had any personal experience of the effects of doing wrong. He thinks, and so do I, that it is in this way, and not by observation of external consequences, that the idea of duty, as distinct from that of expediency, is formed. C. L. JAMES.

PALMYRA, N. Y., March 5, 290.

MR. EDITOR: Please find $3, for which send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year to a new subscriber. This is my vote on the picture business. I had to skirmish around considerably to get one. But the subscriber is a true Liberal, and I think will be a life passenger aboard your craft, as well as a warm neighbor to us when we get to that eternal home where the thermometer never gets below zero. I sometimes wish I was already there, especially these cold mornings when the fire is out, or I meet some one I am in debt to, as well as the husband of my best girl. I should not dread any of those people if we all could hav the Religion of Humanity. I am very poor, and it is on account of my religion, or perhaps the want of some. Being an outspoken Liberal, I am considered the wickedest man in town, consequently am patronized neither in business nor in given work, although they can find nothing against me only that I am an unbeliever.

I think their God is much slighted, and does not get the credit due him for his services at the Johnstown flood. I had supposed that his time and attention was all absorbed in saving the wooden image of his mother. But lately, in looking over the account of the flood, I find that the humane God interceded and saved the Indian sign that was in front of a cigar-store. It was bolt-upright and not damaged. It was near the railroad bridge. And a man was mysteriously preserved from flood and fire, then when landed safe and sound he fell down on the rocks and broke his neck. God must hav let go his hold on the man and grabbed the tobacco sign. What a divine manifestation of God's goodness in saving those pieces of wood that could not hav drowned if they wanted to.

We vote for the pictures, and my experience is they do more good in making Christians ashamed of their vulgar and bloodthirsty Bible than all truths in science do. As Robert Ingersoll says, Turn your gods and ghosts into clowns and the people are convulsed with merriment.
Yours for the right, CAPT. H. P. MARSH.

POUCHA SPRINGS, COL., Feb., 1890.

MR. EDITOR: In this isolated land of the West there is a strong inclination toward Christian Infidelity pervading the mountain forests of the Centennial state, but it is in a latent state. Secular organization, with some capital to induce public lecturers and more independent journals, is what is needed to enthuse and call out more public demonstration. A few sledge-hammer jolts are needed to break the crust of Superstition; once get the animal exposed and his death would be speedy.

As to the positiv and constructiv side of Freethought. As a natural consequence, construction will follow when the positiv has been established. Notwithstanding, organizations should be carried into every part of the land, in which some moral and useful entertainment should be given. We must supply the place with proper amusements and the attractiv influences which attend the church, and satisfy the people. A common expression is, What do you Infidels propose to giv us in its place when you take away our religion? Very much such arguments might be heard if the man who has suffered for years with a cancer on his side, as the surgeon approaches with his instrument to dislodge the corroding and unnatural growth, cries, "Stop! Before you proceed further I want to know what you intend to put in its place?" The doctor replies, "But don't you know this is not natural? It will poison your blood, and be the cause of a premature death." "Well," says the sick man, "I know these are symptoms of wrong health, and often a source of great annoyance and pain, but my mother and my grandmother were both so affected, and they did nothing for themselvs in trying to remove afflictions which they believed were sent upon them in the wisdom and goodness of God to remind us of the great sufferings of our savior. I had rather die this way than take the risk of losing my chance for heaven. If I liv this way I am sure of the promis, and if I depart from the old path I may lose my soul."

H. MURRAY.

TEMPE, ARIZ., Feb. 28, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose you a cartoon, which I would be pleased if you could reproduce to show some of your overfastidious subscribers what manner of illustrations are used in answers to Ingersoll. Far from hiding THE TRUTH SEEKER from our boys, I am delighted to hav them look at and ask questions relating to the same. In fact, about all the knowledge they hav of the Bible has been gathered from the pictures and questions. Johnnie said to me the other day, "Why, mamma, the Christian boys don't know anything that is in the Bible, but when I tell them about the funny things, they say they believe them if they are in the Bible." So continue the cartoons and please all of this family, for even Topolobampo has not destroyed our enjoyment of the ludicrous. The cartoon representing Awakened Woman was worth a year's subscription.

I would giv ten years of my life if I could hav been in Washington at the inauguration of a new era of the movement for woman suffrage. A few of us, who attended the American Suffrage Society's meetings in Minneapolis some years ago, were perfectly discouraged and disgusted at the toadying to the church, and could see plainly that Lucy Stone was working to capture the national society also. Through your paper, I should like to extend greetings and best wishes for success to the noble ladies who hav rebelled against being harnessed up to draw the churches along, after most of the men hav kicked out of the traces. I shall never forget the terrible emotion that was awakened in my mind by the reading of Matilda Jocelyn Gage's "Woman, Church, and State." I wept over the terrible fate of my sisters in the cruel past, and as I washed my dishes the tears fell freely over the sad history, and I said, "O religion, how many outrages hav been committed in thy name!" Whilst thus engaged, I heard a rap, and upon going to the door, I found there a young man who wanted to sell me a Bible. If ever a young man was startled and overwhelmed by an outburst of genuin indignation, it was that one. I told him that I was but a weakly woman, but that I would dig the ground for a living, anything, rather than peddle that infamous volume that had wrought such woe and misery to women in the past, and that if all the Bibles in the world were piled up, I would gladly make a bonfire of them, and thus try, at least, to blot out the infamous teachings that had almost wrecked my own sex. After the young man had somewhat recovered from this furious assault, he acknowledged that he had often wondered at many of the stories contained in the book, and that he thought many passages were not fit to read.

"The slavery of women in all ages has dwarfed their nobler qualities of mind and heart," else would all women resent "the inequality that has cursed the pages of civic codes and creeds."

A generous indignation would resent the treatment that has kept woman in an inferior place; that has debarred her from her proper place, and that has taken advantage of her in every way possible to rob and ruin her. The slave nature is yet strong in the majority of women, else would they withdraw from all churches and thus compel respect, by a just resentment for past and present bad treatment.

Hoping that great success will crown this meeting of the brave, free women, I will close with a quotation from Herbert Spencer, which I hope Mr. Parton may see: "Ridicule has always been a revolutionary agent. That which is habitually assailed with sneers and sarcasms cannot long survive. Institutions that hav lost their roots in men's respect and faith are doomed, and the day of their dissolution is not far off."

LIZZIE PREYSE HAWKINS.

GALENA, KAN., Dec. 25, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: Whether it is the result of early training or of prejudice I will leave for others to decide, but a good scriptural illustration has more force with most people than any other. The Bible stands unrivaled to-day as an exponent of the faults and follies of the human race. The sneer of our Christian friends about "the devil quoting scripture" need not debar us from its use. I would advocate its perusal rather for the many useful lessons than for discovery of its inconsistencies. The story of Naaman and his leprosy is familiar to almost all. So often preached about and read in Sunday-schools, one would think the subject would hav been worn threadbare. Yet, strange to say, the most useful lesson it teaches seems to hav been overlooked. Those who hav forgotten where the story is, turn to 2 Kings v. We hav heard about the little maid he took captiv out of Israel, also much of Elisha and Gehazi the servant of Elisha, but no one has noticed the character of Naaman himself. Where he says, "In this thing the Lord pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there and he leaneth on my arm and I bow myself in the house of Rimmon, when I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon the Lord pardon thy servant in this thing," these words throw a clear light on the man's character. Mighty as he was in valor, he had not sufficient moral courage to stand firmly by his convictions. He feared if he did not conform outwardly to the idolatrous customs of his royal master his worldly position might be affected. He tried to compromise between what he knew was right and begged to be excused from practices he knew were wrong. I am judging him simply by his own words. Naaman believed, as he says he did, that he owed his preservation from a loathsome disease and speedy death to direct divine interposition, but his first idea seems to hav been how to serve two masters, God and the king of Syria, to enjoy the benefits both could confer without offending either. Would it not hav been better to giv up something? It often takes great courage to do what is right, and self-sacrifice is the only true road to greatness. We hav many like Naaman in our midst to-day—those loud in their professions but whose actions belie their words. What are these people worth in our, or any other, cause? Nothing. They are worse than useless. The profession of an opinion alone is worthless. The most worthy object, depending upon the passiv support of such people, would fail. We Liberals must be reformers to be worthy of the name. To accomplish anything we must organize and work together. No reform was ever brought about without opposition. We must make sacrifices. And what sacrifices is a man required to make compared to those of our heroic forefathers who placed their lives and fortunes in jeopardy that we might be free? Are we worthy sons of such men if we hesitate for fear we may be a few dollars and cents poorer? I hav got to believe the profession of disbelief is made in many cases solely to avoid trouble. These people must know that we do not claim selfishness as an article of our creed, any more than the Christians do, and that unless a person will accept the responsibilities of Liberalism we do not want to hav him in our ranks. None are so poor but that they can do something for the cause if they only try. Many of our fellow-citizens are so apathetic that they are content to let things drift. Unfortunately, without the activ intervention of some reformer things always go in the wrong direction. Interested persons will always work for their own advantage to the detriment of the others. At length, when abuses become unbearable, redress is eagerly sought. It is always the same. A little forethought would hav saved great loss and trouble. It is a hopeful sign that so many are earnestly laboring for the good of all. But the activ assistance of all is needed. If these few lines should awaken even a few to a sense of the duties they owe to the party they now only profess to belong to, they will not hav been written in vain. JAMES FORGEY.

MAZO MANIE, WIS., Dec. 10, 289.

MR. EDITOR: Amongst the numerous correspondents of THE TRUTH SEEKER there are some who are disposed to criticise the action of the late congress of the American Secular Union, especially in regard to the slight changes made in the constitution. At first it struck me as a set-back from an advanced position, but, on further consideration, I fully approve of President Westbrook's plan of attack. In the first place it is quite apparent to every thinking person that a more perfect union of our comparativly small forces is highly essential in order to insure success in any kind of an attack that we might make on our enemies' almost overwhelming forces. Now, in view of this important fact, what can be done to bring about this perfect union of the various shades of thought of the Freethought ranks? Again, it must be quite plain to all who are sufficiently interested that the only way to bring about such a union of forces is to hav it plainly and distinctly set forth in our constitution what that main attack is to be, and that it be on some of the enemies' outlying works that all are equally interested in capturing, whether Agnostic, Materialist, Spiritualist, Liberal, Jew, or Liberal Christian.

Now, of the whole Nine Demands, I think that the equal taxation of all church property, and also prevention of change in our country's Constitution, thereby recognizing any form of religion or any god of theology, these, with the prevention of the enactment of any Sunday laws and the repeal of all Sunday laws now in force, would form a combination of very important work which all that are worthy of the name of Liberals could heartily coöperate in.

I also noticed some rather harsh criticisms of another correspondent, John Peck, for his bravely unmasking the theology of the Bible. He claims that it repels orthodox Christians from reading Liberal papers and magazines. But it makes little difference. Such Christians will not read, nor even listen to, anything that is not strictly orthodox. Not because their feelings are hurt, or their prejudices abruptly aroused, by seeing the Bible and church so completely unmasked, for, as a general thing, there are but a few intelligent Christians. But the intelligent mostly doubt. After an Infidel has gained their confidence they will freely admit that they are Infidel in this respect, and also many of the lower class of people, who are church-members, will admit the same thing. It is not because they believe in church doctrins that they continue to support the church and obey its injunctions, but it is simply a fear of evil consequences. In course of my investigations of this subject, I hav been told by many such persons, and even Catholics, that they think it much better to remain under the churches' control than to hav to go to jail; that is, they consider that the church has acquired such a controling force over their minds that it could induce or force them to commit some overt act for which they would be arrested and thrown into jail. Hence such articles as Brother John Peck writes are calculated to do this class of people more good than anything milder or less courageous. They do them far more good than any number of mild, compromising lectures, for he convinces them beyond a doubt that there are men that can withstand the church's cruel mental force or influence, and thrash out of them gods and devils combined. Hence the great necessity for lecturers, and true Liberals of all classes, to always show a bold front, and always be ready to fearlessly take up any discussion on the side of Freethought on every favorable occasion.

Though one may happen to be situated as I am myself, one amongst one thousand, he should take pains to let it be publicly known that he is an Infidel and Atheist. He should be careful not to countenance any kind of a religious performance, and especially should ignore the Christian rest-day. A person that has been raised by Christian parents, with all his relativs controled by the church, as mine are, will find it extremely difficult for some time to do this. But it is an excellent way to develop mental independence and individuality. Though my place here is situated on the crossing of two principal streets, one leading directly to the Catholic church situated in the adjoining block, the other street leading to the various Protestant churches, and though quite a number of church-goers pass by each Sunday, yet I am generally at work in full view every Sunday, and often close enough to the sidewalk to provoke discussion if any were disposed to question my right to work on any day I chose. And for some time at first there were some that would stop and make comments, but I was ready for them. As work is a healthy exercise, and a person needs as much exercise one day as another, I consider it unhygienic to stay idle a whole day at one time. When I came here to liv ten years ago, I was only an Infidel Deist. Then I commenced writing Liberal articles for our local paper. From that in a few years I grew to be a full-fledged scientific Agnostic, and continued to write articles against the persecuting churches, and fell to at a lengthy discussion on that and the scientific theory of evolution. After the first sky-pilot was completely defeated another took it up, and when he was knocked under a leading politician took up the cudgels, but after some time he also played out, having nothing to offer but personal abuse. For a time there was great enthusiasm aroused. The idea of one man making such a vigorous and fearless attack on such an orthodox city, or what is still worse, Infidels completely enslaved by the church, inspired many with courage to fall into line. In the course of that discussion I went through the history of the Christian religion from its first inception under Moses up to the present time, showing that it was a cruel, persecuting force ever controling man against man's best interests and happiness. Then I took up the Bible, and the leading characters of the Bible, such as Moses and David, two of the most infamous characters that we find recorded in history. Yet these two persons are extolled and held up to the view of Christians of the present day as two of the holiest and best men that ever lived. Also I showed that the Bible fully sanctioned polygamy; sanctioned human slavery of the most barbarous form; sanctioned the use of intoxicating drink and even encouraged its use by precept and example, even using it in one of the most sacred sacraments, and finally I showed that it taught demonology. The other side continually kept throwing the horrors of the French Revolution into nearly all their replies. After carefully studying the history of the French Revolution by Thomas Carlyle, I was well prepared to giv them a clear understanding of that, it being one of the greatest events ever recorded in history. After I got through with it I came to the conclusion that the almost superhuman effort the French patriots made in throwing overboard the cruel, enslaving religion and the well-organized power of Rome, time after time hurling back the powers of Europe leagued against them, was the nearest approach to omnipotent power we find recorded in history. But their wily enemy at length partially succeeded against them by secret intrigue, by fomenting discord and jealousy, producing reaction, and the controling evil element of religion and church authority partially resumed its wonted action—which it had exercised in the preceding centuries sufficiently to set the French at work to exterminate themselvs. For the time being they were by this rendered at least partially insane; this was the real cause of so much useless killing of one faction by another faction. I then finished up the discussion by some articles entitled, "The Scientific Agnostic vs. the Christian." I shall always think of it as one of the miracles of Freethought that the editor of our local newspaper published such a lengthy discussion—an article each week for about six months—for he is far from being an outspoken Freethinker.

I think that THE TRUTH SEEKER's pictures are a very effectiv weapon in cutting down the old superstition. They were the greatest inducement to me in subscribing for THE TRUTH SEEKER.

I inclose $2.10. The $2 is intended for the American Secular Union, and please send me Truth Seeker Tract No. 32 for the ten cents.

JOHN LEITCH.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

To Mrs. Luna Hutchinson.

Luna, with eyes of heaven's deep blue,
So benevolent, just, and true,
Humanity's helper and friend.
Words of mine can never express
Half thy goodness or loveliness,
However many I append.

Great, grand, noble, too good for earth
With its greed, strife, sorrow, and dearth,
Friend of the rich, friend of the poor,
Oh, how could a soul malign thee,
Or to aught but bliss consign thee,
Or ever against thee close a door?

Uplifter of souls from despair;
A mind broad and free as the air;
Humble, and yet too proud to bend
A knee to any church or creed,
Knowing thou hast no need
Upon its savior to depend,

Or wash thee in his awful gore
To cleanse thee for the other shore;
For dost thou not the hungry feed,
Whether of the body or mind,
And cause them to feel resigned,
Because relieved from pressing need?

What better can ever be said,
What better can be heard or read,
Than, Thou art humanity's friend,
What, or whoever, they may be,
Both good, evil, enslaved, and free,
Unchanging ever without end?

Los Angeles, Cal. SADIE ATHENA MAGOON.

Night on the Battle field.

Far down behind the western hills
The sun sinks out of sight,
And leaves a bloody battle-field
Wrapped in the shades of night.
Above the eastern vineclad slope
The full moon slowly creeps,
And casts its rays upon the ground
Where many a hero sleeps.

Unconscious of th' embittered past,
Forgetting how they died—
Their warfare o'er, the blue and gray
Now slumber side by side.
No more the shrill notes of the fife—
The bugle or the drum,
Will call them to the fray again—
Discharge for all has come.

And all night long in that red vale,
The bright stars overhead,
Sad whippoorwill and nightingale
Sing requiems to the dead;
The murm'ring brook and sighing breeze,
Too, mingle in the song,
And there, untouched by loved ones' tears,
Sleep the heroic throng.

Jan. 3, 1890. GEORGE J. REMSBURG.

Tommy Bones.

One morning, when it was hardly daylight, Tommy asked for a story. "What about?" said his sleepy mamma. "Tell me about Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden." "Well," said his mamma, with a sigh, "after the Lord had created Adam from the dust of the ground he was lonely, and he put him in a deep sleep; then he took a rib from his side, and, the story says, made it into a woman."

"Did God cut Adam to get out the rib?" asked Tommy.

"He may hav given him chloroform first," replied Mamma Bones.

"Go on," whispered Tommy.

"When Adam got his eyes open and saw a beautiful wife beside him——"

Tommy, interrupting: "I should thought he would hav stirred up a little more dirt and made her, instead of cutting into Adam like that."

Tommy livs away off in Dakota. He is healthy and happy, and was never made to cry, never was spanked, and never was sick. But once, when he was naughty, his mamma just cuffed him a little. He instantly cuffed back. "O Tommy!" said his mamma, "why did you do that?"

"Didn't you strike me? Why did you strike me?"

Observing his mamma in tears one day when he was but three years old, the affectionate little fellow ran to her and said soothingly, "Let me take you in my arms. What has hurt you? Let me get an egg in your hand. Let me kiss you."

SUSAN H. WIXON.

The American Boy.

J. T. Trowbridge, in an article in the North American Review, both criticises and praises the American boy—criticises his irreverence and disobedience, praises his conscientiousness and generosity when these qualities are appealed to in a way to bring them out. To illustrate he tells two clever stories which he says are true. The first illustrates disobedience and disrespect, and shows how American parents are apt to encourage them. "It is Sunday evening," and a Western farmer "is smoking his pipe on the back porch, while young Josh, his namesake and heir, is playing with the dog in the yard. Old Josh takes his pipe out of his mouth and remarks that it is time for young Josh to go for the cows. The junior makes no reply, but keeps on teaching Congo to giv his paw. Then the senior repeats his observation, to which he manages to giv a little more of the tone of a command.

"'I tell ye, Josh, ye must go for the cows.'

"'I do' wanter,' grumbles young Josh.

"'Quit yer foolin' an' go along!' says old Josh.

"'I shan't,' snarls back the junior.

"'I tell you to go,' exclaims the elder.

"'I tell you I won't,' mutters the boy.

"'Wal, never mind,' says the father; 'mebby they'll come home.'"

The other story givs a more agreeable picture. It must be said, however, that this boy was only six years old. What he would develop into can only be surmised. "He had a cake," says Mr. Trowbridge, "a portion of which his cousin Minnie coveted. She accordingly reminded him, as she was fond of doing when she had a point to gain, of what 'the Bible says' about doing to others as we would be done by. 'Now you know, Willie, if I had the cake you would want half of it.' Willie hesitated a moment between inclination and a conviction of duty, and then said honestly, 'I should want all of it.' With tears in his eyes, but resolutely choking down his grief, he handed over to her the entire cake, which she walked off complacently nibbling."

Correspondence.

BELOIT, O., Feb. 28, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I am nine years old. My papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. I like to read the Children's Corner, and I thought I would write a letter for the Corner. I do not go to school this winter. I hav a mile and a half to go, and that is too far in the winter to walk. I hav two pretty kittens. I named one Tony and the other Daisy. I must close for this time, for this is my first letter, so good-bye. MELLIE E. MENSON.

MINDEN, NEB., Feb. 27, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought that I would write a few lines to the Children's Corner, in order that its readers may know that there is another Freethinker growing up free from Christian ghost stories. Some of the Christians tell my pa that he will ruin his children by teaching them Freethought doctrin, but I am quite sure that it is better to be a Freethinker than to hav my mind tied to any supposed inspired creed, where I dare not even think that anything else is true but that contained in it. Excuse mistakes, for this is my first letter.

DELILAH REED (twelve years of age).

LIBERTY GROVE, Feb. 23, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write a few lines to the Children's Corner. This is the first time I hav ever written a letter. I will be ten years old in June. My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER and I like to read the letters the girls and boys write. Our school was out the last of January, and when I went to school I was studying history, grammar, reading, spelling, geography, arithmetic, and writing. We had a very good teacher; her name is Miss Emma Tyler. The teacher had an entertainment the last day and I had three dialogs, and there were lots of people present. Well, as this is taking too much room, I will close.

Yours truly, GEORGE LORSON.

ALEXANDRIA, MINN., Feb. 16, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I read your book, "All in a Lifetime," some time ago and think it is splendid. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER as long as I can remember. I read the Children's Corner every week. I am fifteen years old and go in the seventh grade at school. We hav a fine school-house here, costing more than all the ten churches of this place put together. I hav two brothers and a sister. I study shorthand with one of my brothers, and if there are any of the young Liberals of the Corner studying Pitman's Shorthand, I would like to correspond with them. I will now close my first letter to the Corner.

Wishing you great success in your noble work, I am, Your Liberal friend,

MILTON TRENHAM.

TEMPE, ARIZ., Feb. 25, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: We hav a cat and a dog, and three puppies three days old. It snowed here the other day, which is unusual for this country. Mamma is reading from the ANNUAL while I write. Keep the pictures. A few days ago a Christian boy came in the house and he happened to see THE TRUTH SEEKER hanging on the door. I showed him the picture of Samson killing the lion. He looked at them for half an hour. I am ten years old. I go to school. We hav the best teacher in the territory; her name is Mrs. C. E. Rembert. I am in the Second Reader. My brother is in the Third Reader. I hav been in Minnesota, Mexico, California, and Arizona. My father has been taking THE TRUTH SEEKER for ten years. I hav never been baptized in my life and never intend to be. They cannot stuff any nonsense down me. Your dear friend, JOHN HAWKINS.

CUSTER CITY, PA., St. Valentine's Day.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav read and been interested in the Children's Corner a long time, and now will write my first letter for it, and say, among other things, that I am the only Liberal girl in this community.

I do not go to church, never did like to, nor do I say prayers, as I used to do, like most "good children."

I attended my first masquerade ball last week. I am fond of music and dancing and had a nice time.

I will be fifteen years old next month, and as there are only two or three other Freethinkers right around here besides us, I would be pleased to correspond with some of the Corner's Liberal friends.

I would like very much to hav Miss Wixon's photograph, as I am sure all of her contributors would.

Bona post meridiamus.

M. ROSE FOSTER.

NEW WINDSOR, ILL., Feb. 26, 1890.

MISS S. H. WIXON, Dear Madam: Excuse me for taking the liberty to thus address you, as I hav no acquaintance with you only in reading your articles in THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator. My hearing is failing me, so that it is with difficulty that I can carry on conversation in my family, and it is hard for a Liberal to be deprived of the privilege of talking with his Christian friends. Now, I wish to ask you if you can giv me any information in regard to the sound-discs of H. A. Wales, Bridgeport, Conn. Hav you seen or heard anything about them? I think that if they are half as good as recommended they would be in use in your city. I would say that if you cannot say anything about them yourself, can you giv me the address of some good Liberal in Bridgeport, Conn., that can giv me some information about them? By doing so you will confer a great favor on me. I send you a leaf cut from the pamphlet that he sent me. Yours truly,

W. S. FLAHERTY.

[Anyone knowing about the sound-discs will oblige the above-named by communicating with him direct.—ED. C. C.]

Miss Wixon's Works.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300pp., $1.50.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 333pp., $1.25.

Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-Book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO..

HISTORY
OF THE
INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT
Of Europe.

Revised Edition—2 vols—Price, $3.
By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER, M.D., LL.D.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Reign of the Stoics.

THEIR
History, Religion, Philosophy, and Maxims of Self-Control, Self-Culture, Benevolence, and Justice.

With Citations of Authors Quoted from on Each Page.

BY FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.

Read the philosophers, and learn how to make life happy, seeking useful precepts and brave and noble words which may become deeds.—Seneca.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

This book shows that many Christians might learn much from these ancient heathen.—American Bookseller.

One of the most valuable helps for those who would understand the character of human progress in all ages.—National Quarterly Review.

The author has shown himself a diligent student, an ardent admirer, and a faithful interpreter, of some of the most remarkable monuments of ancient thinking.—New York Tribune.

Reading this book, we find the doctrins of the Stoics to be almost identical with the views held by the broadest and most enlightened minds of the present day.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Lecky says of Marcus Aurelius: "The purest and gentlest spirit of all the pagan world." Merivale says: "Of all the line the noblest and dearest." Taine says: "The noblest soul that ever lived." John Stuart Mill says: "He preserved through life not only the most unblemished justice, but the tenderest heart."

Extra Cloth, 12mo, 248 pp., $1.25.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York

SOCIAL WEALTH,

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in the Acquirement and Apportionment.

By J. K. INGALLS.

Price, Cloth, . . $1.00.

Agents for the Truth Seeker.

CALIFORNIA.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco, Cal.
Dr. J. L. York, San Jose, Cal.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearny st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

CANADA.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
W. B. Cooke, 170 1-2 Yonge st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
Knowles, Cor. George and Granville st., Halifax, N. S.

COLORADO.
J. G. Jenkins, 400 Arapahoe st., Denver.

FLORIDA.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

IDAHO.
A. Erwin, Murray.

ILLINOIS.
Post-office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
E. A. Stevens, 558 West Madison st., Room 1, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 303 State street, and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 56 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

INDIANA.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
T. P. Monroe, postmaster, Dunkirk.

LOUISIANA.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Joseph Marsh, Northampton.
Johnson Bro's 5 N. Main st., Fall River.

MICHIGAN.
A. Atwood, Eaton Rapids.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, 138 S. Division St., Grand Rapids.
Swan & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Horace Haynes, Leslie.

MISSOURI.
Phillip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Lang & Co., 709 Olive st., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Eaton & Smith, 1234 O st., Lincoln.

NEW YORK.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
M. B. Edinger, 1243 Third ave., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, cor. Fulton and Nassau. st, New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.

OHIO.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior street, Cleveland.
Van Epps & Co., 259 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Emory P. Robinson, Sydney.

OREGON.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
C. H. Wilcox, Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 1106 Leopard st., Phila.
W. F. Schade, 3,706 Butler street, Pittsburgh.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.

TENNESSEE.
Wm. B. Fisher, 331 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

TEXAS.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
H. S. Kratz, 306 Houston st., Fort Worth.

UTAH.
James Ashman, Salt Lake City.
W. F. Reybould, Salt Lake City.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
W. Wedeken, Montesano.

ENGLAND.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet street, London.
Progressiv Pub. Co., 28 Stonecutter st., London, E. C.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

AUSTRALIA.
Mrs. J. Hadfield, Park st., Sydney, N.S.W.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N. S. W.

NEW ZEALAND.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

THE
MARTYRDOM OF MAN.

A COMPENDIUM OF UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

By WINWOOD READE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill.—[Literary World.

You turn over his pages with a fascination similar to that experienced in reading Washington Irving.—[Inter-Ocean.

His history has a continuity, a rush, a carrying power, which reminds us strikingly of Gibbon.—[New Haven Palladium.

The sketch of early Egyptian history, in the first chapter, is a masterpiece of historical writing. He has a style that reminds us of Macaulay.—[Penn Monthly.

Eighth edition. Extra cloth, 12mo, 543pp., $1.75.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.
PRICE, TEN CENTS.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Giordano Bruno.

His Life, Works, Worth, Martyrdom, Portrait, and Monument.

With a complete list of the American subscribers to the fund for the erection of the monument.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, THOMAS DAVIDSON,
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, KARL BLIND,
LYDIA R. CHASE.

Single copies 15 cents; ten copies for a dollar.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ROMANISM,

OR

DANGER AHEAD.

The Reason Why a Good Roman Catholic Cannot be a Good Citizen of this Republic.

By A. J. GROVER.

Price, paper, 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

NOW READY.

A VOLUME OF THE WRITINGS

OF

HORACE SEAVER.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume comprises some of the ablest and best editorials written by Mr. Seaver during the past forty-five years. It is neatly printed on cream-white paper, bound in cloth, and contains a fine likeness of the venerable editor of the Investigator. Every Liberal should hav this book in his home. It is now ready for delivery.

Price, $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.

It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price, 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.
tf

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 833pp., silk cloth, $3.

Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

FREETHOUGHT

IS IT

DESTRUCTIVE OR CONSTRUCTIVE?

A SYMPOSIUM

BY

COL. R. G. INGERSOLL,	R. B. WESTBROOK,	CAPT. R. C. ADAMS,
E. B. FOOTE, JR.,	SALADIN (W. Stewart Ross),	L. K. WASHBURN,
H. O. PENTECOST,	GEO. E. MACDONALD,	SUSAN H. WIXON,
E. C. WALKER,	SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,	F. M. HOLLAND,
LUCY N. COLMAN,	PARKER PILLSBURY,	MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL,
C. B. REYNOLDS,	CHARLES WATTS,	J. H. BURNHAM,
W. F. JAMIESON,		THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.

SUBJECTS OF PAPERS:

Is there an Affirmative, Positive, Constructive side to Freethought?
If not, the reason why?
If there be, in what, in your opinion, does it consist, and in what should it consist?

PRICE 25 CENTS.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

ROME OR REASON

A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience.

By NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS.

A very critical analysis of both Protestantism and Catholicism, from the vantage-ground of an intimate personal experience with the two systems. It deals the most trenchant blows which pure logic is capable of inflicting.—[Critical Review.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.75.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BIBLE INQUIRER;

OR,

A Key to Bible Investigation.

Containing 148 Propositions
With References to the most Plain and Striking Self-Contradictions of the so-called Inspired Scriptures.

BY A. JACOBSON.

Third edition, carefully revised and enlarged.

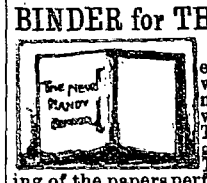
Every Liberal needs a copy for ready reference. As a pamphlet to loan to Christian friends, it is the most effectiv Iconoclast ever published.

Price only 25 cents.

THE

CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:

THEIR



Crimes and Persecutions.

8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BINDER for THE TRUTH SEEKER

For the benefit of our readers who preserve their papers we offer a new style of binder, made for the purpose, and with the heading of THE TRUTH SEEKER printed in gold letters on the outside. This binder allows the opening of the papers perfectly flat. It also allows the taking out and replacing of one or more papers from any part of the file without disturbing the other parts.

Sent by mail, postpaid, for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
tf 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

POINTERS:

A POCKET CYCLOPEDIA,

CONTAINING

Tables, Rules, Practical Hints, and Historical Sketches, for Farmers, Mechanics, Machinists, Merchants, Housekeepers, and the Public Generally, with

Numerous Maps, Illustrations, and Diagrams

Illustrating some of the more Important Comparativ Statistics of the World.

More Information for Less Money than has ever been offered.

ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

For $50 worth of "Cold Facts" boiled down in a Nutshell. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ON THE WORD GOD.

By Milton Woolley, M.D., Author of "Hebrew Mythology," "The Career of Jesus Christ."

The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. —[Ps. xiv, 1.

Children and fools speak the truth.—[Old Saw.

Paper, 12mo, 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

HOW TO Strengthen the Memory

OR,

NATURAL AND SCIENTIFIC METHODS OF NEVER FORGETTING.

The Boston Post says: "This book actually shows us how to keep our memories in good working condition and repair them when out of order." Price by mail $1.

Parturition Without Pain.

By M. L. HOLBROOK, M.D.

Godey's Lady's Book says: "We giv our cordial approbation to this work. The information it contains is most important, and, we are fully convinced, reliable." Price by mail, $1.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY

AND HYGIENE, or, THE MYSTERIES OF MAN. Carefully revised edition, with 111 illustrations. The most perfect book for men and women ever published. 50,000 sold. Price $2, by mail. Illustrated catalog free.

Marriage and Parentage.

In Their Sanitary and Physiological Relations and in Their Bearing on the Producing of Children of Finer Health and Greater Ability.

By M. L. HOLBROOK, M.D.

The Scientific American says: "This work is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young." $1.

EATING FOR STRENGTH;

OR,

FOOD AND DIET IN RELATION TO HEALTH AND WORK.

The New York Herald says: "Dr. Holbrook's book is among the very best of its kind."

The Home and Garden says: "A study of this book will enable any intelligent reader to make a choice of food which may save the cost of the book every day in providing for a family, besides increasing health, strength, and longevity." $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

SAKYA BUDDHA.

A Versified, Annotated Narrativ of his Life and Teachings.

With Citations from Buddha's "Path of Virtue."

BY E. D. ROOT.

I take pleasure in speaking in praise of this work.—Prof. J. M. Peebles.

The book has been introduced into Buddhist schools in Ceylon. The "Banner of Light," "Religio-Philosophical Journal," and many Spiritualist papers and lecturers hav spoken highly of the book.

Extra Cloth, 175 pp., $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

WHAT KIND OF A MAN CLARK BRADEN IS.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 10 cents.

OUR NEW 1890 FLOWER SEED OFFER.

A Magnificent Collection of FLOWER SEEDS 200 Varieties, FREE!

An Unparalleled Offer by an Old-Established and Reliable Publishing House! THE LADIES' WORLD is a mammoth 16-page, 64-column illustrated paper for ladies and the family circle. It is devoted to stories, poems, ladies' fancy work, artistic needlework, home decoration, housekeeping, fashions, hygiene, juvenile reading, etiquette, etc. To introduce this charming ladies' paper into 100,000 homes where it is not already taken, we now make the following colossal offer: Upon receipt of only 12 Cents in silver or stamps, we will send The Ladies' World for Three Months, and to each subscriber we will also send Free and postpaid, a large and magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds, two hundred varieties, including Pansies, Verbenas, Chrysanthemums, Asters, Phlox Drummondii, Balsam, Cypress Vine, Digitalis, Double Zinnia, Pinks, etc., etc. Remember, twelve cents pays for the paper three months and this entire magnificent collection of Choice Flower Seeds, put up by a first-class Seed House and warranted fresh and reliable. No lady can afford to miss this wonderful opportunity. We guarantee every subscriber many times the value of money sent, and will refund your money and make you a present of both seeds and paper if you are not entirely satisfied. Ours is an old-established and reliable publishing house, endorsed by all leading newspapers. Do not confound this offer with the catchpenny schemes of unscrupulous persons. Write to-day—don't put it off! Six subscriptions and six Seed Collections sent for 60 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER! To any lady answering this advertisement and naming the paper in which she saw it, we will send free, in addition to all the above, one package of the celebrated Ornamental Chilian Foliage Beet Seeds, one of the most beautiful foliage plants known, the leaves sometimes growing 3 feet long by 1 foot wide, in variegated colors. It is perfectly hardy, continuing an object of beauty long after Coleus and Cannas have succumbed to frost. Address:
S. H. MOORE & CO., 27 Park Place, New York.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1890.

Edited by CHARLES WATTS.

CONTENTS.

Agnosticism and Immortality.....Samuel Laing
A Sonnet.....Joseph Ellis
Who Was Moses?..H. J. Hardwicke, M.D., F.R.C.S.
The Comfort of Agnosticism.....E. Lynn Linton.
Are Miracles Credible?...Constance C. W. Naden.
The Contest Between Agnosticism and Theology, John Wilson, M.A.
Above: A Poem.....W. Stewart Ross.
The Evolution of the Agnostic Idea, R. Bithell, B Sc., Ph D.
The New Fatalism.....B. Russell.
Descartes's Proof of the Existence of a God, F. J. Gould.
A Poem.....W. B. McTaggart.
The Free Expression of Opinions..G. F. Underhill.
Fragments.....William Maccall

Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office

Poetry.

When Womanhood Awakes.

[An original poem, read at the convention of the National Woman's Liberal Union, in Washington, D. C., Feb. 24, 1890.]

No more shall error round her play
In fitful moods and clouds of gray;
Or cruel fancies crush her down
Where demons wait and furies frown,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more shall bigot turn and rave,
A ranting yet a cringing slave,
At Truth, who, in her garments white,
Stands facing ever to the right,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more shall sisters turn aside,
With haughty tread and sullen pride,
From those who walk in clearer light,
Whose keener vision sees the right,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more in abject fear she'll cower
Before a mitered, tyrant power;
Nor grope in darkness, pain, and shame—
A hopeless wretch without a name,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more she'll idly dream away
Life's splendid hours in trifling play,
Nor think the whole of life to be
To lose her own identity,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more the story will be told
By writers young and writers old,
That man but toils till set of sun,
While woman's work is never done,
When Womanhood awakes.

The chains that bind her foot and hand—
That hold her close in every land—
Will drop and crumble in the dust,
By force of their own ancient rust,
When Womanhood awakes.

Her eyes are closed in slumber now,
The poppy-wreath is on her brow;
But soon her night shall change to day
And 'mid the tombs no more she'll stray,
When Womanhood awakes.

In horror will she view the past,
That, vice-like, held her hard and fast.
The coming time her mind shall dower
With vigorous strength and helpful power,
When Womanhood awakes.

The future day shall see her then
Clothed rightly as a citizen,
And she'll behold with judgment clear
The sovereign rights that wait her here,
When Womanhood awakes.

And man shall stand on grander hight;
Shall see the truth in larger light;
Shall rise from groveling in the dust,
To realms where dwell the true and just,
When Womanhood awakes.

And all these things shall surely be,
When justice reigns from sea to sea;
Fair freedom, then, in fullest measure,
Shall giv to each her equal treasure,
When Womanhood awakes.

How gloomy all the past will seem!
A misty way, a dreadful dream!
With superstition's slimy trail
O'er mossy bank and flowery dale,
When Womanhood awakes.

O rosy dawn in eastern skies!
Thy morning light the world supplies!
Joy-bells shall ring from shore to shore,
Anthems shall swell forevermore,
When Womanhood awakes.

Fall River, Mass. SUSAN H. WIXON.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER,

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photo-engravings of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 40c.; with autograph, 50 cts.

The Candle from Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

THE

Cosmian Hymn Book,

A COLLECTION OF

Original and Selected Hymns

(Words and Music)

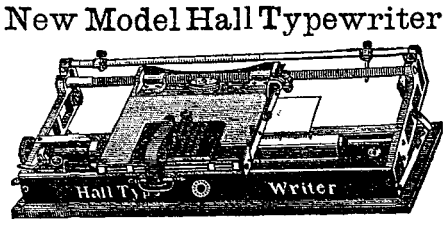
For Liberal and Ethical Societies, For Schools and the Home.



COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

PRICE, . . . $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

New Model Hall Typewriter

The Best Standard Typewriter in the World.
Cheap, Portable, No Ink Ribbon, Interchangeable Type in all Languages, Easiest to learn and rapid as any. Agents wanted everywhere.
WARRANTED AS REPRESENTED. Address
National Typewriter Co.,
10 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. P. O. box 5159.
Send for catalog and specimens of work.

ANTICHRIST.

PROVING conclusivly that there was no Christ crucified under Pontius Pilate, but that the real Jesus, the illegitimate son of Mary by Joseph Pandera, was stoned and hanged for sorcery about 75 years B.C. Cloth, 446 pages, with full Index. Price, $1.50. Former price, $2.00. For sale at this office.

GIRARD'S WILL

AND

Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE

UNIVERSE ANALYZED

BY JOHN R. KELSO, A.M.,

Author of "Deity Analyzed," "The Bible Analyzed," "The Real Blasphemers," "Spiritualism Sustained," etc., etc.

The latest and best work of an analytic thinker, who is gifted with those rare powers that render the subtlest conceptions the easy property of the ordinary mind. The book contains many ideas that will be new to the world and productiv of good in furnishing food for thought. We trust it will hav the immense distribution it se richly merits.—[The American Idea.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE

Bible of Nature,

OR, THE

Principles of Secularism.

A CONTRIBUTION to the RELIGION of the FUTURE.

BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD,

Author of "The Secret of the East, or the Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline," "Physical Education, or the Health-Laws of Nature," "Household Remedies," "The Poison Problem, or the Cause and the Cure of Intemperance," etc., etc.

Felix L. Oswald is a well-known and vigorous writer on scientific and social subjects.—[Cin. Com. Gazette.

Cloth, 12mo, 240pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

PAINE'S WORKS.

Paine's Theological Works, including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Letter to the Bishop of Llandaff, Reply to Mr. Erskine, Letter to Camille Jordan, etc., etc., with a life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 12mo In paper covers, $1.00; cloth, $1.50.

Paine's Great Works (complete) in one volume. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, $4.50.

Paine's Political Works, including Common Sense, The Crisis, and Rights of Man. Cloth, $1.50.

The Age of Reason. An investigation of true and fabulous theology. Without a peer in the world. Paper, 25 cents, or 5 for $1. Cloth, 50 cents.

The Age of Reason and An Examination of the Prophecies. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Common Sense. Paine's first work. 15 cents.

The Crisis. Containing numbers from I. to XVI. inclusiv. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Rights of Man. For the oppressed of humanity. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I., and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two Volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

Thirty Discussions, Bible Stories, Essays, and Lectures. 700 pages. Paper covers, 75 cents;

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity, between D. M. BENNETT and Rev. G. H. HUMPHREY. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. BENNETT and CYRUS ROMULUS R. TEED. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents;

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. BENNETT and G. M. MAIR, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion.

2. Miracles and supernatural achievements hav been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus.

3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history.

BENNETT affirms; MAIR denies. This is an exhaustiv discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This givs a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon MR. BENNETT. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cents.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist Church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. Cloth, $1.00

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers 10 cents.

The Great Religions of the World. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Sinful Saints and Sensual Shepherds 10 cents.

Christ of Paul; or, the Enigmas of Christianity.

Frauds of the Churchmen of the Second Century Exposed.

By GEORGE REBER.

12mo, 400pp., - - Price, $2.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN.

A Compendium of Universal History.

By WINWOOD READE.

Sixth edition, 544pp., - - $1.75.

SCRIPTURE SPECULATIONS.

With Creation, Stars, Earth, Primitive Man, Judaism.

By H. R. STEVENS. 419pp., $1.50.

ETHICS OF POSITIVISM.

A Critical Study and Survey of the Moral Philosophy of the Present Century.

By GIACOMO BARZELLOTTI,

Prof. of Philosophy at the Licco Dante, Florence.

Price, $1.50.

OLD FAITH AND THE NEW.

A Confession.

By DAVID FRIEDERICH STRAUSS.

Authorized translation from sixth German edition by Mathilde Blind.

Price, ... $1.50.

HEALTH HINTS TO WOMEN.

Important Information for All, and "Danish Cure." With Portrait.

By MME. W. SCHOTT. Price, $1.50.

The Legends of the Patriarchs and Prophets.

By S. BARING GOULD.

Will be seized with avidity by all students of the Bible.—[Congregationalist.

Price, $1.50.

RADICAL PULPIT.

Discourses of Advanced Thought.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM and FELIX ADLER.

Price, $1.

INSTITUTION of MARRIAGE.

And Remarkable Divorce Cases.

By PHILANTHROPUS.

446pp. - - - - Price, $1.

The Contrast: Evangelicalism and Spiritualism Compared.

By MOSES HULL.

Paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

PERSONAL IMMORTALITY

AND OTHER PAPERS.

Candid Arguments for and Against Immortality.

By JOSIE OPPENHEIM. Price, 75 cents.

SIXTEEN SAVIORS OR NONE.

By KERSEY GRAVES.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Truth Seeker Collection of Forms, Hymns, and Recitations.

For Organizing Societies; for Marriages, Funerals, Naming of Infants, Obituaries, Epitaphs, etc. Also 525 Liberal and Spiritualistic Hymns for Social and Various Public Occasions.

18mo, 550pp. Price, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Nunneries.

By W. HOGAN.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Shelley: Philosopher and Reformer.

By C. SOTHERAN.

8vo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Lithograph of D. M. Bennett.

Heavy plate paper 22x28. Price, 50 cts.

Lithograph of Bennett Monument.

In 4 colors, 22x28. Heavy plate paper.

Price, 50 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

With Remarks on Rousseau and Comte.

By CALVIN BLANCHARD.

Paper, - - - 40 cents.

SOUL PROBLEMS.

WITH

Theological Amendment and State Personality.

By JOS. E. PECK.

Price, - - - - 25 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

22 Discussion with Elder Shelton. Bennett. 10
23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5
31 God and God-Houses..... 2
35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No.2.Rev.Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5
81 Hereafter, or the Half-way House. Sypher. 2
82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps. 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Biblo-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2
107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 5
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10
121 Ingersoll's Review of his Reviewers..... 3
122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2
158 The Fool's Creed..... 1
159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL
Price, 25 Cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

W. S. BELL'S PAMPHLETS.

LIBERTY AND MORALITY.

PRICE, 15 CENTS.

Accept my thanks for your excellent and useful discourse.—James Parton.

I am much pleased with your address, and will notice it in Man.—T. B. Wakeman.

A beautiful pamphlet of 36 pages. It is a very able paper, and deserves wide dissemination.—The Age.

ANTI PROHIBITION.

PRICE, 20 CENTS.

The number of heads under which you hav divided the subject matter of the pamphlet, and the concise manner in which the point is discussed, should be highly commended. Therefore I take great pleasure in recommending "Anti-Prohibition" to the consideration of every person who is interested, not only in the cause of temperance, but in the principles of self-government.—J. J. McCabe.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LIFE OF
Joshua Davidson:

MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,

As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.

BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,

Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.

Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.

☞ This book was suppressed by the first American publisher. ☜

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE NEW GOD.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,

Secretary of the American Secular Union.

Price 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE SAFEST CREED,

AND

TWELVE OTHER DISCOURSES OF REASON.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

Extra cloth, 12mo, 238pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Career of Jesus Christ.

An Exposition of the True Meaning of this Character as described in the New Testament. By Milton Woolley, M.D., author of "Hebrew Mythology." Paper, 8vo, 25 cents.

SPECIAL SALE
OF
WATCHES AND DIAMONDS.

Good American Nickel Stem-winders, $2.50, $4, $6. Best grades in silverine case, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; adjusted, $16. For 3 ounce coin silver case, add $3.50; 4 ounce, $4.50; 5 ounce, $6. In best open-face filled gold, dust-proof case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; adjusted, $24.50; hinged cases, $3 more; hunting cases, $6 more.

The New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

All modern improvements: in silverine, $19; 3 ounce coin silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25. BEST open-face filled screw case, $27; hinged, $30; hunting, $26; Louis XIV style, $2 to $10 more. Ladies' best gold filled, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18.50; 15 jewels, $25; adjusted, $35; 14 kt solid gold, $10 to $20 more. Ruby and diamond ornamentations up to $100 extra.

DIAMONDS.

An elegant 3-stone, 8kt., solitaire pin and drops, $600, worth $900; a magnificent hair ornament and pin and pendant combination, rosette, 29 brilliants, $200, worth $300; one do., heart-shape, sapphire and ruby in center, same price and value. Pins, rings, drops, studs, from $300 down to $10; same proportionate discounts. All bought before late advance.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Admission free. Discussions follow lectures.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257

meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston,

Meets every Sunday (from October to June) at 2:45 P.M., at Paine Memorial Building, Appleton street.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.

Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid, for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
tf

Essence of Religion.

By L. FEUERBACH.

Translated from the German. Cloth, 12mo, 75pp.; 50 cts.

The truth-teller is ill-mannered, therefore immoral.—Extract.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indescretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT.

"Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. R. P. Fellows is an outspoken Infidel and a very successful physician. He is worthy of an extensiv patronage.—The Liberal.

News of the Week.

THE pope announces the formation of a hierarchy in Japan, with sees at Tokio, Kioto, Nagasaki, and Sinday.

THE president has warned boomers to leave the Cherokee strip, as the bill opening it to settlement has as yet obtained neither passage by Congress nor presidential approval.

IN England 100,000 coal-miners are on strike.

GOLD has been discovered near Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

EARTHQUAKES hav destroyed three villages in Asiatic Russia.

REV. R. B. MANSELL is in trouble at McKeesport, Pa., for lying defamatory utterances.

IN Wisconsin Catholics and anti-Catholics are waging a violent conflict over a new school law.

IN the government workshops of Portugal eight hours is asked in place of the present nine.

A BROOKLYN faith curer has been held by the coroner for criminal negligence in the care of sick children.

AT Troy, N. Y., on the 15th, a land-slide from a hill upon several houses killed three persons and injured others.

THE waters at the junction of the Ohio and the Mississippi hav overflowed to a width of one hundred miles.

THE Ohio Senate has empowered city and village councils to decide whether saloons shall be open Sundays.

THE bishop of Breslau, Germany, urges the founding of working-men's clubs for Catholics, to combat the Socialistic propaganda.

AT Glens Falls, N. Y., on the 15th, a bridge that was being repaired fell with eight workmen, killing two.

ON their University to be constructed at Washington in imitation of the Catholics, the Methodists will spend $1,500,000.

BISHOP O'FARRELL of the Trenton, N J., diocese, recommends that American flags be displayed over all parochial schools.

MEXICO, by confiscation of property and restriction of revenues, has succeeded in reducing the number of its priests to 2,500.

CATHOLIC control has left Brazil with 8,000,000 persons that cannot read or write. There is not a university, or a technical school of rank.

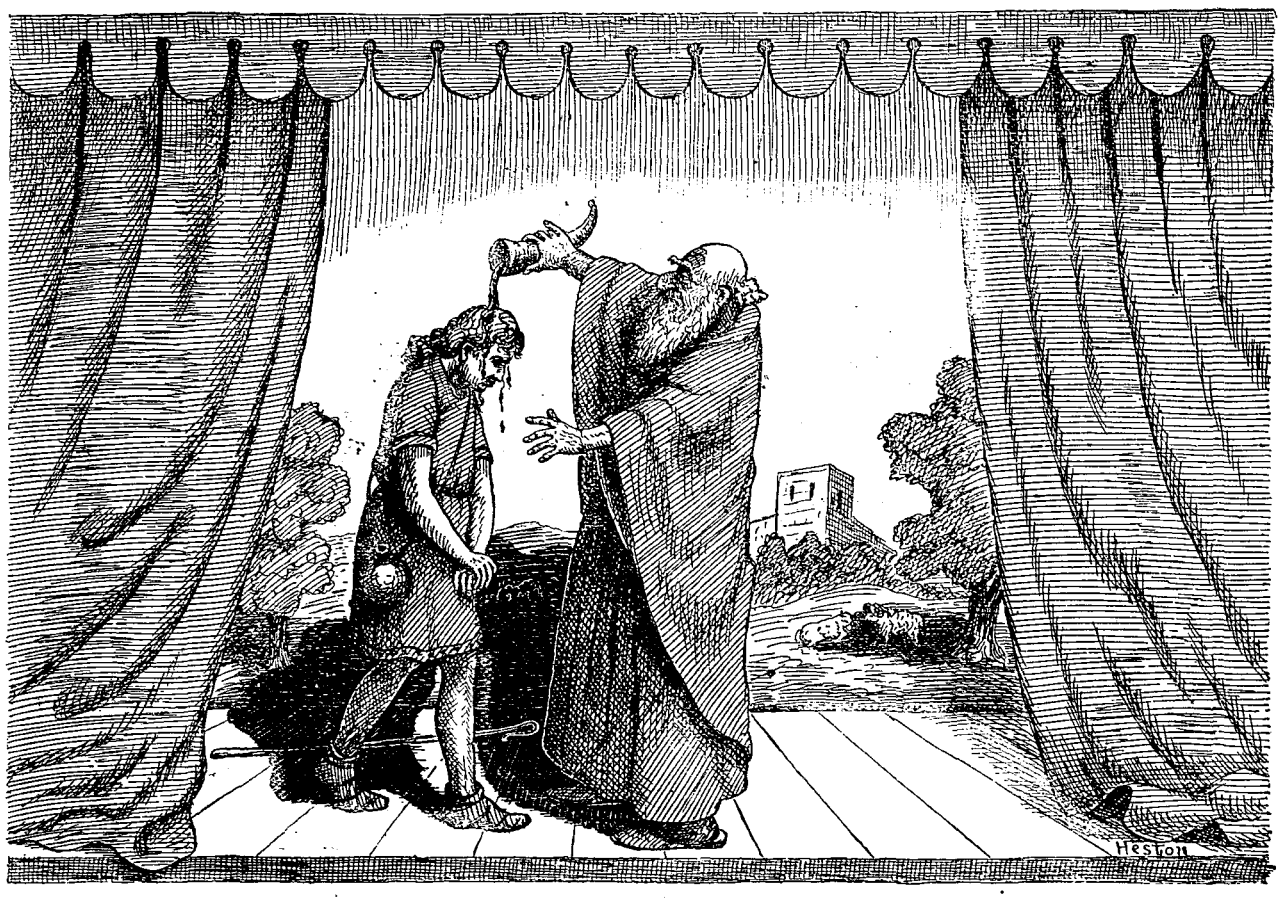
THE superintendent of instruction of New York state reports: Children of school age, 1,803,667; children enrolled, 1,033,813; average daily attendance, 637,487.

THE Freemasons of France are planning to expose the fraud of the shrine of Lourdes, France, which is declared to be miracle-working, and is visited by vast pilgrimages.

LAST Sunday in St. Mary's Catholic church at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., a disgraceful fight occurred between the priest with his backers and an innocent man that they attempted to turn out.

IN the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York, a young man named Jones attempted suicide by taking ether the other night, saying that he wanted "to die in church, near the altar."

THE Catholic Directory just out givs the number of priests in Ireland as 3,374. The United States, it says, has 8,322 priests, and the greatest body of English-speaking Catholics in the world.



THE breaking of the Raleigh levee has flooded Tensas and Madison parishes, Tenn., and in Louisiana a like crevasse is submerging East Carroll and other counties. New Orleans is strengthening its dikes.

THE International Labor Conference devised by the emperor of Germany assembled at Berlin on the 15th, with representations from Germany, France, England, Australia, Italy, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, and Switzerland.

ON the 1st it occurred to Shannon Robison, a member in "good and regular standing" of the Baptist church at Homewood, Kan., that an additional sin cast on Jesus could not harm himself, and he started out and robbed a bank. The secular arm of the law, however, proved more useful than the atonement scheme, Officer Shire chasing and shooting the offender.

GODS AND RELIGIONS
ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.
Vol. I. Givs a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.
BY D. M. BENNETT.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.
Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.
BY D. M. BENNETT.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

FIRST ACT IN THE DRAMA OF DAVID.

And he sent and brought him in. Now he was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the Lord said, Arise, anoint him: for this is he. Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and the spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward. So Samuel rose up, and went to Ramah.—1 Sam. xvi, 12, 13.

THE Truth Seeker Annual
—AND—
Freethinkers' Almanac,
1890.
(E. M. 290.)
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Calendar for 1890,	5
Freethought in the United States, 1889,	17
Faded Flowers. Poem by J. E. Remsburg,	24
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue. T. B. Wakeman,	26
Mostly Fools. W. Stewart Ross (Saladin),	36
Record of the Spanish Inquisition,	44
Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas,	44
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral. Helen H. Gardener,	45
The Middle Ages. Illustrated,	69
The Priest,	70
The Supernatural World,	71
The Reformation,	73
Future Terrors,	77
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated,	79
Freethought Journals in the United States,	96
In Search of a Spirit. E. M. Macdonald,	97
Why I Left the Church. H. O. Pentecost,	109

NEW YORK:
PUBLISHED AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Gems of Thought.

EDUCATION in a broad sense is of recent birth, and is yet in its infancy; yet its fruits are undeniably good. Instruction has been limited to the acquisition of ancient ideas; but, since three hundred years past, it has been gradually expanding to embrace what the Germans call "earth knowledge," which is gained by direct study of nature's operations and conditions. Social progress is coincident with this advance.—R. C. Adams.

THE Improved Man will not waste his time in ascertaining the foolish theories of extinct peoples nor in studying the dead languages for the sake of understanding the theologies of ignorance and fear, but he will turn his attention to the affairs of life, and will do his utmost to see to it that every child has an opportunity to learn the demonstrated facts of science, the true history of the world, the great principles of right and wrong applicable to human conduct—the things necessary to the preservation of the individual and of the state, and such arts and industries as are essential to the preservation of all. —Ingersoll.

I NEVER suffered a political to become a personal difference.—Jefferson.

I HAV no party but the truth.—Voltaire.

CONSIDERING all the heresies, the enormous crimes, the wickedness, the astounding follies, which the Bible has been made to justify, and which its indiscriminate reading has suggested; considering that it has been, indeed, the sword which our Lord said he was sending; and that not the devil himself could hav invented an implement more potent to fill the hated world with lies, and blood, and fury; I think, certainly, that to send hawkers over the world loaded with copies of this book, scattering it in all places, among all persons . . . is the most culpable folly of which it is possible for man to be guilty.—J. A. Froude.

PEOPLE in general know not what wickedness there is in this pretended word of God. Brought up in habits of superstition, they take it for granted that the Bible is true, and that it is good; they permit themselvs not to doubt of it, and they carry the ideas they form of the benevolence of the almighty to the book which they hav been taught to believe was written by his authority. Good heavens! it is quite another thing; it a book of lies, wickedness, and blasphemy; for what can be greater blasphemy than to ascribe the wickedness of man to the orders of the almighty?—Paine.

THE spirit of intolerance was at first equally strong in the church of Rome and in the reformed churches, and its extinction both in Catholic and Protestant countries was due to the spirit of Rationalism. In both cases the clergy were the untiring enemies of this the noblest of all the conquests of civilization, and it was only by a long series of anti-ecclesiastical revolutions that the sword was at last wrung from their grasp. —Lecky.

CONSIDERING the length of time that Protestantism has existed, the extent of territory over which it has had control, and the age of the world to which its operations hav been confined, it has been, if aught, more tyrannical and bloody than the mother church.—John E. Remsburg.

HE who only seeks wisdom, design, and appropriateness in nature had better turn to the natural history of the tape-worm, to try his ingenuity upon. The entire object of its life consists in the production of eggs capable of development, and cannot be attained except through the sufferings of other creatures; millions of eggs perish aimlessly; some are developed, and the embryo finally becomes evaginated and grows into a sucking and reproductiv scolex, the young of which produce eggs and putrify in the excreta of other beings. Here we hav nothing of beauty, design, or wisdom, in the ordinary human construction of the terms.—Professor Giebel.

WHENCE—we may fairly ask of the teleologist—come the hosts of diseases and of physical evils? Why should nature inflict such frightful cruelties and horrors, on her own children and creatures, daily and hourly, by means of floods, earthquakes, lightning, fire, hail, volcanoes, storms, etc.?—Büchner.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 17. No. 13. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 29, 1890. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

A SUGGESTION TO THOSE WHO ARE TRYING TO GET A "CHANGE OF HEART."

Notes and Clippings.

THE leader of a lot of Second Adventists in Georgia is collecting from each of his dupes $5 with which to purchase a pair of wings to fly to heaven with. There are nearly four hundred of the sect, and if the leader succeeds in collecting $5 apiece from his entire flock he will hav a neat little sum to fly away with himself.

"WHEN will these good Sabbatarians learn that in attacking the Sunday paper they are barking up the wrong tree; that it is the Monday paper which collides with the decalog?" asks the Houston Post. Just as soon as they discover that it is the Monday paper which causes people to stay at home and read all day instead of going to church, comments the Galveston News.

MR. J. S. CLARKSON, first assistant postmaster-general, and official decapitator of Democratic postmasters, made this prophecy eighteen years ago: "Colonel Ingersoll will not always hold his present views: he will, we believe, some day become a Methodist minister." If Colonel Ingersoll doesn't hurry up and get converted Mr. Clarkson will be open to the aspersion of being a false prophet.

AN English court has just decided that a wife married in Japan after the fashion of that country is a legal wife in England, on the ground that "Japan has long been recognized as a civilized country." A previous decision in a case where the wife was a Hottentot and was married after the Hottentot fashion, had upset the union on the ground that the Hottentots were heathens and polygamists, and did not know what marriage in the civilized sense meant.

THE London Freethinker has this paragraph in its "Acid Drops:" "We wish Mr. Chainey no harm. He is not a dangerous lunatic, and a Freethinker might say to him, as Uncle Toby said to the fly, 'Surely the world is wide enough for thee and me.' But we regret to hear that he is being recommended as a lecturer to the N. S. S. branches. Of course the branches will do as they please. There is no authority over their choice of lecturers. But a great many Freethinkers will object to our platform being turned into a refuge for cranks, and protest that we do not seek for truth so minutely as to search for it in asylums."

THE Boston anti-Catholic committee of one hundred has had drafted and proposes to introduce in Congress the following amendment to the United States Constitution: "No state shall pass any law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the exercise thereof, nor shall any municipal town or county organization, or any state, use or authorize or permit the use of its property, money, or credit, or permit any taxation for the purpose of founding, supporting, or aiding any church, religious denomination, society, school, or other institution or undertaking under sectarian or denominational or ecclesiastical control. This article shall not hav the effect to impair any rights of property already vested."

SAYS the Pennsylvania Miners' Journal: "The man who believes in the thorough separation of church and state, cannot approve of reading the Bible in the public schools. The public schools are essentially a part of the state institution. The Bible is even more a part of our religious structure. These facts render the two incompatible under the spirit of our constitution and make it possible for even our most sincere Christians to consider all religious exercises in school, out of place. Religion should be taught in the church and at home, not in the schools. Our Constitution guarantees freedom of religious faith to all and we hope the day will never come when that guarantee is nullified even in the slightest degree."

THE De Ruyter weekly Gleaner, reporting the sermon of a local preacher against games of cards, dominoes, checkers, etc., says: "The poor Infidel, and the Agnostic, and those who fail to believe in the inspiration of all parts of the Bible, came in for the usual scorching. They hav some consolations in this life, however; while the average Freethinker is a pretty fair citizen, it somehow happens that nearly every bank defaulter and embezzler is a Sunday-school teacher or a leading churchman, and more ministers figure in the criminal courts than members of any other learned profession. It could be argued that all religious instructors should be denounced because a few prove bad, as consistently as that all games should be banished from the fireside because a few are abused."

GARDEN CITY is having a fight over religion in its schools. The unbelievers are demanding that devotional exercises be omitted. One school patron says: "A book of fables, commonly called the Bible, which reflects in coarse terms upon the character and conduct of many of our citizens, is regularly read in the schools. The reading of this book encourages sectarianism, as many advanced thinkers reject the book and all it contains. It is also a custom in the schools to sing songs in praise of one Jesus Christ, a Jewish carpenter, who is affirmed to hav lived many centuries ago, and who is fancied by some to be divine. It is demanded that this singing of praises to a carpenter and this reading of a book of fables in our schools be now stopped, as a matter of fairness to those who believe neither in the book nor the carpenter."

THE Christian Advocate complains: The tendency of social entertainments in the church is to degenerate more and more. The exercises and amusements provided to attract the people and get their money become stale and insipid. It is necessary to make frequent changes and resort to something more spicy, more ridiculous, or more surprising until the ingenuity of the most cunning inventor has been exhausted. The Christian Witness tells of a "soap-bubble social," at which adult Christians were entertained like infants with the familiar amusement of blowing beautiful bubbles for several hours. Another exchange quotes an advertisment of a "doll's reception" given by a church to raise money for the improvement of the Sunday-school room. This petty business is sometimes dignified with the title "Christian work" or "church work." A colored man whose mistress told him he might eat all he could at a church supper and she would pay the bill, after consuming a fabulous quantity of ice cream, cake, and strawberries, exclaimed with evident satisfaction: "I'se done been eatin' for de Lor' an' it cost tree dolla's."

Communications.

Prodigiously Absurd Stories in the Bible.

As very great efforts hav been and are being made by those who believe the Bible to be the true inspired word of God, who they think is the all-wise, infinit creator of the universe, to amend our national Constitution so as to acknowledge God as sovereign ruler and Christ as his co-equal, and to enforce by legislativ enactments Sunday as a Sabbath and the Bible as a text-book in our public schools, it may not be out of place to refer to a very few of the many improbable and unreasonable stories and statements contained in that book that they revere and think perfect.

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth;" but prior to that beginning, is it reasonable to suppose that a self-created God existed in a vacuum during all the eternal ages before time began; and at the beginning aroused himself to action and created the universe out of nothing; and did it all in six days except a little finishing work on the seventh, which he consecrated a Sabbath for rest?

Creation being finished, and all things pronounced very good, there seemed to be an evil thing possessing great power, coexistent with man—query, did God create it, and if so, why? As he created all things, it must be he did; and how does this comport with the assertion that all he created was good, and very good?

By eating the fruit of the tree of knowledge a curse fell upon all mankind who might liv from the beginning to the end of time. And can anyone giv a common-sense reason why God did not wish those whom he created in his own image to possess a knowledge of good and evil? And if he did not, why was the tree of knowledge created, with its beautiful fruit, unless it were to tempt the first pair to do an evil thing, and thereby, as God knew before anything was created, bring on all the misery that afflicts humanity in this life, as well as the eternal punishment of a vast majority in a future state, where "the smoke of their torment ascendeth for ever and ever?"

This is just a short "bird's-eye view" of the situation at the beginning, as the result of the great, good, and wise work of a great creator as delineated in the Bible that most Christians wish all compelled to revere.

And now I will refer to a very few of the many—to state it mildly—unreasonable statements and stories found in the Bible.

The progeny of Adam and Eve, as commanded, multiplied and populated the earth. But as by "Adam's fall we sinned all," they were very wicked, so much so that about sixteen hundred years after creation, "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth." "And the Lord said, I will destroy both man and beast and creeping thing; for it repenteth me that I hav made them." But "Noah was a just man and perfect," so it seems God changed his mind, and instead of destroying everything, he thought best to save Noah and his family, with enough of all other living things to replenish the earth after the flood. And what was the result? This just and perfect man, who was saved to propagate a better race, was the first man in historic annals who got drunk, and from that time to the present drunkenness has been a great curse to the world.

Can we look on this in any other light than that God, who foreknew all things, made a sad mistake?

Again mankind multiplied and became numerous, but as wicked apparently as before the flood.

On the plain of Shinar they built a city, and were building a tower that might reach to heaven. "And the Lord came down to see the city and the tower"—by the way, could not the infinit, omniscient God know, without coming down to see? After viewing the situation, it would seem, he thought best to stop their building, because, as appears from the reading, he feared he could not control them if they remained together, for the account reads thus: "And now nothing will be restrained from them, which they hav imagined to do." So he confounded their language and "scattered them upon the face of the earth."

But mankind continued wicked, and the inference is, from the reading in the Bible, that God despaired of controling all, or making them good, so he resolved on having a chosen people of his own, who would honor him, and that he would favor and bless above all others.

So, through Abraham, the father of the faithful, the plan was to be consummated. And now I propose to refer to a few of the many strange things resorted to in order to accomplish this purpose. They are miraculous, monstrous, vindictiv, cruel, indecent (many of them), and beyond reasonable belief by intelligent thinking people.

Abraham and his legitimate wife Sarah were both untruthful, and were guilty of incest; for she was his half-sister; and Isaac the second patriarch was a miraculous child, born when his father was a hundred, and his mother ninety years old. Jacob, the third in succession, through deception and lying, assisted by his mother, deceived Isaac, and stole the birthright of Esau, and this in accordance with God's plan, for it is written, "Jacob hav I loved and Esau hav I hated," and St. Paul declared that this was even before the brothers were born.

Nothing in the account goes to show that Jacob was the better man, but only because God willed it so.

Now we will come to the captivity of the Israelites, the progeny of the sons of Jacob in Egypt. There they lived four hundred years, and came to be about three millions of people. God, in order to show his mighty power, caused terrible plagues to afflict the Egyptians because their king at first refused to let them go, and afterward hardened his heart so that he would not, and as we read in the holy book: "So that ye may tell to your children and your children's children what wonders I hav wrought in Egypt." Did the egotism of any man ever exceed or equal this showing of power by a so-called good creator?

The miraculous passage of the Red sea, when God caused an "east wind" to divide the waters, so that there was a wall of waters on either side and the Israelites crossed on dry land, and the waters returning suddenly destroyed the pursuing army of Pharaoh—this is an incredible story, but it is said all things are possible with God.

After wandering in the wilderness for a time, and becoming surfeited and sick of their miraculous manna food, they wept and longed for the "flesh pots of Egypt." They cried for the fish, the cucumbers, melons, leeks, onions, garlic, etc., and God was very angry. Read Num. xi, and notice the malicious nature exhibited in God's dealings with his chosen people. Perhaps it may serve to explain why some parents, in dealing with their children as well as others in matters of every-day life, are wont to retaliate maliciously when children or others are persevering in their importunities, and being angry take a course like unto God in this case, when in his wrath "a wind went forth from the Lord," and he gave them quails to eat for a whole month, so that it came out of their nostrils, and while it was yet between their teeth, ere it was chewed, the wrath of the Lord was kindled and the Lord smote the people with a very great plague.

I hav casually read this quail story many times, but never till recently thought of its mighty magnitude, nor the suffering of his chosen people caused by the Lord's anger and seemingly uncalled-for malice. It occurred to me that it was perhaps the largest of the many great Bible stories, and exceeded any told by Munchausen, or in the "Arabian Nights' Entertainment."

In order to get a correct solution of what seemed quite an intricate mathematical problem, I wrote to two friends who hav taught in the common and high schools of Michigan many years and hav well earned the title of "professor," and are noted as experts in mathematics. The account reads that the Lord's wind "brought quails from the sea, and let them fall by the camp, as it were a day's journey on this side, and a day's journey on the other side, round about the camp, as it were two cubits high." Authorities seem to differ as to the length of a day's journey, also the length of a cubit. One of the professors based his calculation on twenty-three miles as a day's journey, and eighteen inches for a cubit. He knew some authorities made each a greater distance, but said he would be liberal, as the result would be large at the least.

The other gentleman based his estimate on a day's journey being thirty-three miles and a fraction over, and a cubit nearly twenty-two inches. And he had access to all the best authorities. I asked them to giv the quantity of quails that fell in the bushes. But there is a question whether "round about the camp," means a circle two days' journey in diameter, or a certain width, undefined, along the line of march on each side the length of a day's journey. The professor who estimated a day's journey and a cubit at the shortest distance, based his calculation on the diameter of a circle only, the other figured on the diameter of a circle basis, and also a day's journey a mile wide along the route. He also estimated the amount of quail actually gathered. The account says they gathered quails two days and one night. And those who gathered least gathered ten homers, and as a homer is eight bushels and a trifle over, each person who gathered obtained eighty bushels, at least. He called the whole number of people three millions, deducting one-fifth for those who might be unable to gather, and found the number of bushels on that basis to be 201,764,550. Calling forty bushels a wagon-load, we hav 504,411 loads. And if each bushel actually gathered would giv twenty-five pounds of flesh food, there would hav been enough for each one of the three million persons to eat one hundred and sixty pounds per day, for the month that the Lord in his anger required them to eat of it. Quite enough, certainly, to cause a surfeit.

And estimating forty bushels as a wagon-load, enough quails fell in a circle two days' journey in diameter—a day's journey thirty-three miles—to fill 7,059,245,855 wagons. The circumference of the globe being twenty-five thousand miles, all the wagons in train, each wagon and team occupying two rods in length, would make a train of wagons that would reach 1,764 times around the earth at the equator. The number actually gathered, as estimated, would load wagons enough to reach one and one-fourth times around the globe.

I hav given these figures, because the quantity according to the Bible story is so immense that it is inconceivable to most minds, even when given in bushels.

But my objection to the magnitude of this story is fully equaled by its objectionable features in a moral point of view. In the first place, it is too big for belief, and is evidently false. Secondly, it represents God in his dealings with his especial, favorit, chosen people so vindictiv and malicious that as an example it is devoid of all justice, benevolence, and love.

In addition to the foregoing, I will mention, and briefly, a few other objectionable things found in this so-called perfect book.

Lot and his family are in the line of God's few chosen ones; and there were only four who were good enough to be saved from the flames of burning Sodom, but the wife who dared to look back at the ruin of her burning home was changed to a pillar of salt, and there "she stands to this day." The father and two daughters encamped at night, the girls induced their father to get drunk, with the result that each bore a son whose father was the grandfather.

Christian friends, think of this example; three of God's chosen ones guilty of drunkenness and incest, in order to perpetuate the line of God's chosen people.

But we must hurry along and omit most of these bad stories, for there are many. I will casually glance at a few more. Samson was a favored one, and when his hair was long did many miraculous things. He must hav been activ as well as strong, for he caught three hundred foxes and tying them in pairs, tail to tail, with a brand of fire between, sent them into the Philistines' corn to destroy it. He also killed one thousand men with a jawbone, carried on his shoulders the ponderous gates of Gaza, and at last caused the temple to fall by removing the pillars that supported it, thereby killing more people than he had killed before in his life.

Strange that God's favored ones should seem to be upheld in killing, when in so doing they violate the command, "Thou shalt not kill."

Joshua the great commander, led in the slaughter of many thousands, whom God thrust into life without their consent, and we hav no evidence that they were not as good as God's favorits, who by his direction destroyed them.

David and Solomon were, the first a man after God's own heart, the other the wisest man, yet both were noted polygamists, and guilty of many disreputable acts.

Strange it is, but still it's true—if the Bible is—that after all God's efforts to hav at least a few chosen good men, that should obey, love, and serve him, seemingly, even the infinit could not accomplish it. He would hav an elect few who could not be deceived; "he hath mercy on whom he will hav mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth," yet they were perverse, stiff-necked, and he cast them off.

These are a few of the attributes of the creator—whom no man hath seen at any time, and yet Moses talked with him face to face as a man would with a friend.

But the time has come when many who believe and revere the Bible will say at times that the Old Testament is only in part authority now, but they giv no criterion by which to judge which is and which is not to be received. They now rely on the New Testament, claiming a new dispensation by the savior, through whose atoning sacrifice some claim all will and others that all may be saved. Who could know the truth of this matter better than Christ himself, if he is the very God, or a third part of deity? When asked, "Master, are there few that be saved?" he answered, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate, for I say unto you that many shall strive to enter in and shall not be able." Also, "Strait is the gate and narrow the way that leads to life, and few there be that find it. Broad is the road that leads to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat." "Many are called, but few are chosen," etc. The Old Testament does not definitly teach immortality. The question is asked: "If a man die, shall he liv again?" But Christ, it is claimed, by his resurrection brought immortality to light. And with it came the doctrin of eternal punishment. Also, by the teachings of St. Paul principally, who was the most learned and eloquent of New Testament writers, came the old Calvinistic doctrin of election, reprobation, foreordination, and predestination.

And now, although that doctrin is more definitly taught in the Bible than any other, thanks to the progressiv philanthropy of the age, a great effort is being made to eliminate it from the Calvinistic creed.

It is a thorn in the side of progressiv Christianity, but one not easily eradicated; the clergy will, however, find a way to do it; they are skilled in such matters; their craftiness is proverbial. Paul was a leader to show the way. He said, "Being crafty, I caught you with guile;" and our modern clergy are apt pupils in that respect, and the Bible so peculiar they can prove almost anything they wish to.

Although the New Testament does not contain as much that is immoral, obscene, and unreasonable as the Old, it is principally because there is less of it.

The story of Christ's incarnation is largely of that character. His Sermon on the Mount contains many good maxims, but who will claim it is best to turn the other cheek when one is smitten? And if your coat is forcibly taken, that the cloak should be given also? Does anyone believe it possible to love his enemy? How long could mankind exist, if you all took no thought for life, what ye shall eat or drink, or what ye shall put on? "Take no thought for the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself!" It is said, when Christ was born, angels sang, "Peace on earth and good will to men." But he said he came "not to bring peace but a sword;" that the father should be against the mother, and a man's foes of his own household. He wrought miracles; but were they all good? His first one was turning water into wine. Will Christian temperance people think that a good example? He cursed a fig-tree because it did not bear fruit out of season. Were it not better to cause it to bear fruit rather than curse and kill it? And from his last words is it probable that he was more than human, when he exclaimed in his anguish, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

I hav briefly noticed some things that seem objectionable, although found in the "inspired book." But I hav purposely omitted many so immoral and obscene that no respectable publisher would put them in type, except in the Bible. And were it not for the reverential awe in which priestcraft has clothed that book, Mr. Comstock, our national officer for the suppression of obscene literature, would prohibit it at once.

As the Bible tells principally of God's doings, and as no one could see his face and liv, in conclusion I will present a little picture of him. Start not, gentle reader, nor catch for breath, and whisper, Blasphemy! for it is only a pen-picture by John the Revelator. In Rev. xix, I read, "His eyes were as a flame of fire; on his head were many crowns; . . . he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood, and his name is called The Word of God. And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of almighty God. And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings and Lord of Lords." This caps the climax and I close, hoping all may learn and practice a better way.

CONVERSE CLOSE.

Grattan, Mich., Feb. 20, 1890.

Applying the Whip to the Churches.*

That we are living in "perilous times" in the history of the world, in the church as well as the state, we believe all who hav interested themselvs in the subject will admit. There is doubtless a reason for this decline in spiritual life and power in the churches, and whether they can ever rise out of this slough or not we do not know. We believe it is one of the signs of the great apostasy prophesied to come to pass previous to the manifestation of the Lord to establish and gather out "all things that offend." One thing we do believe with all our heart: that there is a drawing and grand holding power in the simple gospel, not to be found in a grab-bag or a progressiv eucher party, or the seductiv and much diluted oyster stew, so much in vogue at the present day and used as a means to induce the unthinking masses to "join our church."

We know churches who hav so far forgotten themselvs and the dignity of a Christlike life and example, as to permit their houses of worship to be used for all kinds of questionable entertainments, suppers, charades, cantatas, and every other kind of jugglery that the modern "progressiv" church-member can invent. It has seemed to be not so much what, as anything that would persuade a ten-cent piece from the ungodly heathen who might be artfully cajoled into attending. The whole alphabet has been run through for names that would prove catching and new. "We hav the authors' socials, blackberry and broom brigade, and busy bee, cream, cake, calico and charade, Dorcas and donkey, evergreen and Easter, farewell and fan, garden and gift, harvest home and Halloween, ice-cream and instrumental, Japanese wedding, jug-breaking and jelly-making, knitting and keepsake, lawn and literary, May queen, Martha Washington, mush and milk and mission, necktie and New Year, old folks and fashion, pink and pound, quarterly, reading and raspberry, spelling-bee and strawberry, tea drinking, tableau and Thanksgiving, union and variety, white yuletide, young folks' and zenana socials. It is suggested that the alphabet be completed by a few xtra xcentric socials, if it is possible for any 'progressiv' church to arrange it."

In the weekly prayer-meetings held in the same room long and loud prayers are offered that the Lord will pour out his blessing upon them, when, if they exercised a little sense, they would know that the absence of blessing was caused by their evil doings, lack of spirituality, and lukewarmness generally. They either willfully or carelessly forget what God has said, "My house shall be called an house of prayer, but ye hav made it a den of thieves;" for if some of the methods of obtaining money from the unwary in some of our churches is not robbery, then we are no judge of stealing or gambling. If the Lord should conclude to answer the prayers offered and pour out a blessing upon them, this same blessing would be likely to strike right in the midst of an entertainment held in the prayer-meeting room, for which they too often unblushingly charge twenty-five cents admission for five cents' worth of so-called entertainment. And the worst feature of the whole case is that this stuff is palmed off on an ignorant public under the name of "doing something for religion." They giv their pittance for the "show" and—despise the givers of it. You can hear them sneeringly remark that the professing Christians in the church act very much like the unprofessing Christians out of it; and that they are "just as good as the Christians, and make no pretense either"—which, alas! in many instances is too true—and we all know that as soon as you lose a man's respect, then your influence for good over that individual is gone.

At the rate of progress made in the past few years in this manner of raising money to pay church expenses, in ten years from now, in place of children imitating monkeys and the older acting like unconverted imbecils and heathen, you will see the clog-dancer and the second-class minstrel show. Why, in one Chicago church, at a show held within the past year, the hit of the evening was a burlesque on the resurrection of the body. One indignant listener wrote to the Chicago Herald as follows:

I hav just returned from a church entertainment in which the great hit of the evening was a burlesque on the "resurrection of the body," on the same platform from which, in all probability, the pastor of the church will on next Easter Sunday preach on this subject as the "grand central truth of our religion!" An imitation of an old-time choir sang in nasal tones of "The Lord of Glory Waking up the Sleepers in the Old Churchyard." There were five or six verses rendered in the most ridiculous manner and received by a large audience with hearty laughter and applause. This was not the only objectionable feature of the entertainment by any means. I single it out because of its sacrilegious nature. I suppose these same people would be shocked at any hint of a revival of the miracle plays, in which the almighty and his angels, the devil and his angels, heaven and hell, were represented on the stage. Taking into consideration our boasted civilization and refinement, the miracle play of a century or two ago was not so shocking as the modern church entertainment. The former aimed at arousing the fears of the impenitent by an attempt to picture the wrath to come, while in the latter the holiest and most sacred things are held up to ridicule. I read an article not long ago in a Methodist periodical, in which the latter deplored the lack of reverence shown during public worship, especially by the young. Surely one need not seek for the cause. Those whom our savior drove from the temple were not guilty of so great a sin as we of to-day, who not only buy and sell in our churches, but turn the house of God into a variety theater and the Bible into a jest-book.

We quote this to show the depths of iniquity a body of people can sink into under the name of "church.'

O brethren, why is it you cannot rise to a higher plane? The church of to-day contains members who are ashamed and greatly alarmed at these iniquitous proceedings; they stand it as long as they can and then become nauseated and step out from the "unclean thing." Can you afford to lose this class of people? We know some call them cranks and old fogies. They are generally the life of the church and are to be found among those who realize that the gospel simply preached and taught will affect a man's religious and spiritual nature much quicker and better than a twenty five cent oyster stew, containing one oyster or a dozen. How much will a donkey social promote the spiritual growth or a desire for a better life in the ungodly? In describing this form of iniquity, V. A. Dake says: "The center of attraction for the evening was a picture of a donkey without a tail, and the work of the evening consisted in blindfolding the so-called followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, together with the fun-loving worldlings, and watching them pin a detached tail wherever in their blindness they might put it, and the one pinning their string tail the nearest to where it belonged received a prize. This was accompanied by bursts of laughter as they fixed the tail to the ear, nose, or foreleg or any other part of the animal's body. 'Hear, O heavens, and giv ear, O earth: for the Lord hath spoken: I hav nourished and brought up children, and they hav rebelled against me' (Isa. i, 2). What a digraceful performance in the house of the Lord! What an inner, hidden lowering to sensuality and uncleanness is foreshadowed in this donkey social! Why this pinning on of the tail? What necessity to introduce such a monstrously unclean element into the church of God? 'Were they ashamed when they committed abomination? Nay, they were not ashamed, neither could they blush' (Jer. viii, 12). 'For the hurt of the daughter of my people I am hurt; I am black; astonishment hath taken hold on me' (Jer. viii, 21)."

Can you for a moment conceive of such a notice as this immediately after the revival on the day of Pentecost?

DONKEY SOCIAL.

There will be a "Donkey Social" in the basement of the Church of the Apostles, at Jerusalem, on the third day of the week, at the third hour of the day. This is something new and a decided good time is anticipated. All are invited.

JAMES THE APOSTLE.

How vigorously would our savior hav applied the whiplash of small cords to the backs of these blindfolded donkey-repairers.

Think of it! Think of it! One donkey pinned to the wall and a lot of other two-legged donkeys, blindfolded, trying to pin the lost tail where they think it ought to go at ten cents a try; and this is not done secretly, for fear the outsiders might behold and be disgusted—which, as a rule, they are, and feel themselvs in better company out of it—but it is done openly and with unblushing effrontery where all can behold if they pay the bill!

We notice that a large share of these entertainments are held under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor societies—"to help (?) the church." The motiv is good, but the means employed are low and un-christian, the very opposit to that revealed in God's word as best adapted for fitting his children for real Christian service. Such endeavor may help "the church," but is a positiv hindrance to true Christian growth and work. How would it do, then, to stop this kind of Christian (?) Endeavor and endeavor to be Christians (Christlike) for a while in Christ's way.

Do not be a fool or a hypocrit. If you are ignorant, then God pity you and lead you into the path of his revealed will, where sense may be imbibed. If you are led into it for policy's sake or to curry favor with the world, had not you better quit, because this is not God's service? The thing is rotten, and the painful part of it is, those participating know it, but they hav given a building to God plastered over with a four-ply mortgage and must get out of the scrape in some way. Now, the devil, who has charge of these things, will prove a very poor friend when you stand face to face with the almighty and render an account of your service, whether to the glory of God or not. "Comparisons are odious," but in the sight of our heavenly father we would rather be an honest Infidel than a reprobate believer—one who is constantly bringing the cause of Christ into disrepute, by dealing in this donkey-and-pudding-and-milk stuff and calling it God's service.

The churches of to-day are filled with those whose religion is tied with a very loose string. Their consciences—what they hav—are upon the elastic order and can be stretched to fit any emergency, either godly or otherwise. The sinner, as a rule, clasps his hands in glee and has not a bit of respect for a church with this kind of a pedigree.

Not True as Stated.

W. H. M. in American Sentinel.

The following extracts from the Congressional Record, of February 19th, are suggestiv of the methods employed in accumulating signatures to petitions for a national Sunday-rest law:

Mr. Sherman: I present a petition of citizens of Ohio, collected by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, praying for the passage of a National Sunday-rest law. I notice the printed indorsement on the back of the petition states that it contains seven hundred and one individual signatures. This is evidently not true; but I suppose the statement ought to be that it contains the signatures of clergymen or otherwise representing seven hundred and one individual persons. It seems to me that the person who made the indorsement, ought not to state it in the way it is, for it is not true as stated.

Mr. Spooner: I find on my desk, doubtless intended to be presented to the Senate, a petition said to contain two thousand individual signatures from Wisconsin, praying for the passage of a Sunday-rest law. In the envelope I find, and I present to the Senate, three printed slips with a printed form of petition, and the following indorsement:

Indorsed by Madison convention of Congregational churches representing churches of five counties, with membership of fourteen hundred. [Attest] JAMES M. CAMPBELL, President.
Sun Prairie, Wis., June 10, 1889.

Which accounts, as I understand it, for the fourteen hundred individual signatures stated on the envelope.

Here is another indorsed by a meeting of citizens of Milwaukee, June 9, 1889, number of petitioners, four hundred and fifty; and still a third, indorsed by a mass meeting of citizens of Milwaukee, June 9, 1889, number of petitioners, one hundred and fifty.

When it is understood that what was said in these individual cases is just as applicable to millions of ostensible signatures, counted and presented in favor of this movement, then it can be understood how unanswerable an argument against the passage of this bill is bound up in these same petitions.

* C. H. Jones, editor of a Christian journal in Chicago, has printed a little pamphlet to circulate among the churches. As THE TRUTH SEEKER is in favor of every good work, we reprint the larger portion of the pamphlet.

The Freethinker's Mission.

It is frequently urged against us that, as Freethinkers, we hav nothing to teach, and that our aim appears to be the destruction at once of religion and morality.

Such, however, is a complete misrepresentation of our desire or intentions. The Freethinker's mission is of an entirely different character. His object is to eliminate the supernatural element from religion —to make what shall, hereafter, be called by that name consist, not of a fixed set of theological beliefs, but of a wise set of principles for the regulation of conduct; in other words, to put religion on a purely natural basis, so that its claims may be decided in this world without reference to another.

To accomplish this work effectually, the Freethinker strives, in the first place, to show that, whether there is a God or not who rules and governs the universe, his existence is a purely problematical question which, with our present faculties, can never be satisfactorily settled. At best it can only be a hopeful conjecture on the part of the Theist. No one knows. Many believe; but belief is not knowledge.

Christian Theists proclaim that their God is infinit; that man cannot, by searching, find him out; that he is only to be approached through faith. But is not this equivalent to the acknowledgment that God is unknown? To think is to condition.

Sir Wm. Hamilton says, "To think is to bring under the condition of the brain the thing to be thought." But if God is infinit, he is conditionless —that is, he is unthinkable.

And there is another theme upon which the Freethinker finds it his duty to point out that man possesses absolutely no knowledge, viz., the alleged existence of an immortal element in man. The soul is an indefinable term. Believers can only explain it by telling us what it is not.

Although the brain is the seat and center of all feelings, Christians assure us that the ego is not to be confounded with the brain; intelligence, or the totality of the characteristics of the brain in action, although regarded as a necessary part of the soul, Christians separate in thought from the organ through which it manifests itself, and without which it has never been known to exist. Singularly enough, Christians and Spiritualists, who take the ground that we are immortal in regard to the future, are discreetly silent in respect to the past. But if I do not remember who I was, before I became who I am, what reasonable ground hav I for believing that I shall know who I am when my soul has taken possession of somebody else? The fact is, man has no knowledge of an ego apart from organism; although many, with very slender and unsatisfactory evidence, believe they hav.

But while these matters may be set aside as problematical, there are subjects upon which the Freethinker may hav positiv knowledge. He cannot doubt his own existence. That is a fact to him that requires no proof. He may alter the dictum of Descartes and say: Sum—cogito; ergo sum. Nor can he disbelieve the evidence of his own senses when they are properly trained. Starting, therefore, with a belief in his own existence, and a belief in the existence of "the world in which he livs and moves and has his being," he has something solid as a foundation.

The dreams of the idealist may be set aside as fantastic and foolish, beside the accumulated and verifiable knowledge of the race.

But the Freethinker finds himself beset by a number of fussy persons who are anxious for him to accept "the only true religion;" and when he commences his investigation he finds that there are a large number of religions in the world for each of which the claim is put forward that it is "divinely inspired." But as each of these religions contradicts the others, and as of the adherents of them each condemns the others as false, the Freethinker examins them all, finds that they hav a common origin; finds that associated with them are childish absurdities, crude ideas of nature and man, gross superstitions, barbarous practices, and he resolves to undertake the mission of supplying his fellow-man with the key to the proper understanding of these early faiths of mankind.

To successfully wage war against the erroneous and harmful teachings of the past he employs against the enemies of mankind all the art and skill of the trained intellectual warrior.

He employs his wit to expose folly; his argument and eloquence to persuade the reason and enthrall the heart; his scholarship to confound the pedant, and his science to instruct the wise.

He examins and refutes the statements of the so-called sacred books.

He demonstrates that if they were divinely inspired, the inspiration failed to impart either wisdom or goodness to the heads or hearts of the alleged authors.

But when he has done this his work has only just begun. It will widen with the patience and teachableness of his hearers. His mission is to supply the key that explains all the phenomena of the past. His theme will therefore be evolution, evolution, forever evolution. Perhaps he will begin with language, and trace its growth; then he will go on with religion, tracing it through its various stages—animism, fetichism, anthropomorphism—until he reaches its present transitory condition; he may then turn to politics, to science, to art, to fashions, to morality. In all these evolution will be the key. He may turn to the study of health and disease, to physiology and psychology, to life and death, and evolution will be a constant and never-failing guide. It will assist him to understand nature's method, and through it he will learn to understand and explain the life, progress, and decay of every living organism, from the smallest animalcule up to man. He will learn that nature's process is from the simple to the complex, by slow but certain stages, through struggle and pain onward. And when the Freethinker has shown how religions hav grown, when he has traced them to their source, then he may proceed to the great question of morality which in some way or other has ever been bound up with religion, though it need form no necessary part of it.

For after all, morality is purely an affair of this world—all virtues are purely secular.

Sincerity, truthfulness, honesty, magnanimity, thriftiness, temperance, justice, these and all the virtues of which men and women are capable are purely secular; they relate to our actions toward one another and are just as good and useful whether there be a God or not, whether man will liv again or not.

It will be seen at once that the mission of the Freethinker is comprehensiv. There is no subject that will not hav interest for him. He will not only instruct his fellows in science and philosophy, but will take an activ part in promoting their social and political progress. He will be their teacher and their leader. But he will be no priest. He will show them how to avoid the follies and blunders of the past; but having shown them the value of Freethought, he will call upon them to courageously exercise it.

Is not this a useful work? Could man possibly engage in a nobler mission? I trow not. And the Freethinker devoting himself day by day to exposing falsehood, explaining facts, ridiculing folly, and teaching and practicing the highest moral principles, will receive a rich reward for his steadfastness and sincerity and singleness of purpose. In the language of Shelley:

> The consciousness of good, which neither gold
> Nor sordid fame, nor hope of heaven.y bliss
> Can purchase; but a life of resolute good,
> Unalterable will, quenchless desire
> Of universal happiness.

ARTHUR B. MOSS.

A Christian Fabrication.

Some weeks since, there appeared in the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER one of those incidents so commonly related in religious meetings of how an Infidel died. His name was Edward Platner. He died in Nebraska City, Neb. He was a great admirer of the great Infidel, Colonel Ingersoll; had all his books, together with many others of a similar kind, and he was never so happy as when arguing against the scriptures. Well, this man was finally brought to his death-bed, and it was related that, on the day of his death, he sent for a Christian neighbor, who prayed with him, and that he then called his family to his bedside and warned them against the false doctrins he had taught them, and directed that all his Infidel books should be burnt. And then he died. All this has been widely published, as I understand, in religious, as well as secular, newspapers.

Now, my common sense teaches me that all such narrativs are lies. They cannot possibly be true. If Edward Platner, on his death bed, called for a Christian neighbor and directed that his books be burnt, etc., it is very evident that he was either out of his mind, or that he was dishonest when claiming to be a disbeliever in inspiration. Men do not change their opinions when sick any more than they do when they are well; in fact, not so much, for a well man is able to see new light better than a sick man. We never hear of a Methodist becoming a Baptist, or a Presbyterian, or a Catholic, on his death-bed, or a Catholic becoming a Methodist when he is about to die. It is out of all reason. And just so in the case of Edward Platner. When I first saw the incident published I determined to run it down. I first wrote to the pastor of the First Methodist church in Nebraska City asking whether the narrativ, which I inclosed, was true. I received an answer saying, "The statements which you quote from the Omaha Bee, concerning Mr. Platner, are substantially true, except that the books, being in the hands of those to whom he had loaned them, were not burnt. But he requested that they should be burnt, and renounced his Infidelity."

Meeting soon afterward a gentleman who formerly resided in Nebraska City, I asked for the names of such men as I could rely on who would be apt to know Mr. Platner, and whatever of truth there might be in the published stories. It was thus that I opened correspondence with Mr. Samuel E. Harris, who writes me that Mr. Edward Platner was an Infidel, as stated, that he was a dissipated man, that he was sick for many weeks, and was unconscious the most of the time for the last two days of his life. That on the day of his death a Christian neighbor came unbidden to the house and prayed at the bedside of the dying man; that no books were ordered to be burnt, and no books hav been burnt; that Mrs. Platner says she values the books herself and would not consent to their being burnt, and that is the whole story.

And yet Christian literature abounds with such fictions as is here exposed. The mere fact that a Christian neighbor intrudes himself at the bedside of an unconscious dying man is sufficient basis with some preachers to build a colossal lie upon. These lies are well calculated to work upon the fears of the ignorant and superstitious, and they are thus trained to lower depths of ignorance and degradation. If it be true that there is a God in heaven who will judge men for the deeds done on earth, this Christian neighbor who went unbidden to the house of Edward Platner, and this preacher who writes me that the published accounts are substantially true, will be apt to feel mighty cheap when they come to plead at that bar, if it should so be that they will then hav any sense of shame left.

JAMES K. MAGIE.

Washington, D. C., March 24, 1890.

Miss Wixon Attends a Seance.

While in Washington, D. C., recently, I went one evening to a séance—a spiritual séance. It was held at the residence of P. L. O. A. Keeler, and was attended by about thirty or thirty-five ladies and gentlemen, most of whom were, as it appeared, frequenters of the séance room. A corner of the room was arranged with dark cambric as a cabinet. In front of the same was seated Mr. Keeler at one end, with two persons selected from the company as companions, Mr. Keeler, it is said, holding the arm of the one next him. A cambric curtain covered all three up to their chins. A little negro boy made music with the harmonicon. Back of the medium in the cabinet were several musical instruments and a table, upon which was fixed a telegraph apparatus. A guitar and the various musical instruments were played during the evening, seemingly by unseen hands within the cabinet. The drum-beat was very fine, and was said to be performed with clothes-pins for sticks. The reveille indicated no amateur performer. Questions were asked by the persons present and answered by the telegraph, interpretations of which were given by a gentleman in the flesh, who had himself arranged the apparatus. A paper block and pencil were placed within the cabinet, and a number of messages thrown over the top of the curtain addressed to parties present. Some of them seemed to be quite long, and were supposed to be written in from two to thirty seconds. Hands were seemingly thrust through the curtain and also appeared over the top of the curtain. The coat of Mr. Keeler was thrown over the curtain; the outer covering of cambric being instantly removed by the leader of the séance showed the medium in his shirt-sleeves. During this operation he had not apparently moved from his position.

The privilege of shaking hands with a professed spirit was accorded me. I stepped to the cabinet and touched the hand that protruded, as it seemed, through the cambric curtain. The hand patted mine, and was, to all intents and purposes, a very human hand—white, soft, fleshly, like any hand, and belonged, I should say, to a man. It indicated a desire to write me a message if I would hold a pad on the shoulder of the gentleman who sat next the medium. I most cheerfully complied with the wish and was highly pleased with the idea, for nothing would giv me greater pleasure than to receive a genuin communication from the world unseen. The hand grasped a pencil firmly and wrote two lines, one of which was in this wise: "This is new to me——" The rest was undistinguishable; the name was a scrawl that is impossible to decipher.

I was permitted to look into the cabinet. I saw only the instruments of music, one of which, the guitar, was turned over while I looked, without apparent contact of hands. The management of the séance within the cabinet purported to be by Mr. George Christy, a deceased minstrel. It was in nearly all respects similar to like séances given years ago by the Davenports, Eddys, and later by Mrs. Huntoon and Bridge, of Boston.

I came away no wiser than I went. I do not labor under the impression that the manifestations were by disembodied beings. I had no such impression. True, the appearances were mysterious and marvelous, but, I dare say, could they be honestly and sincerely explained by those who do know how they are performed, there would be no marvel or mystery at all. The "spirits" had a grand opportunity to demonstrate that they were actual spirits. They neglected to do so, and I am as much in the dark as ever. Had they chosen—that is, allowing they are actual spirits of the dead—to hav given me one iota of proof, I would hav published it to the world with pleasure. As now, I feel I hav only witnessed some cleverly performed tricks without the privilege of seeing how they were performed. Could I hav had permission to sit within the cabinet during the performance I would assuredly hav discovered the modus operandi alleged to belong solely to the spirit world.

About 10 o'clock the séance closed. Mr. Keeler, stationed at the door, received the usual fees, and, if I mistake not, there was a roguish twinkle in his eye as I bade him good-night, which seemed to say as plainly as words, "I know that I know, and I know that the others do not know."

Mr. Keeler is making a good living. He has a bright wife and a charming little boy, as sweet a child as I hav ever seen. SUSAN H. WIXON.

A Provisional Hypothesis of Another Life.

BROTHER MACDONALD: You say: "If Mr. Keeler can do what Mr. Burr and Mr. Ten Eyck credit him with doing, it is a trifle singular that he should flatly refuse to giv Mr. McArthur and the Editor a sitting under the simple conditions imposed by the latter."

Yes, it is unfortunate. But do you mean to say that the medium himself refused? or was it his spirit guide, who calls himself George Christy? Out of a great multitude who hav gone to Mr. Keeler for slate-writing, I hav heard of only three or four failures to get tests, including your own. And the disappointed applicants were Spiritualists, like Mr. McArthur. Now, what motiv can Mr. Keeler hav to refuse to anyone the ordinary test, when by so doing he loses his fee? And many of us know how capricious "George Christy" frequently is.

Do not understand me as receiving from these phenomena indubitable assurances of another life. I only say that the hypothesis of another life appears to be the only rational one by which to account for these phenomena. I therefore accept it provisionally and dispassionately, ready at any time to abandon it for any more rational hypothesis. I sometimes question whether this life is worth living, and if it is not, may I not rationally ask, "Is another life worth having?" BURR.

Hindooism.

The origin of the Hindoos is very ancient, and can be carried back considerably more than one thousand years before Christ. They came probably from the north, and were not, as now, vegetarians.

Their religion as taught in the Vedas is apparently contradictory. It is not so in fact. During their invasion of Punjab, etc., they assimilated the religions of those whom they conquered—hence the apparent contradictions.

The Indians' gods were originally sun-gods. Not understanding the natural phenomena around them, they personified that which they did not understand, and placed a god behind almost every natural object. The idea of a god was to them a convenient peg on which they hung their ignorance. They are not alone in this respect. They hav no doubt been misrepresented by some who ought to hav known that there is nothing indecent in their religion. Nude figures do not always convey the idea of immorality. Their beautiful climate no doubt contributed its share to their sun and nature worship. The sun as god is far better than the Jehovah of the Old Testament, for men did not receive from him warmth, light, and life. And their gods of the air were badly copied by the author of the Christian system. In the early stage of nearly all religions natural phenomena play a prominent part. This is seen in England even to-day, when we speak of Father Thames, Old Sol, etc. A long period of time must hav elapsed before this stage of civilization was reached.

After sun-worship three gods seem to hav come into existence; this forms the origin of the Hindoo trinity—god creator, god-preserver, god-destroyer. Their gods of the sky hav been alluded to. And few things are so beautiful and tender as their personification of the dawn of day. In fact, their best teachings only teach the personification of nature, and these will bear a favorable comparison with those of Christianity.

On comparing Hindooism and Christianity we quickly discover that the Hindoos' ideas are not our ideas; that their morality is not our morality; that their idea of a god is not our idea of a god. This arises chiefly because we view nature from different standpoints, and consequently we get different ideas.

Much has been said about the car of Juggernaut crushing the devotees of the Hindoo Christ, and much has been spoken falsely. The truth of Juggernaut is not known. But the story itself proves it is untrue, because the followers of Juggernaut are those of Vishnu, the preserver. Thus the story is a self-detected lie.

The kindness of the Hindoos to their women is proverbial, while a glance at the Christian newspapers will tell our tale of shame.

Their abstinence from the sin of deception is another marked feature of their creed, while the lives of Christian monsters like Clive and Warren Hastings only prove how much superior Hindooism is compared with Christianity.

The Golden Rule supposed to hav been taught by Jesus Christ, was known to the Hindoos one thousand years before he was born, and will liv after Christianity has become forgotten.

All that is good and noble and beautiful in the Bible was known to these "pagan" Hindoos. We connot teach them the good and the beautiful. They teach us. ROBT. J. MURRAY.

Nottingham, Eng.

A Bundle of Interesting Questions.

In an address, recently delivered before the Liberal League in Newark, N. J., by Sereno E. Todd, of Orange, he said:

Now, in conclusion, I propose to propound a few respectful questions, which you can answer after you hav gone home. A child, you know, can ask numerous questions, in childish simplicity, any one of which will silence any theologian.

A little girl said to her father: "Pa, does God tell you what to write in your sermons?" "Yes, my child. The great creator of heaven and earth condesends to tell your papa what to write." "Then what makes you scratch out some of it?" the child inquired. Now, if the all-wise creator who made all things—who is the author of thought and language—should write a book, would it not be a perfect literary production? Would a perfect author of language write a book that would be full of ungrammatical, unrhetorical, and unsyntactical sentences, and full of unphilosophical statements? Do you think that mortal man would be so wise that he could criticise such a book? If the Bible was dictated by the great creator to a reporter, or an amanuensis (which I do not deny), what right has anyone to change, to edit out or edit in, a single word? In the last chapter of the New Testament we find this impressiv declaration: "If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; and if any man shall take away from the words of this book, God shall take away his part out of the book of life and out of the holy city." Now, what right has any mortal man to say that God failed to write that book in intelligible and understandable language?

I always observed Sunday, because I was taught from childhood that it was the holy Sabbath of the Lord. The long and monotonous sanctity of the day hung heavily on one of my little sons, when he said tremblingly, "Pa, I'm such a little feller, if I should go out a little while and play 'jack-stones,' if I didn't whoop and holler, do you think God would care?" That is not an idle and silly question. Let us render an honest answer. Suppose the children all over the country should hold picnics and play ball all day every Sunday, would God care? Suppose all the places of business were thrown open every Sunday, just as they are on any other day of the week, would God care? Would the sun cease to rise in his wonted splendor and never go down again with all his gorgeous beauty? Would the silver moon discontinue her journeys through the skies? Would the vicissitudes of the seasons and changes of the year pass away and return no more to cheer and gladden the hearts of unhappy mortals? If a tiller of the soil should go out every day and curse his fields and his seed, and pray that rust, mildew, drouth, and hailstones might blast the labor of his hands, would God care? Do you think God would care whether you and I quench our thirst with pure water right from the mountain spring or with a full goblet of prussic acid? Do you think that God cares one dime whether my wife and baby and I go out to the wild, old woods on Sunday, and hold a little picnic (as we often do), or go to church and mutter the hypocritical cant, "Hav mercy upon us, miserable sinners?" If that force, that power, that energy, or that electricity (call it God if you prefer), which spake a universe from naught, cared one iota whether we work or play, curse or pray, on the holy Sabbath day, would he not hav painted in rainbow colors across the Arctic sky, where everyone on earth could read, the impressiv words, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy?" If devotees of pleasure and industrious laborers should incur the displeasure of the great creator of heaven and earth by violating the sanctity of Sunday, would he not be likely to crack a thunderbolt, or a thousand of them, over the devoted heads of such miserable sinners? I pause for a reply.

How He Would Hav Made the World.

Colonel Ingersoll at the Lotus Club Anniversary, March 22d.

Sometimes I think, and especially when I am at a meeting where they hav what they call reminiscences, that a world with death in it is a mistake. What would you think of a man who built a railroad knowing that every passenger was to be killed—knowing that there was no escape? What would you think of the cheerfulness of the passengers if every one knew that at some station, the name of which had not been called out, there was a hearse waiting for him; backed up there, horses fighting flies, driver whistling, waiting for you? Is it not wonderful that the passengers on that train really enjoy themselvs? Is it not magnificent that every one of these under perpetual sentence of death after all can dimple their cheeks with laughter; that we, every one doomed to become dust, can yet meet around this table as full of joy as spring is full of life, as full of hope as the heavens are full of stars? I tell you we hav got a good deal of pluck.

And yet, after all, what would this world be without death? It may be from the fact that we are all victims, from the fact that we are all bound by common fate: it may be that friendship and love are born of this fact, but whatever the fact is, I am perfectly satisfied that the highest possible philosophy is to enjoy to-day, not regretting yesterday, nor fearing to-morrow. [Applause.] So, let us suck this orange of life dry, so that when death does come, we can politely say to him, "You are welcome to the peelings. What little there was we hav enjoyed."

But there is one splendid thing about the play called life. Suppose that when you die that is the end. The last thing you know you are alive, and the last thing that will happen to you is the curtain, not falling, but the curtain rising on another thought, so that as far as your consciousness is concerned you will and must liv forever. No man can remember when he commenced, and no man can remember when he ends. As far as we are concerned we liv both eternities, the one past and the one to come, and it is delightful to me to feel satisfied, and to feel in my own heart, that I can never be certain that I hav seen the faces I love for the last time.

When I am at such a gathering as this I almost wish I had had the making of the world. What a world I would hav made! In that world unhappiness would hav been the only sin; melancholy the only crime; joy the only virtue. And whether there is another world nobody knows. Nobody can affirm it; nobody can deny it. Nobody can collect tolls from me, claiming that he owns a turnpike [applause], and nobody can certainly say that the crooked path that I follow, beside which many roses are grown, does not lead to that place. He doesn't know. But if there is such a place, I hope that all good fellows will be welcome.

Lectures and Meetings.

W. S. BELL'S permanent address is Box 199, Oakland, Cal.

DR. LEWIS G. JANES will lecture before the Manhattan Liberal Club on next Friday evening; subject, "Ultimate Social Tendencies." Dr. Janes is always welcome at the club, as he never fails to provide an instructiv and entertaining lecture. Place of meeting, 220 East 15th street.

C. B. REYNOLDS, secretary Washington Secular Union, is in the remorseless clutches of La Grippe. The disease fiend has got the under hold and prevents the possibility of attending to correspondence or other duties. Yet a little while and he hopes to overcome. In the mean time he asks, not the prayers, but the patience of friends, and especially the Liberals of Washington. Copies of the constitution of the Washington Secular Union and certificates of membership will be mailed as soon as La Grippe can be induced to relax his hold. Meantime, all letters, applications for membership, etc., addressed to the office and headquarters of the Washington Secular Union, 1,526 Sixth street, Seattle, Wash., will be sure of the earliest possible attention.

An Opinion on the Annual.

From Saladin's Agnostic Journal.

The TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL for 1890 is to hand, and is quite up to the mark of previous years; and how high that mark was is known to a number of our readers. The most noteworthy paper is entitled the "Middle Ages," and is, we believe, from the pen of the most successful of Freethought editors, E. M. Macdonald. The article is a succinct and readable miniature of Draper's "Conflict Between Religion and Science," and is usefully illustrated with quaint engravings. We may enrich our own columns by the reproduction of this article. The versatil Miss Helen Gardener contributes a well-written tale, "The Boler House Mystery;" and our friend, J. E. Remsburg, of "Bible Morals" celebrity, bursts forth into a meritorious poem full of sweet and simple pathos.

"SEEK first the kingdom of heaven."—"Lay not up for yourselvs treasures on earth."—"If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and giv to the poor, and thou shalt hav treasures in heaven."—"For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man giv in exchange for his soul?"—Think of this, Yankees!—"Verily I say unto you, if ye hav faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you." Think of repeating these things to a New England audience! thirdly, fourthly, fifthly, till there are three barrels of sermons. Who, without cant, can read them aloud? Who, without cant, hear them and not go out of the meeting-house?—Thoreau.

LONG as I hav lived, and many blasphemers as I hav heard and seen, I hav never yet heard or witnessed any direct and conscious blasphemy or irreverence; but of indirect and habitual, enough. Where is the man who is guilty of direct and personal insolence to him that made him?—Thoreau.

Communications.

The Self-Sufficiency of Nature.

In Harper's Magazine for February Mr. Edison, the eminent inventor, expresses views concerning the nature of matter, and of a God, which deserve more than a passing notice, and as I hav sought in vain for some "defender of the faith" to take up the gauntlet thus defiantly thrown down to Materialists, I hav decided to buckle on my armor and enter the lists to measure swords with him on the points at issue.

What strikes the reader as the most vulnerable part of his views is their flagrant contradiction. In his preliminary remarks he expresses opinions coinciding with those of the most advanced thinkers, but while his reason still soars in realms of the sublimest altitude, he suddenly suffers a collapse into "innocuous desuetude" by falling back upon the assumption of a personal God to extricate himself out of the quandary he finds himself in by "peeking" behind the curtains of "Dame Nature's" laboratory. While his views of the nature of atoms would entitle him to rank as one of the foremost champions of Materialism, he suddenly turns from his exalted position by accepting the God-idea, not recognizing the fallacy of adding the far greater mystery of God's existence or origin to the lesser one of the universe, a mode of reasoning fit only for the immature brain of primitiv man.

But let his words speak for themselvs. "I do not believe," he says, "that matter is inert, acted upon by an outside force. To me it seems that matter is possessed of a certain amount of primitiv intelligence. Look at the thousand ways in which atoms of hydrogen combine with those of other elements, forming the most diverse substance. Do you mean to say that they do this without intelligence? Atoms in harmonious and useful relation assume beautiful and interesting shapes and colors, or giv forth a pleasant perfume as if expressing their satisfaction. In sickness, death, decomposition, or filth, the disagreement of the component particles makes itself felt by bad odors Gathered together in certain forms, the atoms constitute animals of the lower orders, finally combining in man, who represents the total intelligence of all atoms."

After having thus given utterance to most sublime truths, he destroys the whole when the portentous question is asked him, "And where did this intelligence in atoms come from originally?" by replying, "From some power greater than ourselvs," qualifying this rather vague statement—for all believe that nature is greater then ourselvs—by adding that he believes "in an intelligent creator, a personal God, and that the existence of such a God can almost be proved by chemistry."

What a pity that such proof is not forthcoming and millions of honest truth seekers thereby saved from perdition (?). If Mr. Edison has any regard for the spiritual welfare of these sincere doubters in the existence of a personal God he will drop electricity for a while and proceed forthwith to make the necessary preparations for demonstrating such existence by chemical analysis.

The world will thank him for it, but none more so than unbelievers. Methinks that if it is almost demonstrable without effort, a great responsibility rests upon him for not bringing it to a successful issue.

I labor under the impression, however, that the reason the effort is not made, is, that he, as well as his co-religionists, fear that it would demonstrate the God-idea to be the monster delusion of the world.

What instances he cites concerning the nature of atoms affirm the self-sufficiency of nature, and this renders a power above it a superfluity, a perfectly useless adjunct. He admits that matter is not inert, and that it is not acted upon by an outside force, which is tantamount to saying that it has the principle of force and life within it. If this inherent potency is not acted upon by an extraneous force, it is self-acting, and being admissibly self-intelligent, at least to the extent of exercising its judgment in the selection of its mates, and in forming alliances with other individual or corporate bodies of atoms, what need is there of a God or extraneous force to prompt them to action? Being possessed of the capacity to act, Mr. Edison admits, it need not be acted upon by an outside force, but as he winds up with asserting that such force in the person of a God exists, what reason has he for such belief (that does not increase mysteries) when his own words show that matter can act and build up the universe without a God?

For is it not evident that by adding a God to the universe it complicates matters instead of solving them?

If matter were inert, then, indeed, would we be warranted in assuming a God to set it in motion, although his origin or nature would then hav to be explained as well as now, but as it is teeming with life and governed by judgment, it cannot fail to act and build up the world.

An omnipotent hand would be required to prevent its action, but such interference not existing, the world is the result.

Mr. Edison, therefore, by his admission of the potency and intelligence of matter acting independently of an extraneous force demonstrates that his presumed God is a useless concomitant to nature, or rather that the latter, being this primitiv judgment and potency of "matter," or force, is "God."

Mr. Edison's belief in the primitiv intelligence of atoms is not original with him, I having advanced and elucidated it over ten years ago. This mind in atoms cannot be anything but the very lowest form of consciousness, and a capacity to recognize and perceive the individuality and sex of other atoms that may be within the reach of this their very limited sense of perception. For that the dual principle of positiv and negativ, or male and female, forces pervading nature must hav its origin in the sexuality of atoms, seems to me self-evident. If atoms were sexless, they would then, indeed, be inert, without any tendency or desire to act and form copartnerships with other congenial atoms; attraction and repulsion would be out of the question, impossible. They would all be exactly alike, the result of which would be that if they did aggregate into bodies there would be no diversity between them, except in bulk. And again, if atoms were not possessed of the property of sex, they could not impart or transmit it to any of their offspring, it being evident that atoms could not convey what they are devoid of themselvs. And the same deductions apply to the intelligence of atoms, they not being capable of manifesting it in their higher formations if their components were absolutely devoid of it. Hence I say that where the male and female principle underlies all organic bodies—and who will say which are not organic, even the atoms of the diamond teeming with life, motion, and intelligence?—the germ of it must be found within their constituent particles.

But we will go further than this and say that sex and intelligence must be inseparably connected. It is no more conceivable that sex and its conditions and consummations should exist in atoms without a certain degree of consciousness and judgment being connected with it than that such judgment should exist without sex. For what but sexual conditions could prompt atoms to exercise the judgment conceded by Mr. Edison? What else do they require in their primitiv state but the necessity of selecting their mates and uniting in harmonious bodies? And that no sexual selection and consummation can take place, even in atoms, without perception and judgment, seems self-evident. If perception and judgment did not exist, no selection of congenial atoms could take place.

Sex is the most powerful condition of atoms, mind only an accessory. It is the primary principle of nature, and from it sprang all formations of the universe. It being the predominant condition of atoms explains why it is also by far the most powerful in all animal organisms. This latter being conceded by all, is it reasonable to suppose that sex could be absent in what gave them being?

And is it therefore a matter for wonderment that from atoms thus imbued with judgment and creativ power sprang the diversified beings whose existence now, at this period of our planet's life, strikes such awe in the inquisitiv mind of the untutored beholder?

And all because modest Dame Nature is underrated, and the credit she deserves as the creator of all given to figments of man's imagination.

Nature is therefore the only real, true God, but instead of deifying her, the throne to which she is entitled is temporarily filled by phantoms and myths begotten of ignorance and nurtured by the fanaticism of versatil man.

"Versatil" because of the numerous myths which formerly haunted heaven and earth only one is allowed to remain, and his days are numbered.

Nature, as embodied in the infinit creating and intelligent atoms, will then ascend the throne so long withheld from her, and she will hold undisputed sway, for no one will deny her existence or question her authority as the mistress of the universe.

Mr. Edison admits that atoms are prompted to action by their own inherent intelligence, that they act their own pleasure regardless of the weal or woe of other bodies, as is shown in the clashing of discordant elements, and the swift destruction that often overtakes them, but where can he see any signs of supernatural interference in this simple atomic action?

There is no reason to presume that there is mind in nature superior to the "primitiv intelligence" of atoms conceded by Mr. Edison. The deist regards what he calls the "wonderfully adapted conditions" giving birth and sustenance to organic beings as "prima facie evidence of intelligent design, not recognizing that they are but the inevitable result of the efforts of atoms to adjust themselvs or conform to prevailing conditions and that all formations could therefore not be different than they are.

"But," say some, "how can such low form of judgment culminate in the reason of man?" I answer, through the law of development. The very exercise of this judgment—and it is eternally exercised—tends to develop it. The likes and dislikes, or to use a stronger term, the loves and hates, of atoms, hav a constant tendency to develop judgment or intelligence. And the desire to seek and complete congenial alliances, which gave birth to every formation in space, is the first effort of nature to accomplish a certain end, and has within it, through the concerted action of atoms, the potency to evolve into the highest order of intelligence.

But as intelligent design is a function of the brain, no such design can be possible outside of it. The action of atoms, being limited to a union of forces, if congenial requires no such function though the germ be in it, hence nature in her totality, being devoid of developed brain power, can therefore not possess the judgment capable of being exercised by a being thus endowed.

And as for supernatural intelligence, is not the unrestrained force exerted by nature in producing earthquakes, tornadoes, conflagrations, epidemics, floods, and other destructiv phenomena evidence that she is not thus governed by a higher power?

Why is the world filled with misery untold, both saints and sinners being indiscriminately subjected to the fury of discordant elements, if an omnipotent power exists that could place the antagonistic forces of nature under control?

We hear of the "merciful dispensation of providence," but wherein did it manifest itself during the horrors of the Ashtabula disaster, allowing noted revivalists and others of "God's own people" to be penned up in the burning cars and slowly roasted to death? Where was the omnipotent hand that could avert such a catastrophe?

And where was the "overruling providence" that could avert the Johnstown flood and save thousands of "images of God" from being drowned like rats, and hundreds from being incinerated in the wrecks of the burning buildings?

And where is the "intelligent design" that permits not a day to pass without human beings being crushed to death by the score or allowed to suffer agonies that appall the stoutest hearts?

Perhaps, if Mr. Edison will ponder over these remarks, he may comprehend the magnitude of the task of proving by chemical analysis the existence of a being to be found only in the imagination of man.

In the harmonious arrangements of atoms assuming useful relations and beautiful shapes and colors, as well as in everything conducive to the generation and sustenance of life, we can behold the self-sufficient power of nature to produce these harmonious results, but in the destruction which may overtake her formations at any time we hav evidence of the absence of an overruling, intelligent mind.

Marengo, Ill., March 10, 1889. H. WETTSTEIN.

P. S.—I noticed the following in a scientific journal of recent date, corroborativ of my views concerning the sexual nature of atoms:

THE SEXUALITY OF ATOMS.

Mr. Mason Kinne is a quiet gentleman who has lived for many years in San Francisco. He is an enthusiastic member of the Microscopical Society, an honorary member of several foreign scientific societies, and contributes to several journals. Some time ago he declared that he had sexuality in atoms—that is, after examining the smallest fragments of inorganic matter, he had discovered certain traces that led him to believe that all atoms are either male or female, and reproduce their species. The importance of such a discovery cannot be estimated. If verified, and Mr. Kinne is confident that it can be verified, it means the revelation to science of a new alphabet for geology, chemistry, and philosophy.

H. W.

Character.

When we consider how varied are the religious systems which attempt to define the formation of character, it cannot any longer be a source of surprise that men should endeavor to escape from this bondage. It will be found that religionists generally leave the natural selection and appropriation in makers of morality out of their régime. They pay little or no heed to those laws of nature, and the constitution thereof which signalize conduct. Ecclesiastics leave their things at the door of hereditary transmission and place their workings as the sequence of diabolical rulings. There are also those who treat this question of character with the coarsest ridicule. These are content to protect themselvs—as they consider—from all ideas which seek to adjust man's responsibility to a personal agency. It may, with truthfulness, be said that such minds look with the greatest derision and aversion upon those who claim the right to challenge existing codes. But it cannot be said that that which is claimed is beyond the limits of substantiation, as from the realm of experience material is gained for this object. So long as we find in man powers of adaptation, concentration, and material for self-realization, along these lines the claims for the naturalness of moral endeavors are firmly established. This should be the basis of appeals to men, for by the relationships of morals to law we are able to discern the degree of our responsibility. We must not overlook the fact that men's environments contribute largely to the formation of character. These are conduciv to the realization of one of two extremes. From them, and the life's affiliation thereto, all the minor and major moral strictures are derived.

But in the realm of experience it has been proved that men may rise, through the exercise of natural faculties, out of their environments, becoming superior to them. This is the product of obedience to intuitions which take the form of appeals. Thus a more exhilarating moral atmosphere is reached, which is found to be most helpful to yet fuller development of the moral nature. As an example of the foregoing we will take two poles of existence, or mental and moral intelligence. By observation we shall find these to be qualities, or states of qualities. The conservativ operations of each work the relationship of the whole to moral law. We observe that the component parts of these extremes in their order are such as befit their position; in no way are the extremes assimilated; each extreme is driven by its legislativ power into the position it is qualified to hold. These poles are known as Purity and Impurity. It is the question of like begetting like. A little reflection will mark the truthfulness of this argument, for by the process of attraction or repulsion, when the mind is brought into the region of either of the poles we make, or determin our selection.

On extending our method of illustration into our family circles we find a mass of material ready to hand whereby we are furnished with proofs in favor of our argument. When these are pure, having for environments every complement which goes toward increasing the worth of character, then our little realms reap the benefit of example, inculcation, and surroundings. By the mental act of contrasting the pure models and atmosphere with those which are impure, the power over the subjects is manifestly increased. Provided with the beautiful in morals, forces thus concentrate themselvs upon young life which become irresistible. As we watch the gracious growth of adaptation, concentration, and appropriation, we are enabled to forecast the character which these young lives will sustain in years that are to come.

Objections are constantly being raised to this rule, and the attention is pointed to lives which hav not benefited by this moral atmosphere. The answer is, This is so. With much regret it has to be admitted. But to be faithful in the discharge of duty another step must be taken, and it also must be laid down that the exceptions prove the rule, as the selections were made in after years through insufficiency of past inculcations—or maybe examples. It is not enough for purpose of future moral integrity that the young life has only surrounding to fall back upon; but we find that the response to Impure attractions came from parts which hav been left untouched by inculcation or examples, and these weak parts of the moral organism were the points of attack. This may hav been a forgotten or a neglected duty—a duty devolving upon the custodians of these individuals in question—passed over either in ignorance of its importance, or willful disregard. Another answer comes to this objection, viz., Let the inculcations, examples, or surroundings be never so pure in early years, there is a duty which these lives owe to the past, and providing this be neglected and the life be wilfully placed, in years to come, in and among environments which are Impure, the Pure moral tendencies are, one by one, lessened in their power over the life through the pernicious influences of Impure associations.

Numberless instances could be cited to prove the foregoing if space allowed. From two instances only we should be able to substantiate the statements already made. The poles suggested are those of Temperance and Morality, and we could furnish evidence from our own observation to satisfy all reasonable demands made upon us. To the custodians of young life the appeal is made and the warning uttered. Upon the young depends the whole weight of morals in the distant future. Surround the early years with all things which bear the hall-mark of integrity. By practices stamp high, moral lessons upon the young mind. Show from the realm of others' experience the blessings of right selections. Teach how to shun base and brute appeals, as one of morals' purest safeguards. Remember that cohesion necessary in all undertakings to prove these things, and, unless this be a leading factor, unmixed results cannot be hoped for.

An opportunity is taken to assert the following thesis, and it will be found to be infallible in its teaching: The appeal to the life is twofold; therefore the measure of moral dignity depends upon moral selection.

It may also be asserted that there are environments of the most impure character which, even to minds cradled therein, hav no attraction. The mind by intuition sees the emptiness of these appeals. The faculty of judgment has been seen to discriminate the difference betwixt the two poles of being. Reflection and contrast hav done their noble work. These are the means by which higher appeals find a response in the life; even the aspirations hav been rich inspirations—touchstones—calling into existence powers which were lying dormant.

It is not every man who can thus assert an individuality over and above these lesser appeals. To them it is a deprivation, not a depravation. But given the mental qualities, giv the conditions befitting mind's dignity, collect if you will all the purest moral forces at your command, exemplify their importance by means of inculcation, lead or mold these lives, and according to the laws of nature from you will flow power to enrich your fellows. Thus like will beget its correlativ. By like affinities you will raise, purify others, bringing forth results of great importance.

There is a store of valuable matter in this theme which will alleviate the moral woes of society and hasten the day of fuller moral achievements. These practical aspects must beget a profound respect for the factor of personal responsibility in the drama of life. Their beauty engrosses the thoughtful at every step, and the community will value character at a higher price.

When our religious teachers discard their imported factors which are foreign to the moral ideal, whereby they seek to alleviate the personal and accumulated woes around us which press so heavily upon the lives of men, and by means which are natural and remedies which are in us endeavor to raise their fellows, then shall the character of man be lovelier and more heavenly.

Religion has dealt too long in the importation of a foreign element into the nature of man, whereby in the name of goodness she has attempted to lessen the ills of social organisms and the woes of individual character. Into the realm of moral legislation she has marched clad in the garb of theology, and she has left the nobler principles of naturalness to be trampled upon by her minions. Much as men may try to impress a community with the sublimity of their conceptions and the feasibility of their plans, much as men may endeavor to gain the assent of one individual character even to the purer principles of naturalism, until men and women are persuaded that the modus operandi of perfecting character, as taught by lay and cleric, is automatic in its inclination, whereby, to use another expression, they are led to allow the field of character to grow that which is not the outcome of natural seed, no hope of a fuller recognition of natural laws can be indulged in.

One feature of appeal which is made to men is not clearly understood by them when dressed in the garb of theologic ethics. It cannot be expected that it could be understood, neither do the guardians of this phase of religious ethics wish it to be understood. All acts of conduct are relegated to the effete ceremonies of the Israelitish nation. In their bulk and simpleness also all these things affecting character are laid upon one principle, and from this source it is argued that a renewing graciousness comes. Again and again you are permitted to return to this source after having repeatedly indulged in those things which you hav deplored. With the same regularity as a Catholic devotee seeks the shelter of the confessional, you are invited to return for pardon and indulgence. This is the foreign element already spoken of, to which exception is now taken. Repeatedly is it necessary to utter protests in the name of nature against these ignorant, selfish, unnatural, and idiotic usages which hav been commented upon.

Many will take exceptions to these statements. This is anticipated. But instead of the remarks now made being of an injurious character, they will no doubt prove exceedingly beneficial, inasmuch as they stimulate thought and earnest investigation. When persons are led to examin carefully the weighty arguments supporting our position which will present themselvs through the medium of comparison, at the same time taking exceeding great care to answer all the inquiries made upon the mind, the knowledge of these matters will show how disastrous to man's best interests is the importation of foreign elements dealt in by theology, and which is said to cure all the ills of morals.

Everything in character is formed or made up of cause and effect. Though influences at first be slight, by frequent application force is gained, therefore we become either moral giants or moral wrecks. This is in the exact order of our obedience to or disobedience of moral laws and natural principles.

The appeal of our teachers is not to that which is man, but to that which is not man. Now the laws of health demand that men shall conform to their ruling if they are to enjoy happiness, freedom from sickness or premature death. Mental laws demand a due exercise of precautionary methods if men are to retain their intellectual vigor or arrive at mental superiority. Also the laws of the moral realm call for a recognition of their power and all exercise of due discreetness, so that in all things man may watch against an obedience to those base tendencies which lead to moral decay. The appeals are made to man in the name of man, and according to their order warnings, nay, threats, are often uttered.

The thoughtful among us are beginning to turn to philosophic data, and upon these they are determining the position of mind and morals. Philosophy teaches the laws of being, it relegates all to naturalness, and no margin is left for that which is antagonistic to nature. Upon this alone it may be fairly claimed the only grounds of responsibility can be determined.

Character is purely democratic in its legislation. Under this régime every part is fully represented before the bar of conscicusness. Votes of approval or disapproval upon all acts of conduct and upon every desire are passed.

Whatever we may think upon this great question of responsibility, let others teach what doctrin they choose. Let men of the many shades of theologic belief preach the tenets of their respectiv schools from their colored rostrums, and in their way emphasize their views of life and man's position therein, not one of these utterances can abate one tithe, nor indeed will it alter man's responsibility to natural law. Nothing can lessen our obligations, though an army of popes, bishops, priests, and deacons should offer a thousand pardons and as many indulgences. "Call a spade a spade," is a maxim well worth the consideration of theologians. To them we say, "Call law, law, and consequences, consequences." Let these men show us how great are our natural capacities, making their appeals direct to the sense of responsibility, then will they stir the hidden depths of character, and a response will be heard coming from the life, small though at first its voice may be.

CERTUS.

To Connecticut Liberals.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: With your kind permission, I would like to address a few words to the Liberals of my nativ state through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER. In the perusal of the leading Freethought papers for the past fifteen years, the writer has been unpleasantly impressed with the apparent indifference of Connecticut Liberals, as evinced by the fact that in the list of contributors to Liberal objects, and in furnishing literary articles for publication, their names are conspicuous only by their absence, except in some half dozen cases.

Feeling convinced that this indifference is not due so much to lukewarmness in the cause, as to preoccupation in business, and that there is any amount of latent enthusiasm which only needs the stimulation of association and fellowship, it has seemed desirable that we should meet one another for better acquaintance and more concentrated action.

To this end the writer has conceived the idea of a state convention of Connecticut Liberals, and of all who favor a total separation of church and state, and would like to hear from every Liberal in Connecticut with an expression of his views regarding the advisability of meeting in convention in the city of Hartford some time in the month of June next for conference, counsel, and mutual interchange of thought.

Prompt responses are invited, so that ample time may be afforded for necessary arrangements.

J. T. KELSEY.

Haddam, Conn., March 13, 1890.

Christian Effort in India.

The Tablet, the principal organ of the Roman Catholic church in England, says with regard to the Christian mission business in India:

The newly published official reports about the material and moral conditions of nativs in India, giv a very interesting contribution to the now discussed mission question. It appears from the figures that not alone do we, by converting the nativs to our belief, decidedly lower their moral status, but the standpoint of their natural morality is so high that, although they become Christians, we cannot make them so immoral as we ourselvs are. The figures, which show the comparativ moral status among the different classes, are as follows:

Europeans	1 of 274	Eurasier	1 of 509
Nativ Christians	1 " 709	Muhamedans	1 " 856
Hindoos	1 " 1,361	Buddhists	1 " 3,787

The last figure is a tribute to the noble purity of Buddhism, but the statistics impart to us here at home another teaching, that as regards our social life, we would do better, if we, for a generation or two, contributed our superflous pennies and our energies to the moral improvement of our own countrymen, in place of trying to destroy the morality and religion of other people, people who, in truth, could send us their missionaries to convert us.

YET the New Testament treats of man and man's so-called spiritual affairs too exclusivly, and is too constantly moral and personal to alone content me, who am not interested solely in man's religious or moral nature, or in man even. . . . Absolutely speaking, Do unto others as you would that they should do unto thee, is by no means a golden rule, but the best of current silver. An honest man would hav but little occasion for it. It is golden not to hav any rule at all in such a case. The book has never been written which is to be accepted without any allowance.—Thoreau.

A HEALTHY man with steady employment, as woodchopping at fifty cents a cord, and a camp in the woods, will not be a good subject for Christianity. The New Testament may be a choice book to him on some, but not on all or most of his days. He will rather go a-fishing in his leisure hours. The apostles, though they were fishers too, were of the solemn race of sea-fishers, and never trolled for pickerel on inland streams.—Thoreau.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - MARCH 29, 1890.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Pictorial Arguments Against the Church.

We are glad to report that the proposal to put in book form the cartoons that hav appeared on the first page of THE TRUTH SEEKER meets with unqualified approval from a great many of our friends, as may be seen from the following letters, which are only a small percentage of those received. The tax assessor—on all but the churches—of Dunkirk writes:

"Herewith find $2 for a copy of the book containing the pictorial arguments against the church. Please place on page 1 a likeness of the Editor. WM. H. WYMAN."

We may put the likeness of the Artist in the book, and are quite willing that he shall hav the glory. Our work is only supplementary to his, though it will support his pictorial statements thoroughly.

Mr. Thomas Bowser, of Renfrew, has not only bought a copy of the book, but is going to sell more copies for us. He says:

"Inclosed you will find an order for one of the books and $1 over to apply to whatever you think best. I will do all I can to sell more books."

Mr. M. P. Braffet, of Wedron, Ill., writes:

"Inclosed please find $2, for which please send me the book of TRUTH SEEKER cartoons as soon as published. They are good arguments. I would like to see them continued in THE TRUTH SEEKER."

The pictures will be continued in THE TRUTH SEEKER for at least another year; there is now no doubt of that.

We agree with what follows in this from Professor Moore, of Atlanta, Ga.:

"I am sure the cartoon book will be a success; and all lovers of liberty should hav a copy on their center-table for the benefit of their friends. I hav sold one copy for you already, and wish to obtain one for myself, so you may send two copies to my address. I think I will be able to send you the name of a new subscriber to the paper soon, and am sure I can sell several copies of the book as soon as I get a copy to show my friends.

"P.S.—If you put the biblical illustrations in book form, I will want a copy of that work also."

As we said in the announcement of the cartoon book, if this publication is adequately encouraged, the Bible pictures will be gathered together.

And we also hope with Mr. Charles Randall, of Amboy, Ill.

"Find inclosed express money-order for $2, for which forward me one copy, when ready, of THE TRUTH SEEKER cartoons. I hope that every subscriber that is able to do so will take a copy of the new book, and that you will eventually get up the pictorial Bible."

Mr. W. L. Willis, of Kokomo, Ind., is a very practical believer in the success of the new book. He writes and incloses cash.

"I will take $10 worth of the picture-book when it is ready for delivery. I think the picture-book will hav a large sale. I hope to be able to order another lot within a year."

C. Putnam, of Gibbon, Neb., has a pretty good idea of the book:

"I inclose $2 for the book of pictures, which will be the rarest book, the most taking, and an opening wedge to the gnarled bigotry that could never in any other way be opened to the reception or inspection of anything on an Infidel's bookshelf. I also pledge myself to take the pictorial Bible, and as soon as you get it so far along that you know the price at which it will be sold, I will remit."

We return thanks to these and other friends who hav ordered the book, and whose money is very acceptable in meeting the expenses of its publication. It will be hurried to completion as fast as a regard for textual thoroughness and good appearance will permit. The price is $2.

A Righteous Supreme Court.

In Edgerton, Wis., a year or more ago, there arose a school war between the Catholics and Protestants. The Catholics were desirous of using the public schools, but they objected to their children hearing or participating in the reading of the King James translation of the Christian scriptures. The matter was taken to the courts, the petition of the Catholics setting forth—

"That certain of the teachers employed by the district board, having charge of the schools to conduct the same and instruct the pupils attending the same, including the children of the plaintiffs, read to said pupils each and every day the schools are in session, and during school hours, certain portions of the book, commonly known as the Bible, the teacher selecting the portions so read and using the translation known as the King James Version.

"That the plaintiffs, and many others of the resident taxpayers of said school district, whose children attend said schools, and are under the control and instruction of said teachers, are, together with their children, members of the Roman Catholic church, and conscientiously believe its doctrins, faith, and forms of worship, and that by said church, the said version is taught and believed to be an incorrect and incomplete translation by reason of the omission of a certain part of the books held by such church to be an integral portion of the inspired canon; and it is further taught by said Roman Catholic church and believed by its members that the scriptures ought not to be read indiscriminately, inasmuch as said church has divine authority as the only infallible teacher and interpreter of the same, and that the reading of the same without note or comment, and without being expounded by the only authorized teachers and interpreters thereof, is not only not beneficial to the children in said schools, and especially the children of the plaintiffs who are members of said church, but likely to lead to the adoption of dangerous errors, irreligious faith, practice, and worship, and that by reason thereof the practice of reading King James version of the Bible commonly and only received as inspired and true by the Protestant religious sects, is regarded by the members of said Roman Catholic church, including the plaintiffs, as contrary to the rights of conscience, and as wholly contrary to, and in violation of the law, and that they believe such exercises as above set forth, and each and all of them, to be sectarian instruction, in violation of Section 3, Article 10, of the constitution of the state of Wisconsin."

The school board put in an answer, and Judge Bennett, of the circuit court, decided that while the children of Catholics could not be forced to remain in the hallway of the school-house while the reading was going on, they could not object to the reading, as it was not sectarian instruction within the meaning of the law. The Catholics took the case to the supreme court, which has just rendered its decision overruling the circuit court, thus giving a victory to the Catholics, and declaring that the reading of the Bible in the public schools is unconstitutional. The court says that in considering the question whether such reading of the Bible in the public schools is sectarian instruction, prohibited in public schools by the constitution, the book will be regarded as a whole, because the whole Bible, without exception, has been designated as a text-book for use in the Edgerton schools, and the claim of the school board is that the whole contents thereof may lawfully be so read. This being so, it is quite immaterial if the portions thereof set out in the return as the only portions thus far read are not sectarian; yet it should be observed that some of the portions so read seem to inculcate the doctrin of the divinity of Jesus Christ and the punishment of the wicked after death, which doctrins are not accepted by some religious sects.

The court refuses to affirm or deny that the Catholic church opposes the common schools. The court further says that reading from the Bible in the schools, although without comment on the part of the teacher, is instruction, and holds that the Bible contains many doctrinal passages and that the general reading of it is sectarian instruction. It also holds that such text-books as are founded on the fundamental teaching of the Bible, or which may contain extracts therefrom, may not be used in the schools. Says the court:

"Some of the most valuable instruction a person can receive may be derived from reading alone, without any comment or exposition of the question; therefore, the question seems to narrow down to this: Is the reading of the Bible in the public schools, not merely of selected passages therefrom, but the whole of it, sectarian instruction of the pupils, in view of the facts already mentioned, that the Bible contains numerous doctrinal passages upon some of which the peculiar creed of almost every religious sect is based, and that such passages may reasonably be understood to inculcate the doctrins predicated upon them?

"An affirmativ answer to the question seems unavoidable. Any pupil of ordinary intelligence who listens to the reading of doctrinal portions of the Bible will be more or less instructed thereby in the doctrins of the divinity of Jesus Christ, the eternal punishment of the wicked, the authority of the priesthood, the binding force of the efficacy of the sacraments, and many other conflicting sectarian doctrins."

O righteous judge! O upright judge!.

In this matter, and perhaps only in this, the Catholics and the Infidels are agreed. There can never be a doubt in the mind of a sensible person that the Bible is full of sectarianism, and every public school teacher picks out for reading those parts which uphold his or her particular superstition. The court's statement of the case is very plain and truthful, and its decision the only one at which it could logically arrive.

We trust that for his own enlightenment the Newark "My Lord" who tried to place Helen Gardener in error for stating that the Catholic church did not desire its members to peruse the Bible, will ponder over the complaint made by these Catholic parents. Miss Gardener's words are there shown to be irrefutably true, that the Roman Catholic church does forbid the reading of the Bible unless at the same time it is expounded and explained by the priests.

The City's Lesson.

Tammany Hall in this city is the political wing of the Roman Catholic church. Every magnate of the Hall is a devout Catholic, and he could not be a magnate if he were not. Croker, the head of the organization, is very pious—for a Catholic—and so is Grant, our mayor. From these two, down to the superannuated voters who sweep the streets, Tammany is owned neck and heels by the Roman hierarchy. That is the way the church gets its money and that is the way Tammany gets the votes.

At the last two elections, Tammany, or the church, carried everything. One of the offices won is that of sheriff of New York county and city. Mr. James A. Flack encumbers the office. One of the jails over which Mr. Flack has jurisdiction is the one which takes its name from Ludlow street. Mr. Keating, a local Tammany worker, filled, until within a few days, the office of warden in that jail. In days gone by, when D. M. Bennett was waiting in that institution for the pardon Hayes promised but never gave, Mr. Keating was the doorkeeper there, and the writer of this frequently encountered him. As specimens of Tammany officials Messrs. Flack and Keating are valuable, and so are their subordinates. The predecessor of Sheriff Flack was Mr. Grant, now mayor.

A few months ago some Republican politicians "put up a job"—as the phrase goes—on Tammany to punish it for bad faith in some political deals. An investigation committee from the state senate was appointed and sent down here. It began its work two weeks ago. The Herald was in the secret, evidently, and saw a chance to advertise itself. It procured the incarceration of one of its reporters in Ludlow street jail, furnished him with money to tempt the Tammany officials, and then published the facts the reporter obtained.

The result of the senate committee's and the Herald's efforts is—seven Tammany Hall officials indicted for swindling, extortion, bribery, etc. And at the same time, Sheriff Flack has been convicted of conspiring to divorce his wife fraudulently—making eight Tammany Hall magnates and workers in trouble. Mr. Croker, the "boss" of all, went to Europe some time ago, or, rumor has it, he would be in trouble too, and obliged to tell more about Tammany Hall methods than he would find pleasant for himself or profitable to the Hall.

The backbone of Tammany Hall is the seventy or eighty thousand Irish Roman Catholic voters in this city. The real head of the Hall is the Roman hierarchy, with Archbishop Corrigan as the mouthpiece. The treasury of the Hall and the church is the treasury of the city—by both direct and indirect methods. The sufferers are the people, who are robbed, cheated, abused, for the benefit of a lot of alien politicians who couldn't earn ten dollars a week in a legitimate business, and for the benefit of a church which is trying to break down our institutions and which never yet legislated for anything but its own ecclesiastical and financial welfare. Let us hope the exposure of the rascality in one branch of the city's government may teach the respectable voters of the city a lesson they will not forget before next fall, when they will be called upon to again do some voting.

A Lack of Accuracy.

There are a few of our esteemed friends who favor us with their opinions to whom we desire to respectfully recommend the cultivation of accuracy of statement. Looseness in this regard materially lessens the value of what might otherwise prove valuable contributions to the literature of progress and science. And though we may not apply to them the Latin phrase falsus in uno falsus in omnibus, yet because of their disregard of details those who depend upon them are likely to go astray. We may therefore cite three or four instances as a warning to the unwitting culprits and others.

For instance, Mr. Burr writes:

"BROTHER MACDONALD: In your reply to McArthur you ask, 'Why must a slate go under a table?' And you add that all the mediums, to whom you and McArthur went, refused to allow the slates to be kept in sight all the time."

Then Mr. Burr goes on to state how he obtained various communications through the mediumship of Mr. Keeler, on slates which had not been out of sight. Now, we do not doubt Mr. Burr's word in the least, but why should he seek to controvert in our remarks something which we did not say? Our experience in actual slate-writing was confined solely to Professor Slade. As he alleged that some of the communications which we obtained were written on the table, we queried why those slates had previously to go under the table. We still think the question a fair one. But we did not say that "all the mediums to whom you [the Editor] and McArthur went refused to allow the slates to be kept in sight all the time." We did not say it for the very good reason that the two investigators did not visit any medium but Slade, who was given his own "conditions" in all things, as he peremptorily refused tests. What we did say was this: "When, however, it was proposed that the conditions be made such that the medium could not hold slates away out of sight and otherwise manipulate them, the media refused the sittings as one man." Mr. Keeler, as a sample, did not refuse to allow the slates to be kept in sight; he flatly refused any sitting at all under the conditions indicated, which were to be such that he "could not hold slates away out of sight and otherwise manipulate them."

Mr. Burr has told so many wonderful things concerning Keeler's mediumship, and we hav placed such good faith in the accuracy of his accounts, that he will pardon us, we think, if we contrast another statement he makes to us with the actual facts. In a note received some days ago he says:

"Miss Wixon and her sister went with me and wife last evening to Keeler's light séance. The usual phenomena appeared. Miss W. got a message from a departed friend, written while she held the tablet before the curtain."

Now, from that statement one would infer that Miss Wixon did get a message from some person deceased who had been her friend, and that she knew it to be from her friend. But what are the facts? Miss Wixon relates them herself in this issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER. First, describing the appearance of the hand—"a very human hand"—and the manner of holding the tablet, she says:

"The hand grasped a pencil firmly and wrote two lines, one of which was in this wise: 'This is new to me——.' The rest was undistinguishable; the name was a scrawl that is impossible to decipher."

Now, if that is getting "a message from a departed friend," we should like Mr. Burr to relate some instance when a sitter in a séance got something of which he was not sure. How does he know that a scrawl on a tablet is the signature of a departed friend of Miss Wixon? Our own experience convinces us that nothing more needs critical and accurate relation of detail than slate-writing séances. If Mr. Burr has been as loose in all his accounts as in this one, we fear his evidence is not of that great value which we had placed upon it.

Leaving this subject, there is another upon which we desire accuracy of statement. A letter from another highly esteemed friend is inspired by our remarks upon the latest arrest of Mr. Harman. Dr. Abbie Knapp says:

"O for a voice that could resound throughout the universe! A voice wherewith I could arouse humanity from its lethargy! A voice to stir in woman some inspiration of her coming destiny, that she may know that in the future she is to lead the van of the army of progress! This age asks for new women. Women untrammeled by the temporary and stationary—not stunted or warped by prejudgment or bias! No more bigotry or prejudice for the woman who is to come—the true woman—the pure woman!

"Eugene, I was reminded of the above lines by your editorial on the re-arrest of Mr. Harman—to me, very unjust. Would that I could sound the 'tocsin of alarm' over all the civilized—God save the mark—world, that until she rises in the true dignity of her womanhood and proclaims herself free will there be necessity of publishing to the world the degradation to which her sex is subjected by her 'lord and master'—i.e., 'legalized protector.' Protected from whom and what? Great heavens! Why, her 'protector,' man! Why, dear friend, the half has not yet been told. Having been 'behind the scenes' for the last twenty-five years, as 'nurse and accoucheuse,' I myself could a 'tale unfold' of man's inhumanity to woman that would make your very blood tingle with shame for your sex.

"If you hav not the moral stamina requisit to aid in this work, for our sake, do not, I beg, hinder those who hav. The foul ulcer must be probed in order to cleanse and purify, and I say, 'Let it come!' I repeat it, sir, let it come. No one living regrets more than I that it is necessary. 'It must needs be that offenses come, but woe unto him,' etc. I glory in the true manhood of Mr. Harman, that he is willing to be offered as a 'vicarious atonement' for the sins of his sex. There is much, very much, more, I fain would write, but time and space forbid. Hoping you will see this in its true light, I remain,

"Yours for truth and justice, ABBIE KNAPP, M.D."

One would infer from that that woman is very much abused, downtrodden, maltreated, enslaved, and generally despised, and that for printing protests against such abuse, maltreatment, etc., Mr. Harman had been arrested and was being martyred. But, really, nothing of the kind is the case. There is no sentiment in the matter complained of at all. It is just plain filthiness, told by a physician, who said he had known of such cases. There is no earthly use of printing the stuff, because the people to be affected by it—supposing there are any—will not be reached by it. So far as woman is to be "protected" by the relation, the courts of law are at her service already, which is all that can be done. There is positivly nothing of good in the whole matter, and it is so beastly that to send it to a person is an offense against all decency, and to thrust it upon the subscribers of a paper is to grossly insult them. It will not civilize woman; it will not giv her any dignity; it will not help her obtain any "freedom;" it will not do anything at all for her except degrade her. "Man's inhumanity" is not to be softened by any such rot. There is no place for it in the literature of any profession or class, unless it be in the most miserable class of men and women who inhabit the slums.

Dr. Knapp's letter is wholly misleading. It is not a case of hindering the advancement of woman—nothing of the sort. We but expressed our opinion of some matter Mr. Harman published, which we had precisely the same right to do that Mr. Harman had to publish the offending article. And we object to being set down as the enemy of woman because we do not think with Mr. Harman and Dr. Knapp. Let's hav a little accuracy of thinking and writing in regard to these things.

And here is another lapse made by Mr. Harman himself. He says:

"It may be a mark of senility or worse on my part, but to me it seems simply amazing that those two usually clear-headed thinkers and brave defenders of the right of free expression, E. M. and George Macdonald, should condemn in the strongest terms the manner in which Dr. O'Neill unveils the most hideous of crimes and vices, and yet hav not one word of condemnation for the crimes and vices themselvs. The facts, or the statements of facts, are not called in question, but only the manner of telling them. Dr. O'Neill may hav offended the canons of good taste. Granted; but if so, what is his offense, and his publisher's offense, when compared to the offenses against personal right and personal purity committed by the men whose acts are laid bare by the humane and plain-spoken physician?"

Great Jupiter! Does Mr. Harman value himself so lightly as to think that he must denounce nameless crimes that he may not be suspected of favoring them?

"Personal rights and personal purity!" Lord, Lord, how this world is given to inaccuracy! What is Mr. Harman after anyway? When personal rights are invaded in the manner described in the matter complained of, every court in the country will now protect the invaded. What more can be done? As for personal purity, we fancy that if our self-confessed senile critic were after that alone, he would never print the stuff he does.

We look upon this departure toward filthiness by Mr. Harman as the case of a good man gone wrong, and we sincerely hope that he may see the folly of his ways. But as for defending the publication of the rotten tales, we do not believe that E. M. and George Macdonald will be dragooned into doing it. They were both educated on this subject years ago when they stood shoulder to shoulder with D. M. Bennett. And let Mr. Harman and Dr. Knapp ponder these words of Saladin's in his introduction to "The Confessional:" "A trusting and much suffering public are not warranted in expecting to be supplied by procuresses and pimps with the panacea of moral health;" and surely there is no use of scientific men using the vocabulary of the abandoned wretches who disgrace all civilization.

Then here is our almost too genial contemporary, the Ironclad Age, falling into the same bad habit in his anxiety to say something severe. Read:

"The New York Sun's late laborious efforts to prove the Rev. De Witt Talmage a humbug was a work of supererogation. The entire world so regards him. He is one of the vile products of that hot-bed of vileness, New York city."

Dr. Talmage is not a product of New York city. He was born in New Jersey, whence he went West, acquired some reputation as an acrobatic orator, was called to Brooklyn, where he has since lived and performed. He may be a humbug, he may be vile, but he is not a product of New York city.

We trust that hereafter our friends will make their order of statement correspond with the order of phenomena—that is to say, with the things that are so.

Secularism: Which is, Liberalism.

Directly in line with the constructiv Freethought Symposium recently printed in these columns, and now to be obtained in pamphlet form, is a book received from Secular Thought office, entitled, "Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and is it Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind?" The book is a debate between the editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts, reprinted from Secular Thought.

On the platform Mr. Watts is probably the ablest Freethought debater in this country, with the exception, of course, of Colonel Ingersoll. This debate also shows that in cold type he is no whit behind himself on the rostrum. The positions assumed in this controversy are those of the English Secularists, Mr. Watts maintaining the sufficiency of reason as a guide, and taking the Utilitarian philosophy as a criterion of morality. In this he has the support of G. J. Holyoake, the "father of Secularism," and by his clearness of argument wins the following commendation from Colonel Ingersoll:

"MY DEAR MR. WATTS: I hav just read the debate between yourself and the editor of the Halifax Evening Mail, N. S. Your statement as to what Secularism is could not be improved, and your definitions of certain terms are accurate and lucid. I hav never read better. The editor of the Mail does not understand you. He has not enough intelligence to grasp your meaning. When you ask for a better guide than Reason, he does not see that he cannot even deny that reason is the best of all guides without admitting that it is. Suppose he had said that the Bible is a better guide than reason, he would hav been compelled to hav given his reasons for the assertion, and in doing this would hav admitted that reason had been his guide. I can hardly call this a debate that you had with the editor of the Mail. In a debate there ought to be arguments on both sides. All the argument is on your side. Your antagonist refused to come into the ring. He kept outside the ropes and even in that place threw up the sponge."

It would be well if Freethinkers who come in argumentativ contact with Christian friends should make themselvs familiar with the thought contained in the Secular part of this debate, as well as the constructiv ideas advanced in our Symposium. Mr. Holyoake, J. S. Mill, and other English writers, hav given in their Utilitarian philosophy the clearest of reasons why religion should not be allowed to dominate this-world affairs, and Mr. Watts has perhaps stated the case with even greater clearness than his teachers. This thread of utilitarianism, though differently wove, is found running through every one of the contributions to our collection, and its fuller explanation in Mr. Watts's part of this debate will be found of use in understanding them. We recommend his pamphlet to all our readers, and feel sure they will be intellectually benefited by it.

Letters from Friends.

DES MOINES, IA., March 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Continue the pictures, please.

Yours in the faith, JONATHAN BLYLER.

LEBANON, O., Feb. 23, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER sixteen years and do not propose to hav it stop until I stop breathing, pictures or no pictures. D. M. WORLEY.

EUREKA, WIS., March 7, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $6, $1 of which is to be applied for publishing the pictures, and the other five for two years' subscription. J. M. ROUNDS.

BUTTE CITY, MONT., Dec. 15, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed is $5 on my account. Please send me a few copies of "Vindication of Thomas Paine," by Robert G. Ingersoll. Take $1 for pictures. I want pictures. E. N. DAUCKEL.

MATTOON, ILL., Jan. 31, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5.75—$5 on paper, and send me three copies of the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL AND ALMANAC. I hav tried all over the place to get subscribers and hav sent out all the numbers I hav ever received, and yet I fail to get any money. GEO. REDFERN.

BEAVER DAM, WIS., March 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5, of which use $3 for subscription for THE TRUTH SEEKER, for I could not liv without it now; $1 for Heston's pictures, twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL for 1890, and the rest for the books named below. MRS. DUNCAN MCMILLAN.

DORCHESTER, NEB., March 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $7 for three copies of the good old TRUTH SEEKER, one a renewal for myself, and two for two new subscribers, which I am glad to be able to send. We all want the pictures. It would be a disappointment to hav the paper without them. W. J. JENNINGS.

AUGUSTA, KAN., Feb. 4, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find twenty-five cents for one copy of J. E. Remsburg's "Bible Morals." I hav seen a copy of it, and consider it a work that one cannot well afford to be without, as there is argument in it that makes the infernal, lazy, hypocritical pulpit-pounders squirm like angleworms in a tin can. PERRY C. MAHAFFEY.

FILLMORE, UTAH, Feb. 6, 290.

MR. EDITOR: I hav waited this long in order to get one new subscription to send with my own. It sometimes looks to me as though there was not energy enough to bury what is left of the Liberal element here. I managed to celebrate Thomas Paine's birthday with songs, speeches, and a grand supper, followed by a dance. Everybody went home saying Thomas Paine was not such a bad man after all if he did as we claimed for him. GEO. C. VEILE.

BRISTOL, VT., Dec. 25, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: I take the liberty to reply to W. E. Brown's letter, which appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER of December 21st, although he appealed to you, and will say that I hav in my possession a perpetual calendar extending from the sixteenth to the twenty-third centuries inclusiv, also an arithmetic containing a rule for finding the day of the week on which any given day of the month fell, and they both corroborate the statement that the 17th day of February, 1600, was Thursday. S. F. HASELTINE.

LONGMONT, COL., Dec. 6, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: There are ten copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER taken by members of the Longmont Secular Union. One subscriber is a Materialist, two are Agnostics, and seven are Spiritualists. Not one of the latter is pleased to read the harsh flings of T. Winter, wherein they are called "cranks" and other pet names. That "we cease to exist by the law of nature" has not yet been proved. The supreme court has not yet "handed down its decision" on that point. Those who take delight in calling others hard names had better join the church. That is where they belong.

GEO. X. YOUNG.

DRESDEN, ONT., March 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: As regards the pictures, I, as one of the oldest Freethinkers of this priest-ridden town, would say continue them if possible. Your cartoon of the 8th inst. reminds me of Voltaire when viewing the picture of Jesus hanging upon the wall of Frederick the Great. On one side was the pope of Rome; on the other was the picture of Louis XIV. The immortal wit expressed his surprise by saying that he never before knew who the thieves were that accompanied Christ in his hours of suffering.

T. W. GREOR.

FT. PIERRE, S. D., Dec. 23, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: It is some years since you hav heard from me. I am still alive, however, and still fighting "the good fight." I hav at different times procured subscribers for your paper, and I hav an opportunity now, if you will send me a few sample copies. I believe a majority of the people of this community are Freethinkers, whom the advent of THE TRUTH SEEKER would spur into activity.

We receive, occasionally, a visit from a tramp sky-pilot, with whom I had a set-to a few days ago. When I had driven him to the wall, he came at me with that old and oft-repeated question, "If you do away with Christianity, what will you giv us in the place of it?" This reminds me of the man who had the seven-year itch, and when approached by a doctor who recommended a cure, wanted to know what the doctor would giv him in the place of it. In the name of common sense, what did he want in the place of it—the small-pox? Why, giv him health. In the place of Christianity, let us hav mental and moral health. E. H. ALLISON.

SNOHOMISH CITY, WASH., Nov. 30, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find draft for one new subscriber and my renewal. We are to hav C. B. Reynolds with us to stir us up to the importance of organization. Mr. Reynolds is doing wonders in our new state for the cause of equal rights. He is an indefatigable worker. There is no such word as fail with him. If we had a thousand such workers in the field our success would be assured. I am of the opinion that we shall score a grand success when we organize on the 29th of next January. The people are becoming waked up, and begin to think it is time to make some move to counteract the movements of the enemy. J. S. MARTIN.

AYER, MASS., Feb. 6, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please fill the inclosed order for "Crimes Against Criminals," by Robert G. Ingersoll. I regard it as one of the greatest speeches ever uttered. It is prophetic of a revolution. A heart that is not moved, everlastingly impressed, by this noble appeal, must be calloused to every sense of human sympathy, must hav been the product of the orthodox God. What a contrast between the tender justice of a gentle, courageous "Infidel" and the ministers educated in the Christian faith! It seems to be the work of Infidels to shame the Christians into respectability. The church is responsible for the Infidels. And they hav been, and are, the saviors of the world. And their names are an ever brightening constellation, the hope of the world.

ELIJAH MYRICK.

ROSWELL, N. M., March 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Your call for expressions of the views of subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER as to the perpetuation of cartoons in your paper, has been kept before the public for some time, and I see that you are still flooded with favorable replies. It givs me pleasure to know that the almost universal verdict is, "Keep them up." I hav been a constant subscriber and reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER for nine years, and it is my opinion that Mr. Heston's work adds strength to the cause to which your paper is devoted. I would sooner pay $5 per year for the pictures alone than miss them from your pages. I would urge the issuance of a Pictorial Bible, illustrated by Heston. I will pay liberally for a copy of it.

Yours for the cause, P. F. GARRETT.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., March 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been working for some time to get new subscribers for your paper, but it is uphill business with so many Liberals. They sit down and talk and make sport of orthodox ideas, but fail to realize their duty of giving substantial aid to help the good cause along. But I am in hope to be able ere long to send you a few new subscribers, and I will keep trying till I get them. You can put me down as solid in favor of Heston's cartoons, for I think they are worth as much as the inside reading of the paper. The impressions they make on the mind are far more lasting, especially with the young and tender-footed, than anything you can print on the inside. And I hope you will be able to keep Mr. Heston at work. Also please send me a catalog of your publications. HERMAN KRIM.

CARTHAGE, MO., Feb. 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Here in our city for the past week the fires of Christian hatred hav been waxing hot, on account of the enemy bringing in a Samson to touch with a firebrand the corn of superstition belonging to the orthodox Philistines. This Samson turned loose his foxes, shook the Gazaian gateposts of the church, and with the jawbone of eloquence presented "False Claims," "Sabbath Breaking," and a biography of "Thomas Paine," in such a manner as to be worthy of the highest praise. Mr. J. E. Remsburg, who did the Samson act, delivered three lectures in the Opera House to an audience of about seven or eight hundred each evening. He has made many friends here, and will be remembered as a brilliant orator, a deep thinker, and a man of logic.

Respectfully, E. A. MAYAR.

WHEELING, W. VA., Feb. 13, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Though I am but eleven years old, I wish to giv the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER an account of our celebration of Thomas Paine's birthday. The members of the Secular Union assembled, old and young, and had a grand time. We little folks read essays, and the others read select pieces and made speeches, which exercises kept us until after 10 o'clock. Then we had a grand supper. We also had nice music and songs. We kept it up until nearly midnight. We all felt merry and happy while commemorating the birth of the grandest hero that ever lived. This is the first time that his birthday was ever celebrated in Wheeling, W. Va. I hope it will not be the last time. Liberals should ever remember the name of Thomas Paine. He did more for civil and religious liberty than any other man who ever lived. He worked for the liberty of mankind. He worked for the liberty of his race. ORLO INGERSOLL NOE.

BUTLER, PA., Feb. 22, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: A man at Renfrew, Butler county, Pa., living under the name of M. F. Lewis, claiming to be an ordained minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ, according to the caliber of the hardshell Baptist, has made some representations as follows: That Stephen Girard set apart a large amount of money for benevolent and educational purposes, which has been on interest and is now for distribution, and he is authorized by the trustees of the same to build a church in this town of Renfrew. He offers to giv $100 on laying the corner-stone, $100 in three months, and balance ($200) when the church is completed. Is he a fraud? Or hav the trustees proved untrue to their trust? Answer through your paper and oblige SIMEON NIXON.

[President Westbrook of the Secular Union will take pleasure in giving any information wished upon Girard's benefactions.—ED. T. S.]

LYONS, KAN., March 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3.25 for subscription and the ANNUAL, and twenty-five cents for the furtherance of the genius of Brother Heston. "To be, or not to be," pictures, poetry, or prose, is the question. A very, very few, according to Freethought principle, can hardly be expected to govern the many, although occasionally with questions new, original, or in striking contrast with existing customs, the few are sometimes in the right. This burlesquing of absurdities is old. This holding up to public gaze the gross superstitions of a primitiv, credulous people is not entirely new nor very old. The fate of Bruno, with a host of old-time martyrs, is a pretty good reason why burlesque of priestly pretensions was not tolerated. The pictures of Heston's at least represent an idea. They portray the absurdity of a host of antiquated riddles, and show the brain-addling tendency and rottenness of questions once thought to be too sacred to be questioned. Giv us the pictures, that some of the illustrations may hold up to view questions formerly imagined to be too sacred for public inspection.

E. BUTLER.

JASPER, ALA., Dec. 12, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: In reading a book called "Our Country," by the Rev. Josiah Strong, D.D., I find that he says: "Modern science as we now know it, is almost wholly the creation of the nineteenth century. . . . The idea that the government exists for the individual is modern. . . . Commerce follows the missionaries." He tries to make it appear that Christianity has produced all we see and enjoy of civilization.

Now, Christianity has been in the world eighteen hundred years, and had a God's word, it claims, for a text-book, and we had to get our knowledge outside of that book. Instead of commerce following missionaries, it is just the opposit. Our government as now understood was evolved from experience and reason, and not from Christianity. Christianity is in the way of nearly all reforms. It supported slavery and opposes labor reforms now, and woman suffrage, etc. And history will so record it in the coming ages. Christians even oppose free schools, free from superstition, and want the book that has checked progress the first book to be used in our noble system of education. J. K. DEARTH.

NEWCOMB, TENN., March 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: To-day I mail you a copy of the Kentucky Democrat, which contains an account of the hanging of Ellison Mounts, one of the murderers in the Hatfield-McCoy troubles. His deed has been spread through the newspapers as the blackest of murders. Yet Mr. Mounts claims that he is on the road to the pearly gates when he is on the gallows. It must be a direct route to the heavenly city, as everyone that goes from the gallows claims he is going that way.

The same paper givs an account of the "sickroom experience" of one Rev. Stephen Nolan, published in the Central Methodist, of Catlettsburg, Ky. Mr. Nolan said the Lord and savior visited his sickbed and that he conversed with him freely. We are told in the Bible that Jesus ascended to heaven there to sit in judgment at the right hand of the father. But according to Mr. Nolan he (Jesus) quit his throne in order to let Nolan know how great and good a servant that individual had proved to him. Nolan also says that Jesus told him that many of the people whom he (Nolan) had preached to were over the river and wanted to see him. Such a lot of nonsense you would not expect from a sensible man. Yet he was a very noted preacher in Kentucky.

S. P. HERRON.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 13, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Friend Heston's crucifixion this week is a masterpiece, and its truthfulness must strike the most skeptical.

The certainty of death is ever before us from the cradle to the grave, and therefrom commences the outgrowth of priestcraft. Priestcraft has ever been shaking before us its terrific dogmas. The priests assume that man by nature is a sinner, and needs their assistance to prepare him for a proper presentation to an offended, invisible, tyrannical, fiendish, whimsical God—a God whose approach is only known to a phalanx of priests qualified through study, sanctity, and prayer. I use the word "priesthood" in its general application, for among the millions of human beings inhabiting the world there hav ever been innumerable races of priests, but all assuming this peculiar sanctity—knowing just how much praise, how much glorification, and how much flattery will be agreeable to this whimsical, tyrannical God.

This is a sad view for a broad-minded, honest thinker, or one who presumes to doubt. Hence, in this view of existence should it be a matter of surprise that our yearly bills of mortality exhibit such a ghastly amount of suicides? Here again is something inconsistent with Christian theology, or so many of the clergy themselvs would not so readily dash into the great unknown. By law the only restriction is one hundred dollars fine if caught at the unfinished job of suicide. The question arises, what has become of an American citizen's liberties? Has he not the right when life becomes unbearable through sickness, disease, or sadness to abandon it? DAVID BRUCE.

FORT WORTH, TEX, Feb. 21, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I thank you for the second copy of your paper for April 20th. The first was received in due season, but given away, or sent away, before I saw your response to my brief note of April 1st in reference to the Blair educational bill. You see I distribute THE TRUTH SEEKER as well as the Blair bill. I made a slight mistake by quoting from your Editorial Notes March 9th. I wrote "Blair Educational Amendment," but was thinking of the bill to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools, generally called the Blair Educational bill. In that bill there is, surely, no "religious or sectarian scheme," and that is the bill I meant. It was presented by Senator Blair December 4, 1889, referred to the committee on education and labor, and reported by Mr. Blair December 18th, and is now being considered by the Senate. If you will read that bill I think you will agree with me in approving it and wishing it might become a law, and it seems to me every philanthropist and every patriot will do the same. Twenty-eight senators expressed themselvs in favor of it in debate, sixteen of them from Southern states.

In regard to the amendment you refer to, or that part which you call the chief section, I coincide with all you say, but one little amendment will render it unobjectionable to me, viz.: Strike out the words you printed in capitals, i. e., "And the principles of the Christian religion." And I am confident it will be so amended in both branches of Congress before it passes, if it ever does. The other part of the section which you quote meets my entire and cordial approval.

Respectfully yours, J. M. BROWN.

CRESCO, IA., Dec. 15, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: I noticed that one of our ablest thinkers was recently mentioned as "Rev. Bob Ingersoll, of the devil's church." Now, if he were in fact a pulpit-pounder in the service of this much-maligned half of Christianity, the devil, who, according to the rantings of sky-pilots, is the successful competitor against the other half, Jehovah, I am led to believe that the colonel has wisely chosen the best of the two lords of religion (superstition). Able as the colonel is in showing up credulous and blind or willingly ignorant believers, I think that Mr. James Bird, of Cincinnati, O., in THE TRUTH SEEKER of Dec. 7, 1889, takes the cake in showing how very crack-brained a believer of Bible absurdities must be. I hav not read or listened to anything in a long time which succeeds so admirably in ridiculing religion. Can a sensible man, woman, or child read that letter and not become disgusted with unquestioning belief? Can any sane person read it carefully and still refuse to admit that belief in the Bible does intercept progress? The contents of that letter prove to me conclusivly that he who depends on the Holy Queer for knowledge is incapable of a straight line of thought, unable to recognize known facts, and that he prefers mental slavery to independence of mind. Reason and the results of scientific investigation are of no value to the person whose mind is trained to accept the errors of past ages. I thank Mr. Bird for his brief exposition of the most degrading scheme ever inaugurated for the purpose of robbing humanity of money, liberty, and peace.

F. S. DAUBERSMITH.

BRISTOL, CONN., March 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav delayed sending in my vote on the picture election, as I call it, until the others had polled their votes. I hav been amused in reading the numerous letters—over seventy-five in a single number, voting the straight ticket by a large majority. I think I hav my man, and that he will subscribe. If he does not, I will pay for one year to any party that cannot raise the funds rather than hav the pictures discontinued. This cry of "Don't hurt their feelings" is highly amusing. Do they care for our feelings? Hav they not told falsehoods year after year, decade after decade, from the pulpit and in the religious press? One man that dare face them and tell the truth, stands higher in my opinion than a thousand sniveling cowards that cry, "Don't." If ridicule will cut off the right arm of superstition let Heston grind the blade, and he may call on me to turn the grindstone. I will not complain if he does "bear on." Toward the individual I hav no animosity, but the plant of Christianity—it cannot be called a principle—hew it down, dig out the roots, clear the ground, sow the seeds of common sense, and let these sacred loafers that hav lain under the shade six days out of seven and three-quarters of the seventh, take a hand at honest toil or pack their grip and start for the new Jerusalem. One pious lad, speaking of Colonel Ingersoll, said, "Why doesn't Bob go to Africa, where there is no civilization?" In reply I asked him why the saints did not go to heaven. That closed the argument. When I remit I will take a book of the pictures. I think they are cheap.

J. E. COY.

March 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Thank you for sample copy of your excellent paper. The picture of Boaz and Ruth is so lifelike it must hav been taken on the spot by your highly inspired artist. There is a great deal of truth under the outer semblance of Mr. Heston's realistic pictures. They convey to the thinking man a great deal more than the eyes can cover. When I look at Boaz, the old roué, and the seemingly simple-minded Ruth, I put myself as a spectator of the nauseating scene and look forward to the birth of the said-to-be Christian savior, and am glad to think that I did not hav old Boaz for an ancestor. Although I am not a subscriber to your paper, I look forward to the time that I may be; but I take four Liberal papers, so you see I am doing my duty to our glorious and imperishable cause—a cause that in spite of "In God we trust" is on the war-path and will eventually be victorious over superstition, the flesh, and the devil. The slave of ecclesiasticism feels happy in wearing the chains of priestcraft so long as he does not know it, but let him see but one link of that chain and how quick the whole chain comes into view. Our mission is to point out that one link, even if it be the weakest one. To show that our cause is growing, look at the muddle the heathen and infant damnation sect has got into. There is nothing strange in this when we look at the whole thing with an eye backed by common sense. Man made their creed, and man can unmake it. In looking over the XXXIX Articles of religion in the Protestant Episcopal prayer-book, I find in Article XVII that the Protestant Episcopal church is as deep in the mire on the predestination humbug as the Presbyterian. According to this article millions of the human race were damned "before the foundations of the world were laid." So you see that we were damned millions of years before we were born. What outrageous stuff this is to teach people in this enlightened age! It is in the book, and I do not think that any Protestant Episcopal parson would dare to face an intelligent congregation and teach the doctrin as it is in Article XVII. This is like a good many laws on our statute-books, never enforced unless in a New Jersey court—witness the trial of Reynolds for alleged blasphemy. JOHN L. MOORE.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Dec. 8, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: Once more I hav a proof that a free press in this country is an impossibility. Under the ban of the majority an independent press cannot exist. I wrote a short article on the school board of this place giving the use of the school-room to the United Presbyterians for Sunday-school purposes. I said the Catholics had an equal right to the use of a school-room for religious purposes. I asked the editor of a small one-cent daily to publish it, which he promised to do, but some influence came over him and he did not do it. Our newspapers are in such dread of the boycott of the churches that they dare not publish anything that would offend them. And yet we boast of a free and independent press. When the Knights of Labor and other organizations of labor commenced to talk about the boycott, what a wail went up from the churches and the independent press! It was conspiracy, it was un-American, it was all wrong and must be stopped, and actions for conspiracy were actually entered on against parties supposed to be engaged in the boycott. Now it is the church's great weapon to put down any person or paper that dare call into question any of their methods. Why is it that the people are so apathetic when their liberties are being gradually abridged by the cunning action of the church, by the aid of politicians who, to get into office, are ready to do the bidding of any church or churchman who can, by his influence over the members of his church and the use of the boycott, make or mar the prospects of the politician, no matter how his election would affect the interest of the nation?

I am amused at the valiant style in which Mr. J. H. Burnham attacks the action of the Philadelphia congress of the Secular Union for trying to concentrate their forces on one or two objects, viz., taxation of church property and a thorough separation of church and state. There is an old motto that I always believed in, Do one thing at a time and do it well. I would ask, What has been gained by the Secular Union by the scattering fire they hav been engaged in the last twelve years? A few scattering societies formed in a few small towns or villages, only to die out for want of unity, and nothing done. Now, if we can agree to drop our idiosyncrasies and unite all that believe in taxing church property and in an entire separation of church and state, both in and out of the churches, I believe there are millions that would work willingly in that army to break down these breastworks of the enemy. I cannot see, with Mr. Burnham, that our honored dead, D. M. Bennett and others, would hav any objection to our using all the forces we could muster for such a purpose, even if it was made up of Universalists, or any other ists. I do not know if Mr. Burnham ever raised his voice against Spiritualists working with the Secular Union for these objects. But, as he says, Secularism means human help and not divine. I for one are willing to receive it from all sources.

J. DOWNES.

ITHACA, NEB., Dec. 25, 1889.

BROTHER PECK: I am not a Spiritualist, but wish to make a few suggestions to you in reference to your "Address to any Spiritualist." You assert that you do not know whether Spiritualism is founded in truth or error, and that you desire to hav the Spiritual philosophy true. Why then should you oppose it, seeing that you admit that you do not know whether it is true or not, and desire it to be true? Spiritualism does not indorse the Bible, and opposes nearly all old-fashioned theology, and is generally foremost in all reforms. If it is more desirable to believe and in that belief there is more happiness, why not let it alone? If death ends all, as your philosophy indicates, and there is nothing gained in proving it, why prove it at all, especially as long as there is any doubt? I am sure that it is not a desirable doctrin for anyone. On every question you hav ever written except this one, I think you are one of our very best writers, and in the answers to the questions asked in the last ANNUAL "Symposium" I think your answers were better than any, especially to the last question. On that you were far ahead of them all. Is it certain that infants, idiots, and lunatics hav no mind? Can you tell just what the mind is? If the matter of the body is indestructible and the thoughts of the mind are indestructible, may not the mind that thinks also be indestructible? Can you prove that anything in the universe is ever utterly destroyed? I hav heard of a different experience from yours, especially one case of suspended animation, where the person was about to be buried, and already prepared by shroud, etc., and he afterward came to and stated that he was conscious all the time, and his great dread of being buried alive was why he made all his efforts to move and finally succeeded. There are many things that we cannot understand at present. I hav had some experience. For instance, I hav dreamed of places such as I had never seen when awake, and afterward in traveling came across just the places that I had dreamed of. Now, will you tell me how I got that impression on my mind? Was my mind absent from my body, or did some outside power make the impression? One more. One night I dreamed of a funeral, saw a black coffin, and waked up in trouble. The next day I heard of the death of my brother. I had not even heard of his sickness before. Can you explain it? I hav talked with others that had a similar experience. You hav probably investigated Spiritualism. I hav not had a chance to investigate all that I desire. You hav read, probably, of Horace Greeley's experience, published many years ago—how he asked questions that at the time he did not know himself, and got correct answers. Can you tell how he got them, as he wrote the questions, and, I believe, kept possession of them until they were answered? But I am willing and anxious to let the question of future life and salvation alone. Let it work itself out. What I am more interested in is present salvation, and I am glad that you take right grounds on that. If all Liberals would agree on that with you and me, we at least could accomplish something, but it seems that all cannot agree on that even. As to the future I know nothing. I would like to hav Spiritualism proved true. I hope it may be some time. Let us work for the present; try and save our country from political despotism; make it possible for all to liv the present life, and not hav a few millionaires and hundreds of thousands of beggars. JOHN BRYAN.

MAKANDA, ILL., Dec. 22, E.M. 289.

MR. EDITOR: In this section of our country there is so much freedom of thought and action, and the tyrannical church influences that are so manifest, annoying, and threatening, in some parts of our country, are felt so slightly, that it is difficult to convince anyone that there is any real danger threatening our liberty and rights from church encroachments. There used to be revivals here, but for the last year or two we hav been mercifully preserved from them. A large percentage of the early settlers here were from the Southern states, and from the middle and poorer classes whom slavery had deprived of the advantages of a common school education. This blessing, however, is amply conferred on their children by the excellent school system of this state. Many of the people think it best to hav some kind of a religious cloak, but in this mild climate it is not deemed necessary to hav it of very heavy material. Most of the people who care at all for any church, I think, lean toward the Baptist persuasion. With them baptism means immersion, or "dipping," as it is called. The practice seems to be "playing out." But it used to be customary for the preachers, when they had secured a few converts, to appoint the time and place for their immersion. The time was Sunday, and the place near some accessible pool on some of the small streams, or "branches," as they are called here. These pools are generally three or four feet deep, not including the mud in the bottom. Multitudes used to assemble on these occasions to witness the performance, which they called a "baptizin'," and generally so much of the ludicrous occurred in connection with them that for fun and real enjoyment they were considered nearly equal to the circus. At the last "baptizin'" that occurred in this neighborhood the minister, who had too great an accumulation of adipose deposit to be very agil, or make a successful acrobat, had just led a lady into the water, and when about to consummate the holy ordinance, he realized that, like the wicked, he "stood on slippery places." which so "betrayed his feet" that it was with great difficulty he saved himself from complete submersion, and going to the bottom keel uppermost. Like the angel at that other pool, long ago, he succeeded in "troubling the waters," but especially the mud. The lady, in the mean time, being disgusted with the holy man's aquatic gymnastics, abandoned the project, and retired, all dripping and unbaptized, from the water, amid the ill-concealed mirth of the ungodly bystanders.

In conversation recently with a rather intelligent minister, we agreed that a very large per cent of the revival converts are ignorant, selfish, and insincere, and I think I convinced him that all the phenomena connected with the experience of both the honest and dishonest converts could be readily accounted for on natural principles, and that they had no supernatural element. But of that I will not write at present. I wish to give an example or two in illustration of the character of some of the revival converts, they being actual facts. Some time ago, at one of these "baptizin's," it rained heavily, and a young man who had not been fully decided on the matter said he believed he would get dipped then and there, for he had not a dry stitch on him, and he did not "care a damn for the wetting." Another illustration of the character of a class of young Methodist revival converts, or convicts, is given in actual facts which occurred at New Bedford, Pa., three years ago. The minister so persistently and fiercely denounced the moralists, i.e., the really conscientious, upright, decent outsiders, dooming them to the hottest place in hell, that they ceased to attend or giv aid or comfort to him. But quite a number of the more vicious class of boys thought, in view of their deserts, that if they could escape hell so easily, they had better get religion and join the church. One of these converts, who got his wealth largely by trapping skunks, said to one of his unconverted chums: "Why don't you get religion and join the church? Then you would escape hell. And I hav had the darnedest luck since I joined that ever I had in my life. I caught four skunks, and they were every one black!" His chum said, if that was the way it worked, he would join. So that night he went forward for prayers, and was "hopefully converted to Christ." The next day he bought traps and set them, and waited for the Lord to drive the animals into them, but said Lord seemed to be otherwise engaged; and when he waited and caught nothing he said he was sorry he had got religion—there was nothing in it, for he had not caught a darned polecat since his conversion!

W. W. WALKER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by Miss Susan H. Wixon, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Don't Fret, but Smile.

It isn't worth while to fret, dear,
To walk as behind a hearse.
No matter how vexing things may be
They easily might be worse;
And the time you spend complaining
And groaning about the load,
Better be given to going on,
And pressing along the road.

I've trodden the hill myself, dear.
'Tis the tripping tongue can preach,
But though silence is sometimes golden, child,
As oft there is grace in speech,
And I see, from my higher level,
'Tis less the path than the pace
That wearies the back and dims the eye,
And writes the lines on the face.

There are vexing cares enough, dear;
And to spare, when all is told;
And love must mourn its losses,
And the cheek's soft bloom grow old;
But the spell of the craven spirit
Turns blessing into curse,
While the bold heart meets the trouble
That easily might be worse.

So smile at each disaster
That will presently pass away,
And believe a bright to-morrow
Will follow the dark to-day.
There's nothing gained by fretting,
Gather your strength anew,
And step by step go onward, dear,
Let the skies be gray or blue.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

Announcement of Prizes.

Responsiv to our offer in the Corner last October, we hav received but two essays upon morality that will do to print. Both of these are creditable to the authors. Nor has the competition been large in the other essays or stories called for.

Under the circumstances we think it proper to change somewhat the order of award of prizes as at first proposed.

Therefore, we award to Leonora Stockinger the sum of $3 for first prize essay on morality. Her essay is printed in this number.

To J. Harold Ward is awarded a second prize of $2. This essay will be printed in our next number.

Walter W. Clark takes a prize of $3 for scientific essay on "The Sun." And to Mary V. Foster is awarded $2 for her spirited reply to James and Jacob Foster.

All the essays will be printed in due time.

Ed. C. C.

What Is Morality?

What is morality? Is it sufficient as a guide for conduct in human affairs?

Morality, as defined by Webster, is, "the quality of an intention, a character, an action, a principle, or a sentiment, when tried by the standard of right; or the quality of an action which renders it good."

It is a much varied subject, involving many principles that demand minute consideration.

Also the following definition has often been applied to the subject, that "morality is living up to your highest conception of right." This has often been considered correct by many; however, it may be overthrown, and proved to be, in some cases, incorrect. For instance, the Hindoo women throw their children into the Ganges river; also the widows, if prevented from burning themselvs with their husbands' corpses, sometimes feel the pangs of remorse, and lead a life of misery and self-humiliation.

Now, do they not act according to their perception of right? What one person conceives to be the right, another conceives to be absolutely the wrong.

If one would conceive it to be right to murder, plunder, or burn, and would follow out his convictions, he would be moral according to his own perception of right.

The deficiency of the definition is now obvious, although it may hold applicable in many cases, but in some, where one is not strong enough to resist temptation, law must be the guide. Morality has in view the prevention of human misery, and the promotion of human happiness. Happiness is the utmost pleasure, and misery is the utmost pain, and they are both synonymous terms, as are also good and evil, or right and wrong.

Conscience is the name we giv the faculty of distinguishing right and wrong, and when highly developed givs a queer and unmistakable feeling of the mind at what is wrong, and is given to teach moral truths.

This is now regarding morality singly. Before you resolve upon an action, let your first questions always be, "Is this action right?" "Would I wish anyone to do the same to me?" In this way, it is needless to say, you will hav a guide amply sufficient for your conduct in all your affairs. Cultivate the habit of deciding upon the moral character of an action before you perform it.

There is such a fact as immorality of thoughts, and as illustrativ of this, I will relate a portion of a story that particularly relates to the immorality of the act and thought of a brother.

There was once a very wealthy man who had no children but an adopted daughter, whom he loved and regarded as his own. His nearest relativ was a poor brother who had formerly treated him very disrespectfully. When the wealthy brother died two wills were found, one of an early date in favor of his brother as rightful and only heir, and the one of a later date, and consequently the legal one, in favor of the daughter.

The brother then determined to destroy the latest will, and so make himself heir to all of the estate. He finally succeeded in discovering it, and was so bent upon its destroyal that by some mistake he destroyed the one in favor of himself. The story is not so briefly told, but I simply desired to relate that part which shows the immorality of the acts and thoughts of the disinherited brother.

Was he not immoral in his former acts to his brother, and was he not immoral in his deeds and thoughts concerning the will?

Would he not hav been loved, remembered, and esteemed by his brother if he had only taken morality as a guide for his conduct in the affairs with his brother?

It is obvious that there is nothing to be attained by being immoral, as you may note in the above case. We are immoral when we are doing contrary to our conscience, and it is certainly not conduciv to our happiness and prosperity. Why does an immoral person seek to hide his guilt? Simply because his conscience informs him of the fact that he has committed a wrong, and he commits a double wrong who conceals it.

Nature blends and harmonizes all her works into perfect excellence, because she does her own natural work; and they who perform all their natural work will blend and harmonize all their elementary impulses in a life of true moral excellence. Although there may be darkness and despair on each side, they will nevertheless see the way of duty open before them, and made luminous by the torch of right.

If a person is not under the controling influence of morality, he really cannot be a morally upright man. He has no right aim by which to work, and consequently exists in doubt.

A morally good person is one whose dispositions and affections are such as tend of themselvs to promote the good or happiness of humanity. We cannot attribute goodness to a man merely because his outward acts hav this tendency; as the worst of men may act in this way, but with intentions other than good. When one has the right conception of morality, then he has a good regulator to his many actions.

His morality is chiefly exhibited in his dealings and conversation with his fellowmen.

There was a time when among civilized and uncivilized nations there was an utter lack of morality; they were all ungenerous and unfair in the conduct of their affairs with each other.

In our time, I am happy to say, these instances are rare. On the average we know better than the Bechwana, who, being asked what it meant to "be good," was much puzzled, but finally answered, "To be good, it is to possess a wife and cows, and steal one's neighbor's wife and cows;" on the average, we hav a better perception of good than the Pawnee who said, "He is a good man who is a hunter, sly, crafty as a fox, daring and strong as a wolf." Here the question naturally arises, Is there such a fact as moral progress?

It is a positiv fact, but is far from being always evident. Its course does not run incessantly onward in a straight line, and at uniform speed, but it proceeds by irregular motions, and sometimes by broken or curved lines. It is a fallacy that good morals can grow and originate from ignorance, brutality, or want. They rather cause recklessness.

A good person who begins early in life with good moral principles, will be admired and respected by all, and will win success throughout this life, while on the other hand, if he had an absence of moral principles, he would not be respected, and would become reckless, while his life would not be worth living.

How could Penn, the founder and father of Pennsylvania, hav succeeded, had he not used morality as the guide to his conduct in his affairs? He kindly wrote to the Indians warmly assuring them of his disposition to treat them with kindness, and as brethren, and to deal with them justly, entreating them also to treat his people in the same kind and respectful manner.

It is stated that he had not been here long before he made an effort to bring together the numerous and various Indian tribes to form a treaty of peace and friendship.

They accordingly met at the city of Philadelphia and made a treaty, which, unlike many other Indian treaties, "was never broken." It is also stated that not a drop of Quaker blood was ever shed by an Indian.

Had Penn been deficient in morality, what would hav been his success? And consider for a moment how he would hav been repaid! They would hav inflicted great punishment upon him, by some revengeful means.

As punishment is the consequence of certain actions, every individual is made to taste it in some way; it is one of the occurrences of every-day life, consequently we will not commit a bad action if we hav the fact of the connection of punishment constantly in view.

Again, taking morality in a nation, we find law as its foundation.

All citizens are required to abide by the rules of authority. Their promises are to be fulfilled according to prescribed forms, etc.

The principle in law represents that if theft and murder, and the many other crimes that occur, were allowed to go unpunished, neither life nor property would longer be safe. Nations would be in continual warfare, society would soon end, and industry would perish.

Our lives are full of conflicting demands, and there must be special rules to guide them. What substitute, then, can we find better than law? If we cast our glance over the history of the world, we can scarcely discover any rules of morality, and, above all, the wrong perception of right was had by the majority.

Revert for a moment to the centuries back, where there was scarcely any law. What a wrong perception of morality the people had! Had they had strict moral laws enforced it is unmistakably evident that this would not hav been the case. Law compels many to be moral who otherwise would perhaps be immoral, and consequently morality eventually becomes a habit with them. If morality is a sufficient guide to the conduct of humanity, why need we, then, the numerous laws, the law enforcers, prisons, and jails? The child first dreads the punishment it receives by its parents; then, as it attains manhood, it dreads the law. So it is with all human beings. They are all placed under law, accompanied by punishment. Their bad actions are forbidden, and they are subjected to some very painful infliction, the severity of which is increased as the bad actions are increased, and thus law causes morality to become customary, by imbedding it in the minds of the people.

A code of good moral laws are those that establish equality of right to all human beings. They are laws that are honest, and not partial to wealth, rank, or title, but regard each individual alike.

Another requisit to morality is truth. And truth is deep and must be searched.

In the depth of the sea rests the pearl, the precious,
In the mussel inclosed and only the diver enriches.
Just so swims the truth, not upon outer waves,
But in hidden depth we must seek her always.
Only the searching hand that truth abides,
And holds it aloft o'er the waves and tides.
Brings she mankind to us in the duties of life,
Where, with unending value, always ends strife.

Versailles, Ind. Leonora Stookinger.

The Candle from Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

Agents for the Truth Seeker.

CALIFORNIA.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 32 Third st., San Francisco, Cal.
Dr. J. L. York, San Jose, Cal.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearny st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 313 Grant ave., San Francisco.

CANADA.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
W. B. Cooke, 170 1-2 Yonge st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
Knowles, Cor. George and Granville st., Halifax, N. S.

COLORADO.
J. G. Jenkins, 400 Arapahoe st., Denver.

FLORIDA.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

IDAHO.
A. Erwin, Murray.

ILLINOIS.
Post-office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
E. A. Stevens, 558 West Madison st., Room 1 Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 302 State street, and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 56 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

INDIANA.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
T. P. Monroe, postmaster, Dunkirk.

LOUISIANA.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Joseph Marsh, Northampton.
Johnson Bro's 5 N. Main st., Fall River.

MICHIGAN.
A. Atwood, Eaton Rapids.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, 138 S. Division St., Grand Rapids.
Swan & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Horace Haynes, Leslie.

MISSOURI.
Phillip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Lang & Co., 709 Olive st., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Eaton & Smith, 1234 O st., Lincoln.

NEW YORK.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
M. B. Edinger, 1243 Third ave., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, cor. Fulton and Nassau st., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.

OHIO.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior street, Cleveland.
Van Epps & Co., 259 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Emory P. Robinson, Sydney.

OREGON.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
C. H. Wilcox, Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 1106 Leopard st., Phila.
W. F. Schade, 3,706 Butler street, Pittsburgh.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.

TENNESSEE.
Wm. B. Fisher, 331 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

TEXAS.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
H. S. Kratz, 306 Houston st., Fort Worth.

UTAH.
James Ashman, Salt Lake City.
W. F. Reybould, Salt Lake City.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
W. Wedeken, Montesano.

ENGLAND.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet street, London.
Progressiv Pub. Co., 28 Stonecutter st., London, E. C.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

AUSTRALIA.
Mrs. J. Hadfield, Park st., Sydney, N.S.W.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N. S. W.

NEW ZEALAND.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

Solid Silver Spoons—Free.

The firm who make the above offer in another part of our paper are perfectly reliable and the premium box which they send out contains not only all the Sweet Home Soap and fine Toilet Soaps and the list of miscellaneous articles contained in the advertisment but also a set of Solid Silver Spoons. Subscribers who write to them are perfectly safe in sending $6 with the order, and this is the quickest and best way (on account of the extra present that is given for cash) to get goods from Messrs. J. D. Larkin & Co., Buffalo, N. Y., who certainly exhibit an enterprise and liberality in their desire to introduce their soaps which is almost unheard of.—Advertisment.

Indispensable to AUTHORS and BUSINESS MEN.

Combines the simplicity of the Hektograph without its great disadvantages, viz., waste, washing, etc.

"THE SIMPLEX."

The Simplest and Cheapest Reliable Duplicator extant.

100 copies from one original writing (original written with any ordinary pen).
No washing, no inking roller, no stencil, no dotted lines.
The only really satisfactory process for duplicating any writing, music, drawing, typewriting, etc.
☞ Special sizes: Note, $4.50; Letter, $6 50; Cap, $7.50. Cash with order.
Circulars and samples of work mailed on application.
T. BENSINGER and CO, 5 Dey st., New York.
Headquarters for manifolding devices.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.
PRICE, TEN CENTS.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Giordano Bruno.

His Life, Works, Worth, Martyrdom, Portrait, and Monument.

With a complete list of the American subscribers to the fund for the erection of the monument.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, THOMAS DAVIDSON,
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, KARL BLIND,
LYDIA R. CHASE.

Single copies 15 cents; ten copies for a dollar.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ROMANISM,

OR

DANGER AHEAD.

The Reason Why a Good Roman Catholic Cannot be a Good Citizen of this Republic.

By A. J. GROVER.

Price, paper, 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

NOW READY.

A VOLUME OF THE WRITINGS OF

HORACE SEAVER.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume comprises some of the ablest and best editorials written by Mr. Seaver during the past forty-five years. It is neatly printed on cream-white paper, bound in cloth, and contains a fine likeness of the venerable editor of the Investigator. Every Liberal should hav this book in his home. It is now ready for delivery.

Price, $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.

It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

A WEALTHY MANUFACTURING CO. GIVES

6 SOLID SILVER SPOONS FREE.

WE WANT every Family in the land to use "SWEET HOME" SOAP, our various Toilet Soaps, Perfumery, etc. As an inducement to order at once and to start a direct trade from our factory to families, we include in our box

ONE SET SOLID

SILVER SPOONS

and many other useful presents; read a description in the next column.

WE WANT a few reliable MEN and WOMEN who have used our goods and know their great value to show the premiums, advertise, and recommend our Soap and Toilet Articles in their respective neighborhoods; this is a pleasant and very profitable employment. We pay for the service in cash. Many people who advertise for us MAKE OVER $5 A DAY.

You Had Better Order

a Mammoth "Sweet Home" Box at once for if you do not need all of the "extras" you can easily sell them out for much more than cost of the box, and thus get a year's supply of soap for your own use for nothing.

WE GUARANTEE

our Mammoth 'Sweet Home" Box to contain each and every article named in this column. All you have to do is to send us your name on a postal card and we ship you the box.

ONE HUNDRED CAKES "Sweet Home" Family Soap enough to last a family one full year. This Soap is made for all household purposes and has no superior.

SIX BOXES BORAXINE.
One-Fourth Dozen Modjeska Complexion Soap.
One Bottle Modjeska Perfume.
One-Fourth Dozen Ocean Bath Toilet Soap.
One-Fourth Dozen Artistic Toilet Soap.
One-Fourth Dozen Creme Toilet Soap.
One-Fourth Dozen Elite Toilet Soap.
One English Jar Modjeska Cold Cream.
Soothing, Healing, Beautifies the Skin, Improves the Complexion, Cures Chapped Hands and Lips.

Our Mammoth "Sweet Home" Box Contains a great variety of Toys, Playthings, etc., for the Babies, and sundry useful and amusing things for the older folks. It also contains:

ONE SET (6) SOLID SILVER TEA SPOONS, PLAIN PATTERN—SUCH AS YOUR GRANDMOTHER USED, VERY RICH AND ELEGANT.
(Will Last a Life Time.)

One fine Silver-plated Button Hook.
One Lady's Celluloid Pen Holder (very best).
One Arabesque Mat.
One Glove Buttoner.
One Package "Steadfast" Pins.
One Spool Black Silk Thread.
One Gentleman's Handkerchief, large.
Fourteen Patent Transfer Patterns for stamping and embroidering table linen, toilet mats, towels, tidies, etc.
One Lady's Handkerchief.
One Child's Lettered Handkerchief.
One Wall Match Safe; (illuminated, can be seen at night).
One Package Assorted Scrap Pictures.
Two Celluloid Collar Buttons, (patented).
Twenty-three Pictures of the Presidents of the U. S.

☞ In addition to all of the above articles we place in each box ONE ALBUM containing pictures of the following celebrities:

1. Wm. E. Gladstone,
2. Bismarck,
3. Daniel Webster,
4. J. G. Whittier,
5. Geo. Bancroft,
6. Abraham Lincoln,
7. Ulysses S. Grant,
8. Robert E. Lee,
9. Gen. Sheridan,
10. Thos. Carlyle,
11. Commodore Farragut,
12. "Stonewall" Jackson,
13. General Scott,
14. Thomas Edison,
15. Benj. F. Morse,
16. Jos. Jefferson.
17. Benj. Franklin,
18. Henry M. Stanley,
19. Oliver Perry,
20. Geothe,
21. Schiller,
22. Alex. Hamilton,
23. John Howard Payne,

Etc., Etc., Etc.

OUR OFFER? Simply write your name and address on a postal card and mail it to us and we will send you the AND HOW TO GET THE BOX Box on 30 day's trial and you are under no obligations to keep the box if it does not in every way meet your expectation. Knowing the great value of our articles, we are willing to put them to the severest kind of a test, hence will send you the box on 30 day's trial and if not satisfactory will remove it.

Our Price for the Mammoth "Sweet Home" Box Complete is Six Dollars.

J. D. LARKIN & CO., Factories—Seneca, Hancock and Carroll Streets, BUFFALO, N. Y.

☞ Some people prefer to send cash with order; we do not ask it, but in such cases we place one Solid Silver Sugar Spoon in the box (in addition to all the other extras) and ship the same day the order is received, all other orders being filled in their turn.

REMEMBER "Sweet Home" Family Soap is an extra fine, pure soap, made from refined tallow and vegetable oils. On account of its firmness & purity each cake will do double the work of the common cheap soaps usually sold from groceries.

OUR firm has been in the Soap business many years, and as to our reliability refer to the publishers of this paper, Commercial Agencies or any banker in the United States. When in Buffalo, call on us, you will be welcome.

FREETHOUGHT

IS IT

DESTRUCTIVE OR CONSTRUCTIVE?

A SYMPOSIUM

BY

COL. R. G. INGERSOLL, R. B. WESTBROOK, CAPT. R. C. ADAMS,
E. B. FOOTE, JR., SALADIN (W. Stewart Ross), L. K. WASHBURN,
H. O. PENTECOST, GEO. E. MACDONALD, SUSAN H. WIXON,
E. C. WALKER, SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, F. M. HOLLAND,
LUCY N. COLMAN, PARKER PILLSBURY, MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL,
C. B. REYNOLDS, CHARLES WATTS, J. H. BURNHAM,
W. F. JAMIESON, THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.

SUBJECTS OF PAPERS:

Is there an Affirmative, Positive, Constructive side to Freethought?
If not, the reason why?
If there be, in what, in your opinion, does it consist, and in what should it consist?

PRICE 25 CENTS.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales, SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

THE

CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:

THEIR

Crimes and Persecutions.

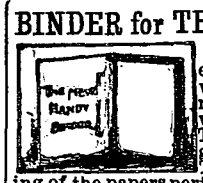
8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

ON THE WORD GOD.

By Milton Woolley, M.D., Author of "Hebrew Mythology," "The Career of Jesus Christ."



The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God.—[Ps. xiv, 1.

Children and fools speak the truth.—[Old Saw.

Paper, 12mo, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BINDER for THE TRUTH SEEKER

For the benefit of our readers who preserve their papers we offer a new style of binder, made for the purpose, and with the heading of THE TRUTH SEEKER printed in gold letters on the outside. This binder allows the opening of the papers perfectly flat. It also allows the taking out and replacing of one or more papers from any part of the file without disturbing the other parts.

Sent by mail, postpaid, for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
tf 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

BIBLE INQUIRER;

OR,

A Key to Bible Investigation.

Containing 148 Propositions
With References to the most Plain and Striking Self-Contradictions of the so-called Inspired Scriptures.

BY A. JACOBSON.

Third edition, carefully revised and enlarged.

Every Liberal needs a copy for ready reference. As a pamphlet to loan to Christian friends, it is the most effectiv Iconoclast ever published.

Price only 25 cents.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

Thoughts from a Christian Thinker.

We hear a great deal nowadays about science and geology. Science, as I understand it, is about everything but the soul, and especially about force and matter. These hifalutin scientists like Huxley, who want to be wise above what is written, ask us to believe that we are only an edition de luxe of the chimpanzee, a sort of gilt-edged baboon, so to speak. They say now that our ancestors, a good many degrees removed, were monkeys; that a moner could feed without a mouth, walk without feet, and reproduce itself by simply falling apart. Now, I do not know anything at all about science, but I know that cannot be true, because it does not tally with what Moses says in Genesis. See? I never heard of a pup that was not preceded by a dog. That is an incontrovertible law of nature. Pups are not in the habit of growing around loose on trees like apples or peaches. Science says that matter is indestructible and has always existed. Now, if matter always existed it was not created, and so it must hav come out of nothing. You cannot produce something from nothing, no matter how hard you try. So of course God created matter, and that fact proves that the Bible is a thoroughly true book. And even if matter is eternal, everybody but scientists knows that it could not be moved around the way it is unless there was somebody behind it to shove it. And that is certain proof that God exists. Bob Ingersoll is one of those fellows that hav a lot to say about science and the conflict of Genesis and geology. He will be sorry some of these fine days that he ever had anything to do with any other "ology" than theology. That is the only ology I believe in, and that puts me on the safe side and keeps me solid with God. What will it profit a man if he knows to what geologic strata the great white throne belongs, if he did not believe there was such a thing until he saw it? Although I hate Infidels, I cannot help feeling the least little bit sorry for Bob. They say he is a good man, in some ways, even though he is totally depraved and at enmity with God. My creed says that everybody, big and little, are thoroughly depraved and corrupt in all their parts, and fit only for instant and eternal damnation. But that must be a mistake of the printers. Only people who do not believe in my religion will be damned. But speaking of Bob Ingersoll. He can no more help disbelieving than water can help seeking its own level. But as far as the next world is concerned his name is Mud, unless he believes—or at least says he does, which is about the same thing in the long run. Unbelievers are not permitted in heaven. The company there is very select, and none but those after God's own heart can wear halos and strum the golden harps. When I get there, as of course I will in due time, I will meet David and Solomon and their very numerous wives, besides a lot of other good Christians. Charles Guiteau was the Lord's own man, and so, of course, he is there, but if I come across him in the crowd I'll snub him. I do not object to polygamists, but I draw the line at assassins. But to come back to Bob Ingersoll again. I hav heard that he would deprive himself of his own rights rather than infringe on the rights of others. And they also say that he thinks just as much of his wife and daughters as he does of himself, and never even dreams of bossing them around in a voice that would curdle milk. He has some funny ideas. He actually thinks that women are as good as men, and sometimes a little better. I do not believe that at all, for it is contrary to St. Paul and the holy writ. I believe in the good old orthodox doctrin that women should keep silent in the presence of their husbands. He also believes in a lot of other nice-sounding doctrins, but they are not true, and so, if he dies unconverted, his goose is cooked sure. True, he has never, to my knowledge, broken any law, nor wronged anyone, nor been guilty of a mean action, but good works are not sufficient to save. Oh, no. Faith alone maketh whole. My only regret is that there are not harder things in the Bible to believe. I would like it better if it said that Jonah swallowed the whale, and that the fiery furnace was in the Hebrew youths instead of their being in the furnace. Ingersoll thinks it is smart to call Jonah "Captain" Jonah, and to speak of the Hebrew children as Shadrach, Meshach & Co., the Hebrew fire kings, but God will get square for that after a while. He will make it "smart" in a different way, you mark my words for it. The way he speaks of the Bible and God shows that he is sunk to the lowest depths of vulgar Materialism. Of course he seems to be pure-minded. He never speaks an ugly or vulgar word. And it is only when he reads the Bible that he reads anything vulgar. But it does not matter how pure he may seem to be, Jo Cook, of Boston, says he is vulgar and unlearned, and Jo ought to know, because Jo always did know more of other people's business than they knew themselvs. This proves that Jo is an exceedingly good Christian and a very smart man. The New York Sun calls him "a polyphonous old polysyllabist." Jehovah will yet smite the Sun with an eclipse for its wicked and profane blasphemy. He says, "I will not be always mocked." And when he puts his squelcher onto Charles Anderson the old man will wish he had been more respectful to God's elect. Atheists speak glibly about one world at a time being as much as they can attend to. Now, is not that rank nonsense? What is the good of enjoying yourself in this world if by so doing you lose the next? I do not think anything of this world. All the use I make of it is to lay pipes for the next and eternal life. When I get to heaven, I am going to spend the first million years of eternity in telling the saints and angels how strong and unshakable was my faith and how I hated Infidels. The second million years I will devote to song practice and harp rehearsing. The third million years I am going to spend in looking over the battlements of the celestial city and watching the Infidels and unbelievers slowly burn and bake while I gently chant, "How good God is. His ways are beyond all understanding, but his mercy endureth forever." The fourth million years—but never mind them just now. It is fatiguing to the mind to look so far ahead, and besides that I hav beaten Bellamy all hollow. Pagan Bob's pet argument on the doctrin of the vicarious atonement is this: "If I rob Mr. Smith and God forgivs me, how does that help Smith?" Now, suppose we look at that in another way. If all those whom Mr. Smith has loved and lost are suffering the unspeakable torments of the damned, how does that hurt Smith if he is in heaven? So long as he can sing what does it matter if they yell? If I had even the faintest fear that when the returns came in I would be "elected" to spend my eternity with Satan and his angels I would want to hav hell abolished. But I know that by believing all the church dogmas I am perfectly safe, and so I do not even want the fires slowed down or banked. It would not be half fair for unbelievers to inherit eternal joy. You see, they hav fine times down here, especially on Sundays, which they make a point of keeping unholy, and so they ought to suffer hereafter, so as to keep the law of averages right. If they can bear to die unconverted, they hav got more pluck than I hav. At the dread moment of dissolution all the vileness and viciousness of their wicked natures will come to the surface. Everybody knows what fearful scenes were enacted at the death-beds of Tom Paine and Voltaire. They hav been certified to by millions of people who were not born until years after Paine and Voltaire had gone to their graves. All Infidels recant on their death-beds and die blaspheming unbelievers besides. I do not quite understand how this can be, but the church says so, and it is not for me to question. Questioning leads to doubt, and doubt is the fruitful mother of Infidelity—that is to say, of all iniquity. I never ask questions about holy things. As I may possibly hav remarked before, I believe everything. There is no punishment for believing too much. There is only one other thing as limitless as eternity, and that is my credulity. Yes, glory be to God, I am on the safe side. By believing I receive heaven as my portion. By disbelieving, the foolish, headstrong Infidels receive hell as their portion, and I must say it serves 'em just right. They are blinded by their own conceit, and if they fall into the lake of burning brimstone and sulphur they hav only themselvs to blame for it. Pride goeth before a fall, and they should cultivate humility before it is everlastingly too late. Selah.

Brooklyn, N. Y. EDWARDS ROUSSEAU.

Obituary.

DIED.—Thomas Warren, in Centralia, Ill., at 5:40 A.M., Monday, March 10, 1890, aged 70 years 10 months and 16 days. Born in Robinson county, Tennessee, April 21, 1819. Funeral, Wednesday, March 12, at 10 o'clock, A.M.

By the death of Thomas Warren this city has lost one of its best men. No honester, truer man lived among us. A man freed from all superstition; honest in everything. He was a true and loving husband and father, a kind neighbor, and an enterprising citizen. I hav heard his old neighbors say that they had known him thirty to forty-five years and that he had, at all times, been honest and true. A large number of his friends came out to pay their respects to his worth. I think every church in the city was represented at his funeral. All will miss the kindly greeting and pleasant smile of "Uncle Tomey."

Yours truly, F. D. REXFORD.

It is with profound sorrow that I chronicle the death of one of our noblest and best citizens, Ithamar Eddy. He died at his home near Rome City, Ind., Jan. 28, 1890, at the age of sixty-two years. He was a man whose life from boyhood to old age was free from the superstition of theology. He was an ardent worker in the field of Freethought. His reason was his church; and, like the immortal Thomas Paine, his religion consisted in doing justice, loving mercy, and endeavoring to make his fellow-creatures happy. He was a student of the school of nature. He reasoned from cause to effect. He was bound to no party, sect, or creed. He analyzed all things and held fast to that which he believed was right. He believed that practice was superior to preaching, and carried into his every-day life the highest dictates of his noble mind. And when the shadow of death was spreading its dark mantle about him, he smiled and said, "It's sweet to die in the beauties of nature." He lived, he loved, and was loved. But he has gone from among us. And whether his passions, ambitions, and affections still sway, attract, and impel, whether he remembers us as we remember him, we do not know. These are the unsolved and insoluble problems of mortal life and human destiny, which prompted the troubled patriarch of old to ask that momentous question for which the cycles of centuries hav given no answer, "If a man die shall he liv again?" But one thing we do know, he has transmitted those principles which showed forth so bright in his life to six noble sons and two loving daughters, and in them we see exemplified those virtues which characterized his life. N. M. KELLAM.

Wallcottville, Ind.

It was the wish of my dear husband that I write to the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, for he was an honest Freethinker and I must do my duty and fulfill all his wishes. It is rather late, for he died Nov. 19, 1889. Duncan McMillan was born near Lochaber Lake, in Nova Scotia, of Scotch parentage, Oct. 10, 1816. He was married in Nova Scotia in 1839, to Miss Mary McMillan, of that place. He removed to this county in 1845, settling in Calamus, where he resided till a few years ago, when he removed to this city. His first wife died Sept. 8, 1872. Married the second time, in Nova Scotia, Aug. 26, 1874, Miss Mary Camron, also a nativ of that place, who died Sept. 7, 1884. Married Sept. 2, 1886, to Miss Maggie Hernig, of Beaver Dam, who is left to mourn a kind husband. A better one never lived. When he was taken sick he told me that he should never get well again. He was cheerful all the time, and told me that he did not wish to hav any prayers at his funeral. When he was so weak that he could not speak the minister came to pray for him, and we told him that we had no use for him here. The duties of earth he has nobly filled by generous deeds and free investigation. His religion was the religion of kindness and humanity. He was an independent thinker, and worked for truth, justice, and morality. He was not afraid to die, because he had lived right. He was not afraid of hell, that heathen myth, believing that in all the shining universe there was no room for such a black spot. His liberality, courage, calmness, and fortitude let us endeavor to emulate. Although my dear husband is now at rest, his words I can still hear, urging me on to deeds of right and usefulness.

To him death had no terror, but came as a soothing friend to release him from the toils and sufferings of humanity. In the sere and yellow leaf of his life he passed to "that undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns." In the repose of the tomb my dear husband has found that eternal rest which is the heritage of the weary. When his end drew near, he said: "I die a Freethinker, and am not ashamed of it. No argument can change me, no prayers can make me more resigned to death." These were his further words: "So to you, my dear wife bereaved, I can only say, all is well." My dear husband feared no angry or vindictiv being beyond the grave, for he believed in no superstition or eternal punishment, and now as the grave has closed over his once-loved form, may the earth lie lightly on him; may the flowers ever bloom over his grave. Peace and rest to his ashes. His memory I will always love and cherish. Farewell. After his death the Christians circulated a report that he recanted—the biggest lie they ever told for Christ's sake.

A precious one from me has gone;
A voice I loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in my home
Which never can be filled.

The first TRUTH SEEKER that I ever saw was when I married my husband. He taught me how to liv right, and I will do all I can for truth, justice, and humanity.

MRS. DUNOAN MCMILLAN.

Beaver Dam.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photo-engravings of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 40c.; with autograph, 50 cts.

THE

Cosmian Hymn Book,

A COLLECTION OF

Original and Selected Hymns

(Words and Music)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies, For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

PRICE, . . . $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

ANTICHRIST.

PROVING conclusivly that there was no Christ crucified under Pontius Pilate, but that the real Jesus, the illegitimate son of Mary by Joseph Pandera, was stoned and hanged for sorcery about 75 years B.C. Cloth, 446 pages, with full Index. Price, $1.50. Former price, $2.00. For sale at this office.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

WHICH:

SPIRITUALISM OR CHRISTIANITY?

By MOSES HULL (Spir.) and
REV. W. F. PARKER (Chris.).

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEBREW MYTHOLOGY;

OR,

The Rationale of the Bible.

Holy Scriptures Treat of Natural Phenomena Only.

By MILTON WOOLEY, M.D.

8vo, 613pp., - - - - - $2.50.

Faith and Reason.

ACCOUNT OF THE

Christian and All Prominent Religions Before and Since Christ. Extract from Sacred Books of the East.

By H. R. STEVENS. Price, $1.50.

Nature's Revelations of Character.

Physiognomy Illustrated.

By JOSEPH SIMMS, M D.

Individual traits indicated by the temperaments and features.

260 woodcuts. 8vo, 650pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

His Character and Doctrines.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST.

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - $1.50.

THEOLOGY AND MYTHOLOGY.

AN

Inquiry into the Claims of Biblical Inspiration and the Supernatural Element in Religion.

By A. H. O'DONOGHUE.

Price, - - - $1.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN.

A Radical Novel of Marked Ability.

BY FREDERIKA MACDONALD.

404 pages. . Price reduced to $1.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT the DEVIL.

AND

OTHER BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES AND ESSAYS.

By CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

With Portrait and Autobiography.

Extra cloth, gold back and side stamp, 12mo, 260 pp., $1.25.

MONKS, POPES, AND THEIR POLITICAL INTRIGUES.

By J. ALBERGER.

376pp., $1. Soiled copies, 50 cts. and 75 cts.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A Summary of the Arguments against Christianity.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

NEW DISPENSATION.

By D. W. HULL (Spir.).

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

ECONOMIC EQUITIES:

A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange.

By J. K. INGALLS.

Price, 25 cents.

THE JEWS AND THEIR GOD.

"The Jews and their God stood on the lowest plane."

Price, 10 cents.

LITERATURE OF THE INSANE.

By F. R. MARVIN.

Price, . . . 5 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

22 Discussion with Elder Shelton. Bennett. 10
23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5
31 God and God-Houses..... 2
35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No. 2. Rev. Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5
81 Hereafter, or the Half-way House. Sypher. 2
82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps..... 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Bible-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2
107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 5
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10
121 Ingersoll's Review of his Reviewers..... 3
122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wan Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2
158 The Fool's Creed..... 1
159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL.
Price, 25 Cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

W. S. BELL'S PAMPHLETS.

LIBERTY AND MORALITY.

PRICE, 15 CENTS.

Accept my thanks for your excellent and useful discourse.—James Parton.

I am much pleased with your address, and will notice it in Man.—T. B. Wakeman.

A beautiful pamphlet of 36 pages. It is a very able paper, and deserves wide dissemination.—The Age.

ANTI-PROHIBITION.

PRICE, 20 CENTS.

The number of heads under which you hav divided the subject matter of the pamphlet, and the concise manner in which the point is discussed, should be highly commended. Therefore I take great pleasure in recommending "Anti-Prohibition" to the consideration of every person who is interested, not only in the cause of temperance, but in the principles of self-government.—J. J. McCabe.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LIFE OF
Joshua Davidson:

MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,

As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.

BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,

Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.

Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.

☞ This book was suppressed by the first American publisher. ☜

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE NEW GOD.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,

Secretary of the American Secular Union.

Price 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE SAFEST CREED,

AND

TWELVE OTHER DISCOURSES OF REASON.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

Extra cloth, 12mo, 238pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Career of Jesus Christ.

An Exposition of the True Meaning of this Character as described in the New Testament. By Milton Woolley, M.D., author of "Hebrew Mythology." Paper, 8vo, 25 cents.

SPECIAL SALE
OF
WATCHES AND DIAMONDS.

Good American Nickel Stem-winders, $2.50, $4, $6. Best grades in silverine case, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; adjusted, $16. For 3 ounce coin silver case, add $3.50; 4 ounce, $4.50; 5 ounce, $6. In best open-face filled gold, dust-proof case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; adjusted, $24.50; hinged cases, $3 more; hunting cases, $6 more.

The New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

All modern improvements: in silverine, $19; 3 ounce coin silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25. BEST open-face filled screw case, $27; hinged, $30; hunting, $26; Louis XIV style, $2 to $10 more. Ladies' best gold filled, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18.50; 15 jewels, $25; adjusted, $35; 14 kt solid gold, $10 to $20 more. Ruby and diamond ornamentations up to $100 extra.

DIAMONDS.

An elegant 3 stone, 8kt., solitaire pin and drops, $600, worth $900; a magnificent hair ornament and pin and pendant combination, rosette, 29 brilliants, $200, worth $300; one do., heart-shape, sapphire and ruby in center, same price and value. Pins, rings, drops, studs, from $300 down to $10; same proportionate discounts. All bought before late advance.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 6th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Admission free. Discussions follow lectures.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston,
Meets every Sunday (from October to June) at 2:45 P.M., at Paine Memorial Building, Appleton street.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.: LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.

Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid, for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER. tf

Essence of Religion.

By L. FEUERBACH.

Translated from the German. Cloth, 12mo, 75pp.; 50 cts.

The truth-teller is ill-mannered, therefore immoral.—Extract.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indescretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. R. P. Fellows is an outspoken Infidel and very successful physician. He is worthy of an extensiv patronage.—The Liberal.

News of the Week.

THE pope announces that he is willing to act as mediator in a European disarmament. Though it has been against the constant opposition of the papacy that the civilization which has perhaps rendered universal peace possible, has advanced, the pope by such tricks will now gain with his dupes the credit of being the real pacificator.

BISMARCK has resigned the chancellorship of the German empire.

ITALY has appropriated $300.000 for the new smokeless powder.

POPE LEO has celebrated the twelfth anniversary of his coronation.

THE striking coalminers in England hav received an advance and resumed work.

AT Florence, Italy, monuments to Garibaldi and Victor Emanuel will be inaugurated soon.

AN immense meteorite covering an eighty-acre tract has been discovered in Kiowa county, Kan.

CENSUS SUPERINTENDENT PORTER already has 500 clerks engaged on the preliminary work at Washington.

IT is charged that the papal nuncio to France has been intriguing to bring about a crisis in the French cabinet.

HALF a dozen army chaplains are soon to be appointed by the president, and the sects are already disputing over their denomination.

AN English railway company has voluntarily increased its pay roll £9,000, saying that the increased traffic justified giving higher wages.

BISHOP FINK, of Leavenworth, Kan., has been waited on by a committee of the Farmers' Alliance who promis to remove the regulations of that body that are objectionable to Catholics, on which condition he will withdraw his condemnation of the order.

THE constitution about to be submitted to the people of Brazil is modeled after that of the United States.

BISHOP O'FARRELL, of the Trenton, N. J., diocese, recommends that American flags be displayed over all parochial schools.

IN the Connellsville coke region of Pennsylvania the Knights of Labor will supplant the employers' stores, which plunder the workers, with coöperativ stores.

AT Reading, Pa., a terrific conflict is going on between several bishops, among the charges bandied being "unchristian conduct, evil speaking, slander, and falsehood."

PORTUGAL is boycotting English goods. Brazil, which was colonized largely by the Portuguese, is in sympathy transferring its trade from England to the United States.

To the invitation of the German emperor to send a representativ to the International Labor Conference, the pope replied that he should not unless his delegate was allowed precedence over all others.

RETURNS of the late elections in Germany: Catholics, 1,420,458 votes; Socialists, 1,341,587; Radicals, 1,279,301; National Liberals, 1,169,112; Conservativs, 919,646; Imperialists, 457,936; Poles, 245,852.

HUXLEY, it is sad to learn, seems to be failing, as he writes to the Social Union that he can no longer attend its meetings with comfort, owing to deafness and a liability to become fatigued and voiceless by talking.

THE Master Laundrymen's Association of New York purposes boycotting and otherwise persecuting Chinese laundrymen till they leave the country, and the Chinese consul has requested the police superintendent's aid in resistance.

IN the new German parliament the Conservativs can make way against the Radicals and Socialists only by coöperating with the Catholics, but these latter ask so much as their reward and share of the spoil that the bargain may not be made.

IN Italy the latest anti-Catholic legislativ move that is calling forth the outcries of the priests and their followers, is a bill now before the Chamber to giv the education of the young princes into the care of the king and a council of state. It is aimed at the princesses of the house of Savoy, who hav always favored Catholicism, but will now be bred in Radical thought.

GODS AND RELIGIONS
ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.
Vol. I. Givs a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.
BY D. M. BENNETT.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.
Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.
BY D. M. BENNETT.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

DAVID ASSISTETH SAUL TO GET RID OF THE EVIL SPIRIT.

And it came to pass, when the evil spirit from God was upon Saul, that David took a harp, and played with his hand: So Saul was refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him.—1 Sam. xvi, 23.

THE Truth Seeker Annual
—AND—
Freethinkers' Almanac,
1890.
(E. M. 290.)
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Calendar for 1890,	5
Freethought in the United States, 1889,	17
Faded Flowers. Poem by J. E. Remsburg,	24
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue. T. B. Wakeman,	26
Mostly Fools. W. Stewart Ross (Saladin),	36
Record of the Spanish Inquisition,	44
Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas,	44
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral. Helen H. Gardener,	45
The Middle Ages. Illustrated,	69
The Priest,	70
The Supernatural World,	71
The Reformation,	73
Future Terrors,	77
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated,	79
Freethought Journals in the United States,	96
In Search of a Spirit. E. M. Macdonald,	97
Why I Left the Church. H. O. Pentecost,	109

NEW YORK:
PUBLISHED AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Gems of Thought.

UTILITY teaches that the general happiness is to be the aim of the individual. The criterion of an action of A. B. is not whether A. B. thereby secures or increases his own happiness, but whether the tendency of the action is beneficial or detrimental to society. If A. B. secures his own happiness by a course which injures others, or which, if generally pursued, would be prejudicial to the interests of the community, he is at once condemned by the principles of utility, even although he may hav thereby increased his own individual happiness. Mr. J. S. Mill justly remarks that the standard of utilitarianism "is not the agent's own individual happiness, but the greatest amount of happiness altogether; and if it may possibly be doubted whether a noble character is always the happier for his nobleness, there can be no doubt that it makes other people happier, and that the world in general is the gainer by it." It is one of the merits of utilitarianism that it cultivates the social feelings and tends to bind men into a brotherhood, wherein the good of all is the aim of each.—Mrs. A. Besant's True Basis of Morality.

ALL is bad or good as it affects the well-being of society, or, let us call it, humanity. There can be no intrinsic evil, no positiv sin, where there is no community to be harmed by your acts.—Mrs. E. Lynn Linton.

OF late, the deathbeds of believers hav been less peaceful than those of unbelievers. Terrible doubts hav intruded themselvs. Orthodoxy is bound to believe that Voltaire and Paine, and other so-called Infidels, died miserable deaths, and still goes on asserting it though there is not a particle of proof. But it would not be difficult, were the truth abundant, to match these cases with a score to one of the unhappy deaths of orthodox Christians of the most saintly characters.—Chadwick.

QUESTION. What do you consider is the strongest argument in favor of the inspiration of the scriptures? Answer. The dying words of Christians. Q. What do you consider the strongest argument against the truth of Infidelity? A. The dying words of Infidels. You know how terrible were the death-bed scenes of Hume, Voltaire, Paine, and Hobbes, as described by hundreds of persons who were not present; while all Christians hav died with the utmost serenity, and with their last words hav testified to the sustaining power of faith in the goodness of God. Q. What were the last words of Jesus Christ? A. "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"—Ingersoll's Talmagian Catechism.

IF I owe a person money and cannot pay him, and he threatens to put me in prison, another person can take the debt upon himself and pay it for me; but if I hav committed a crime, every circumstance of the case is changed. Moral justice cannot take the innocent for the guilty, even if the innocent would offer itself. To suppose justice to do this is to destroy the principle of its existence, which is the thing itself; it is then no longer justice; it is indiscriminate revenge.—Paine.

IF I owe Mr. Smith $10, and God forgivs me, how does that help Smith?—Ingersoll.

INSTILLING opinions without the evidence, and at an age when the parties into whom the opinions are instilled are incapable of understanding the evidence, is a practice which necessarily engenders habits of complicated misconduct toward evidence. It engenders the habit of neglecting evidence and the holding of opinions without regard to their evidence—a habit which is the foundation of all intellectual and moral depravity.—Westminster Review.

THE latter part of a wise man's life is taken up in curing the follies, prejudices, and false opinions he had contracted in the former.—Swift.

IT is an old remark that, as men are, such they paint their gods; and as in themselvs the passionate, or demoniac nature, long preponderated, so the gods they worshiped were demons like themselvs, jealous, capricious, exacting, revengeful—the figures which fill the old mythologies and appear partly in the Old Testament.—Froude.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 17. No. 14. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 5, 1890. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year

HISTORICAL SKETCH—HOW THE COMMON PEOPLE LIVED WHEN THE CHURCH RULED.

The houses of the peasantry were constructed of stones put together without mortar; the roofs were of turf, a stiffened bull's-hide served for a door. The food consisted o coarse vegetable products, such as peas, and even the bark of trees. In some places they were unacquainted with bread. Cabins of reeds, plastered with mud, houses of wattled stakes, chimneyless peat fires from which there was scarcely an escape for the smoke, dens of physical and moral pollution swarming with vermin, wisps of straw twisted around the limbs to keep off the cold, the ague-stricken peasant with no help but shrine-cure!—Britain in 1430, described by Æneas Sylvius, afterward Pope Pius II.: Draper's Conflict, p. 265.

Notes and Clippings.

DR. RANKIN, a surgeon at Muncy, is said to be using hypnotism successfully as a substitute for chloroform in his practice.

THE state board of health publishes a bulletin for February showing that the number of deaths in New York state during the month was one thousand in excess of the average for February for the past five years. The explanation of this excessiv mortality is laid at the door of the grip.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, who is extremely generous of late, has given unconditionally to the executiv council of the Authors' Club of this city $10,000, to be used for the encouragement of literature. The Authors' Club will hold a meeting on Thursday evening to take action in the matter.

THE Wisconsin supreme court has decided that the place where the Bible is read is a "place of worship," and that as the taxpayers were compelled to erect and support the school-houses, and the children are, under a late law, compelled to attend the public or private schools, during a certain period, the constitutional clauses forbid such use of the school-house. It is also shown that such instruction in any public school would make it a "religious seminary," within the meaning of the constitution, and hence as these schools are supported in part by the proceeds of the school fund and the one-mill tax, such instruction is forbidden by the constitution.

WOMEN hav started in London a paper called the Women's Penny Paper, and are making a fuss because their representativ, a woman, was denied admission to the press gallery of the House of Commons. The sergeant-at-arms refused the admission upon the literally true ground that there was no room, but the women assert that she would not hav been admitted even had there been room, and upon that issue the fight is fought.

IN one Hindoo meeting held in Benares, India, over $3,000 were subscribed for missionary purposes in Australia. A Brahman of high rank had visited that country and noted the intemperance there prevailing, and he believed the best way to save these poor Christian drunkards would be to convert them to Brahmanism. Several Brahmans of rank hav declared themselvs willing to go as missionaries, and translations of suitable passages from Hindoo religious books hav been begun.

A FEW years ago, says an exchange, Ingersoll was passing through Cincinnati, and at his hotel he was accosted by a workingman, who addressed him as follows: "Mr. Ingersoll, I am a poor, hard-working man, having a family to support, and I want a favor." "Well," said Robert, "what can I do for you?" "I want to call a brand of my cigars after you, and permission to use your photograph," answered the man. "Certainly, my man, and I will giv you a motto, if you desire." "I would thank you if you would," responded the man. Colonel Ingersoll gave it to him as follows: "We shall smoke in this world, but not in the next." Some months afterward, while passing through Cincinnati, Colonel Ingersoll was informed that the man made $9,000 off the brand of cigars in less than a year.

THE editor of an Aspen paper, says the Field and Farm, livs between the Methodist church and a dance hall. One night there was a meeting in the church and a dance in the hall, and the editor sat on the veranda and took in the situation, jotting down the following which he heard: "Let us pray—choose your partners—O Lord—all salute—we beseech thee to—join hands and—draw near and—circle to the left—listen to—first forward and back—us as we—all promenade—kneel before thee—and balance all—present our petition—grand right and left—for Christ's sake—seat your partners—amen."

APPLICATIONS for charters from several parochial schools were considered by the regents of the New York State University at their session two weeks ago. If these charters had been granted such schools would hav come in for an equal share of the school moneys, but applications were not granted, and the matter was laid on the table until the June meeting of the board. The reason for deferring action is that these schools are owned by bishops of the Catholic church, whereas the law prohibits the distribution of the fund to other than schools under the management of trustees or commissioners. Francis Kernan was in favor of granting the application, but it was the sentiment of the board that such schools as applied should be placed in charge of a board of trustees before the applications could be granted.

THE great monsters of mechanical skill and genius call for the sacrifice of a great deal of life and limb in their construction. The greater the engineering feat the more extensiv is the loss of life. In the construction of the Eiffel tower, for instance, twenty-six lives were lost, according to the official returns of the French government; but it is said that this number would be largely augmented if the names were given of men who died from injuries received during the construction of the tower, and of others who were killed and whose deaths were not reported owing to the hue and cry which was raised after the first two dozen lives had been sacrificed on the great structure. The number of men who were injured during the construction of the Eiffel tower has been placed at six thousand. This enormous showing is accounted for by the fact that every injury was reported and registered which received treatment from the official surgeons. When a man bruised his finger he went to a government surgeon to hav it dressed, and a clumsy workman thus got on the list a dozen or two times a year. Serious injuries were a very small proportion of the whole. On the great Forth bridge in Scotland, a list of forty lives lost has been published; but there is no record of injuries.

Communications.

My Patient's Story.

Perhaps I may hav told you before, that at the time of which I speak, my summer home, where I preferred to spend much more than half of the year, was on a sandy beach a few miles out of New York, and also that I had retired from activ practice as a physician, even when I was in the city.

Notwithstanding these two facts, I was often called in consultation, both in and out of the city, and was occasionally compelled to take a case, in the first place, entirely into my own hands, through some accident or unforeseen circumstance. It was one of these accidents which brought the patient whose story I am about to tell you under my care. I can hardly say now why I retained the case instead of turning it over to some brother practitioner, as was my almost invariable habit; but for some reason I kept it in my own hands, and, as it was the only one for which I was solely responsible at the time, I naturally took more than ordinary interest in, and paid more than usual attention to, all that seemed to me to bear upon it.

As you know, I am an "old school" or "regular" physician, although that did not prevent me from consulting with, and appreciating the strong points of, many of those who were of other and younger branches of the profession. This peculiarity had subjected me, in times gone by, to much adverse criticism from some of my colleagues who belong to that rigidly orthodox faction which appears to feel that it is a much better thing to allow a patient to die "regularly," as it were, than it is to join forces with one who, being of us, is still not with us in theory and practice.

Recognizing that we were all purblind, at best, and that there was and still is much to learn in every department of medicin, it did not always seem to me that it was absolutely necessary to reject, without due consideration, the guesses of other earnest and careful men, even though they might differ from me in the prefix to the "pathy" which formed the basis of the conjecture. We are all wrong so often that it has never appeared to be a matter of the first importance—it does not present itself to my mind as absolutely imperativ—that it should be invariably the same wrong, or that all of the mistakes should necessarily follow the beaten track of the "old school."

I had arrived at that state of beatitude where I was not unwilling for a life to be saved, or even for pain to be alleviated, by other methods than my own.

I do not pretend that this exalted ethical status came to me all at once, nor at a very early stage of my career; but it came, and I had reaped the whirlwind of wrath, as I hav just hinted to you.

So when my patient let me know, after a time, that he had been used to homeopathic treatment, I at once suggested that he send for some one of that school to take charge of his case. He declined, somewhat reluctantly I thought, still quite positivly. But, in the course of events, when I felt that a consultation was due to him as well as myself, I asked him if he would not prefer that the consulting physician should be of that school. He admitted that he would, and I assured him that I would be pleased to send for any one he might name. He knew no doctor here, he said, and left it to me to send for the one in whom I had the greatest confidence.

It is at this point that my story really begins.

I stopped on my way uptown to arrange with Dr. Hamilton, of —— Madison avenue, a consultation that afternoon at 3 o'clock. I told the doctor all that I myself knew at that time of my patient's history. Three weeks before I had been in a Fifth avenue stage; a gentleman had politely arisen to offer his seat to a lady at the moment that the stage gave a sudden lurch which threw them both violently against each other and against the end of the stage. He broke the fall for her, but he received a blow on the head, which member came in contact with the money-box with a sharp crack.

Accustomed to the sight of pain and suffering as I was, the sound of the blow and his suddenly livid face gave me a feeling of sickness which did not wholly leave me for an hour afterward. Involuntarily I caught him in my arms—he was a slightly built man—and directed the driver to stop at the first hotel. The gentleman was unconscious, and I feared that he had sustained a serious fracture of the skull. He was evidently a man of culture, and, I thought, not an American. I therefore wished, if possible, to save him a police or hospital experience. By taking him into the first hotel, I reasoned, we could examin him, learn who and what he was, where he lived, and after reviving him send him home in a carriage.

The process of bringing him back to consciousness was slow, and as the papers on his person, which we felt at liberty to examin, gave no clue to his residence, we concluded to put him to bed and trust to further developments to show us what to do in the matter of removal. The lady on whose account he had received the injury had given me her card, which bore a well-known name on the avenue, and had stated that she would, if necessary, be responsible for all expense at the hotel. It was deemed best, therefore, to put him to bed, as I said before, and wait for him to indicate for himself the next move. I placed in the safe of the hotel his pocketbook, which contained a large sum of money—large, that is, for a man to carry on his person in these days of checks and exchanges—and his watch, which was a handsome one, with this inscription on the inside cover: "T. C., from Florence." The cards in his pocket bore different names and addresses, mostly foreign, but the ones I took for his own were finely engraved, and read, "Mr. T. C. Lathro," nothing more. No address, no business; simply calling cards, of a fashionable size and of the finest quality.

This, as I say, was about three weeks before I concluded to call Dr. Hamilton in consultation, and I had really learned very little more of my patient's affairs than these facts taken from his pocket that first day while he was still unconscious. He was silent about himself, and while he had slowly grown better his progress toward health did not satisfy me, nor do I think that he was wholly of opinion that I was doing quite all that should be done to hasten his recovery. He was always courteous, self-poised, and able to bear pain bravely, but I thought he watched me narrowly, and I several times detected him in a weary sigh and an impatient movement of the eyebrows, which did not tally with his assumption of cheerful indifference and hospitality. I use the word hospitality advisedly, for his effort always seemed to be to treat me as a guest whom he must entertain and distract from observing his ailments, rather than as a physician whose business it was to discover and remedy them.

He had declined to be moved, said he was a stranger, had no preferences as to hotels, felt sure this one was as comfortable as any, thanked me over and over for having taken him there—and changed the subject. He would talk as long as I would allow him on any subject, airily, brightly, readily. On any subject, that is, except himself. Yet from his conversation I had gathered that he had traveled a great deal, was a man of wealth and culture—whether French, Italian, or Russian, I could not decide. He spoke all of these languages, and words from each fitted easily into place when for a better English one he hesitated or was at a loss. Indeed, he seemed to hav seen much of every country and to hav observed impartially, without national prejudice. He knew men well, too well to praise recklessly, and he sometimes gave me the impression, I can hardly say how, that blame was a word whose meaning he did not know. He spoke of having seen deeds of the most appalling nature in Russia, and talked of their perpetrators sometimes, as good and brave men. He never appeared to measure men by their exceptional acts. Occasionally I contested these points with him, and I am not sure but that it may hav been the interest I took in his conversation that held me as his physician, for, as I said, I was well aware that he did not improve as he should hav done after the first few days. But I liked to hear him talk. He was a revelation to me. I greatly enjoyed his breadth and charity—if I may so express the mental attitude which recognized neither the possession of, nor the need for, either quality in his judgments of his fellow-men. He had evidently not been able to pass through life under the impression that character, like cloth, is cut to fit a certain outline, and that after the basting threads are once in no further variation need be looked for. Indeed, I question if he would hav been able to comprehend the mental condition of those "grown-up," "educated" children who are never able to outgrow the comfortable belief that words and acts hav a definit, inflexible, par value, that an unabridged dictionary, so to speak, is an infallible appeal; who, in short, expect their villains to be consistently and invariably villainous, in the regulation orthodox fashion.

Individual shades of meaning, whether of language or of character, do not enter into their simple philosophy. Mankind suffers, in their pennyweight scales, a shrinkage that is none the less real because they never suspect that the dwarfage may be due to themselvs, to their system of weights and measures. All variations from their standard indicate an unvarying tendency to mendacity. He whom they once detect in a quibble, or in an attempt to acquire the large end of a bargain, never recovers—what is perhaps only his rightful heritage, in spite of an occasional lapse—the respect and confidence of these primer students who are inflexible judges of all mental and moral manifestations.

I repeat that this comfortable and regular philosophy was foreign to my patient's mental habits, and I began to consider, the more I talked with him, that it did not agree with my own personal observations. I reflected that I was not very greatly surprised, nor did I lose faith in a man necessarily, when I discovered him in a mean or questionable action. Why, then, should I be surprised to find those of whom I had known only ill engaged in deeds of the most unselfish nature? Deeds of heroism and generosity, such as he often recounted as a part of the life of some of these same terrible Russian officials? There seems, however, to be that in us which finds it far easier to reconcile a single mean or immoral action with an otherwise upright life, than to believe it likely, or even possible, for a depraved nature to perform, upon occasion, deeds of exalted or unusual purity. Yet so common is the latter that its failure of recognition by humanity in general can be due, it seems to me, only to a wrong teaching or to a stupidity beyond even normal bounds. For, after all, the bad man who is all bad is really a less frequent product than that much talked of, but rare creature, a perfect woman. Perhaps one could count the specimens of either of these to be met with in a lifetime on the fingers of one hand.

But to return to my patient and his story. It was of these things that he and I had often talked, and I had come to greatly respect the self-poise and acute observation, as well as the broad human sympathy, of this reserved and evidently sad-hearted man. Sad-hearted I knew, in spite of his keen sense of humor and his firm grasp of philosophy.

I gave Dr. Hamilton a brief outline of all this, as well as of the physical condition of the man whom he was to see, for I believe it to be quite as important for a physician to understand and diagnose the mental as the physical conditions of those who come under his care before he can prescribe intelligently for other than very trifling ailments.

You can imagin my surprise when I tell you that the moment Dr. Hamilton stepped into the room and I mentioned his name, my patient, this self poised man of the world, whose nerves had often seemed to me to be of tempered steel, looked up suddenly as you hav seen a timid child when it is sharply reproved—and fainted dead away.

II.

I confess that I expected a scene.

I glanced at the doctor, but he showed no sign of ever having seen my patient before, and went to work with me in the most methodical and indifferent way possible to revive him.

"You did not mention that this was one of his symptoms—a peculiarity of his—has he been subject to this sort of thing? Did he say he was subject to it before he hurt his head, or has it developed since?" the doctor inquired quietly as we worked.

I bit my lip. His tone was so exasperatingly cool, while, knowing my patient as I did, his startled manner and sudden fainting had impressed me deeply.

"It is the first time," I said, "since he was hurt—that is, since he recovered consciousness after the blow, that he has exhibited the slightest tendency to anything of the kind."

I hesitated, then I said, "Doctor, if you know him, if this is the result of seeing you suddenly [for he did not know who was to come], don't you think—would it be well—do you think it best for you to be where he will see you when he begins to revive?"

The doctor stared at me, then at my patient. "I don't know him; never saw him before in my life so far as I know. What did you say his name is? Mmmum, oh, yes, Lathro—first and only time I ever heard it. Oh, no, I suppose his nerves are weak. The excitement of seeing me—the idea of a er—consultation."

I smiled involuntarily. "You don't know the man, doctor," said I. "He is bomb-proof as to nerves in that sense of the word. He—a—there must be some other reason. He must hav mistaken you for some one else. I am sorry to trouble you, doctor, but—would you kindly step into the other room? He will open his eyes, now, you see."

When, a moment later, my patient recovered consciousness, he glanced about him furtivly, like a hunted man. He did not look like himself. He examined my face closely, suspiciously, I thought, for a moment. Then I laughed lightly and said, "Well, old fellow, you've been trying your hand at a faint. That's a pretty way to treat a friend. I come in to see you—you step out, to nobody knows where, to Noman's land, and giv me no end of trouble rowing you back to our shore. What did you eat for dinner that served you that kind of a trick?"

He looked all about the room again, examined my face and then smiled, for the first time since I had known him, nervously, and said:

"I think my digestion must be pretty badly out of order. I'll declare I saw double when you came in. I thought there were two of you and the other one—wasn't you."

I laughed. "That is good. Two of me, but the other one wasn't me. Well, thank heaven, there is only one of me up to date."

He smiled but seemed disturbed still. I decided to ask him a direct question. "Well, now, just suppose there had been two of me, is that an excuse for you to faint? Does associating with one of me try you to that extent that two of me would prostrate you?"

He did not take me up with his old manner. He was listless and absent. I said that I would go down to the office and order some wine and return at once. I slipped into the other room, and with my finger on my lips motioned to Dr. Hamilton to pass out quietly before me. I followed him.

"There is something wrong, doctor," I said. "I am sorry, but I will hav to ask you to go without seeing him again. I can't tell you why yet, but I'll try to find out and let you know. Order some champagne sent up to me, please, as you go out, and I will see you as soon as I can."

The moment I reëntered the room my patient, whose restless eyes met mine as I opened the door, said: "I thought you were talking to some one."

"I was," said I carelessly, "a bell-boy. I ordered wine. It will be up soon."

Then I changed the subject, but he was nervous and unlike himself, and none of the old topics interested him. When the doctor opened for the boy with the wine an expression of actual terror passed over my patient's face. When I left him a half hour later I was puzzled and anxious.

III.

The moment I entered his room on the following day he said, "I thought you had planned to hav another doctor come and look me over yesterday." He was watching me closely as I spoke. "Did I hear you mention his name?"

Ah, thought I, here is a mystery, in spite of Dr. Hamilton's denial. I will try him.

"Yes," I said. "I had decided to ask the best homeopathic doctor I know—a skillful man, especially successful in diagnosing cases—to overhaul you and see if he agrees with me that you ought to be on your feet this blessed minute if my diagnosis of your case is entirely right. I don't see why you are so weak. He may find the spring that I hav missed. Why?"

"Did you—I am not acquainted with the doctors here. I think you said his name is——"

"I hav not mentioned his name to you," I said, "but the one I had in mind is Dr. Hamilton of —— Madison avenue."

There was no doubt about it. The color rose slowly to his face and he was struggling for self-control. At length he said, "No, I do not wish to see another doctor. I am perfectly satisfied with you. I am—I say—no, positivly. Do not ask him—that is, do not ask anyone to come unless I know and definitly agree to it. And I certainly shall want to know who he is first."

All this was wholly foreign to the man, to his nature and habit.

"Tell me," I said, "what you hav against Dr. Hamilton, for I cannot fail to see that there is something behind all this."

He did not reply for some time. Then he said wearily, but with great depth of feeling:

"I suppose I may as well tell you . . . I can not forgiv him for an injury—I did him—long ago."

I did not say anything nor did I look at him. Presently he went on hoarsely, "If I had only injured him perhaps I could get over it. But I took a mean advantage of—I did it through a woman who liked him—and whom he—loved and trusted."

There was another long silence. Then I said, "You were right to tell me, Lathrop. You need not fear that I will betray you to him—and—he does not know you. He did not recognize you, either before or after you fainted. Of course I knew there was something wrong. He will not come again."

He sprang to his feet, and a wave of red surged into his face.

"I knew it. I knew I had seen him. I was sure it was not a delusion," he said. "He was here. No, he would not know me. He never saw me. I did not injure him like a man. I struck from—behind a woman. A woman who cared for his respect—and I let him blame her. I suppose I could get over it if it were not for that. I came back here partly to let him know, if I could some way, that she was not to blame."

There was another long silence. "And partly to get rid of myself. Russia did not do it, Turkey, France, none of them. I thought perhaps he would—I had some sort of a wild idea that he might—settle with me—some way. I hav carried that forged check in my brain, until——"

I started visibly. I had no idea it was so bad as this. I changed my position to hide or cover the involuntary movement I had made; but he had seen it and the color died out of his face. He forced himself to begin again. "I carried that forged check—" He was articulating with horrible distinctness now—"wherever I went. She never knew anything about it. She knew I was—she thought or feared that I might be somewhat—what you Americans call crooked, but she did not know the truth—not until the very last. She knew that I had been unreliable—in some ways, long ago; but she did not dream of the worst. At last, sometimes I think I was a fool to hav done it, but I told her. I told her the whole truth and—and she left me. She had borne everything till then. I think she came here. Before long I followed. She told me not to, and I said I would not, but—of course I did. I could not help it. I knew then, and I know now, that I am putting myself into the clutches of the law; but I do not care—not now—not since I cannot find—Florence Campbell."

He pronounced the name as if it were a treasure wrung from him by force.

"It is the only really criminal thing I ever did. I do not know why I did it. They say that crime—a taste for it—develops slowly, by degrees. Maybe so, but not with me, not with me. I had money enough, but oh, my God, how I hated him. I saw that he was growing to love her without knowing it. I often heard them talking together. They did not know it, and if they had it could not hav been more innocent. But I was madly jealous, for the first time in my life. I determined to make him think ill of her, and yet, I said just now that forgery was my only crime. That was worse, by far, but I believe it is not a crime in law."

He smiled scornfully. "I hav outgrown all that now. The storm has left me the wreck you see, but I thought it all out last night and determined to tell you. You are to tell him—for her sake," he said between his set teeth. "He may see her yet, some day. She will never return to me, God bless her! God help us both!"

"No, she will never return to you or to anyone else," I said, as gently as I could.

He sprang up with the energy of a maniac. "How do you know? What do you know?" he demanded.

"I only know that she is dead, my friend," I said, placing my hand on his arm, "and that Dr. Hamilton does not wish to punish you. I heard it all—the story of the forgery of his name, and that a Florence Campbell was in some way connected with it. I heard it from him, long, long ago, but he does not know that you are Tom Campbell. You are safe."

"Does not wish to punish me. I am safe! Great God, no one could punish me. I do that. Safe! Oh, the irony of language!"

There was a long pause. He had gone to the window and was staring out into the darkness. Presently the sound of convulsiv sobbing filled the room. I thought best to remain near the door and make no effort to check his grief with words. At last the storm spent itself. He came slowly into the middle of the room and stood facing me. At length he said: "One of the greatest punishments is gone, thank God. Florence Campbell is dead, you say. Do you know what it is, doctor, to wish that one you loved was dead?"

"Yes, yes," I said, "but it is best for you not to talk any more, nor think, just now, not of that, not of that."

He broke in impatiently, "Don't you know me well enough yet to know that that sort of thing, that sort of professional humbug, is useless? Must not talk more of that, nor think of it, indeed! What else do you suppose I ever think of? The good men who are bad, and the bad ones who are good—the puppets of our recent conversations. Suppose we boil it down a little. Am I a bad man? That is a question that puzzles me. Am I a good one? At least I can answer that, and yet I never did but one criminal deed in my whole life and I hav done a great many so-called good ones to set over against it."

"Then you can answer neither question with a single word," I said.

He took my hand and pressed it with the frenzy of a new hope.

"At least one man's philosophy is not all words," he said. "You act upon your theories. You are the only one I ever knew who did."

"Perhaps I am the only one you ever gave the chance," I replied, still holding his hand.

We stood thus silent for a moment. Then he said with an inexpressible accent of satire, "Would you advise me to try it, doctor, with anyone else?"

I deliberated some time before I replied. Then I said: "No, I am sorry to say that I fear it would not be safe. There is still so much tiger in the human race. No, do not tell your story again to anyone, it can do no good. Most certainly I would advise you not to try it ever again."

As I left the room he said, "True, true; it can do no good, none whatever."

The next day he left. I never saw him again. Two years later I received a kind letter from him in which he greatly overestimated all I had done for him. The letter came from St. Petersburgh and was signed, "T. Lathro Campbell, colonel Imperial Guard." I fancied, in spite of his letter, that he would rather sever all connection with this country, and feel that he had no ties or past, so I never answered his letter. Sometimes I wonder if he misunderstood my silence and accepted it as a token of unfriendliness, and yet, well, I hav never been able to decide just what would be least painful to him, so I let it drift into years of silence, and perhaps, after all, these very good intentions of mine may be only cobblestones added to the paving of the streets of a certain dread but very populous city which is, in these days of Agnosticism, quite a matter of jest in polite society.

Who shall say? Which would he prefer, friendly communication or silence and forgetfulness?

HELEN H. GARDENER.

185 West 82d st., New York.

Character.

We must not confuse the peculiarities of persons with their characters, though the term has passed into a meaning which is not strictly in keeping with its importance. We are accustomed to look upon character as reputation, when we should substitute moral worth for reputation, and it is in this latter sense we intend to view it.

Character is not always that which appears upon the surface of a man's life, though in the matter of judgment we form the estimation of a man's inner qualities from the outer. Here is the point of deception, as the polished external hides the filth of personality oftentimes. This is a false measure. "All is not gold that glitters," and this we quote as a means whereby we may be guarded in our estimation of character. Men assume the persons of their acquaintance to be what they are, and trust entirely to the outer show. It is our duty to be guarded in our estimation of worth, for on account of our locality we find the inner obscure.

"Appearances are deceptiv." Some persons are like to a window of the stores, full of show, pretense, and adornment; others are like to a tailor's dummy-block, which has at its ends such a decent show of list, but is only covered with three-quarters of a yard of cloth—make-believes. Many are like to those persons who most religiously wash their hands and face, but seldom sully clean water by washing their bodies, but who believe in wearing themselvs clean. These are a person's exterior, and from the same men are called good or bad. Now by a certain theologic thermometer men pronounce these pious. By strict adherence to a "calling" and an "election" or "means of grace," these are termed pious, or by a disregard of these things they are accounted impious. Under a Christian name sects range their judgment of character, but they show how utterly base are their methods of judgment. The ravings of fanatics, the outrageous praying machinery, the assumption of religious bigotry, the frequent appearance at religious ordinances—by these things persons judge character. They do not endeavor to scrutinize motiv; they attempt not to pierce with telescopic power into the inner qualities of man.

True worth is the full measure, the complement of man. It shows the duty of all relationships in life. Character means the measure of every part of us, not only as we are known to others, but as every motiv and desire is known to ourselvs.

Now, character is formed of instincts, affections, emotions, desires, sentiments, and actions. It comprehends all these states under its name. The lowest order of instincts givs birth to a larger and fuller exercise. They become a power whereby a passion beyond them is fed. Selfishness givs place to larger affections. The localized affection for our family or friends widens, the mind becomes benevolent, until all men are included under our affections. Emotions and desires lead us to the highest goal of truth and worth, the recognition of all that is beautiful and pure. Thence by action we qualify our minds to occupy lofty moral positions. Full and free flows the pure stream of character.

By what process does the mind arrive at this great distinction? All nature and experiences answer, "By the slow process of education, the process of growth." From the lowest order man has risen by this rule to the lofty position he now occupies. The present is the womb of his future. The germ of this is laid and his positiv individualism is the father of his life's offspring. A still loftier being awaits this resultant, an evolution of noble qualities.

Wherever the feet of man hav been planted upon our world they hav left traces of his habits and customs. The days in which we liv show how wide is that gulf of being which separates the ages of barbarism from the now. The nineteenth century civilization is far removed from prehistoric man. Tyler, Lubbock, Spencer, and a whole host of others by their researches show how great is that chasm which lies between the barbaric instincts and the groping after the ideal of self-realization.

Now, definit time can be stated as to the years which hav accumulated in the world's history. Nor can it be said that we can compute the age of the moral development. Neither are we able to estimate the future. All we know is, the forces are making onward with a majestic sweep, but long and tedious is the work to be done.

We accept to do certain moral axioms, without any questionings whatever. We say, "Right is right all the world over." But what is "right" here is wrong somewhere else; and what is right in France, Russia, India, or Turkey, is wrong amongst us.

The quality of rightness is geographical, or local; and there will constantly be heard on all hands the question: "What is right?" The moral code passed down to us was contested for by our forefathers. These things were in the atmosphere when we came hither. They are our vitals. The minds of men bow to the principles of national and social right, and these form a moral code. That which is called right or wrong is ever a point of contest, and must be contested. Men hav to readjust this code.

This question is helping to form society on a firmer basis. War, the enemy of nations—and of homes—this devastator of human life—the womb of pestilence, famin, and social decrepitude—around the head of which the aureola has gathered—the religious demon which has been blessed by myriad prayers, smiled upon by bishops and archbishops—the church's God—to conciliate which men are trained, and the ranks chaplained—this dread "death-letting seer"—the Old Testament blessed it, and Jesus Christ sent the sword forth—this dread phantom is giving place to a purer spirit of moral worth, even though the eastern hemisphere be armed to the teeth. This higher moral power is the noble mind-stirring spirit of arbitration which shall get to its banner far more recruits than the eagle of Rome or the union-jack of Great Britain. May heaven send it great blessings! Slavery, that hydra-headed monster, which too has received the smile of the Christian's Bible, and her God—the slavery of human lives, whether it be that of our colored brother and sister, or that of the white man, no matter if it be that such are kidnapped by African slave-dealers, or held in bondage by the sweating system of England—this is giving place to a spirit of freedom; the moral lesson will soon be felt in the lowest stratum of society. The love of gambling, and the moral contraband trading in women; the rights of women; a re-adjustment of the marriage laws; political, social, and religious freedom. These things are passing the fire of moral judgment, and they will lead to a fuller exhibition of individual worth.

The foregoing hav been cited to prove that that which is true in one realm of ethics bears its correlativ in other realms. The history of the whole is that of its parts. "The survival of the fittest" is a term applicable to all circumstances in the highest moral legislature. That alone can "survive" which can fulfill its functions and minister to the growth of to-day. Again and again, it may truly be asserted, the past has made our present, the to-morrow and the next day will be formed from the to-day. Neither can we assume that life is life without guidance, as around us are innumerable agencies to lead us onward.

It is understood that we are still keeping in our minds the rule that character's worth comes only through the education of all powers within us. The transmission of thought was carved for us by hands long since cold. The alphabet is the work of days and ages gone by. Upon this we build our sublimest philosophy and profoundest scientific speculations. We, too, are laying stones of future greatness for our world, and when our hands and brains shall fail others will take the places now occupied by us. "Let us then be up and doing," learning "to labor and to wait."

With the deathblow which incoming virtues shall giv to the contracted habits of men, when veracity, prudence, fortitude chastity, and justice shall hav slain their contending powers, then shall love flourish within us—love of all that is just, true, noble, and good; love of all that is beautiful in nature, art, in man, and in woman. From this realm we shall carry our speculations higher and still higher, until before the spirit of life present in all men shall reverently bow.

This is the process of character's formation, sometimes silent as the dew in its operation, at other times deep and majestic as the rolling deep or the northeast blast; often acting like the sunlight, now and then touched with the volcanic power; now in the haste and worry—under all skies—until the calmness be acquired, until in the spirit of meditation over the philosophy of life all fears and anxieties are removed far from us. In thought compassing land and sea, yea, and all heaven above us; and, when the setting sun of life shall gild the snow-clad hights of age, the mind in a supreme tranquillity shall sleep the sleep of death. CERTUS.

A WRONG submitted to prepares for a wrong to be done. He who does not know his own rights will not recognize his duties. One who has the ignominy to be a slave has the injustice to be a master, submission always leading to tyranny. Our own rights and those of others go together, the recognition of one not being possible without that of the other, or the assertion of one without that of its correlativ; so that our own self-respect is necessary for our proper treatment of our fellows. . . . As nearly all oppression comes from limitations claimed to be for the general good, and urged by some class in its own interest, we should avoid not only special legislation, but more legislation than is necessary. The least government is the best government. . . . Laws cannot much help men, and should aim only to let them hav equal chances to help themselvs. The province of government is properly limited to securing us our rights in the necessary contact of men with men, and does not extend to giving us help. While the government protects us when plowing, it does not plow for us; and while it awards us our money (when claimed by others), it does not make our money for us.—Bierbower.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President, 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia, Pa.
E. B. FOOTE, JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
J. E. REMSBURG, Vice-President, ... Oak Mills, Kan.
JULIET H. SEVERANCE, Vice-President, . . . Milwaukee, Wis.
IDA C CRADDOCK, Secretary, 930 North 17th st., Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, 930 North 17th street, Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Kissing the Book.

"Straws show which way the wind blows;" and the latest straw which indicates the ever freshening wind of state secularization is a decision of Judge Arnold, of Philadelphia, on March 26th, that, in giving testimony in court, it is unnecessary to kiss the book.

The case in question was a suit brought by the pupils of one Professor Stone, the owner and manager of some "Artistic Ladies' Tailoring and Dressmaking Parlors," on a charge of conspiracy and false pretense. One of the witnesses for the defense, a Miss Marian Taylor, had partially given her testimony, when a juror objected because she had not kissed the Bible. Thereupon a breezy discussion sprang up between the lawyers, which was cut short by Judge Arnold's ordering the witness to be sworn by the uplifted hand. He added:

"I am not surprised that this witness did not kiss the book. I would not do it either—a dirty book like that. This custom is a relic of idolatry and the sooner it is abolished the better it will be. I don't think this witness objected to kissing the book because she intended to lie, but because it is a dirty book. I respect her regard for her person and her health."

The italics are our own, as we wished to emphasize that portion of the judge's speech which is especially startling to this conservativ city of ours. When our court judges protest against kissing the book, not only on hygienic grounds, but because it "is a relic of idolatry," and when they clinch their protest by the assertion that they themselvs "would not do it either," the days of the judicial oath are numbered. The daily papers, indeed, already acknowledge that Judge Arnold's decision "may work a complete revolution in the courts in that particular." And the Press has deemed the occurrence of sufficient importance to be made the subject of editorial comment—being careful, however, to change the words of the judge, "a relic of idolatry," into "a relic of barbarism." This change has doubtless been made to spare the feelings of its orthodox patrons, who may be sensitiv over the slight upon their Bible fetich; and for this little concession to prejudice, I suppose we can hardly blame any newspaper. It further adds editorially:

The Bible in use is generally a very dirty one, and the practice of having every witness, high and low, clean and dirty, healthy and sick, press his or her lips to it in taking the oath, is a disgusting survival from an age of superstition, which is exceedingly offensiv to a nice taste, and favorable to the spread of disease.

After the trial, Judge Arnold was interviewed, and asked what he meant. He replied:

I mean that it was established by the church to show the humiliation of the people before the first judges, who were clerics. It has been abolished in England; judicial declaration subject to penalties being substituted.

I mean that it is a relic of a superstitious age and superstitious people, under the subjection of priestcraft. It is a relic of that age in which trial by fire took the place of trial by jury; when a man's guilt or innocence depended on his physical capacity to resist pain and torture; but its worst feature is the dirt and disease which is imparted to the book by the constant handling it receives from dirty witnesses, and I not only would not kiss such a book myself, but hav a respect for those who hav enough respect for themselvs to refuse to do so.

It is like the custom of kissing brass toes of graven images; some worshipers kiss the toe until it is worn smooth; while others only stoop down and pretend to kiss it. They are just as devout as those who touch the toe with their lips, but they hav too much regard for their health to touch their lips to the spot where thousands of others hav been.

I think swearing on the Bible should be abolished. I think a witness can take just as good an oath with the uplifted hand as on the Bible.

But it is not likely that the ripples of excitement created will be confined to the abuse into the midst of which this decision dropped so unexpectedly. As is usual in such cases, the effects will eventually spread far beyond the present area. If kissing the Bible is acknowledged by such high authority to be "a relic of idolatry which ought to be abolished," people will soon be asking why that other relic of idolatry, the uplifted hand and the oath, should not also be done away with. "It is only the first step which costs." And they will then come to see the advisability of bringing about what the American Secular Union demands in this respect, viz., "The substitution of a solemn affirmation, under the pains and penalties of perjury, in the courts, and in all other departments of the government, in place of the common forms of a judicial oath."

IDA C. CRADDOCK,
Cor. Sec. American Secular Union.

Lack of Accuracy, Etc.

BROTHER MACDONALD: You accuse me of "a lack of accuracy" in repeating what you said about slates and mediums.

Let us see. You concede that I quoted you correctly as saying, "Why must a slate go under a table?" But my next sentence you object to as inaccurate, to wit:

And you add that all the mediums to whom you and Mr. McArthur went refused to allow the slates to be kept in sight all the time.

To prove this statement inaccurate you repeat your own words, as follows:

When, however, it was proposed that the conditions be made such that the medium could not hold slates away out of sight and otherwise manipulate them, the media refused the sittings as one man.

Not wanting to quote this whole sentence, I made a partial abridgment of it; and I now fail to see wherein my statement is essentially inaccurate. I did not misunderstand you. You now repeat that Mr. Keeler "flatly refused any sitting at all under the conditions indicated, which were to be such that he could not hold slates away out of sight and otherwise manipulate them."

In no instance, so far as I know or hav been informed, does Mr. Keeler "hold the slates away out of sight;" but in every instance, I believe, or suppose, he manipulates one or both slates. I apprehend, therefore, that his refusal to allow you a sitting was due to your unreasonable requirement that he should not touch the slates. After he has handled them the sitter is always allowed to critically examin and tie them.

And as a further imputation to me of inaccuracy, you quote from my private letter to you this sentence:

Miss Wixon got a message from a departed friend, written while she held the tablet before the curtain.

Had I written that for publication I would hav said, "a message purporting to come from a departed friend." But even without the italicized words, I appeal to the reader if it is not a perversion of my meaning to say as you do:

Now, from that statement one would infer that Miss Wixon did get a message from some person deceased who had been her friend, and that she knew it to be her friend.

The point I intended to make was simply the manner in which she got the message. I knew at the time that part of the writing, including the signature, was illegible. This is frequently the case with messages thus obtained. But you gravely ask, "How does he [myself] know that a scrawl on a tablet is the signature of a departed friend of Miss Wixon?"

Oh, hades! Did you not read my letter addressed to you and printed in the same TRUTH SEEKER in which you undertake to cathaul me for inaccuracy? And did I not, in that letter, say this:

Do not understand me as receiving from these phenomena indubitable assurances of another life. I only say that the hypothesis of another life appears to be the only rational one by which to account for these phenomena. I therefore accept it provisionally and dispassionately, ready at any time to abandon it for a more rational hypothesis.

Holding that position as I do, and hav done for many years, I hope you now see in what a false position you hav placed me before your readers by your own "lack of accuracy," or of apprehension.

And now in regard to Miss Wixon's description of that séance, I hav only to say that she is altogether too confident of her ability to "discover the modus operandi" of the phenomena, if she could hav "permission to sit within the cabinet inclosure during the performance." Let me quote from my own letter to THE TRUTH SEEKER published June 16, 1888:

Before the séance ended General Lippitt, with whom I am acquainted, was permitted to go behind the curtain. As he stood inside the inclosure, directly back of Mr. Keeler, his head and shoulders were visible. The spirit hands came out as before through the curtain, and he assured us that there was no form visible behind. He was asked to raise both hands, and he did so. Still the spirit hands appeared. The guitar, tambourine, and bell were also sounded, sometimes two at once. He told us he could see the instruments move as the sounds were produced.

And again, lest the accuracy of my observation in this case should be questioned, I will reinforce it by quoting General Lippitt's own description of that same séance:

At the séance, May 21, 1888, while I stood at the A end of the curtain, three hands appeared at once, one of them quite small and delicate. Then two hands, both right hands, were repeatedly thrust through the screen at once, and shaken by several of the sitters. Then three hands appeared over the screen, patting the sitters at B and C, my pants being pulled and held, and I received a slap on the back from another hand that emerged from the screen. A writing by G. C. on a paper I was holding said, "Come over;" and I went behind the screen, where I stood for some time, looking sharply at everything about me, and passing my hand over Keeler's back. While I stood there the table was tilted, raps were heard, and the guitar dragged over the floor up to my feet and thrummed on, but no visible agency was perceptible. At the same time—and this was the most extraordinary fact of all—hands thrust through the screen in front were seen writing messages on tablets, while no trace of an arm or hand was visible behind the screen. During the whole time the screen remained undisturbed and touching the floor.

This will be found on page 46 of an illustrated pamphlet of sixty-five pages, entitled, "Physical Proofs of Another Life," by Francis J. Lippitt, sold by Brentanos, Washington, D. C. I knew nothing of the publication until months after my letters on the subject appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER. General Lippitt has given these manifestations a most thorough investigation, and I am sure that he would hav discovered the modus operandi if such a discovery is possible. And so could I, who hav attended at least a dozen of the light-circle séances. They hav been held three times a week for seven years or more in Washington, and I hav yet to learn that any fraud has been detected in any of the performances.

Miss Wixon's intimation, therefore, that Mr. Keeler, by "a roguish twinkle in his eye" at parting, betrayed a consciousness that the performances were all trickery, is both unwarranted and unjust.

And in conclusion I will ask Miss Wixon if, while examining the message, she did not say to Mrs. Burr: "It is like what I hav had before, very imperfect, but I imagin I know whose signature it is intended for," or words to that effect? W. H. BURR.

A Personal Nugget.

A few weeks ago I wrote an article addressed "To Any Spiritualist."

From various letters which I hav received in regard to the article, and from Mr. Longshore's criticisms in THE TRUTH SEEKER of January 11th, I am satisfied that the article, in its scope and spirit, was misunderstood.

In that article I gave certain reasons why I could not accept the central ideas of Spiritualism as generally taught and understood. I might, with equal propriety, hav addressed the article to "any Christian," but preferred to address the Spiritualists because I regarded them as a more intelligent class of people, and believed they would giv honest answers to honest questions.

I did not ask the questions in a bullying spirit, or to drive anyone to "the wall," as Mr. Longshore puts it, but with a sincere desire to be enlightened.

But I must confess if Mr. Longshore is spokesman for the Spiritualists of the country, and his answer is the best that can be given, the Spiritualists, in regard to mental caliber, do not rank far above Christians after all. At least I did not expect to be insulted by being called "gross and vulgar" because I asked what Mr. Longshore is pleased to call "tough and knotty" questions.

Then he goes on to say, "Brother Peck knows better," and intimates that I ask these questions only to "perplex and worry." That is to say, I am very dishonest for asking questions which he cannot answer.

Mr. Longshore says that I know these questions cannot be answered, and that I am driving Spiritualists "mercilessly to the wall, and leaving them helpless and defenseless."

If Mr. Longshore is correct, then there is not as much left of Spiritualism as there is to a cobweb after a cannon-ball has passed through it.

In attempting to act the part of a critic I think Mr. Longshore has mistaken his calling. His proper place is in a circus ring. Some man could make a fortune out of him. He would attract general attention. He can stand on his head, turn somersets, and perform such feats of ground and lofty tumbling as no other man hitherto has been able to accomplish.

After making the broad statement that I asked questions which no Spiritualist could answer, one would hardly be prepared for the following: "But I am not going to gratify him by telling him where it [the spirit] is located, whether in the brain or heart or nerves or stomach. Neither will I tell him whence it did come. Nor will I answer any of his taunting, trifling, impertinent questions."

No, Mr. Longshore is not going to answer any of my questions. But from the above quotation the fair inference is that he could. First he says these questions cannot be answered, and then he intimates that he could answer them but will not.

Such language from a Christian would not hav surprised me, but I did think that most Spiritualists were at least decent. If I had known that Mr. Longshore was the most intelligent Spiritualist that the fraternity could boast of, I would hav known better than to ask such questions.

Instead of answering my questions, which he virtually claims he could, he whiningly asks, "Why do you want to take this comfort, these grand ideas from us, and leave us without all that consolation they afford?"

The same old Christian wail that I hav heard ever since I was a boy. If Mr. Longshore would stop talking like a parrot and consider more thoroughly the import of the language he uses, it might save him much mortification in the future. He acts like a boy rattling away on a drum without thought or system, but evidently much pleased with the noise he makes. How he must hav swelled out when he said: "Brother Peck, do not ask us too much. Giv us a rest." Shoo, fly, don't bodder me. He is justly entitled to a rest, for he must hav been nearly exhausted when he wrote his article. From the character of his article I would advise him to keep his little craft close aLongshore and never venture out into deep water.

If he could not answer those questions, why not say so like a man, or better still, say nothing about them? No thoughtful man will ever call questions "trifling and impertinent" simply because he cannot answer them.

I was in hopes that some candid Spiritualist would take up the questions which I propounded and answer them in their regular order. Instead of this I hav received pamphlets and Spiritual papers with marked articles, and some letters, but no one has attempted a fair, open, and honest reply.

If no one in the flesh can answer the questions, let the mediums apply to those on the "other side," who, from the experiences which they hav passed through, ought to be able to answer them.

If man has an immortal part or spark or principle, somebody ought to be able to giv something like a rational clew to it. To assume that something exists which nobody can get an idea of, is, in my judgment, to insult common sense. JOHN PECK.

Naples, N. Y.

The Devil—Has He Had a Narcotic?

It seems to be the opinion of the clergy in large cities that the devil stops his operations during the summer months, or that God without their aid carries on the saving process during the hot months, no doubt for the purpose of showing how he makes all things and circumstances accommodate themselvs to the convenience of the messengers of salvation. Upon no other hypothesis can the shutting of the great churches during the summer months be accounted for, except, indeed, we indulge in the somewhat uncharitable belief that these professional dispensers of the "great salvation" do not believe the thing, beyond making a profession of the business, otherwise they would not neglect the cure of souls committed to their charge. If the salvation of an immortal soul outweighs the destiny of suns and stars and systems, large numbers ought not to be neglected during a considerable portion of the year by those who so loudly assert that they are the mediums through whom salvation must come to fallen humanity. "How can they hear without a preacher?" says the apostle. But these men desert their posts and let "dear" souls" perish without the gospel, going right away to hell. It may be they believe a heavenly narcotic effectiv for the hot season is administered by the obliging and partial powers of heaven to the old serpent, the devil, so that no harm will result in their absence. But it seems to be only the "swell" persons heaven obliges in this manner; the men of smaller purse and often larger brain hav to hammer away at the "old deil" from weary month to weary month. The prince of darkness is given a free hand in their districts, the sole reason apparently being the quantity of hard cash paid into the stipend fund. Big stipend means devil locked up during the hot weather, small stipend that he may fire away three hundred and sixty-five days in the year.

How strange the whole thing is becomes apparent the closer attention we giv to the subject. The acts and conduct of the leading clergymen lead us to believe that they do not believe what they teach, otherwise they would never neglect the flock, that is, the poor of the flock, for such a length of time during the summer, or it may be they believe what they say to be true of the wealthy portion of their hearers, but as this portion migrates to the seaside, or other places, during the time we speak of, it is not worth while to look after the poorer or "chattle" sections of the assembly who do not add much to the clerical income. The fact is, all the relations of God, grace, and the parson, are regulated by good current coin of the commonwealth. An old lady, wife of a ruling elder, hit it off well when the minister called to say good-bye on the eve of his departure to another "charge." "I'm sorry," said his reverence, after a little talk of a general nature, "to hav to leave this pleasant place where I hav spent so many happy days, but it seems to me that the Lord has concluded I hav finished my task here and he has called me to another corner of the extended vineyard." "I am sorry to hear you are leaving us, Mr. So and So," said the old lady; and with her knowledge of human nature, added, "Might I ask ye how is the stipend were ye're going?" "Well," replied his reverence, "it is a little better where I'm going than here, but of course that never influenced me—the Lord calls me and I cannot disobey his voice." "I'm glad you take such a view of the matter," she said, "but I am afraid the Lord would hav called long and loud before you would hav heard him, had there not been more pay." She was right. The whole underlying idea of Christianity seems to be "for value received." Man is saved by God because he got satisfaction from Jesus Christ, and Jesus Christ, for the part he played, seems to hav got appointed a sort of deputy-boss of the universe. The whole is an affair of beam and scales. The devil seems, however, to hav had the best of the transaction, for had he got possession of all the human beings who ever appeared upon this planet, or that ever will appear, they could not hav been so valuable a prize as he extracted from God almighty. Man being finite, no act of his, nor any number of acts, could be of an infinit nature, hence, had the devil got all men he would only hav had something of a finite nature or value. But the thing stands differently, for by good diplomatic skill he was able, so the theologians tell us, to extract a sacrifice of infinit value from God, so that in this respect "Satan won off the almighty" to the extent of the difference between finite and "infinit." Perhaps the devil thinks he has scored points enough, and goes slow now and then to ease the clergy, who devote so much time to showing how brilliant he is, having outwitted God and man.

W. CECIL HAMMOND.

Freethought in Sweden.

Our friends in Sweden are fighting orthodoxy for all that they are worth. The Stockholm branch of the Utiliska society held, on February 23d, an open meeting, to which were invited all such persons as had been present when Lennstrand delivered his lecture on "God." At the meeting, which was largely attended—in fact, many had to leave for want of room—Mr. A. W. Mentzer read aloud four addresses. The one signed by twelve persons of Uppskediha testified that in them, and, so far as they knew, also in the rest of the audience, had Lennstrand's lecture not produced general indignation but, on the contrary, general satisfaction. The second address of a similar character was signed by thirty-eight individuals, while the third, signed by over two hundred men and women individually, testified that the signers indorsed the view held by Lennstrand and as a logical consequence demanded the same treatment. The fourth address is to be signed by such persons, who, although they differ from the views held by Lennstrand, yet do disapprove of the "enlightened" conduct of the government as manifested in its religious persecutions. The two last addresses are now being circulated in Sweden, and when they return, a copy of each is to be presented to both courts and king.

Two of Lennstrand's so well-known open letters hav seen the light of day during last month. One was addressed to the king; the other, and the most interesting one, to the attorney-general. In this the legal gentleman's attention is called to the glaring inconsistencies of Swedish legal procedings, which, if not corrected, will result in a general contempt of Swedish law among nativs as well as foreigners.

But, of course, the cost of a campaign so activ is great, hence Fritänkaren No. 5 contains an appeal to Swedish Freethinkers to subscribe for this paper. To those of our Swedish friends here in America who do not know the paper, we will say send on $1 to Capt. O. Thomson, 25 Bryggaregaten, Stockholm, for a year's subscription for our vigorous, spicy little contemporary. If Fritänkaren is allowed to die the cause of our brother is lost. Let us not act like a Christian. G. N.

Lectures and Meetings.

W. F. JAMIESON will lecture in Osceola, Ia., April 1st, 2d, and 3d; in Peoria, Ia., April 5th and 6th. Address, Des Moines, Ia.

PROF. VAN BUREN DENSLOW will speak on "The Social Utility of Middlemen," at the Liberal Club next Friday evening, April 4th, 220 East Fifteenth street.

J. E. REMSBURG has just made his fifth tour of Texas, delivering twenty-five lectures in the following towns: Denison, Denton, Mansfield, Fort Worth, Belton, San Antonio, Flatonia, Columbus, Cuero, Victoria, Hubbard City, McKinney, Tyler, Ingersoll, and Paris. Mr. Remsburg organized five strong Secular societies with a total membership of nearly three hundred in San Antonio, Flatonia, Columbus, Cuero, and McKinney. The following officers were elected: San Antonio: Chas. L. Sauer, president; Otto Praeger, secretary; Benj. J. Manermann, treasurer. Flatonia: Henry W. Yeager, president; J. E. Faires, vice-pesident; T. E. Tanner, secretary and treasurer. Columbus: A. C. Zumalt, president; R. W. Putney, vice-president; W. A. Matthews, secretary; Louis Weete, treasurer. Cuero: Wm. Westhoff, president; August Holzapfel, secretary. McKinney: H. E. Smith, president; E. W. Kirkpatrick, vice-president; F. C. Thompson, secretary; M. B. Rexrole, treasurer. Mr. Remsburg goes from Texas to Arkansas.

WE will not be confined by historical, even geological periods, which would allow us to doubt of a progress in human affairs. If we rise above the wisdom for the day, we shall expect that this morning of the race, in which it has been supplied with the simplest necessaries, with corn and wine and honey, and oil and fire and articulate speech, and agriculture and other arts, reared up by degrees from the condition of ants to men, will be succeeded by a day of equally progressiv splendor; that, in the lapse of the divine periods, other divine agents and godlike men will assist to elevate the race as much above its present condition.—Thoreau.

THERE are various, nay, incredible faiths; why should we be alarmed at any of them? What man believes, God believes.—Thoreau.

Communications.

God in the Constitution.

BY A CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY.

Inasmuch as a certain class of zealous religionists, calling themselvs "National Reformers," are so extremely anxious to hav the Constitution of the United States acknowledge the existence, majesty, and superintending power of God, that is, the God of the Christian, or what is known in Bible parlance as the "only living and true God," it becomes a question of great importance at the present time as to what benefit could be reaped by the people by the insertion in the Constitution of the word, name, title, appellation, office, or whatever the term may be, of God, without a definition of the character, form, location, works, and designs, of the being whom they would designate by the term? I mean, suppose it should read in the Constitution something like this, viz., "We, as a nation, acknowledge and adore the God of Bible, who is the one only living and true God, the creator and the preserver of the universe," what satisfaction would that be to these "National Reformers," inasmuch as they must know that they do not, and cannot, agree among themselvs as to whether God is a personal being, or merely a principle, an idea, or an influence? But they cannot explain the matter to their own, or anybody else's satisfaction. How can they explain the incomprehensible? That is, they say that God is "incomprehensible," as witness the following from the creed of one of the oldest, most respectable, and most popular denominations, namely the Church of England. Here is the "Creed of Saint Athanasius," and perhaps this "explanation" of the godhead will be placed in the Constitution, to which the Unitarians, Universalists, Disciples, Adventists, Christians, and many other sects are cordially invited to subscribe their unwavering faith, or they cannot be saved, for so says the creed. We quote: "Whosoever will be saved, before all things it is necessary that he hold the Catholic faith."

Pardon a little comment, now and then, as we go along. It is here observed that it is necessary to salvation that we all shall believe, before all things else, the Catholic faith; and now read: "Which faith except everyone do keep whole and undefiled: without doubt he shall perish everlastingly." Now, as all are to perish everlastingly, i.e., either be burnt up root and branch, as the Adventists and others hav it, or suffer the pangs of eternal torment, unless they believe the "Catholic faith," it becomes very important that we discover what we are required to believe; i.e., providing it is possible, which we will discover it is not; and if not possible for us to believe, some of us, and indeed all, who fail to believe this "Catholic faith," "whole and undefiled," are bound to be lost.

Now for the "Catholic faith." "And the Catholic faith is this: that we worship one God in trinity, and trinity in unity, neither confounding the persons, nor dividing the substance." Now, keep in mind that, as God must be acknowledged in the Constitution, the Catholic, i.e., the general and so-called orthodox definition of God, must also be found in the Constitution. Well, let us see what we are to understand about God: "For there is one person of the Father, another of the Son, and another of the Holy Ghost." That is, there are three persons, each of whom is God, or, in other words, three personal Gods, yet forming one godhead, i.e., one firm, so to speak. But this is not conceded, as we will farther see. "But the godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost is all one; the glory equal, the majesty co-eternal." This is just what I claimed, i.e., three personal co-equal gods; but, as I said, this conclusion is denied, as we will see. We quote: "Such as is the Father, such is the Son, and such is the Holy Ghost." The same idea again—three personal, co-equal, co-eternal gods. Again: "The Father uncreate, the Son uncreate, and the Holy Ghost uncreate." That is, three uncreated and, of course, self-existent Gods. You say you cannot understand how one of these personal gods is the son of another, and yet uncreated and self existent. But the reason is explained in the next verse, and you will clearly see why that point is not understood by you. Hearken: "The Father incomprehensible, the Son incomprehensible, and the Holy Ghost incomprehensible." Well, we might as well stop right here and say no more, for if the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are incomprehensible, why did the maker of this creed, one Athanasius, undertake to say anything about the personality, the co-equality, the co-eternity, the uncreated state of three beings who are all incomprehensible? It is sheer nonsense, and waste of time and breath, to undertake to understand anything whatsoever about that which cannot be comprehended by any of the senses that we are endowed with. That which we can neither see, hear, taste, feel, or smell is, to us, incomprehensible. And this statement that neither Father, Son, or Holy Ghost is comprehensible, is an Infidel statement; it is more, it is Atheistical, for it is not only equivalent to saying, there is no God, nor Christ, nor Holy Ghost, but it flatly contradicts many emphatic statements of the scriptures, which those who believe this impossible "Catholic faith" profess to reverence. I am not discussing the question of the existence of a personal God, and a living, tangible Christ, and a Holy Spirit that can be experienced, with you, Mr. Editor, or your fellow-Freethinkers, who openly, frankly, and honestly avow your unbelief in these things, or in the Bible record of them. But I wish to combat these "orthodox" Infidels, these "Christian" Agnostics, who consign such as you to an endless hell, yet are as fully Infidel and Atheistic as any of your readers.

I simply ask that your readers will not blame either God, Christ, the Holy Ghost, or the Bible with these misrepresentations of God and Christ and the Holy Ghost. Now, I affirm that the Bible affirms throughout, that the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost either hav been, or can be, recognized or comprehended by one or more of the five senses.

It not only declares that God can be known and has been known, but that he must be known. It affirms that the father has been seen and heard, that the son has been seen and heard and felt, and that the Holy Ghost has been seen, heard, and felt. I mean actually, really, and not merely seen by faith or heard by faith or felt by faith; but they hav been seen with natural eyes and heard with natural ears and felt physically. If you could spare two or three columns of your paper to that end I would abundantly sustain the position. But, however, very few of the class whose Infidelity on these points I am criticising are fearless and independent enough to read such a paper as THE TRUTH SEEKER.

David has been quoted against many of your readers as saying, "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." But to whom can this language apply with more truth and force than to those who believe this so-called Catholic faith? Did Jesus Christ believe that the father and the son were incomprehensible, when he declared that "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent?" Did Paul consider God to be incomprehensible when he said to the Athenians, who, like these modern Agnostics, had an altar inscribed "To the unknown God," "Whom, therefore, ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." Avowed Agnostics say that there may be, and probably is, a living God, but that they do not know or understand him; but these professedly Christian people not only say that God is not known to them, but that he cannot be known by anybody, because he is incomprehensible, giving the lie to Paul, who said of a certain class "that when they knew God they glorified him not as God." Again, "Because that which may be known of God is manifested unto them; for God hath revealed it unto them." But we will go on with our quotations, or rather in our effort to find the kind of God that is to be located in the Constitution. We quote: "The father eternal, the son eternal, and the Holy Ghost eternal. And yet they are not three eternals, but one eternal." Comprehend that? You say, No. Well, of course not. It is incomprehensible. "As also there are not three incomprehensibles nor three uncreated, but one uncreated and one incomprehensible." Understand that? "So likewise the father is almighty, the son almighty, and the Holy Ghost almighty. And yet they are not three almighties, but one almighty. So the father is God, the son is God, and the Holy Ghost is God. And yet there are not three Gods, but one God. So likewise the father is Lord, the son Lord, and the Holy Ghost Lord. And yet not three Lords, but one Lord." But remember you are to be "Neither confounding the persons nor dividing the substance." "For like as we are compelled by the Christian verity to acknowledge every person by himself to be God and Lord, so we are forbidden by the Catholic religion to say, There be three Gods or three Lords." Now, do not confound the persons, i.e., keep it in mind that there are three distinct and separate persons, and that each by himself is God—or, in other words, a God—and each is by himself a Lord. Yet, for all that, there are not three Gods nor three Lords. Do you comprehend that? You say, No. Well, you are excusable. It is incomprehensible. But you can surely understand the following, viz: "The father is made of none, neither created nor begotten. The son is of the father alone, not made or created, but begotten. The Holy Ghost is of the father and of the son—neither made nor created nor begotten, but proceeding. So there is one father, not three fathers; one son, not three sons; one Holy Ghost, not three Holy Ghosts. And in this trinity none is afore or after the other; none is greater or less than another, but the whole three persons are co-eternal together and co-equal."

Now, it must strike every thinking person that if the son was begotten of the father, there was a time, no matter how brief it was, when the son did not exist; for he did not exist before he was begotten. And if the Holy Ghost proceeded from the son as well as the father, there was no Holy Ghost until the son was begotten. Yet there was none that was afore or after the other. But do not try to understand it, for it is incomprehensible. But the statement is made that "none is greater or less than another." Yet the son declared emphatically that "the father is greater than I." And he taught that he "could do nothing" of himself. He taught continually that the Holy Ghost is to be "sent" by the father and himself, and that it will not speak of himself, but simply reveal what he is sent to reveal, showing that he is not co-equal, but dependent, and an agent solely of the father and the son. Now, as to the son being uncreated, what do the scriptures mean when they assert that Christ is "The first-born of every creature" and "The beginning of the creation of God?" As to his relationship to his father, he said, "I proceeded forth and came from God." If it be claimed that the son said that the father and he were one, I reply that he prayed that all of his followers might be one. "That they may be one even as we are one." Again, "That they all may be one, as thou, father, art in me and I in thee." Now, if all the followers of Christ "are to be one even as the father and he are one, and they are "one God," then all believers in Christ are also "one god." And if the father and the son, and thousands of men and women, form one godhead, yet as far as the men and women are concerned, they are so many separate, distinct, and independent persons. So the father and the son are separate and distinct and independent. But the scriptures do not assert that they are "one God," but are "one" in the same sense that a man and wife are one, or as a firm composed of two, three, or more persons are one.

Well, as to the creed, after summing up these "explanations" and "elucidations" of the trinity, the creed says, "He therefore that will be saved, must thus think of the trinity."

Well, for one, I do not "thus think," and I could not "thus think" to save my soul; and I should lose my brains if I undertook to "thus think." And as no rational being can "thus think," and no one can be saved unless he does "thus think," no one therefore who has brains, and especially no one who believes the Bible—for such cannot possibly "thus think"—can be saved. Truly this "fool has said in his heart"—Athanasius I mean—and also written it down, in the foregoing style, that "there is no God." No wonder the world is full of "Infidels," for such doctrin as is taught in this venerated creed would make Infidels of everybody who would try to believe it, and who did not read the Bible for themselvs. And here is where our Infidel friends do err; that is, in accepting these absurd doctrins of men, who call them the Catholic faith, and the "Christian religion," as Christianity. I may say that fully two-thirds of the doctrins taught by so-called "Christian" churches are altogether foreign to the doctrin of Jesus Christ, and much that is taught by them as Christianity is condemned by it; just as some of the doctrins and practices of the Salt Lake Mormons are condemned and forbidden by the Book of Mormon, from whence their religion is supposed to hav sprung. But let us see what another church offers through the pen of one of her accepted commentators, as a definition of God, and this should also go into the Constitution. Rev. Luther Lee informs us that God is a spirit, and that a spirit is an "immaterial, indivisible, indissoluble, uncompounded, simple essence; that has neither weight, shape, size, nor color, that has neither exterior nor interior surface, and can in nowise come in contact with matter."

Now, if God, being a spirit, is all that—that is, if that is anything at all—then he is just simply nothing, for that which is immaterial, or formed of no matter of any sort, that which cannot be divided nor dissolved, is not capable of being compounded with anything else; that which has no weight, no shape, no size, no color, and has no outside nor inside, and can in no manner come in contact with anything material, is something—if that is not paradoxical—which is nothing, or that which cannot exist anywhere or in any condition. What "simple essence" is there, known to man, that can bear such a definition? Can electricity, as subtil, and ethereal, and as little understood as it is? Not by any means.

The scriptures declare that God has a form. They ascribe size to him, and color. Paul says that Christ is "the brightness of the father's glory, and the express image of his person." Jesus told the Jews that they had not "heard his voice nor seen his shape." Angels are said to always behold the face of God in heaven. Now, is the Constitution to hav a declaration inserted in it, that we, the American nation, composed of rational beings, endowed with a usual measure of common sense, and opposed to humbug, acknowledge the existence of one only living and true God, but who is not susceptible of recognition by any of the five senses, and who is absolutely incomprehensible, and who is a compound being, formed of three persons of one power, substance, and eternity, yet who is immaterial, indivisible, indissoluble, uncompounded, simple essence, and formed of no substance; who created a son who was never created at all, and who begat a son who existed always or co-eternal with his father, and who was co-equal with his father, who he said was greater than himself, and without whose aid he said he could do nothing; and that there is another person who is also God, co-equal and co-eternal, yet who proceeded from the father and the son, after the son was begotten, of course; yet that neither of the three is afore or after the other, or greater or less than another, and that each of these three separate persons, whose personality must not be confounded, are each by himself God and Lord. Yet there are not three Gods or three Lords, but one only. And being of equal substance, as well as power and eternity, this substance has no weight, shape, size, or color, nor any exterior or interior surface, and can in no wise come in contact with matter. Yet the father became connected with flesh, and assumed human nature, and dwelt in the flesh, but of course was not in contact with matter; and that this godhead is as the creeds affirm, "without body, parts, or passions," and cannot therefore love, pity, sorrow, rejoice, or hav peace or joy, or be kind and gentle; in other words, is as devoid of feeling, impulse, or emotion as a stone, as passionless as a gatepost. And yet those who accept the foregoing "Catholic faith" talk about the love of God, and his pity and mercy, and kindness and goodness; also that he rejoices, and is grieved, and can feel anger and wrath. And still he is without passions. This being whom they call "the only living and true God" is to be acknowledged in the Constitution. And to suit the various classes of religionists he is to be spoken of in these words—I quote from the "Thirty-nine Articles of Religion," and No. I is the one that would no doubt be accepted by all the so-called orthodox and evangelical churches: "There is but one living and true God, everlasting, without body, parts, or passions, of infinit power, wisdom, and goodness; the maker and preserver of all things, both visible and invisible. And in unity of this godhead there be three persons, of one substance, power, and eternity, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost." Some of the creeds leave out the word "passions," and one adds the word "color." But we will suppose that they will compromise and be satisfied with the declaration that this "one living and true God" is "without body or parts."

Yet we hav the statement in Exodus, that God put Moses in the cleft of a rock, and put his "hand" over him, and permitted him to see his "back parts." Paul said that in Christ "dwelleth all the fullness of the godhead bodily." And he says also that Christ is the "express image of his person," i. e., the person of the father. And Adam is represented as being made in the likeness of God. And now right here permit me to object to the silly caricature of the image of God which appeared some time ago in THE TRUTH SEEKER, wherein nearly a dozen different types of mankind are represented as being the image of God, and the question is asked, "Which is the image?" Now, misrepresentation is not fair nor honorable on the part of Freethinkers any more than on the part of Christians so called, in dealing with Infidels. I understand that it is claimed in the Bible, that God made one man (Adam) in his own likeness and image; and I understand that from that one man the various nations hav sprung, in the course of centuries; and that climatic influences and manner of life hav had a great deal to do in bringing about the differences that exist, to a considerable extent; but chiefly that in some cases a curse affecting the skin and feature of men has come upon them, because of crime. The confounding of language may hav been accompanied by a change of skin and form of feature. But this is digression. The point I make is, that God made Adam in his own image and likeness, and that he must therefore be in the form of man, and not in the form of a bird, or a beast, or a fish; and therefore must hav a body. Angels, whenever seen, always are in human form, yet not of human substance. Angels hav a nature, but of course it is angelic nature and not human. Paul says that Christ took not on him the "nature of angels." Angels are spirits and yet are possessed of bodies, like men in form but not in substance. God is a spirit, yet has a form or body and has substance, and a nature called the "divine nature." Paul says there are "celestial bodies" as well as "terrestrial" "or earthly ones." And so we conclude that God has a body, has parts and has passions, and that when the Constitution asserts that there is "one living and true God," "without body, parts, or passions," it will be a false and Atheistical declaration, and an antiscriptural and antichristian doctrin, and that the Constitution will be made an offense to God and a proper subject of ridicule to all thinking men and women, for it will present the sad and lamentable spectacle of asserting that there is but "one living and true God," and then by the silly and paradoxical assertion that this living and true God has no body, no parts, no passions, and is, therefore, nothing, proving that there is no God at all, not even susceptible of being comprehended as much as the gods of the heathen are, whether they be the sun or moon or stars or a cow or an elephant or a snake or a tree or even a block of wood or stone. What it will amount to is just this, viz.: Amendment No. 2 will read, "This God is without body, parts, or passions, and therefore there is no God." For he could be neither a living nor a true God. And worse than that, he could not even be a false god, for every false god has a body of some sort and of some material, and has some shape, even if it has no separate parts or any passions. A God without a body is a God without form or shape or size whatever. A God without parts has no head, no trunk, no limbs, no heart, no lungs—indeed, no internal organs. A God without passions can hav no love, joy, peace, hope, desire, fear, grief, pity, anger, or be subject to emotions of any sort whatever.

It is not as valuable for a God as is a block of marble, for that has a form or a body. It is not as valuable for a God as a tree, as that has both body and parts. It is not as good a God as a cow, as that has body, parts, and passions to a degree. It is nothing, absolutely nothing, and is therefore no God, living or dead, true or false. Now, where are your Atheists, your Infidels, your Agnostics? They are found in the churches, who subscribe to this Catholic faith, this impossible, this absurd, this antiscriptural and antichristian dogma, which cannot by any possibility be allowed to be called a faith, for it is rank unbelief—it is worse than that, it is positiv Atheism. And thinking men and women are told that they must accept this faith, which is not faith but absolute unbelief, and believe it whole and undefiled, or they must perish everlastingly. Now, in conclusion I hav a proposition to make to your readers. It is this, viz., If there be any avowed Atheists among them, let them unite most heartily with these National De—I mean Re—formers, and help get Article I of the Church of England's XXXIX Articles of Religion inserted in the Constitution, and they will hav the satisfaction of knowing that the Constitution, which is now purely secular and unaffected by religious or irreligious ideas, will be an undisguised Atheistic document of national acceptation, and perhaps the only Atheistic Constitution in the world. And to THE TRUTH SEEKER I would say, stop quarreling with your Infidel brethren of the so-called orthodox churches, attend their churches, partake of the sacrament with them, and liv in unity and peace with your brethren in unbelief. If you must pitch into anyone giv it to the Jews and the Mormons, but don't fight your own brethren any more. No, I will take that back and say, "Pitch into 'em" on the ground of hypocrisy in pretending to be believers in the Christian God, and yet being the veriest Atheists. I can respect honest Infidelity, but Infidels in the guise of Christians I hav no more respect for than God and the devil hav. There is one feature of the case, however, that is in favor of the advocates of the "Catholic faith," or Infidelity rather, and that is, they cannot be accused of idolatry in the worship of their God, and they do not break either the First or the Second Commandment, for they hav no other God before Jehovah, for they hav none at all; and they cannot make any likeness or graven image of their God, for "nothing" has no likeness or image; that which has no body or parts cannot be represented by either the molder's, or graver's, or sculptor's, or painter's, or photographer's art. No microscope is powerful enough, and surely the natural eye is not able, to see an image or likeness of nothing. If you hav a picture of nothing send it out here, so the South Sea islanders may see what the orthodox God of England and America is like. The nearest thing to a picture of nothing that I ever saw was when I was a school-boy in Philadelphia. A little boy had made a square of about two inches in diameter, with ink, on a piece of paper. It was simply a plain, black spot. The teacher said, "Charlie, what hav you there?" Charlie said it was "a picture." "A picture of what?" said the teacher. "I see no picture." "Oh," said Charlie, "it is a picture of a nigger in a dark cellar, chasing a black cat." And so it was, for aught the teacher could see. But it was not exactly nothing, for it was a black square at least, and it had a body of paper and the form of a square. But the orthodox God, alas, has not even that much of a substance, or body, or form. It is not round, square, oblong, conical, rectangular, octagon, nor of any other form. It is not like man or beast, bird or fish; not like any fruit or flower, grain or vegetable; not like a hill or a valley; not like anything in fact in heaven above, or on the earth beneath, or in the earth, or in the water. You cannot worship it if you try your level best. It cannot see you, hear you, taste, smell, or feel you, nor you it; it cannot be made of anything, for it is immaterial; it cannot be divided or dissolved, for it has no parts; it cannot love you, nor sympathize with you, nor pity you; it cannot grieve at your misconduct nor rejoice over your well doing; it cannot desire your welfare nor be angry at your ill treatment of it, for it has no passions; it cannot appreciate beauty of form or color, as it has no eyes; it does not know anything of sweetness of song or the harmony of music, for it cannot hear, having no ears; it tastes nothing, for it has no tongue; it smells nothing, for it has no nose; it feels nothing with hands or feet, or by the nerves in contact with something material, for it has no hands, or feet, or nerves, for it has no parts.

Many years ago, when it was the custom for clergymen to wear wigs, a certain clergyman had one which was adorned with many curls. But it did not suit a number of the female portion of his flock, so one day he invited all who found fault with it to visit him at his house and bring their shears along. After their arrival he set the wig before them and told them to trim it to suit themselvs. So one cut off an objectionable curl here, and another an unbecoming lock there, and so on, until each one had removed the part which to her was not in good taste. And when they were through the minister told them that they could fall down and worship it and they would commit no sin, for it was not like anything in heaven above, or in the earth beneath, or in the water under the earth. And so it is with the God of the orthodox creeds. But let the National Reformers get their God into the Constitution, they add nothing to it, so no harm will be done. But what use is there of writing any more about nothing? T. W. SMITH, Missionary.

Papeete, Tahiti, Feb. 10, 1890.

Souls Badly Bestowed.

As reported in THE TRUTH SEEKER of Nov. 16, 1889, Dr. A. H. Stevens, of Philadelphia, claims to hav made a discovery of the natural location of human souls. They are said to be located in the gangular part of the corpus callosum, which, he informs us, "is the seat of the imperishable mind," and "is the reservoir and storehouse of electricity, abstracted from the blood in the arteries, conveyed through the nerves up the spinal process, or cord, to the corpus callosum."

Dr. Stevens is doubtless correct as to his conception of the corpus callosum being the receptacle and distributor of electricity, as he describes, but he fails to show—could not do else than to so fail—one particle of rational evidence to sustain his claim to the discovery of the soul's location, nor of the existence of the soul. The term "soul" seems to hav been brought into existence in a fanciful way in order to fill a gap that was open in the baseless imaginativ conceptions that went to the make-up of the primitiv forms and theories of the religion of those times.

It should be borne in mind that in those ages science was unknown, that imagination could but rarely be directed by reason, and that in consequence crudity of ideas fell upon the masses. It should not be a matter of surprise, then, that these masses were easily overcome by craft joined to superstition, which led to false religious bondage, to persecutions, and to the subversion of all true manhood and womanhood by the domination of alleged God's sheriffs.

This statement being made against the generations of many centuries past, what may justly be said, in the same line of thought, as to our vastly praised intelligence in this our nineteenth century? Are not large proportions of our nineteenth-century people apparently in the same category, as to clerical domination, and as to holding religious dogmas at war with truth and science, as was the case two thousand years ago?

I hav a bit more to say about Dr. Stevens's tenant's—the corpus, etc.—lodgings. It painfully occurs to me that in 1886 I was severely visited by a carbuncle which captured all the ins and outs of my corpus callosum. It held its vicious power constantly at work throughout every part of my body until up to a few weeks from now—nearly four years—with frequent treatment. Though largely subdued, it kicks me here or there daily, to remind me, I suppose, of his regard for my or his brother soul, his lodger. Bad lodgings, I should be assured. Does it hav wings like angels? If not, I beg to know, how will he ever get back or up to heaven when I go down the other way? I do not hear the brother soul flap or otherwise use his wings for exercise. I hope he will not bolt out and leave me soulless, ethically considered. I wait with anxiety. D.

SOME people with whom I talk, men and women even of some originality and genius, hav their scheme of the universe all cut and dried—very dry, I assure you, to hear, dry enough to burn, dry-rotted and powder-post, methinks—which they set up between you and them in the shortest intercourse, an ancient and tottering frame with all its boards blown off. . . . Some, to me, seemingly very unimportant and unsubstantial things and relations, are for them everlastingly settled—as Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and the like. These are like the everlasting hills to them. But in all my wanderings I never came across the least vestige of authority for these things. They hav not left so distinct a trace as the delicate flower of a remote geological period on the coal in my grate.—Thoreau.

THE country is full of this superstition, so that when one enters a village, the church, not only really but from association, is the ugliest-looking building in it, because it is the one in which human nature stoops the lowest and is the most disgraced. Certainly, such temples as these shall erelong cease to deform the landscape.—Thoreau.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 5, 1890.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

A good many of the purchasers of Mr. Bennett's travels around the world hav never obtained the fourth volume of the set, and the book has also been out of print for a long time. A new edition is now ready, bound uniformly with the others, and may be obtained for $1.50. A limited number only has been printed, and those desirous of completing their sets of this invaluable Freethinker's history of the world should apply early.

Pictorial Arguments Against the Church.

Substantial progress is being made on the new book of pictures, and orders for it are also numerous, as will be seen by reference to the "Letters from Friends." To giv a clear idea of the style of the book we quote the contents of the first chapter, which has the title, "Uncle Sam and the Priests:"

The Pests that Bother Uncle Sam.
Uncle Sam Sleeps, but the Priests Do Not.
Romanism with Her Mask On.
The Mask Off.
"Submit to the Roman Pontiff, as to God."
The Skeleton that Uncle Sam may Some Day find in His Closet.
A New Laocoön.
The Trail of the Serpent.
Some Undesirable Immigrants.
Lay Loyalty.
"Where Liberty Reigns the Tyrant Seeks to Slay Her."—La Salle.
The Outcome of Church and State Union.
The God-in-the-Constitution Guerillas.—Liberty in Peril.
Religious Treason the Ruin of the Republic.
A Translation of the Bartholdi Statue which may be Expected under Religious Rule.
What Uncle Sam should Do.

Each picture is accompanied by a page of supporting texts, statistics, etc., and the more we consider the volume the better does it appear to be. It will be worth much as a reference-book, aside from its pictorial features. The price is $2.

The Pictures in the Paper.

We are pleased to announce forty-six new subscribers on the picture account received since the last acknowledgment, making four hundred and ninety-nine in all. This insures the publication of the pictures all through the year, and we hope that by next January the list will hav so largely increased that no special call need be made. We ought to hav twelve or fifteen thousand subscribers, and if our friends will continue their good offices, substantial progress toward obtaining that number may be made this year.

We hav also received additional amounts of cash toward the picture expense:

B. Kahler	$ 50	John Redmond	1 00
O. F. Hoyt	75	Leonard Walters	2 00
E. M. Hanson	25	J. M. Peck, Sr.	75
E J. Toss	1 00	J. A. Weaber	50
Chas. Gregg	1 00	Wm. R. Sayre	75
J. H. Dibble	1 00	John Nuessle	1 00
E. Van Buskirk	.1 00

Total amount, $220.80. This is a very generous contribution from our friends, and we assure them that it is gratefully appreciated.

"They Are for a Spoil, and None Saith Restore."

That the substitution of the word "religious" for the word "sectarian" in all laws and articles of constitutions intended to secure equal rights in religion to all men is of that great importance that THE TRUTH SEEKER has frequently urged, may be seen from this paragraph in the decision of the Wisconsin supreme court excluding the Bible from the public schools. The court defines sectarian thus:

"The term 'sectarian instruction' in the constitution manifestly refers exclusivly to instruction in religious doctrins, and the prohibition is only aimed at such instruction as is sectarian—that is to say, instruction in religious doctrins which are believed by some religious sects and rejected by others. Hence, to teach the existence of a supreme being of infinit wisdom, power, and goodness, and that it is the highest duty of all men to adore, obey, and love him, is not sectarian, because all religious sects so believe and teach. The instruction becomes sectarian when it goes further and inculcates doctrin and dogma concerning which the religious sects are in conflict. This we understand to be the meaning of the constitutional prohibition."

So, if a teacher in a public school inculcates Theism there is no remedy, notwithstanding there may be in the school children of Atheists and Agnostics. That is to say, the various Christian sects are to be prevented from preying upon each other, but may all legitimately prey upon the unbeliever!

We Still Plead for Accuracy.

We regret that our genial Western contemporary still needs the correcting hand to guide him into the path of accuracy. Commenting upon the defeat in the United States Senate of Senator Blair's Educational bill, the Ironclad Age says:

"This bill, the religious features of which were so artfully concealed, we believe would hav at least passed the senate again but for the determined and dogged opposition of the religious sect known as Seventh Day Adventists. It had the luring bait of a $77,000,000 appropriation to be distributed amongst the states in proportion to the density of illiteracy. But the chief object of the bill was to enforce religious instructions in the public schools by national authority and the acknowledgment of Jesus Christ as the supreme ruler of nations. And to think that a measure so un-American, so pernicious, so unconstitutional as this could poll so large a vote as it did in the Senate of the United States in this age of general intelligence must make every true patriot shudder for the welfare of his country."

Senator Blair is the responsible author of so many iniquitous and crazy measures that it is not strange, perhaps, that his critics should occasionally get mixed up. But the bill recently voted on was not the one to which the criticism of Dr. Monroe would apply. This was a bill "to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools," and it provided for a grant of some seventy odd millions, extending through a series of years, by the general government, to the states, for the maintenance of common schools, the money to be divided on the basis of illiteracy of population. A careful perusal of the bill (which the Senator kindly forwarded us) fails to show any direct advantage to the churches from it. Opposition to it proceeded from political rather than religious reasons.

The measures which the Adventists opposed are Senator Blair's Educational Amendment to the Constitution and his Sunday law bill. The first provides that the general government shall guarantee that the various states shall maintain schools in which shall be taught the principles of the Christian religion; the second provides for the religious observance of Sunday so far as the general government's jurisdiction goes. The errors which may be counted in our esteemed contemporary's remarks are, therefore, as follows:

1. The Adventists hav not doggedly opposed the Educational bill. 2. The object of the bill was not to enforce religious instruction in the public schools. 3. It does not acknowledge Jesus Christ as the supreme ruler of nations (the Educational Amendment does not do that). 4. The bill was not unconstitutional, not particularly un-American, and not pernicious from a Liberal standpoint. As a political measure Jeffersonians would oppose it, but several Southern Liberals, whose states would get the major portion of the money, favored its enactment into law.

To Senator Blair's Educational Amendment to the Constitution, however, Dr. Monroe's criticism applies with pertinence, with the exception of the line about Jesus Christ. Setting up that ancient individual as the supreme ruler of nations is the notion of the National Reform Association, otherwise known as the God-in-the-Constitution party.

"The Bible in Evidence."

The fanatics created by the scriptures of the Christian crop up everywhere. The latest crank was discovered the other day up in Westchester, as a juror in Justice Dykman's court, in a suit for damages began by a resident of White Plains against an Eye and Ear Infirmary. When the jury retired for deliberation Mr. Antholtz at once produced a Bible and began to read. Then he prayed. The other jurymen began balloting and soon arrived at a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $2,500, but Antholtz said that he must first find out what the Lord said about casting a ballot in a lawsuit. After spending a long time in his search he said that as there was nothing in the Bible on the subject he could not vote. After several hours wasted in alternately coaxing and bulldozing the man the eleven other jurors appealed to Justice Dykman. The justice said that he could do nothing, and the jury was locked up for the night. Yesterday morning Antholtz said that the Lord and the spirits during the night had told him to vote for a verdict of $1,000. This again disappointed the jurymen, as they had decided to giv Van Tassel $2,500. Antholtz, however, would not raise the sum a dollar, and at last, with hunger gnawing at their vitals, the eleven jurors had to giv in to him and rendered a verdict in accordance with his views.

When Mr. Antholtz took his seat on the jury he had sworn to decide the case according to the evidence. He really did decide it according to a crazy notion he got from reading the Bible and praying. Whether there is any legal remedy for the parties in interest is problematical. But the queer proceeding very plainly shows that the Bible is a dangerous book to put into the hands of men with weak minds. Perhaps the time will come when before a person is allowed to read God's book he will hav to obtain from some competent physician a certificate that he is able to bear it, as we now are compelled to get a prescription from a doctor before poison can be purchased.

Russia.

Russia is a nation from which Freethought is totally absent. It is pervaded in every part by the most intense religious belief and feeling. Foreign visitors are amazed at the incessant crossing of breasts in the streets as the populace pass the countless church edifices, shrines, and other sacred places. The church, which is the Greek Catholic, is united with the state, and divergent sects are persecuted and suppressed. The czar, nominally a patriarch of the Greek church, is virtually an absolute pope of his people.

This being the case, we are presented with a profitable opportunity for ascertaining the effects of Christianity on morality. Much depends upon whether we find the nation of Russia in morals above or below those nations, as Germany, France, England, and America, in which skepticism has wrought for several generations. What we find is that it is far below. It seems under Christianity to hav become totally devoid of the sense of moral duty and of the practice of justice. It is, of the greater nations of Europe, at once the most Christian and the most immoral.

In the latest Fortnightly Review a writer describes the Trade Reputation of Russia, gathering his data chiefly from official expostulations and journals of Russia herself. Notwithstanding foreign disgust at Russian commercial guile:

"A certain limited, working confidence, based upon obvious mutual interests, without which all social intercourse would be impossible, has necessarily been exhibited by foreign merchants and governments from time to time."

The only alleviation of the shame inflicted on the Russian merchants by this grudging and limiting of confidence, will be the reflection that with the court of heaven they stand in a trust perfectly unlimited, and enjoy quite the most intimate kind of social intercourse.

"The word Russian is become synonymous with qualities subversiv of everything implied by relations of trade, commerce, and friendship."

Our northern neighbors will hav to content themselvs with the consolation that in that region whence alone cometh all true justice, the word Russian is synonymous with everything of holiness and right.

"It would require a volume rather than a review article to convey anything like an adequate idea of the singular methods employed by Russian merchants to supplement the proverbial slowness and meagerness of trade profits. They would seem to exhaust the possibilities of naïveté and criminality, nothing being too grotesque, nothing too dangerous to tempt their cupidity."

Perhaps these "singular methods" owe something of their peculiarity to the singular methods made use of by the same persons for clearing their consciences of guilt, transferring blame vicariously, getting into heaven after a lifetime of ill-doing, and so on. If the Russian merchants are as reported above, then they are in trade no different from what they are in religious conception; for in this, too, surely it may be said that they "exhaust all the possibilities of naïveté and criminality."

"Fraudulent bankruptcy is as much a recognized institution in Russian trade as credit."

Russia at least has the comfort that bankruptcy is no more a recognized institution in her trade than it is in her divinely given religion. It seems only fair that one whose moral bankruptcy and worthlessness is to be in a trice set right in heaven's courts, should hav his commercial insolvency as readily condoned and made good in our own.

"Lack of faith in Russian honesty, lack of trust in gaseous promises, explains why so many foreigners hav themselvs gone to Russia to develop the resources of the country; why the timber trade is managed by Englishmen, and the kerosene trade has fallen into the hands of a Swede and a foreign Jew."

Christ said that his kingdom was not of this world. It has appeared ever since that his doctrins were not the ones on which a sound fabric of social relations and welfare could be erected. Let the unchristian or lukewarm strangers hav the commerce. It profiteth a man nothing to gain the timber trade and lose his soul.

"But in Russian even the shrewdest foreigner, assisted by nativ talent, is not always able to avoid falling into the innumerable snares spread on all sides of him. The laws are usually as powerless to help him as if they were written in dust or on the sand of the ebbing sea."

The earth and the fullness thereof is the Lord's, and of course should be appropriated by his people to the extent of their power.

"Last year the Berlin Timber Company floated down the Dnieper Berg canal an immense quantity of timber, purchased for £30,000. It was overtaken by the frosts of winter, and remained imbedded in the ice. The company were compelled to wait till spring, and meanwhile their agent, Herr Kuntze, came up periodically to inspect it. The first time he saw it he found everything in order; the second visit was equally satisfactory, but the sight that met his eyes when he arrived the third time made his hair stand on end. The timber, he found, belonged no longer to his company, but to a famished creature named Begoon and several beggarly friends. They had seized upon it, and the corrupt and worthless courts, with all the agent's striving, would not redeem it from these nativs."

Such proceedings are to be looked for in a people so addicted to poring over the doings of the children of Israel in scripture accounts.

"Russian kerosene is looked upon by English purchasers with 'misgivings,' as we learn from the Russian consul at Hull."

Possibly the holy Russians think it sufficient that the English will shortly enter a state where they will hav no call to complain of the poor burning quality of anything at all ever again.

"After a scathing exposure, the Russian kerosene-sellers found no better way to retrieve their lost reputation than by damaging that of a competitor, making thousands of tin cans in all respects identical with those used by American firms, filling them with wretched stuff and flooding therewith the markets of central and southern Europe, where they were bought, sold, and condemned as first-class American kerosene."

The patriarchs most beloved of God seem to hav spent their lives in actions of equal perfidy, and if God's affection be secured, the Russians probably conclude, the esteem of puny man is a thing that is truly as nothing.

"In Brazil, Russian canvas for sails is being boycotted, while the French and English material is eagerly purchased, because 'conscientiously' prepared."

The Russians' sail canvas for terrestrial purposes may be sad stuff, but the sails that are to waft them to heaven we know lack nothing that human pains can effect.

"In Belgium, Russian timber has no chance in the competition with Norwegian, Swedish, Hungarian, for the same reason."

"The same reason" being that it is not "conscientiously prepared." Conscientiousness and faith in inverse relations, the one present in the degree in which the other is absent—this is the aspect of things which the student of affairs is accustomed to meet.

"As to flax, any quantity of it would, we are officially assured, be accepted gladly, if honestly sorted and sold. 'At present, however,' adds the Russian representativ, in his latest report to his government, 'in the cases containing flax from Russia you can almost always find stones, old ropes, etc., which add greatly to the weight and spoil the quality of the merchandise. It is owing to this fraud that Russian flax fetches only half the price of the inferior qualities of the Belgian article.'"

Strong in the matter of devoutness, but weak in sorting and selling flax; surpassing in rendering duty to God, but uncertain when stones are around; filled with commendable hatred of heretics, but with an unhappy leaning toward old ropes—such would appear to be the reported character of our Russian friends.

"Even Russian eggs in England fetch forty per cent less than eggs from other countries of the continent, merely because, being Russian, they are believed to be everything else which this fatal word implies."

Addle eggs to the addle-heads that repel the true religion. As to "Russian" being a "fatal word," many a fair-dealing but unchurchly Englishman may long to screen himself behind it when the colloquy with St. Peter draws on.

"Linen and cotton of Poland are driving those of the Moscow factories even from the home markets."

Naturally this-world garments fail of attention when so much is required by those coverings of holiness that shall shelter from the fierce wrath of God.

"But the staple export of Russia, as an agricultural country, is corn, of which Great Britain is a purchaser to the extent of about £6,000,000. Yet the manipulations to which that corn, excellent by nature, is subjected before it reaches this country, would seem incredible, were they not vouched for by the most trustworthy authorities."

This way of dealing with foreign nations recalls to our minds a custom instituted by God in his chosen people, that of disposing of tainted meat to the stranger that was within their gates.

"The quality of Russian oats is vastly inferior to the samples. The corn exporters of the city of Liban had the coolness to request the authorities of the Public Corn Warehouse of Yelets to sell them the sweepings that remained over after the sorting of the oats, which consisted of 'earth, husks, unripe grainless ears, fine tares, and pigweed,' in order, as they honestly explained, to mix them with the oats to be exported to England. The authorities refused, but the exporters secured their wish elsewhere. According to a Russian expert, who had lately published his views on the matter, the net gain to the complaisant exporters on this commercial operation was one hundred per cent."

Notwithstanding this, in the judgment day the grain that the son of man shall separate from the tares for preservation to his glory, will be these same Russians; and we know who the tares will be.

"In 1886 some of the largest importing firms of England consulted together and resolved to avoid as much as possible purchasing barley from Russia, on the ground that in the consignments of barley sent from Odessa to England, a large quantity of earth was added."

To some it may not appear altogether unbeseeming that the spiritual of the world rid themselvs of what is earthy and turn it over to their gross fellows whose base and material natures seem never to be done craving just that sort of stuff.

"'The main evil of Russian society,' says one of the government organs, 'is that it suffers from complete, absolute dissoluteness, recognizes no moral disciplin, and has practically emancipated itself from duty.'"

Too much cannot be expected of the human mind. It is limited. If most of the time of a man is applied to the observance of ecclesiastical disciplin, he will hav but little left to train himself in moral disciplin. We must not be surprised to find that one whose efforts hav been nearly all turned toward securing for himself a relation of allegiance and favor with a supernatural lord, has simultaneously become emancipated from allegiance and duty to his fellow-men.

"At the trial of a railway servant the prisoner—as is usual in such cases—confessed the facts rather than his guilt, and stated frankly, as a thing of course, that all the railway servants robbed, and that robbery was thoroughly organized along the line, some stealing only manufactured goods, others leather wares, and others, again, corn, and so on, the rules of honor forbidding those who devoted themselvs to the robbery of one species of property to encroach upon the domain of the others."

We believe, after all this, that Christian controvertists will hav to giv up the claim that their religion promotes morals. Throughout, we hav plentifully allowed to our under-honest Russian neighbors the compensation that they will succeed in obtaining the love of the Lord, and all perquisits and sinecures attaching thereto, in a measure far exceeding anything attainable by us. With this let them be content. As to honesty between man and man—as to any disposition or habit contributiv to the worth and happiness of man on earth—the foregoing account of the Russian nature, along with every other evidence of times or countries, attests that such qualities of goodness, and the Christian faith, are two things that are in direct and deadly antagonism to each other, and that the one can flourish only as the other is abated.

Barbarous Sweden.

The following cable message was received from Captain Otto Thomson last Monday:

"King's Court sentenced Lennstrand additional three months."

The Christians of Sweden are evidently going to protect God at whatever cost.

Instead of being a civilized country, as is generally supposed, Sweden, like New Jersey, is dragging along somewhere in the middle of the last century.

With considerable acerbity, and in one paragraph, an impolitely close approach to profanity, Mr. Burr retorts upon the Editor for the criticism made upon himself in these columns last week. There is no need to continue the exchange of courtesies, for our object has been gained in inducing our friend to pay closer attention to particulars. We do not wish to be deceived, nor do we wish our readers to be deceived, by statements which do not bear analysis nor correspond with the real order of phenomena. Let us hav the facts as they occur, and if the signature on a slate is an illegible scrawl, let us know it, and not call it a message from a departed friend.

Mr. Lee Laughlin, of North Yamhill, Ore., writes that he "stated in the presence of an Adventist that believers in the predictions made in the past that the end of the world would come on a certain day, had given away and otherwise disposed of their earthly possessions, declaring that they only required enough to last them till the final winding-up day, and that afterward, when the end did not come as predicted, they 'went back' on their contracts and wanted their possessions back again," and desires to know if he told the truth, as the Adventist denied that such had ever been the case. If any of our readers hav information which will enlighten Mr. Laughlin we hope they will write to him. We think the Millerites of Maine, away back in the forties, did something of the sort, giving their possessions to their pastor, who refused to return them, but hav not definit information about it.

The story by Helen Gardener in this issue is furnished by her in advance of its publication in a volume of short stories now in press, to be called, "A Thoughtless Yes." The "Moral" of the book is well and briefly described in the concluding sentence of a "Sentiment" by Colonel Ingersoll, which will be printed on the cover—"We pay to impudent authority the tribute of a thoughtless yes." The present story deals with the same "folks" that appeared in "The Time Lock of Our Ancestors." As Mr. J. K. P. Baker at the time discovered, that story was only one chapter from the middle of a life history, and the tale in this issue of The Truth Seeker will hav a sequel in the April Belford's Magazine entitled, "Florence Campbell's Fate." The book, "A Thoughtless Yes," will contain nine short stories, not written solely to amuse, but each containing a motiv and a purpose, and will, therefore, combine, as the children's books say, absorbing entertainment with rational instruction. It will be published some time this month.

Dr. Ned Foote, as he is known hereabouts, does not believe in vaccination as a prophylactic, and he is opposing the compulsory vaccination bill now before the New York legislature. Last year he squandered a hundred dollars to defeat the same bill and this year he desires the aid of some other New York citizens. The points he makes against the measure are, that it is the most sweeping arbitrary act of the kind ever proposed anywhere; that the bill is so framed that a man with money enough could legally protect himself and family indefinitly against vaccination, while the poorer classes would hav to submit or go to jail; that the bill really paves the way for great opportunities for blackmail by deputy officials who would practically hav the power to prosecute objectors or overlook them 'for a consideration;' that the bill makes no attempt to define vaccination, to say what constitutes a true and pure virus, but leaves all this to health boards, giving them the utmost facility to make fat jobs for favored vaccine farms; that there is no provision in the bill to guarantee subjects of compulsion against the serious accidents and disasters which vaccinators acknowledge are an unavoidable and always possible sequence of vaccination; and finally that there is now sitting in England a parliamentary commission appointed to investigate this subject from all sides, with the view to determin if possible what the facts are, so that further legislation there may be based upon science and truth, rather than upon false theory and delusiv practice. Dr. Foote says he feels certain that there are thousands in the state, who, if they knew the facts and had the chance to speak, would stand with him in opposing this very iniquitous bill, though there might be only hundreds who would agree with him in objecting to vaccination on all the grounds above presented. Those desiring to coöperate with Dr. Foote may address him at 120 Lexington avenue.

Letters from Friends.

GIBBON, NEB., March 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose five new subscribers and six solid votes for the cartoons. Do you not think I hav done well?

C. P.

WALTON, IND., March 20, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find $5, for two of Heston's forthcoming picture books, and $1 for Heston's table comforts.

Yours respectfully, E. VAN BUSKIRK.

LEWISBURG, PA., March 24, 290.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $2.50—$2 for the cartoon book, and if so small a sum is any help toward continuing the pictures, please credit cash fifty cents to the fund.

Yours in the cause, BEN F. KAHLER.

NORTH WATERBORO, ME., March 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Send me the novel entitled, "For Her Daily Bread." You can also send the book that is soon to be published containing Heston's pictures that hav been published in THE TRUTH SEEKER for the last four years.

Yours truly, A. W. TUCKER.

SEATTLE, WASH., March 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find post-office money order for $3—$2 for subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER. I hav not many acquaintances, and therefore cannot get a new subscriber, but in lieu thereof I send $1 more in order that the illustrations may be continued. EDWARD FEHRE.

TAMARAA, ILL., March 15, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: I am over seventy years old, and do not read much, but I must hav THE TRUTH SEEKER. I hav taken it several years, and will take it as long as I can read. I think it, with other such literature, is the civilizer of the world. I think the pictures will do some good.

T. M. SAMS.

PITTSBURGH, PA., March 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Herewith find $5, to be applied as follows: Subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER, $3; TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL, twenty-five cents, and the balance, $2, for the new pictorial book spoken of by the Editor in his editorial of this week's issue. Hurry it up, as I will guarantee it to be a bouncer. Respectfully yours, H. A. SMITH.

ORION, MICH., March 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I can do no missionary work with the paper as the pictures are now attached. I could if they were on a separate sheet. The cover could then be removed. The paper would then be read by many who will not receive it as it appears now. It is good enough for me as it is, as I need no conversion. L. PREDMORE.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., March 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $2, for which send a cartoon book when you get it complete. I think it will be the greatest thing out. I will be anxiously awaiting its coming. I would like to pay more for the book if I could. I am sorry that I cannot do something for the pictures, but continue them if you can. Yours truly, WM. OPP.

SOUTH STATION, CHICAGO, ILL., March 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $3.25 for following books: "Hand-book of Freethought," Bell; book of cartoons, à la Heston. Hoping that the book of cartoons may prove successful, and that you may get the other volume of pictures out soon, I will now close, wishing success to both Editor and cartoonist of the most valuable (to me) paper in the world. JNO. C. SPRONG.

SNOWVILLE, VA., March 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am so glad the pictures are to be booked. I send $2 right straight along for a copy. I was one of the first to ask that they be put in book form, and want to be one of the first to help to pay the cost of doing so. I wish I was able to buy five hundred of them to giv away in the missionary cause of truth and right against darling delusions and hoary-headed errors. ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

IBREZ, March 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER for over two years. It was the pictures that induced me to take it. My home is at Amory, Monroe county, Mississippi. I hav been in Mexico one year. I hav a friend in Mississippi that sends THE TRUTH SEEKER every four weeks. Do not stop the pictures. I will be back in Mississippi about the 1st of June, and I will giv you $50 to help continue the pictures. Yours truly, GEORGE MAGILTON.

OTTUMWA, IA., March 19, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Heston and John Peck hav my best wishes. I think the pictures the very best thing to set the rising generation to thinking. When they look at them they will turn to the Bible to see if such things are as they are represented. I hav had persons tell me they believed the Bible was the inspired word of God, and then admit they never read it, yet believed it all true. Inclosed find seventy-five cents for Heston's continuance of his good work. J. M. PECK, SR.

SCHUYLERVILLE, N. Y., March 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $2.10—ten cents of the sum for "Crimes against Criminals," by R. G. Ingersoll, the balance for the book that is to contain the pictures taken from your invaluable paper, as noticed in last Saturday's paper. The pictures suit me and my family. I would send you money for them if it is possible that they may continue. I hav as yet never been able to get you any subscribers here. I would be glad to do so. Others read my paper. JOHN H. BULLARD.

BRANDYWINE, O., March 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been a paying subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER for twelve years or more, and I hav been trying all that time to get some of my neighbors to take it, but I hav quit trying. I liv in the worst priestridden neighborhood on earth, I think, and as I hav passed my sixty-ninth year I hav to look out for myself and let the world wag as it will. You can count me a subscriber as long as I liv, pictures or no pictures. I vote, however, for the pictures.

Yours for Freethought forever, SOL BENSON.

PORTLAND, ORE., March 13, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Upon her return from Washington en route to California, Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel delivered one of her logical and eloquent lectures in this city. Her subject was, "Religion and Church of the Future." Those who hav heard Mrs. Krekel need not be told that she held the close attention of her large and intelligent audience as she portrayed in glowing language the changes in creed by what she termed the "leaven of Freethought."

MATTIE BLAISDELL, Sec. of Secular Association.

OAKLAND, CAL., March 14, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find herewith $6, for which send the paper to two new subscribers. We all approve of the pictures, and consider them a good lever to use in lifting the hoodwink of superstition from the brain of the victim. When one's mind becomes clogged with religious trash, it is to a degree inactiv or dead and reason falls from it as does water from a duck's back. In this case a powerful emetic is necessary to counteract and eject the poison. Ridicule is that emetic, and the fact that it makes them sick is the evidence that the medicin is working. Let Heston put up his medicin good and strong. GEO. W. ARPER.

SPRECKELSVILLE, MAUI, HAWAIIAN ISLDS., March 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Herewith find inclosed $7.65, for which please forward books and ANNUALS as per list. I hav been taking THE TRUTH SEEKER for the last two years from your agent in San Francisco, and must say that I am very much pleased with it, and would not care to be without it now, as I get a great deal of useful information from it every week. In regard to the pictures, I think they are excellent, and ought to be continued if possible; but I do not see any chance to get a new subscriber from here at present, as the missionaries hav got too good a hold on the majority of the people on these islands. WM. BARCLAY.

KIRKSVILLE, MO., March 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I write at this time more particularly to request you to stop sending your paper to the one for whom I subscribed—name and address below—and send it the balance of the year to my son—name and address also below. The party for whom I subscribed is a son-in-law of mine, and I informed his wife, my daughter, that I had subscribed for the paper for them, and if they did not like it, to inform me and I would hav it stopped. She has written requesting me to stop it, though acknowledging my kindness in sending it. There are six children in our family, all grown, and she is the only bigoted one among them all, and she would not hav been such had she not been thrown among that class of people since marriage; that has made her such.

I will take three copies of your illustrated book when ready. Respectfully, WM. HART.

CHARLESTON, March 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav received several copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER, which I greatly admire, especially Friend Heston's pictures. I am an old subscriber to the Investigator, and hav worked hard for mental freedom in this place against great odds. I hav distributed a great many books and papers in this vicinity, and by so doing hav caused several to quit supporting the minister. I hav saved them from being robbed by the church, and it does seem as though they ought to be willing to subscribe something to the cause of Freethought and reform. But times are hard and money scarce. But I intend to do as much in opposition to priests, etc., as I hav done in support of them. One good Methodist sister made her brag that she had burnt some of Cole's Infidel books. I suppose she thought that would please the minister. Inclosed find $2; please send me two copies of the ANNUAL, and two of the "Symposium," and send THE TRUTH SEEKER enough to come to the other dollar.

Yours fraternally, A. F. COLE.

ADRIAN, MICH., March 20, 290.

MR. EDITOR: I see by the last TRUTH SEEKER that you are about to publish those cartoons in book form, with the reading proper to them. The thought of something like this had been with me for a long time, so I was ready to indorse it and say amen to the picture business, and of course I hav fulfilled the requirements by sending you two or three new subscribers within the last few months. And when spring opens a little more, and I get off on my Kansas route, I hope to send you a few more names for our good old TRUTH SEEKER, that I hav been a close reader of for the last fifteen years, and, as a rule, it has always been paid for in advance. It always seems to me that a paper like THE TRUTH SEEKER reads better when we feel that the paper is paid for. But I hav got off my subject. I was speaking about this cartoon book. Now, I hav got my family record in the Christians' Bible, but I hav still been in hopes that a book might be produced with a few blank leaves in it for a family record, and as this book is to be a kind of a picture-Bible book, that is, it is to contain many pictures giving force to the reading of many of those Bible stories, I hav been thinking whether it would not be a proper book for a family record to be put in. But whether you put these blank leaves in or not, or whether you think the above is worth publishing or not, I want you to send me by returning mail, if you can, one of those books, so I can giv it a little looking over before I start on my Western trip, and as I am making out a little order for pamphlets and tracts to take with me, I may conclude to take some of those books. Please let me hear from you by returning mail, and believe me, as ever, S. D. MOORE.

QUAKERTOWN, PA., Dec. 22, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. J. H. Wood does not agree with me that "our forefathers fought for freedom," and further says that "our forefathers fought against the right of the government to tax the people." I should like Mr. Wood to prove from history that his assertion is true. If history proves anything, it proves that our forefathers fought for the freedom to tax themselvs and the freedom to govern themselvs. I do not believe that they thought of Mr. Wood's advanced or unique idea of government support or finances. "Free" and "freedom" are only relativ and not absolute, and I defy Mr. Wood to produce a Liberal who thinks he livs under a government free from religious laws as a citizen of the United States. It is no doubt true that a number of our laws were inspired and promoted by falsehood and hypocrisy, and supported by honest ignorance. I think it unwise for Liberals to be too promiscuous in their assertions and denounce too much that they do not understand. Mr. Wood's ideas may be right as to the thing that will succeed and remove poverty, but is he quite sure that the clergy would not be the distributors of considerable of the government money under the present régime, or would the repeal of all tax laws remove the Sunday laws? I think it would be a good idea for some contributors to THE TRUTH SEEKER to cross-examin their own articles before mailing them.

Yours truly, D. C. WISNER.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Nov. 28, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: Thinking perhaps you would like to hear from this section of the country again, I will try and frame you a letter out of some notes I hav at hand. I often feel like J. D. Shaw, away off in one corner of the country, but when the old TRUTH SEEKER comes I know how you are all getting along in the outer world. To-day is Thanksgiving day, or the day to giv thanks, as you like it. One of my goody-goody little Christian friends told me he did not think I had anybody or anything to be thankful to or for. I would like to inform him, with some others, of some things I am thankful for. First, then, I am thankful I am alive in this enlightened age, and able to do my little part in banishing superstition and ignorance. I am often compelled to believe the hideous, unjust, and cruel old church is fast taking a back seat. When prejudice is no more, bigotry overcome, fear unknown, vested interest all lost, tradition forgotten, habit turned on a more improved and enlightened path, then the bottom of Christianity will hav fallen clean out, but until then she will keep lingering along, for these are all the friends of the church. The better future can and will do without all these. I am thankful that I had a mother, and still hav, that forbid my schoolmaster to fill my young head full of the creeds of the rotten Church of England. I am thankful that I was raised in a parish where the bigotry of the vicar was so great that it gave me the first dislike against the Christian church. I am thankful that such men as Bruno and Seaver hav lived, and that Ingersoll and John Peck still liv. I am thankful that I hav always been allowed to think for myself, and never been bound to any priest or public pauper. I am thankful that I came to this country where I hav had a better chance to study the religions of different nations, especially the Irish. I am thankful that neither the Catholics or Protestants are as yet running this great country. I am thankful that THE TRUTH SEEKER, and other Liberal papers, are getting in their work all over the states, circulating the truth as it really is found out to be up to date. I am thankful to know the whole world is growing wiser and better. Look at Italy on the other side, and Mexico on this side of the water. I am thankful to know it is the philosophers, the scientists, and the common critics—like myself—that the priesthood are in fear of. I am thankful to know that the fall of man was no fall at all, and that the salvation plan of saving men from that fall has no right to stay with us another day longer. I am thankful for many other things which would take up too much of your valuable space to mention now. Lastly, but not least, I am thankful to yourself and staff, Mr. Editor, and to Mr. Heston. I am thankful for the consolation that, although I may freeze in this world, I shall probably be kept eternally warm in the next—what a consolation!

I must tell you there has not been a circus here all summer, but I hav had mine, all the same, with the Protestants and the Catholics. Between the two of them I hav some tolerably good shows. I hav only to say Bruno to one and Blair to the other and all the fat is in the fire—I do not mean hell-fire. We had a very popular man here awhile ago by the name of Crafts. I believe he is a friend of Mr. Blair's. He tried to talk of Mr. Blair, but ran it into a very good temperance lecture. He took up a collection of $2.90. I believe he was working his way back to New York state, so look out for him. I advertised him all I could with a couple of hundred American Sentinels. We had Le Roy here this summer—the man that goes up in a balloon and comes down in a parachute. I thought while watching him, if these very good Christians could only go to heaven that way, how nice it would be! It's that dying part that catches them.

Even those whose wings sprout here below,
When it is time to go, say, no.

I hav every reason to believe the time is not far off when we shall be able to follow the example of some other large cities and start a Secular club or union. And, what is more, be able to maintain one or two Secular nurses, which I think no Secular organization should be without. These sky-pilots and Bible-pounders getting hold of the dead bodies of good Liberals and Freethinkers and setting them up as horrible examples, is about played out. I hav arranged already that these hell-fire pedlers shall not go ranting over me when I am dead. I am not dead yet. You may hear from me again some day.

I had a lady friend ask me awhile ago how I could take away from her the God that has brought her through so many trials and tribulations. I replied by asking how I could recognize a God that would giv her so many trials and tribulations, knowing by her every-day life she was not deserving of them. If there is a just God that controls this universe, it is about time he got a move on him and straightened things up a bit.

I go and hear the Methodist preacher sometimes, and every time I do he is sure to talk about the good country over the border. He means Canada. He comes from there. It's a pity that he will not go there again, and roll up his sleeves and plow and be a producer. It is far more honorable to be a producer than a preacher.

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty, W. G. MORGAN.

WILKESBARRE, PA., March 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: A month or so ago I offered some objections to an article of Mr. J. A. Tuttle's on the subject of science, as he seems to understand it, and not seeing it in print, supposed it had found its way into your waste-basket, and concluded that the Editor had enough of my objections and his theories, but in the last issue I am surprised to find another installment of Mr. Tuttle in which my name is brought forward, and the old subject revamped, which reminded me forcibly of the habits of some animals who chew their cuds. Now I submit, Mr. Editor, that if I am to be disturbed in this way semi-occasionally, you should not let my labored efforts escape the attention of your printer, else I shall never be able to compete with Mr. Tuttle in the effort to enlighten your patient readers—that is, if they need it as much as we do. For while Mr. Tuttle addresses me as an ignoramus on the subject of gravitation, attraction, etc., which he denies, I may say I hav an equally exalted opinion of his accomplishments in that line, so you see we are quits on that score.

In his outset he stated that he never, since a boy, had any faith in science, but it seems now that he meant, and should hav stated, that he had no faith in theories. My friend makes no distinction between theories and facts. I hav stated, what everybody should know who pretends to know anything, that science is ascertained facts. It is knowledge and demonstrable truth. When a large number of facts all seem to point in a certain direction, they lead to the suggestion of a hypothesis or theory, and as many more facts as can be collected which point in the same direction are used to substantiate the given theory or hypothesis, which in time lead to a demonstration, or the reverse, as the case may be. It requires years—tens, hundreds, or thousands of them—to demonstrate or explode some theories, but no scientific mind will confuse this fact with what he knows to be a demonstrable theory.

If the old notions about the Gulf Stream hav been erroneous, as Mr. Tuttle says, that would not upset the science of mathematics; it could not vitiate any other established truth. Suppose the Gulf Stream is not caused by subterranean heat, as was supposed, would that disturb our faith in the relations of a right-angled triangle, or the demonstrated truths of trigonometry?

Mr. Tuttle seems to make no distinction between apparent facts and ascertained facts. The apparent facts are what make theories, but the real facts are what make science. The apparent facts giv way when the real facts come to be demonstrated truths. The apparent fact makes the sun go around our ear h, but the real, ascertained truth is that we revolve to produce the result. So the apparent fact would suggest weight as an inherent property of matter, but the real truth lies in the law of attraction, which makes matter heavier in proportion as it is contiguous to other matter, with which it may be magnetically related. Mr. Tuttle insists that the apparent weight of matter is the real fact of nature and the true one. I insist that he is as much in error in this as if he were to say the sun goes around us every day. And I hav tried to force this into his mind by stating the well-known fact that the same piece of matter, in different relations to the earth, will hav different weights, in a vacuum. I think this ought to be clear to the comprehension of anyone with the least pretensions to a knowledge of science. If, therefore, a ball of matter is placed between four other balls of equal densities and distances, and the laws of attraction and gravitation suspended, as would be if placed in space as the planets are, the balls would maintain their relativ positions, if not disturbed by outside attractions, etc.

Mr. Tuttle ought to be a good Catholic, as he is preaching the same doctrins which priestcraft has preached and is preaching to this day in relation to science. He says in his last paragraph that it was to establish such pretended facts in science (as the Gulf Stream) that Giordano Bruno was chained to the stake and burnt to death, and Galileo was compelled to recant or share his fate. Indeed! Then Bruno and Galileo taught no truth, only theory, and of course deserved their fate. What a Jesuitical fling! What ignorance of what they did teach it discloses. And of course they had no right to teach error, however honestly believed, as the church, which is and always was infallible, has never taught any errors, notwithstanding that the words of Bruno and the telescope of Galileo hav proved that the church for centuries taught scarcely anything else but errors.

Mr. Tuttle, you talk as if you had received your early education in a Catholic school, and as if your youthful mind had been poisoned against scientific truth, and I know how hard it is in after life to overcome the teachings and prejudices of boyhood days. It is like attempting to replace new stones in the foundation of an old building which was originally laid on a bank of sand. When we begin to bore and wiggle to get out some of the old stuff, we are in danger of tumbling the whole structure to the ground in a mass.

"Established facts in science, forsooth!" says Tuttle, as if science had no such facts.

Mr. Tuttle says he did not propose to wrangle on any subject but Spiritism with Mr. Perry. He wants me to explain Spiritual phenomena, but admitted in the start that he would not believe his own senses if he were brought into contact with phenomena. Now, in reply, I say just what I said months ago. If a man will not rely on his own senses to discover truth and error on Spiritism or any other phenomena, he is not worth entertaining with an argument, for such a man admits in the outset that he is unqualified to tackle the subject. Now, this reason should be good for any fair-minded man, so why chew the old cud? I hav no time to write for Mr. Tuttle's amusement, as I know, from what he has said and admitted, that he is an incurable patient, and I do not want to waste my time and medicin. His mental system seems to me so clogged up with the prejudices of his youth, and the new-fangled notions about science, that much of it reminds one of the famous philosophy of the "hollow globe" or "Sims'es hole." The unfortunate thing about it was that Sims, in undertaking to demonstrate his theory, made a scow and, in attempting to plunge into the north polar region, must hav been drawn into the current of the central river, which he contended ran through from pole to pole, and was lost. And there are cranky people, who were advocates of his philosophy, still living who are expecting to find the fragments of the old craft floating about upon the bosom of the southern ocean.

Mr. Tuttle wants Mr. Perry to say "whether a spirit is an organic and personal individuality, independent of physical matter, or an inorganic and universal property of physical matter, before he addresses Mr. Tuttle any further on the subject."

My dear sir, I am an Agnostic on that subject, but I will giv you my opinion. A spirit must be an organic personal individuality, and therefore not independent of physical matter, at least, so far as its corporal body is organic. The universal spirit, which pervades all, and may, no doubt, be the cause of all forms, and which exists in all forms of organic as well as inorganic material, may be the germ, or essence, of the organic spirit, and, at the same time, pervade the body of a spirit. A spirit, or man, is said to be composed of an outside body—organic—an inside body called a spiritual body, similar to the outside form, an inner soul related to his spirit body, each in degree more refined than the other, and farther removed from inorganic matter, yet sufficiently closely related to inorganic matter, such as beef and potatoes, etc., to be able to extract therefrom, by the processes of digestion and assimilation, all the elements required to build up and sustain the personality. My opinion is, therefore (based on the above hypothesis), that, no matter how refined a spirit or soul may be, it will never be entirely divested of matter. I think that, in the general sense, spirit, that is the soul of nature, is co-related and co-existent, never was and never will be less than the most refined substance. Everything must hav substance. There is, therefore, something everywhere, and nothing nowhere. Something, from the very nature of things, must exist and must hav had existence always—could never hav been created from nothing, and therefore can never be annihilated, or turned into nothing.

A spirit, therefore, is organic, and not being able to become divested from organization, will never become diffusible like vapor or gas. Unless, as the Theosophists assert, at a certain point, or stage, of refinement, it enters Nirvana and is absorbed into God, the original source. Well, if so, I shall be content to dwell within the confines of material organization during the probable ages of its development and progress.

All this theorizing, however, will not hav any bearing one way or the other, as regards the phenomena of Spiritism. When I hold up a slate in mid-day and get a communication in writing thereon, giving me intelligence characteristic of the spirit whom I hav known, it is much easier for me to believe it than to rack my brains in search of some unreasonable theory to explode the truth of spirit life.

Yours truly, J. R. PERRY.

WHEELING. W. VA., Jan. 4, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of December 21st appears an article headed, "To Any Spiritualist," from the ready pen of Brother Peck. As I am a Spiritualist, I hav as good a right to answer as anybody. I admire Brother Peck's article very much for its broadness and candor. It contains some queries beyond the power of mortal man to answer. I cannot describe a soul. I never saw one. I never saw a principle. I never saw a natural law. I do not pretend to know how we got here, but we may theorize, exchange ideas, and if we can gain any new ones, they may prove useful to us. I can say with millions of others that I hav all the evidence of a continuation of life that I wish. I am not hunting for evidence. I do not simply believe, I know there is something that survives the grosser body. Knowing this, I do not care what it is called, whether it is soul, mind, or life principle. Brother Peck calls it a thing. It is certainly something; it must be material, and I choose to call it the ego, the me, the man, or life principle. I believe this principle has always existed; and that the life which animates my body this evening has always been an entity. It is claimed that the iron of the mountain is composed of globules, and that each globule retains its identity through all the various changes in being made into the finest steel. Undoubtedly so with air and water. If we could mark a globule of water when it falls, and follow it into old ocean, we would no doubt find it would retain its identity. I accept the Epicurean philosophy. I believe what is the me now, existed away back in the atom, and has traveled through all the lower gradations up to where it is this evening. I cannot believe that life was ever made. I believe this ego, the me, has two coverings, a fine one and a coarser one, as the hickory nut has, and no doubt dwells within. I believe the life is transmitted by the father, the female being the receptacle, as mother earth is the receptacle for grain, flowers, seeds, etc. I believe when the life reaches the female egg—so to speak—then immediately commences the formation of the finer and coarser bodies. The life principle always takes upon itself a body suitable to its condition, and state of development. I, being a Spiritualist, claim that life was there first, and that the body is the result of life instead of life being the result of organization. The coverings of the soul seem to me to be but machines, through which the ego manifests itself. The trouble with idiots and lunatics is, in the case of the former, it has a badly constructed machine to show through, but the ego is there just the same. The lunatic's machine has become injured, deranged, bursted in some way. A locomotiv may become disabled and stop, while the steam is there still. The babe's body contains the ego, or soul, but its machine is not sufficiently developed. As the soul unfolds, the body develops. The rosebud contains the full-blown rose, but it is not developed. True, this immortal principle was never created, never began, hence will no doubt always exist. Brother Peck asks: "Where is the thing, or soul, or immortal part to-day, which unborn beings are to receive? Cannot somebody show me one?" I cannot show Brother Peck a soul, neither do I know where souls come from. But I am going to venture to giv an opinion—which I never read, or heard from anybody—and if Brother Peck and others see fit to laugh, it matters not to me. As I said, I do not believe that life was ever made, ever created, but it always existed, having traveled up through the mineral, the vegetable, the lower order of animals, and crops out in man, he being the most highly developed animal. I believe the life within my body was once in a less evolved condition, suitable to inhabit the organization of a monkey, dog, ox, raccoon, or reptil; but man was never any of these, for the life had not as yet sufficiently unfolded to inhabit the organization of a man. The dog is dead, we say, but where is the life which animated his body a short time ago? Is it annihilated? I think not. Has it lost its identity? I cannot believe it has. I would rather think it capable of selecting a higher organization, that it may receive still further unfoldment. This seems to me in harmony with progression's law. A man is dead, we also say. There is the body all intact, but it does not move. What is the matter? Ah! the power which moved it has departed. There is the brain, but the intelligence which showed through it is not there. The eyes do not see. They never did see. They were the windows through which the man looked, and he being gone, there is no one to look through them. Brother Peck was kicked by a horse, and became insensible. The house he lived in was damaged, but not so badly but he could still remain there, though so deranged he could not giv sign. The house he and his family reside in may be damaged some, yet they could remain in it, but if a cyclone should carry the roof off, they would no doubt get out; and precisely so John Peck would move out the instant his head was cut off; and, no doubt, John Peck would hav been aware of the transition. He would be John Peck, minus the outer covering. The hickory nut is a nut just the same, and is recognized as such, after it has shed the outer covering. Brother Peck asks, "If there was no relation between me and this thing, or soul, before I was born, what relation will there be after I am dead?" I claim that the ego, John Peck, is the soul, and the same always hav been one and the same entity, but not always known and identified as John Peck; this entity, thing, or soul, having been in a less evolved condition, never before fitted to occupy as fine an organization, with as fine a brain to manifest itself through, as the organization known as John Peck. When the law of dissolution does its work, and John Peck, with his finer body—a fac simile of the grosser one—moves out, the grosser body and brain may rot, and go to their original elements, and it will not change the likes and dislikes, the morals, intellectuality, or dignity, of John Peck immediately. John Peck—whether in the grosser body or out—will change only by the slow process of growth and unfoldment. As to how we hav reached our present state, we can only theorize. I believe the very air to teem with life, entities if you please, and that they are attracted to the male, and inhaled. Man is positiv, the female negativ, the entities also negativ; hence, repelled by the female, they are attracted by the male. The monad, a live entity, is found to exist in the male sperm; and, as it could not hav been created, made out of nothing, it must hav existed before, and I shall hold to the above theory until some one points out one more clear. That Brother Peck has never seen, heard, felt, or smelt a soul, is no evidence that such a thing does not exist. He has brains, but has never seen, felt, or tasted them. He cannot see the air, electricity, or magnetism. He cannot see the power which draws the ponderous trains across the continent, or the power which drives the steamer over the rough billows of old ocean. The unseen power is always the most powerful. The soul, the life principle, the me, or thing, as Brother Peck calls it, has, as I view it, always been an entity, held so by natural law, propelled through all the various changes, from the atom, through all the lower gradations up to the genus homo, by a progressiv law, and the law which has brought John Peck through all the changes of the past will take him safely through the transition called death, and will hold him a entity, in all futurity, else it is not an eternal law. Let us hear from you, Brother Peck. J. ALLEN NOE.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Which Loved Best.

"I love you, mother," said little John,
And forgetting his work his cap went on;
And he was off to the garden swing,
And left her ths water and wood to bring.

"I love you, mother," said rosy Nell,
"I love you more than tongue can tell;"
But she teases and pouts and scolds all day,
Till mother rejoices when she goes out to play.

"I love you, mother," said little Fan,
"To-day I'll help you all I can;
How glad I am that school don't keep,"
So she rocks the babe till it's fast asleep.

Then stepping softly she fetched the broom,
And swept the floor and tidied the room;
Busy and happy all day was she,
Helpful and happy as a child could be.

"I love you, mother," again they said,
Three little children, going to bed;
How do you think that mother guessed
Which of them really loved her best?

Morality.

I will offer a few prefatory remarks before I attempt to write an essay on morality, which was requested in THE TRUTH SEEKER of October 1, 1889. The number containing the conditions has been sent off on missionary work, and I do not remember just what the conditions were. I am a boy, and hav received the most of my education at home, as we hav been boycotted in the way of a school, Christians not wanting to send with the children of an Infidel. But my papa is sending my sister Florence to college, and when she finishes we will hav a teacher at home.

Morality is derived from the Latin mo. Relating to the conduct of men toward each other, subject to the moral law, reasoning or instructing with regard to vice or virtue, virtuous, just, honest, the doctrin or practice of the duties of life. The above definitions are some of the meanings as given by Reid's English Dictionary. I think the word contains more import than any other word in the English language. Several nations are called civilized, but there is not a moral nation on the globe, and but few of the names of the human family that hav come down to us through history can be called virtuous—of course I except women, for they hav ever excelled men in all goodness. I will mention a few names that occur to me—Cincinnatus and Cicero, of Rome; Aristotle and Socrates, of Greece. The latter, considering the state of the world, was the greatest man I ever read of. He was moral and honest and died for the search of truth. Our modern Bruno and Servetus will rank with him. Of course I consider Robert G. Ingersoll the greatest man now living, but he has had many advantages those mentioned before did not. Morality and virtue are natura. qualities and dictates of the human senses, and vice is mainly acquired—the effect of art or a delusion of our understandings. It is said by some, we are indebted to certain superstitious creeds and dogmas for morality. All the principal virtues of the human character are founded in the feelings, dictates, and affections of our nature. A true sense of humanity, gratitude, good-fellowship, and a general sense of right and wrong, are all to be found incorporated in the human animal by the fiat of nature. Education may cultivate and expand the good and useful qualities of our nature, but it never can add one essential qualification that is not founded in the natural dictates, affections, and feelings of the human nature.

The word morality includes all the good that the human family owe to everything. Take the simple children of nature as they were first discovered by Columbus in Hispaniola; on the Friendly islands by Captain Cook; and, in a degree, the more polished nativs of Mexico, when first invaded by their ferocious and greedy foes—they were virtuous and humane until they were corrupted and provoked to acts of retaliation and self-protection. Roger Williams, when banished by the superstitious, dogmatizing, creeds-loving, civilized Puritans, found a friend in the person of Miontonomah, the simple child of nature. All his good acts are comprised in the word morality, and not one of the acts of Williams's persecutors can be covered by that word. I had always placed a higher estimate on civility, until my attention was called to the word morality, having always heard it preached that the moral man was in a very dangerous condition. Let man go abroad with just principles, and what is he? An exhaustless fountain in a vast desert; a glorious sun shining ever, dispelling every vestige of darkness. There is love animating his heart—sympathy breathing in every tone. Tears of pity—dewdrops of the soul—gather in his eye and gush impetuously down his cheek. A good man is abroad and the world knows and feels it. Beneath his smiles lurk no degrading passions. Within his heart there slumbers no guile. He is not exalted in moral pride. He accords to others what he asks for himself. He stands throned on what he thinks is truth; his fortress is wisdom, and his dominion the world. Always upright, moral, and virtuous, kind and sympathizing; always attached to just principles and actuated by the same, he is above the meanness of wanting another to suffer for his crimes. Morality, if thou hadst thy due, how great wouldst thou be!

Coaling, Ala. J. HAROLD WARD.

Correspondence.

REBER CITY, March 2, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav never written to the Corner before. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a long time. I hav read the Children's Corner quite a bit and am very much interested in it. In January we had spring weather and the roads were nice and dry, but now there is good sleighing. I think I hav written enough for this time. I remain, Your Liberal friend,

ELIZABETH LINDSAY.

REVERE, MASS., March 17, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav just had my eighth birthday, and mamma let me hav a tea party. I invited four of my friends to tea. I had a birthday cake. We played games, and we all had a nice time. I had a few presents, and one was a friendship ring. I am going to copy a piece which you may think suitable for the paper. I remain,

Your friend, MABEL WASHBURN.

ARMSTRONG, IA., Jan. 30, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: We hav had fine weather so far this winter for Iowa, but it has been melting to-day. My mother is just recovering from an attack of La Grippe. Two men hav died here lately; they had both been good Christians all their lives. One died of paralysis and the other of dropsy. One had suffered three months before he died. Part of the time he had to sit before an open window and could hardly get his breath, while his body was nearly freezing. Why did not his great God whom he worshiped all his life relieve him of his suffering?

We hav a lyceum at our school-house this winter. The first question of debate was, "Resolved, that the world is a plane." The negativ side beat. And the second was the "Woman's suffrage question." The affirmativ side beat. The next lyceum will be tomorrow night. The lyceum is the amusing thing going on for the young folks. I would like to hear from our friends Penmans through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ETHEL BURT.

CLEARFIELD, KAN., Jan. 31, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, but this is my first attempt to write for the Corner.

I am thirteen years of age, and I hav two brothers and four sisters. My two eldest sisters are teaching school.

Ever since Mr. Remsburg lectured in our school-house, and stopped at our house, the school-children hav been calling us little Infidels.

Last summer when my little sister Alma was going to Sunday-school her teacher offered a Bible as a prize to the one in her class that would hav learned and repeated the most texts by the end of that quarter. Alma concluded to try for it merely for the honor and to show them what a little Infidel could learn, as she did not care for the Bible. She probably would hav won the prize had not a little Christian girl cheated by repeating all the texts she had said before. This happened on the very last day of the quarter. The Bible was given to that little girl.

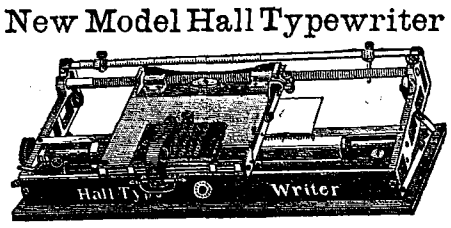
Hoping that this letter will not find its way to the waste-basket, I remain,

Your Freethinker friend,

IDA B. E. REED.

NORWEGIAN CONSULATE,
SALONIOA, TURKEY, Jan. 30, 1890.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: I ought to hav answered your letter long ago, only we hav had such a house of sickness, for more than four months, that mamma and I hav hardly written to any of our friends. First of all we got the "Dainque" and were all down with it, and we were no sooner well than we got the influenza, and now my brother Henry and my sister Lily hav it. Father and mother hav both had it, but they are almost well now.



It is such a long time since I hav had a letter from Uncle Fisk that we all began to think he must be ill, but, the other day, mother received one from him, saying that he had been ill with influenza, but that he was better.

The weather is so nasty and unhealthy just now; we hav not had any rain for ever so long. I think we hav had only two small showers of rain in seven months. All the gardens are dried up and the vegetables are becoming dearer. Father says he is afraid all the sheep and lambs will die if this kind of weather goes on, as the folks never prepare for a case of this kind. Business is very bad, and we are very unsettled. We do not go to school any more, so mother teaches us at home. If mother had not so many other things to attend to, we would learn much better at home, as the school we used to go to was not such a very good one. They did not think it was so very important that we should learn grammar and geography, and we did not learn much except music, singing, and drawing, but mother says she does not think much of that kind of teaching. I am very fond of music and drawing. I like them better than anything else.

I must say good-bye now, dear Miss Wixon, and hoping you will forgiv me for not having written for so long, with much love, believe me, Ever yours affectionately,

DAISY SUTER.

New Model Hall Typewriter

The Best Standard Typewriter in the World.
Cheap, Portable, No Ink Ribbon, Interchangeable Type in all Languages, Easiest to learn and rapid as any. Agents wanted everywhere.
WARRANTED AS REPRESENTED. Address
National Typewriter Co.,
10 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. P. O. box 5159.
Send for catalog and specimens of work.

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price, 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.
tf

ANTICHRIST.

PROVING conclusivly that there was no Christ crucified under Pontius Pilate, but that the real Jesus, the illegitimate son of Mary by Joseph Pandera, was stoned and hanged for sorcery about 75 years B.C. Cloth, 446 pages, with full Index. Price, $1.50. Former price, $2.00. For sale at this office.

J. E. Remsburg's Works.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbatic Idea; The Jewish Sabbath; The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; The Sabbath during the Middle Ages; The Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.00.

Thomas Paine. The Apostle of Religious and Political Liberty. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason" are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith, Protestant Intolerance, Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz. 40 cts.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Fathers of Our Republic, Paine, Jefferson, Washington, Franklin. A lecture delivered before the Tenth Annual Congress of the American Secular Union, in Chickering Hall, New York, November 13, 1886. 15 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Agents for the Truth Seeker.

CALIFORNIA.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco, Cal.
Dr. J. L. York, San Jose, Cal.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 508 Kearny st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 313 Grant ave., San Francisco.

CANADA.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
W. B. Cooke, 170 1-2 Yonge st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
Knowles, Cor. George and Granville st., Halifax, N. S.

COLORADO.
J. G. Jenkins, 400 Arapahoe st., Denver.

FLORIDA.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

IDAHO.
A. Erwin, Murray.

ILLINOIS.
Post-office News Co., 108 Adams st., Chicago.
E. A. Stevens, 558 West Madison st., Room 1, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 302 State street, and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 56 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

INDIANA.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
T. P. Monroe, postmaster, Dunkirk.

LOUISIANA.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Joseph Marsh, Northampton.
Johnson Bro's 5 N. Main st., Fall River.

MICHIGAN.
A. Atwood, Eaton Rapids.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, 138 S. Division St., Grand Rapids.
Swan & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Horace Haynes, Leslie.

MISSOURI.
Phillip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Lang & Co., 709 Olive st., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Eaton & Smith, 1234 O st., Lincoln.

NEW YORK.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
M. B. Edinger, 1243 Third ave., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, cor. Fulton and Nassau st., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King. 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.

OHIO.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior street, Cleveland.
Van Epps & Co., 259 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Emory P. Robinson, Sydney.

OREGON.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
C. H. Wilcox, Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 732 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 1106 Leopard st., Phila.
W. F. Schade, 3,706 Butler street, Pittsburgh.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.

TENNESSEE.
Wm. B. Fisher, 331 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

TEXAS.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
H. S. Kratz, 306 Houston st., Fort Worth.

UTAH.
James Ashman, Salt Lake City.
W. F. Reybould, Salt Lake City.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
W. Wedeken, Montesano.

ENGLAND.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet street London.
Progressiv Pub. Co., 28 Stonecutter st., London, E. C.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

AUSTRALIA.
Mrs. J. Hadfield, Park st., Sydney, N.S.W.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N. S. W.

NEW ZEALAND.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 333pp., silk cloth, $3.

Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.

Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid, for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
tf

Indispensable to AUTHORS and BUSINESS MEN.

Combines the simplicity of the Hektograph without its great disadvantages, viz., waste, washing, etc.

"THE SIMPLEX."

The Simplest and Cheapest Reliable Duplicator extant.

150 copies from one original writing (original written with any ordinary pen).
No washing, no inking roller, no stencil, no dotted lines.
The only really satisfactory process for duplicating any writing, music, drawing, typewriting, etc.
☞ Special sizes: Note, $4.50; Letter, $6 50; Cap, $7.50. Cash with order.
Circulars and samples of work mailed on application.
T. BENSINGER and CO., 5 Dey st., New York.
Headquarters for manifolding devices.

Giordano Bruno.

His Life, Works, Worth, Martyrdom, Portrait, and Monument.

With a complete list of the American subscribers to the fund for the erection of the monument.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, THOMAS DAVIDSON,
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, KARL BLIND,
LYDIA R. CHASE.

Single copies 15 cents; ten copies for a dollar.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ROMANISM,

OR

DANGER AHEAD.

The Reason Why a Good Roman Catholic Cannot be a Good Citizen of this Republic.

By A. J. GROVER.

Price, paper, 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

NOW READY.

A VOLUME OF THE WRITINGS OF

HORACE SEAVER.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume comprises some of the ablest and best editorials written by Mr. Seaver during the past forty-five years. It is neatly printed on cream-white paper, bound in cloth, and contains a fine likeness of the venerable editor of the Investigator. Every Liberal should hav this book in his home. It is now ready for delivery.

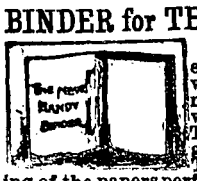
Price, $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.



It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BINDER for THE TRUTH SEEKER

For the benefit of our readers who preserve their papers we offer a new style of binder, made for the purpose, and with the heading of THE TRUTH SEEKER printed in gold letters on the outside. This binder allows the opening of the papers perfectly flat. It also allows the taking out and replacing of one or more papers from any part of the file without disturbing the other parts.

Sent by mail, postpaid, for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
tf 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

FREETHOUGHT

IS IT

DESTRUCTIVE OR CONSTRUCTIVE?

A SYMPOSIUM

BY

COL. R. G. INGERSOLL, R. B. WESTBROOK, CAPT. R. C. ADAMS,
E. B. FOOTE, JR., SALADIN (W. Stewart Ross), L. K. WASHBURN,
H. O. PENTECOST, GEO. E. MACDONALD, SUSAN H. WIXON,
E. C. WALKER, SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, F. M. HOLLAND,
LUCY N. COLMAN, PARKER PILLSBURY, MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL,
C. B. REYNOLDS, CHARLES WATTS, J. H. BURNHAM,
W. F. JAMIESON, THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.

SUBJECTS OF PAPERS:

Is there an Affirmative, Positive, Constructive side to Freethought?
If not, the reason why?
If there be, in what, in your opinion, does it consist, and in what should it consist?

PRICE 25 CENTS.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Correspondence Wanted.

A gentleman of fifty-six years of age, of healthy and robust constitution, thoroughly imbued with Freethought principles, wishes to correspond with a lady of forty to fifty years of age with a view to matrimony. She must be a strictly Freethought advocate in her views.

DAVID L. SWAN, Goshen, Utah.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

BIBLE INQUIRER;

OR,

A Key to Bible Investigation.

Containing 148 Propositions
With References to the most Plain and Striking Self-Contradictions of the so-called Inspired Scriptures.

BY A. JACOBSON.

Third edition, carefully revised and enlarged.

Every Liberal needs a copy for ready reference. As a pamphlet to loan to Christian friends, it is the most effectiv Iconoclast ever published.

Price only 25 cents.

THE

CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:

THEIR

Crimes and Persecutions.

8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

ON THE WORD GOD.

By Milton Woolley, M.D., Author of "Hebrew Mythology," "The Career of Jesus Christ."

The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. —[Ps. xiv, 1.

Children and fools speak the truth.—[Old Saw.

Paper, 12mo, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

GIRARD'S WILL

AND

Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.
rice $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE

MARTYRDOM OF MAN.

A COMPENDIUM OF UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

By WINWOOD READE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill.—[Literary World.

You turn over his pages with a fascination similar to that experienced in reading Washington Irving.—[Inter-Ocean.

His history has a continuity, a rush, a carrying power, which reminds us strikingly of Gibbon.—[New Haven Palladium.

The sketch of early Egyptian history, in the first chapter, is a masterpiece of historical writing. He has a style that reminds us of Macaulay. —[Penn Monthly.

Eighth edition. Extra cloth, 12mo, 543pp., $1.75.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

The Reign of the Stoics.

THEIR

History, Religion, Philosophy, and Maxims of Self-Control, Self-Culture, Benevolence, and Justice.

With Citations of Authors Quoted from on Each Page.

BY FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.

Read the philosophers, and learn how to make life happy, seeking useful precepts and brave and noble words which may become deeds.—Seneca.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

This book shows that many Christians might learn much from these ancient heathen.—American Bookseller.

One of the most valuable helps for those who would understand the character of human progress in all ages.—National Quarterly Review.

The author has shown himself a diligent student, an ardent admirer, and a faithful interpreter, of some of the most remarkable monuments of ancient thinking.—New York Tribune.

Reading this book, we find the doctrins of the Stoics to be almost identical with the views held by the broadest and most enlightened minds of the present day.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Lecky says of Marcus Aurelius: "The purest and gentlest spirit of all the pagan world." Merivale says: "Of all the line the noblest and dearest." Taine says: "The noblest soul that ever lived." John Stuart Mill says: "He preserved through life not only the most unblemished justice, but the tenderest heart."

Extra Cloth, 12mo, 248 pp., $1.25.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Candle from Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

Miss Wixon's Works.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300pp., $1.50.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 333pp., $1.25.

Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-Book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

SOCIAL WEALTH,

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in the Acquirement and Apportionment.

By J. K. INGALLS.

Price, Cloth, - - $1.00.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1890.

Edited by CHARLES WATTS.

CONTENTS.

Agnosticism and Immortality.....Samuel Laing
A Sonnet.....Joseph Ellis
Who Was Moses?..H. J. Hardwicke, M.D., F.R.C.S.
The Comfort of Agnosticism.....E. Lynn Linton.
Are Miracles Credible?...Constance C. W. Naden.
The Contest Between Agnosticism and Theology, John Wilson, M.A.
Above: A Poem.....W. Stewart Ross.
The Evolution of the Agnostic Idea, R. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.
The New Fatalism.....B. Russell.
Descartes's Proof of the Existence of a God, F. J. Gould.
A Poem.....W. B. McTaggart.
The Free Expression of Opinions..G. F. Underhill.
Fragments.....William Maccall

Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

WHAT KIND OF A MAN CLARK BRADEN IS.

BY B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.
PRICE, TEN CENTS.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll

IN THE

TRIAL OF C. B. REYNOLS

FOR

"BLASPHEMY,"

At Morristown, New Jersey.

Stenographically reported, and revised by the author.

Handsome 8vo, 86 pp., beautiful type, fine paper, Price, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 25 cents, or $2 per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life. Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

Stray Scraps.

In expatiating on "Probation after Death," Jo Cook, in his Boston Monday lecture, February 3d, said, "It never is safe for any man to die in his sins." Is it safe, Mr. Cook, for any man to liv in his sins? What business has any man to hav sins at all? Why not get rid of them, and let Christ's blood alone?

Mrs. Julia A. Harris died suddenly in Tremont Temple, January 31st, while conducting a prayer service. The large hall was completely filled with worshipers. Had she been lecturing on Freethought, Christian charity would hav set it down as a "judgment of God!" As it was, "The master called her home in the harness."

Rev. Geo. A. Gordon discoursed upon "The Sermon on the Mount," Sunday, February 2d, at the Old South church, Boston. One would infer by his minute descriptions that he was present sitting on a reserved front seat. He dilated on "his piercing eye Jesus's], the sea of upturned faces" of his audience, "the sinner's troubled conscience as Jesus portrayed the divine beatitudes," etc. In style it resembled Talmage, bereft of the latter's slang. What right had this man to depict a scene he must hav known never occurred as he represented! If Jesus sat on the mount (Matt. v, 1, 2), how could he hav stood in the plain (Luke vi, 17, 20)? The sermon was reported in full, and a sample of inconsistencies and impossibilities.

In the late discussion on the Presbyterian creed revision in New York, Dr. Vincent aid the Confession of Faith to many of the church-members was unknown—the church was ahead of the confession—it was not adapted to modern times—the doctrin that men and angels were preordained to everlasting death he repudiated. He admitted that God had a right to make a Hindoo or a Tartar of him, but denied that he had any right of arbitrary power to condemn him to eternal torments in hell. That is right, doctor, but for teaching this very truth from the platform thirty-seven years ago, a cleric of your own denomination said I ought to be hanged—and he would hav hanged me, had he had the power. The world does move. In conclusion, Dr. Vincent asked: "Why should we accept the works of Calvin? To perpetuate his name simply? Who was he? Was he crucified for us? Was it in him we were baptized?" Poor man! could you liv another fifty years you would then be as ashamed of your Jesus, crucifixion, baptism, and salvation, as you are now of Calvin's reprobation, infant damnation, heathen damnation, etc. ELI A E. GIBSON.

Barre, Feb. 7, 1890.

Obituary.

Mrs. Louisa Geddes departed this life Tuesday, March 18, 1890, aged fifty-three years, eleven months, and twenty-one days.

Of her family, one son, and her husband, whose constant helpmate and companion she has been for nearly thirty-four years, survive her.

She was of a quiet, philosophic, and undemonstrativ and retiring disposition, and though through life in fairly comfortable circumstances, she was an ever busy, industrious woman, joining her hands with her heart in all the efforts of her husband in facing and performing the responsibilities and duties of life. Their home by acquaintances most intimate was reputed to be a veritable heaven on earth to themselvs and to those who had the pleasure of its hospitality.

She and her husband and the son she has left proudly bore the title of Infidels. In the long journey of life, though environed by the influences of New England Puritanism, Mr. and Mrs. Geddes, whether in the East, or in the West communities where the home was, "lived above the fog in public duty and private thinking."

They were both philosophers, and each found the highest ideal of life in the other and in the mutual work they could do for others. Her sincere desire was to see the power and benefit of knowledge extended, and the evils of the superstition and bigotry arising from ignorance destroyed. She held death to be as much in the order of great nature, and as necessary, as life, and though not a believer in any form or faith of theology, or the God of orthodoxy, or its heaven or its opposit, she expressed her thoughts of death and passed to it without fear, her features in death wearing as calm an expression as ever did those of the most devout and prayerful Christian.

The writer was called to officiate at the funeral, which was very largely attended by people of diversified opinions. They listened very attentivly and respectfully to some ideas that were new on the problem of life and the nature of death, its naturalness, and the great hope in a future with which a grand human life inspires us. They undoubtedly returned to their homes thinking that though the services were philosophic and unceremonious, a calm dignity and profound affection surged through the hearts of the mourners, and that the teachings of the discourse were calculated to induce every thoughtful person to liv with a noble purpose, hav a high object in life, help the unfortunate, weak, and oppressed; and that he or she who does this has no cause to fear death, and the mourner no occasion to be other than resigned.

Chicago, Ill. J. H. RANDALL.

THE TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL.
Price, 25 Cents.

OUR NEW 1890 FLOWER SEED OFFER.

A Magnificent Collection of FLOWER SEEDS 200 Varieties, FREE!

An Unparalleled Offer by an Old-Established and Reliable Publishing House! THE LADIES' WORLD is a mammoth 16-page, 64-column illustrated paper for ladies and the family circle. It is devoted to stories, poems, ladies' fancy work, artistic needlework, home decoration, housekeeping, fashions, hygiene, juvenile reading, etiquette, etc. To introduce this charming ladies' paper into 100,000 homes where it is not already taken, we now make the following colossal offer: Upon receipt of only 12 Cents in silver or stamps, we will send The Ladies' World for Three Months, and to each subscriber we will also send Free and postpaid, a large and magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds, two hundred varieties, including Pansies, Verbenas, Chrysanthemums, Asters, Phlox Drummondii, Balsam, Cypress Vine, Digitalis, Double Zinnia, Pinks, etc., etc. Remember, twelve cents pays for the paper three months and this entire magnificent collection of Choice Flower Seeds, put up by a first-class Seed House and warranted fresh and reliable. No lady can afford to miss this wonderful opportunity. We guarantee every subscriber many times the value of money sent, and will refund your money and make you a present of both seeds and paper if you are not entirely satisfied. Ours is an old-established and reliable publishing house, endorsed by all leading newspapers. Do not confound this offer with the catchpenny schemes of unscrupulous persons. Write to-day—don't put it off! Six subscriptions and six Seed Collections sent for 60 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER! To any lady answering this advertisement and naming the paper in which she saw it, we will send free, in addition to all the above, one package of the celebrated Ornamental Chilian Foliage Beet Seeds, one of the most beautiful foliage plants known, the leaves sometimes growing 3 feet long by 1 foot wide, in variegated colors. It is perfectly hardy, continuing an object of beauty long after Coleus and Canna have succumbed to frost. Address: S. H. MOORE & CO., 27 Park Place, New York.

SCIENCE VERSUS RELIGION,
OR, THE
Conflict between Reason and Superstition.
BY T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.
Price, 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.
MEN, WOMEN & GODS.
BY HELEN H. GARDENER,
Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.
Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.
The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.
Photo-engravings of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 40c.: with autograph, 50 cts.

ROME OR REASON
A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience.
By NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS.
A very critical analysis of both Protestantism and Catholicism, from the vantage-ground of an intimate personal experience with the two systems. It deals the most trenchant blows which pure logic is capable of inflicting.—[Critical Review.
Cloth, 12mo, $1.75.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SAKYA BUDDHA.
A Versified, Annotated Narrativ of his Life and Teachings.
With Citations from Buddha's "Path of Virtue."
BY E. D. ROOT.
I take pleasure in speaking in praise of this work.—Prof. J. M. Peebles.
The book has been introduced into Buddhist schools in Ceylon. The "Banner of Light," "Religio-Philosophical Journal," and many Spiritualist papers and lecturers hav spoken highly of the book.
Extra Cloth, 175 pp., $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

POINTERS:
A POCKET CYCLOPEDIA,
CONTAINING
Tables, Rules, Practical Hints, and Historical Sketches, for Farmers, Mechanics, Machinists, Merchants, Housekeepers, and the Public Generally, with Numerous Maps, Illustrations, and Diagrams
Illustrating some of the more Important Comparativ Statistics of the World.
More Information for Less Money than has ever been offered.
ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS
For $50 worth of "Cold Facts" boiled down in a Nutshell. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE
Cosmian Hymn Book,
A COLLECTION OF
Original and Selected Hymns
(Words and Music)
For Liberal and Ethical Societies, For Schools and the Home.
COMPILED BY
L. K. WASHBURN.
PRICE, . . . $1.50.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. BENNETT. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4,00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. BENNETT. 8vo., 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I. givs a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth hav worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II. describes fully all the religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, going fully into its merits. 949 pages. By D. M. BENNETT. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustiv work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. NEWMAN, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4.00; leather, $5.00; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams. Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and The Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco; gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred Writings of the world. By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.00;

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.
FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by its Fruits; Our Ideas of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism: Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A four days' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. BURGESS, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Paper, 50 cents. Cloth, 80 cents.

Underwood-Marples Debate. A four nights' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Rev. JOHN MARPLES. Fully reported. Paper, 35 cents; cloth, 60 cents.

MATERIALISM AND CRIME.
By B. F. UNDERWOOD.
Price, 5 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE
French Revolution
ITS CAUSES AND RESULTS.
By W. S. BELL.
Paper, 12mo, 25 cents.

MORTALITY OF THE SOUL.
IMMORTALITY OF ITS ELEMENTS.
By A. S. de Pellegrini.
Paper, - - 15 cents.

PHILOSOPHY of SPIRITUALISM
AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.
By F. R. Marvin, M.D.
Cloth, . . . 50 cents.

POCKET THEOLOGY.
By VOLTAIRE.
Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms.
Price, 25 cents.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY EXPOSED.
By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.
15 cents.

PRO AND CON OF Supernatural Religion.
Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?
By E. E. GUILD.
Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

PYRAMID OF GIZEH.
Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.
By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D.
Price, 15 cents.

QUESTION SETTLED.
BIBLICAL and MODERN SPIRITUALISM.
By MOSES HULL.
Price, 60 cents.

Rational Communism.
THE PRESENT AND FUTURE REPUBLIC OF NORTH AMERICA.
Advocates associate life and employment as a preventive of vice, crime, poverty, etc.
By A CAPITALIST.
Paper, 493pp., 50 cts.: clo., $1.

Relation of Witchcraft to Religion.
By A. C. LYALL.
Price, 10 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.
POPULATION QUESTION.
By Dr. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant.
25 cents.

TRUTH. A Poem. By E. N. Kingsley. 10 cents.

POVERTY: Its Cause and Cure.
How the Poor May Attain Comfort and Independence.
By M. G. H.
Price, . . 10 cents.

Religion of Inhumanity.
With a Glance at the Religion of Humanity.
BY FREDERIC HARRISON.
Price, 15 cents.

RELIGION:
The Gibraltar of the World, as Now Constituted.
By George T. Bondies.
With
Exceptions to the Character of Christ as a Gentleman.
By W. T. Purviance.
25 cents.

IMAGE BREAKER.
By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Six Lectures.
Decline of Faith.
Protestant Intolerance.
Washington an Unbeliever.
Jefferson an Unbeliever.
Paine and Wesley.
Christian Sabbath.
Each, 5 cents; bound, pap., 25 cents; per doz., 40.

SABBATH BREAKING.
By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Price, 25 cents.

St. Matthew Before the Court
FOR THE CRIME OF FORGERY.
By SECULARIST.
Price, . . . 10 cents.

SEMITIC GODS AND THE BIBLE.
Including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, Bible.
By D. M. BENNETT.
(From Vol. II. "Gods and Religions.")
333pp., pap., 60 c.; clo., $1.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I., and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two Volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

Thirty Discussions, Bible Stories, Essays, and Lectures. 700 pages. Paper covers, 75 cents;

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity, between D. M. BENNETT and Rev. G. H. HUMPHREY. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. BENNETT and CYRUS ROMULUS R. TEED. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents;

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. BENNETT and G. M. MAIR, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion.

2. Miracles and supernatural achievements hav been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus.

3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history.

BENNETT affirms; MAIR denies. This is an exhaustiv discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This givs a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon MR. BENNETT. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cents.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist Church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. Cloth, $1.00

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers 10 cents.

The Great Religions of the World. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Sinful Saints and Sensual Shepherds. 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

W. S. BELL'S PAMPHLETS.

LIBERTY AND MORALITY.

PRICE, 15 CENTS.

Accept my thanks for your excellent and useful discourse.—James Parton.

I am much pleased with your address, and will notice it in Man.—T. B. Wakeman.

A beautiful pamphlet of 36 pages. It is a very able paper, and deserves wide dissemination.—The Age.

ANTI PROHIBITION.

PRICE, 20 CENTS.

The number of heads under which you hav divided the subject matter of the pamphlet, and the concise manner in which the point is discussed, should be highly commended. Therefore I take great pleasure in recommending "Anti-Prohibition" to the consideration of every person who is interested, not only in the cause of temperance, but in the principles of self-government.—J. J. McCabe.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LIFE OF Joshua Davidson:

MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,

As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.

BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,

Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.

Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.

☞ This book was suppressed by the first American publisher. ☜

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE NEW GOD.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,

Secretary of the American Secular Union.

Price 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE SAFEST CREED,

AND

TWELVE OTHER DISCOURSES OF REASON.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

Extra cloth, 12mo, 238pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR BOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Career of Jesus Christ.

An Exposition of the True Meaning of this Character as described in the New Testament. By Milton Woolley, M.D., author of "Hebrew Mythology." Paper, 8vo, 25 cents.

SPECIAL SALE OF WATCHES AND DIAMONDS.

Good American Nickel Stem-winders, $2.50, $4, $6. Best grades in silverine case, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; adjusted, $16. For 3 ounce coin silver case, add $3.50; 4 ounce, $4.50; 5 ounce, $6. In best open-face filled gold, dust-proof case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; adjusted, $24.00; hinged cases, $8 more; hunting cases, $6 more.

The New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

All modern improvements: in silverine, $19; 3 ounce coin silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25. BEST open-face filled screw case, $27; hinged, $30; hunting, $26: Louis XIV style, $2 to $10 more. Ladies' best gold filled, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18 50; 15 jewels, $25; adjusted, $35; 14 kt solid gold, $10 to $20 more. Ruby and diamond ornamentations up to $100 extra.

DIAMONDS.

An elegant 3 stone, 8kt., solitaire pin and drops, $600, worth $900; a magnificent hair ornament and pin and pendant combination, rosette, 29 brilliants, $200, worth $300; one do., heart-shape, sapphire and ruby in center, same price and value. Pins, rings, drops, studs, from $300 down to $10; same proportionate discounts. All bought before late advance.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhatlan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 58th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Admission free. Discussions follow lectures.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston,
Meets every Sunday (from October to June) at 2:45 P.M., at Paine Memorial Building, Appleton street.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 215 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,
Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

Essence of Religion.

By L. FEUERBACH.

Translated from the German. Cloth, 12mo, 75pp.; 50 cts.

The truth-teller is ill-mannered, therefore immoral.—Extract.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indescretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT.

"Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. R. P. Fellows is an outspoken Infidel and very successful physician. He is worthy of an extensiv patronage.—The Liberal.

News of the Week.

In Crete it has been found necessary to forbid the Christian and Mussulman clergy from taking part in the coming election.

General Von Caprivi is Bismarck's successor as chancellor of Germany. In stature he is as gigantic as his predecessor. He hates Socialists.

Maryland is considering the Australian ballot reform.

Troops are driving boomers from the Cherokee strip.

Prairie fires hav burnt over 1,000,000 acres in Colorado.

Workingmen and soldiers came into conflict in Berlin a few days ago.

The Propaganda at Rome states the total of Roman Catholics in the world to be 218,000,000.

The Armstrong Gun Works at Elswick, Eng., has a strike of 8,000 employees for eight hours.

At Indianapolis recently a burning building fell carrying with it a number of firemen, of whom ten were killed and sixteen injured.

The assistant pastor and the sexton of St. Joseph's Catholic church at Texas, Md., on the 27th ult. had a quarrel in which fists and a revolver were used.

The dikes along the Mississippi are giving way in places owing to the long rains and the floods. Life has been lost, and it is feared that extensiv submergences may occur.

On their University to be constructed at Washington in imitation of the Catholics, the Methodists will spend $1,500,000.

The steamer City of Paris, whose failure to arrive at Queenstown, Ireland, caused anxiety, reached port on the 30th ult. with a hole in her bottom and 2,000 tons of water in her hold. The thousand lives on board had had a narrow escape.

The Senate has fixed April 30 to Oct. 20, 1892, as the date of the World's Fair at Chicago, and has decided that $10,000,000 shall be raised before the president invites foreign nations to participate. The bill now goes back to the House.

As priestly rule in Mexico is passing away, the secular authorities are slowly getting rid of the evil outgrowths such as it always leaves —among other things, the curse of brigands. Of these, thirty hav been shot within a radius of thirty miles about San Felipe in five months.

Catholics giv as statistics of the trade they did with their "miracle-working" shrine of Lourdes in 1889: pilgrimages, 130; pilgrims, 111,860, including two cardinals and sixty-four archbishops and bishops; masses, 34,836; communions, 202,800.

The Liberals and Socialists of Germany hav grown so that there seems no resource for the throne but to fall back for its support upon the Catholic party. But the leader of that party, Dr. Windthorst, demands as consideration grants that cause the emperor to hesitate, viz., influence to retake the temporal possessions from Italy, recompense of the monetary losses incurred by Catholics under Bismarck's severities, and greater control of the schools.

On the afternoon of the 27th ult. the signal service at Louisville, Ky., predicted a cyclone in that section, but no one thought it would strike the city. At 8:20, however, it swept down upon the city and cut through it a swath half a mile wide and two miles long, demolishing almost every structure in that area. Thousands were buried in the ruins. In many places fire broke out, and some who had escaped crushing were burnt to death. The building in which there was the greatest loss of life was a public hall in which a children's dancing class and several lodge meetings were in progress; scarcely a dozen of the three or four hundred persons escaped entanglement in the ruins, and while most were rescued alive a large number were killed. The rector of one of the largest churches was crushed into a shapeless mass as he sat in his home reading to his son at his knee. The total of lives lost is estimated at two hundred, and of those injured at many hundreds. Damage was done to property and lives were lost in other parts of Kentucky and in southern Illinois.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

GODS AND RELICIONS ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.

Vol. I. Givs a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

GOLIATH CAUSETH CONSTERNATION AMONG THE ISRAELITES.

And the Philistines said, I defy the armies of Israel this day: giv me a man, that we may fight together. When Saul and all Israel heard those words of the Philistines, they were dismayed and greatly afraid.—1 Sam. xvii, 10, 11.

Gems of Thought.

We should guard against believing things wrong which are indifferent, and keeping observances which are valueless. Many people's goodness consists in avoiding sins which are not sins, and doing duties which are not duties. One of our first duties is to hav sensible views of duty. We cannot make arbitrary rights and keep good by observing them.—Bierbower.

The Ethical End, or Morality, as it has been, is founded partly on Well-being, or Utility: and partly on Sentiment. The portions of Morality, having in view the prevention of human misery and the promotion of human happiness, are known and obvious. They are not the whole of Morality as it has been. Sentiment, caprice, arbitrary liking or disliking, are names for states of feeling that do not necessarily arise from their objects, but may be joined or disjoined by education, custom, or the power of the will. The revulsion of mind, on the part of the Jews, against eating the pig, and on our own part, as regards horse flesh, is not a primitiv or natural sensibility, like the pain of hunger, or of cold, or of a musical discord; it is purely artificial; custom has made it, and could unmake it. The feeling of fatigue from overwork is natural; the repugnance of caste to manual labor is factitious. The dignity attached to the military profession, and the indignity of the office of public executioner, are capricious, arbitrary, and sentimental. Our prospectiv regard to the comforts of our declining years points to a real interest; our feelings as to the disposal of the body after death are purely factitious and sentimental. It is an essential part of human liberty, to permit each person to form and to indulge these sentiments or caprices; although a good education should control them with a view to our happiness on the whole. But when any individual liking or fancy of this description is imposed as a law upon the entire community, it is a perversion and abuse of power, a confounding of the Ethical end by foreign admixtures.—Bain's Moral Science.

While Christians claim that it is the churches and religion that prevent crime, we claim that it is schools and intelligence that will free the world from vice. The advancement of popular education and the declension of church influences are steadily diminishing the number of criminals. In 1860, the United States had one criminal for every 1,647 inhabitants; in 1880 there was but one criminal for every 1,876 inhabitants, a decrease of thirteen per cent in twenty years. In England crime has decreased twenty-five per cent in forty years. Since the adoption of compulsory education in Baden, crime has been reduced fifty-one per cent. Five years of compulsory education in New York city has been attended by a decrease of thirty-six per cent in the number of juvenil offenders. —J. E. Remsburg.

The public mind of England has softened while it has ripened, and we hav, in the course of ages, become, not only a wiser, but also a kinder people. There is scarcely a page of the history or lighter literature of the seventeenth century which does not contain some proof that our ancestors were less humane than their posterity.—Macaulay's History of England.

For myself, the only devil I know is that black devil, ignorance, fostered by knavery and tyranny—a devil personified by the credulous many, and kept up, in the past, by the learned but treacherous few, who professed to rule the masses by their fears rather than to guide them through their love. The devil has, indeed, not been a roaring lion, but a cowardly and treacherous boa-constrictor; it has enveloped in its massiv folds glorious truth, and, in the fierceness of its brute power, has crushed in its writhings. But, oh! a glorious day is coming; amidst the heretofore gloom of night the bright rays of the rising sun are piercing, and the light of truth dispels the mists of ignorance. Bright facts drive out dark delusions; mighty truths triumph over pious frauds and no longer need men be affrighted by the notion of an omnipotent fiend, wandering through the earth, ever seeking their damnation.—Bradlaugh's Few Words About the Devil.

Would God giv me brains and make it a crime to think?—Ingersoll.

THE

Truth Seeker Annual

—AND—

Freethinkers' Almanac,

1890.

(E. M. 290.)

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Calendar for 1890,	5
Freethought in the United States, 1889,	17
Faded Flowers. Poem by J. E. Remsburg,	24
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue. T. B. Wakeman,	26
Mostly Fools. W. Stewart Ross (Saladin),	36
Record of the Spanish Inquisition,	44
Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas,	44
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral. Helen H. Gardener,	45
The Middle Ages. Illustrated,	69
The Priest,	70
The Supernatural World,	71
The Reformation,	73
Future Terrors,	77
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated,	79
Freethought Journals in the United States,	96
In Search of a Spirit. E. M. Macdonald,	97
Why I Left the Church. H. O. Pentecost,	109

NEW YORK:

PUBLISHED AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

28 Lafayette Place.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

V 1. 17. No. 15. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April .2, 1890. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

THE FOLLY OF CLINGING TO THE CROSS.

Notes and Clippings.

THE bishop of Padua has received a letter from the holy father, warmly approving of a society which has just been formed for the purpose of showing the harmony between science and religion.

IN France, during 1886, official figures show that the unmarried represented fifty-two per cent of the entire population. Celibacy continues under the republic, as under the empire, the strongest factor in the progressiv diminution of the population, traceable also to intense selfishness and penuriousness. Schemes to tax the unmarried hav been discussed by French legislators since the great revolution of 1789, with the resulting admission that such taxation would be impotent as a remedy or stimulation to marriage and offspring.

MR. HENDRICKS has introduced into the New York senate a bill to abolish arrests in civil actions except for contempt. Lawyers are divided in opinion as to the advisability of this proposed complete abolition of imprisonment for debt. Colonel Ingersoll says: "I am opposed absolutely to imprisonment for debt. It is a relic of barbarism and savagery. The bill to abolish arrests in civil actions as published in the Herald meets my views exactly as to what is demanded in the way of a reform of the abuses that hav grown out of this crying evil. I hope the bill will become a law."

CLAUDIO JANNET, a noted French writer, says: "The systematized sterility of New England Protestants has resulted in remarkable social and political consequences. Th Irish, Canadian, and soon the Italian Catholic immigrants, little by little, are replacing them in such a way that New England is already one-third Catholic, and the day when it will be ruled by a Catholic majority can be mathematically calculated. The Canadians hav invaded peacefully and surely all that region. For a long time they confined themselvs to working in the mills, but now they are turning farmers. They are fast becoming an important social factor in the country, a fact which will hasten annexation."

THE Boston Committee of One Hundred says: "We hav no hesitation in affirming that the oath of allegiance to our government taken by Romanists, by which they hav obtained the rights of the ballot, citizenship, and office, amounts to nothing, if they are good Romanists, and has no binding obligation where the interests of the church or the pontiff require it to be disregarded. . . . We do not hesitate to say, as a measure for the nation's self-protection, that no man who confesses allegiance to the pontiff should be allowed to participate as a citizen in either holding an office or casting a ballot. The United States Supreme Court has decided that the law of one of our states disfranchising Mormons is constitutional, on the theory that the man who takes the oath the Mormons are required to take cannot be a good citizen. Why should not this principle be applied to those who confess allegiance to the papal hierarchy? No ballot for the man who takes his politics from the Vatican."

THE Escanaba Mirror announces the convention of the God-in-the-Constitution party at Washington in this way: "A conference of April fools will be held in Washington on the 1st prox., for the purpose of arranging a plan whereby they can take charge of all sublunary affairs, as far as this country is concerned. They will tell the balance of the people that the state should make Sunday a day of rest; should control matrimony; should 'pulverize the rum power;' should draw up the curriculum of every university, college, and school in the land, and, in fine, should poke its paternal proboscis into the private business of every man, woman, and child in the country. The big-wigs of this Praise-God-Barebones pack are old Bill Windom, secretary of the United States treasury, whose record as a Wall street gambler is about as rotten as they make 'em; Gineral Clinton B. Fisk, prohibitiv candidate for president in 1888, an all-'round fraud; Jo Cook, the belligerent brawler, who has had his hide tanned more times than we can tell for his idiotic insolence; Frances Willard, who has made a pretty penny by trapsing over the United States and posing as the high-priestess of morality at so much a pose, and a mortal lot more canting casuists and holy humbugs. Their prime hobby is the union of state and sanctuary—a thing that means ruin to our republic; a thing that was spit, stamped upon, and shoveled under the sod by Tom Jefferson and his compeers in 'the brave days of old,' when they were making their fiery fight against despotism in all its devil forms. The conference will be held, but its counsel will not be heeded in this progressiv period, when the light of liberty is beginning to flood the whole wide world with a fresh, supernal splendor; and the April fools will simply waste their wind and jingle their jaws in vain."

As the day draws near for the fulfillment of the prophecy that Oakland, San Francisco, Chicago, and Milwaukee are to be swallowed up by earthquake, the excitement among Erickson's followers in Oakland, Cal., increases. The police hav broken up all public meetings, but the cranks assemble in private houses, and made converts the last week. Dealers in second-hand furniture report that cranks hav left many orders with them for the disposal of property for cash. The 7th, was the date fixed by Erickson for the beginning of the exodus to the mountains, but about forty Oaklanders anticipated the removal by two days, as they departed on the 5th for St. Helena, the center of wine-making in Napa county, which is over a thousand feet above sea level and about seventy miles from this city. They hav rented rooms and cottages and are prepared to remain throughout the month and await the doom of Oakland. About a score of families hav established a camp in the foothills back of Oakland, where they hav raised tents and propose to hold a series of camp-meetings. From the preparations noted in Oakland it is likely that several hundred people will flock to this camp. Even in San Francisco many credulous people are alarmed, and country resorts will profit by their fears. At Santa Rosa several of the faithful hav joined Mrs. Woodworth, the original leader, who is responsible for Erickson's prophecy. She is a shrewd woman, however, and proposes to start East early this week and will not hav to face her dupes. Nervous excitement over the predicted calamity has proved too much for several women in Oakland, who hav been sent to the insane asylum.

Communications.

The Depressing Influence of the Bible on Morality.

There is perhaps no subject which such great controversies hav raged about, which commentaries hav been written on in such number, and about which people hav talked so much, as the Bible, and yet, strange to say, little is known about it. Nor is there any subject that it is more their duty to become familiar with, for it is the imperativ duty of every believer to giv satisfactory reason for the faith that is in him; if he cannot do so, then he should giv up all pretensions to being a reflectiv creature, and not presume to express an opinion upon anything. And of the unbeliever who is not familiar with the Bible, I would say that he is extremely culpable, for he is rejecting that which he has not examined, and therefore cannot affirm to be unworthy of credit. However, the great mass of society to day prefer to take their opinion upon this subject from some favorit author, instead of getting their knowledge of it from the original fountain itself, in which case it cannot be called an opinion, but merely a prejudice, and certainly it can never rise to the dignity of being called a principle.

In order to obtain a correct idea of the teachings and character of the Bible, men and women of mature mind should read it, and investigate it for themselvs. It should, however, be strictly withheld from girls and young children, because it would only giv them an insight into those dark and plague-haunted spots on humanity, of which it is the duty of every careful parent to strive to keep them in ignorance. Unfortunately there are too many persons who read the Bible day after day, week after week, month after month, and year after year, and are as ignorant of its nature and tendencies as they were before they had done so. It should not be read in an apathetic nor an inattentiv manner, nor in a spirit of blind, submissiv superstition, but it should be read just as any other book would be read. If you wished to understand a book on any scientific or historical topic, you would read that book carefully, inquiringly, and critically. You would pause frequently to examin your own mind, and to see if you had thoroughly grasped the meaning of what you had read. You would ask yourself whether it was rational, whether it was consistent with your experience, and in harmony with the known laws of nature. Now, why cannot this mode of reason and inquiry be extended to the Bible? The truth must ever be made more evident by inquiry, and no mode of inquiry can convert truth into falsehood, or falsehood into truth, but the more rigid the inquiry the more manifest will the truth become, and surely, that which is asserted to be the word of God is not less able to bear the test of criticism than the writings of man. If the advocates of Bible inspiration shrink from the sternest criticism of their "great" book, then we are justified in doubting both its truth and their intentions.

However much there may be in the Bible to provoke a smile, or extort a flash of pleasantry, there is unhappily far more that is calculated to excite sadness, tears, shuddering, and horror. It is for the most part an awful book, a book whose records of idolatry, deeds of torture, murders, unnatural lusts, and wholesale massacres, should hav been written with "pens of fire" and "letters of blood."

This plain language will probably startle any pious believer that may happen to read it, but I will tell him that the narrativ upon which I am about to enter justifies me in using it; and I will tell him more, that if he will read carefully what I hav written, and then can bring unanswerable objections to what I hav said, if he can prove that I hav used too much severity of condemnation, then I will acknowledge myself humbled and rebuked. In return for this I only ask him to peruse this with candor, and not to close his understanding against conviction.

Cultivated men and women of to day hav within them a higher standard of morality than any that is to be found in the Bible. This, however, is partly the result of natural feeling, and partly, perhaps to a larger extent, the result of a humanizing education. For true morality is not so much an impulse as a growth. But my object in this little work is to show that the rank idolatry of this nation lays a deadly weight upon morality, checks its prosperity and happiness, and undermines its progress towards good. However, it is hardly to be expected that the literature and religious practices of an uncouth people in a remote and barbarous age should be fitted for the guidance of any intelligent nation now; indeed, a great gulf exists between the moral tone of the Bible and that which influences modern society. Throughout the former, three passions will be found to predominate, viz., a ferocity of bloodshed, a prurient sensuality, and an abject superstition. Now, the Old Testament abounds with proofs of these assertions, for almost the first act it attributes to God after the creation is the wanton and willful destruction of every living thing by a flood. This deluge—an ominous theme—whether in itself a matter of fact or of fiction, has most assuredly led to a deluge of controversy and criticism, in which hav been drowned all enlightened sense of truth, science, and morality. A more revolting doctrin priestcraft never invented—the whole vital world, man, woman, child, beast, creeping thing, all but a pair of each, hurled into the abyss of death. And why? Because two human beings ate an apple and thence propagated their sin. Cultivated humanity could only hesitate whether to laugh at the absurdity of such a dogma, or to blush at its brutality. Can we really liv in a civilized age while such uncivilized creeds are thus indorsed? If the faith of a nation be an index of its progress, then indeed are we still struggling in the vortex of barbarism, for some of the darkest creeds are yet popular, and theology still luxuriates in vengeance. Putting aside the scientific argument involved in this question, Is it a moral doctrin, is it commendable, to destroy human beings when they will not be obedient to your injunctions? would it be right for man to follow the divine example? Enlightened jurisprudence revolts at such ethics. The feeling of the parent, the judge, the statesman, the man, are outraged by such a theory. Well may the Freethinker teach that humanity is a higher test of virtue than creeds.

The Bible presents to us a deity who intervenes in the affairs of men, but, alas, only to punish and not to improve, to destroy and not to reform. Punishment, vindictiv and violent, changing the whole course of nature for temporary indiscretions; punishment, unwise and useless, annihilating the criminal, and not eradicating or subduing the motivs to crime, is based upon an exploded morality that must die with the dismal superstition that engendered it. For none are too mean to be commiserated, or too abandoned to be reclaimed, and a book that could teach with equanimity such doctrins, a system so barbarous, unnatural, yet strangely godlike, should hav its very name erased from the language of all civilized nations.

We are then hurried on to the revolting crimes of the men of Sodom, and the dreadful punishment which befell them. Also that whimsical and unmerited punishment which befell Lot's wife, for we are told that, for the natural act of casting one lingering look back toward her burning home, she was turned into a pillar of salt. Why, if in these days all women who committed some such slight unconscious mental offense were to be thus dealt with, then salt would become as abundant as the dust of the earth, and the fair sex would disappear altogether. We are told that Lot's daughters behaved in a disgusting and unnatural manner, and though their conduct was criminal in the extreme, still the Bible neither punishes or censures them for it. This I hold to be one of the chief sources of Bible immorality, for it relates the most heartrending crimes, the most brutal murders, the most atrocious conduct, without one word of condemnation, while it does condemn indiscretions, as though they were unpardonable crimes.

The next picture we meet with is one strangely beautiful to the eye of the devout believer, as illustrativ of faith, but to the skeptic, it will require volumes to explain its literal meaning. It is that of an old, gray-headed man going a two days' journey from home, taking with him his youngest son and some young men from his household. I see him mount the hill called Moriah with his son (whom he loveth), leaving behind the young men that accompanied him, knowing that their human nature would hav prevented him from carrying out his nefarious design. I hear that son say, "My father, behold the fire and the wood, but where is the lamb for the burnt offering?" and then this gray-haired old father tells his son a deliberate lie, and I see Abraham raise in his hand the murderous knife to plunge it into the breast of his son Isaac, and that, too, in obedience to a voice in the air, without even a word of prayer that the dreadful mandate might be averted.

Bible readers, reflect, think of it, and try to fathom its infamy. Why, if in these days a man, in obedience to a supposed voice in the air, killed, or even attempted to kill, his wife or child, he would either be called mad and shut up for public safety, or else punished as a desperate fanatic. Is there anyone who would dare to condemn this judgment of him? Abraham was, in the fullest sense of the term, a murderer, for, although he did not actually slay his son Isaac, still the intention was there, and he even perjured himself so that he might be better enabled to perpetrate his murderous object. In estimating a man's character, intentions are everything. But what does the Bible say concerning such conduct? Does it condemn him as devoid of natural affection? No. But, on the contrary, it praises it, and speaks of him with highest admiration, and thereby places faith, and a superstitious obedience, above the best and purest feelings of the human heart.

We are told that Jacob wrestled with God all one night on Peniel. I cannot say whether it was Greco-Roman, or catch-as-catch-can; it does not specify the exact rules under which they wrestled, but it does say that, although the Lord succeeded in breaking Jacob's thigh, still he (the Lord) was not able to overcome him. What a pity it is that he did not liv in these degenerate days when, by profusely advertising himself as the champion wrestler of the universe, having defeated God almighty in an all-night's wrestling bout, he could make a great attraction for some dime museum. Let us look at this more closely. If this story be true, we are required to believe, by implication, that Jacob, a weak and puny man, wrestled bodily with the infinit, omnipotent, and immaterial deity, and we are also required to believe that this immaterial deity, the divine essence of goodness, very unfairly took advantage of his opponent and put Jacob's thigh out of joint, and, despite this disadvantage, Jacob still held the deity so tight that he could not get away. Is it possible that Christians do not perceive that stories of this kind are an outrage upon all reverential feelings? No doubt it seems very elevating, if "read prayerfully," and "understood spiritually," but I must confess that I cannot quite appreciate the literal account (Gen. xxxii, 24). Of the disgusting details contained in the book of Leviticus, I hav no wish to speak; indeed, it is hardly possible to do so without giving offense. Their very nauseousness is their protection, for few people of decent feelings would like to disturb so foul and prurient a pool.

The early books of the Bible abound with narrativs of the bloodthirsty and exterminating wars of the Hebrews, most of them being undertaken at the express command, and under the supervision, of their deity. And yet robbery appears to hav been the chief motiv for all these wars—robbery not only of goods and chattels, but of persons also, those stolen being compelled to become the property, the slaves of the robber (Deut. xx, 10). If anything were required to hold the Bible in condemnation it would be found in these unjust, merciless, and terrible injunctions to the Israelites from their deity. What could be more revolting to human feelings than the following: "When thou comest nigh unto a city to fight against it, then proclaim peace unto it, and it shall be if it make thee answer of peace and open unto thee, then it shall be that all the people that is found therein shall be tributaries unto thee and shall serve thee, and if it will make no peace with thee, but will make war against thee, then thou shalt besiege it." Whatever may be the ostensible object of the Bible, the tendency of these teachings is evidently to inculcate obedience to rulers, submission to the powerful, by repressing or extinguishing every principle implanted in the human breast for the purposes of self-defense or asserting the dignity of the character of the individual. Every effort of man to assert his natural rights is represented in the Bible as a rebellion against God. Of all the means that hav ever been employed for the subjugation of mankind, the most powerful in their operation and the most dreadful in their effects are the delusions that hav been practiced under the cover of "revelations" from heaven. These men, acting, as they believed, or rather as they pretended to believe, under the command of God, sought to capture their weaker brethren and bind them in slavery, and if the besieged should refuse to submit to their tyrannies willingly, then they were to kill them. Besides, if these unfortunates who were thus mercilessly put to death by these barbarous Jews were sinners of the blackest type, to murder them was not to reclaim them. Yet they must die, for such was the merciless command of Jehovah, the God of the Bible, of the Jews, and Christianity. What language could be plainer than the command of God to "make no covenant with them, nor show mercy unto them" (Deut. vii, 2)? Could any advice so vile and malicious be given from Satan himself as these terrible maxims of desolation and destruction which came straight from the mouth of God to the hearts of cruelty and murder?

Passing over the early history of the Jews, which contains much to disgust and but little to interest an intelligent mind, let us approach the time when Judea became a kingdom, and what are the lessons to be learned from the lives of the robber David and that lascivious tyrant Solomon? What from the Psalms, where David implores the Lord "to break the teeth of his enemies, to hurl them to swift destruction, and to make their dwellings in deserts?" What from the amatory Songs of Solomon, his mercenary Proverbs, and his sensual preaching in Ecclesiastes? Why, it would be better for society if these things were allowed quietly to rot away in our public libraries, pondered over occasionally with wonder by some solitary antiquarian but comparativly unknown to the world. Religious people speak of the joys of a holy life, but what was David's life? I will relate, in the language of the Bible, one act of this savage man, but it is such a one as should cover his name with infamy and disgust forever. He was engaged in an aggressiv war against the Ammonites, a primitiv people of Canaan. He took a city of theirs called Rabbah, and smote it and destroyed it. "He brought up the people that were in it, and cut them with saws, with harrows of iron and with axes. Even so dealt David with the people of the city of Ammon" (Chron. xx, 3). Picture for one moment this dark scene of hideous torture and carnage. Imagin, if you can, a whole city full of people, brave men, tender women, bright-eyed maidens, and rosy, smiling infants deliberately plucked from their mothers' breasts and torn limb from limb, cut with saws, chopped with axes, placed beneath harrows, and the quivering, blood-dripping flesh torn from the revealed bones in lumps. Imagin this, if you can, and it will indeed be a ghastly and a terrible imagination, and one which excites a shudder. No fabled dream could exceed the cruelties performed by this bloodthirsty wretch, who the Bible insults our reason, appals our hearts, and depraves our minds by assuring us was "a man after God's own heart." Then all such ideas of a God I repudiate; nay, but I hate, scorn, loathe, and detest him with the whole of the power and bitterness that could animate me. Yet such is the man whom the Christians respect, and such is the God they idolatrously worship. Religious people speak of the peace of the death of the righteous. But how did David die? Was it with words of penitence and charity upon his lips?

No. But with a vindictiv craving for the blood of those who had been too powerful for him to smite. Where then were David's good parts? Did he, like any other libertin, with a "deathbed repentance" wipe away his crimes? No, not even this worse than mockery took place. David died as he had lived. O you clerical hypocrits—you priestly impostors—you who feared Thomas Paine's wit, who writhed under the logic of his pen—you who maligned his dying hours—turn here with me, and stand by the bedside of this man "after God's own heart!" He is dying; he is feeble; he scarce can speak. Listen, catch every word he utters, and what does the dying David say? He charges his son with a mission. He is speaking of two old men. Does he charge his son to be merciful? No; but his last words are, "His hoar head bring thou down to the grave with blood." "And then David slept with his fathers" (2 Sam. ii, 9).

Religious people speak of the guilt of murder, but Solomon the beloved of the Lord was a parricide (2 Sam. ii, 25). They tell us of the virtue of chastity, and we find it enforced by the example of a prince who rioted upon the prostituted affections of one thousand women, sacrificed upon the reeking and polluted altar of a diseased libidinousness. It will be painfully apparent to all true believers that Ecclesiastes is the production of an enervated melancholy mind, written by an exhausted debauchee, who, turning back a regretful glance at his wasted life, utters with painful repetition the mournful cry, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity." A sensuality mingled with a remorseful satiety, together with a profound melancholy, a gloom through which the sickened heart strives in vain to break, pervades this production, which in its deep sorrowfulness often reaches a grandeur of expression. It is perhaps, by inference, the most moral book in the Bible, preaching the tragic results of a wasted life, and of a strong mind trembling on the verge of madness, through inordinate indulgence. Splendid ostentations, ceaseless luxury, women and wine, had made the gorgeous Solomon a shattered wreck, drifting without sail or rudder upon a stagnant sea toward a gaping and unhonored grave. What must hav been that gloom, thick and palpable as the Egyptian darkness, that engulfed the mind of Solomon when he exclaimed, "I said of laughter, it is mad, and of mirth, what doeth it?" No, for him there was never genial laughter more. Hearty laughter rising up irresistibly from the cheerful springs of the unoppressed heart, had ceased for him, and mirth was as the mockery of devils.

We are also told that the Bible fosters a feeling of love and reverence toward the inscrutable cause of creation, and yet it actually charges God with deliberate lying (2 Chron. xviii, 20). Now, here is an assertion which ought to sound like blasphemy to pious ears; but what a terrible example it is also, for if the Christians' God thus givs way to falsehood, what is to become of his followers? I assert that the sense of difference between right and wrong is greatly weakened by narrativs of this kind, in the minds of those who believe in them. Indeed, their depressing influence on public morality, and especially upon the character of religious society, is too great to be easily estimated.

The Bible also teaches the most savage and malignant intolerance toward those of a different faith and form of worship. "He that sacrificeth unto any god, save the Lord [of the Hebrews] only, he shall be utterly destroyed" (Ex. xxii, 20). Turning also to 2 Kings x, 30, we read an account of the bloodthirsty King Jehu, who, having murdered the seventy sons of his predecessor and piled up their heads in heaps like cannon balls, then devised a plan for the extinction of the worship of Baal. This he did by professing himself a worshiper of Baal, and calling all the followers of that presumed deity to a solemn assembly, and having by this means filled the temple dedicated to the god, who was the most popular rival of Jehovah, he caused them to be fallen upon by his soldiers and slaughtered on the spot. This act of sanguinary intolerance was all the more wicked and tyrannous because Jehu himself was an idolator, and offered divine service to the golden calves that had been erected in Bethel and in Dan. But surely the Bible has some sentence of condemnation for conduct so tyrannous, wanton, and depraved. Has it? No. But, on the contrary, it applauds and blesses this wholesale butchery by which a sacred fane was converted into a human shambles. Listen to its words: "And the Lord said unto Jehu, because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine eyes, and hast done unto the house of Ahab according to all that was in mine heart, thy children of the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel" (2 Kings x, 30). I think I am right when I say that nearly all the evils resulting from differences of religious opinions are consequent upon this text. Was it not a belief in this very text that caused all the bloodshed and misery consequent upon the Crusades? Was it not a belief in this text that brought about the brutalities, the horrors and tortures by rack, wheel, and thumbscrew, perpetrated and practiced with so much fervor through so many years by the "holy Inquisition?" Was it not a belief in this text that procured the means for murdering the beautiful Hypatia, the brave and noble Bruno, the venerable Servetus, and many others who dared to speak their honest thoughts? Was it not a belief in this text that encouraged the priest to anathematize our noble thinkers and writers for the last few centuries? Was it not a belief in this text that caused the Catholics to burn the Protestants, and the Protestants to hunt and to kill the Catholics? Yes, all these enormities and more hav been done in the name of God, and by the sons of the church, and if they do not do the same to-day, it is because they dare not. Education has been the means of establishing freedom for all, whether in science, politics, or religion.

Concerning the Bible prophets, I will not speak further than to allow them to bear testimony to the characters of each other, and to say that the grossness of some of their effusions is scarcely exceeded even by the worst parts of the book of Leviticus, and that their comparisons seem to be drawn from all that is prurient and loathsome in nature. For Isaiah thus testifies to the moral purity of his brethren: "The priest and the prophet hav erred through strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink, they err in vision, they stumble in judgment" (Isa. xxviii, 7). Jeremiah, also suspected of being a traitor to his country, and a spy in the service of its enemies, says: "Then the Lord said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name; I sent them not, neither hav I commanded them, neither spake I unto them; they prophesy unto you false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart" (Jer. xiv, 14; v, 31). And in Ezek. xiv, 9, we are told that God actually deceives the prophets as an excuse for murdering them. So, dismissing the prophets, who were unreliable and untrustworthy, and who were in each other's estimation hypocrits, liars, and drunkards, I will now proceed to say a few words concerning the moral tendency of the New Testament.

Orthodox professors claim that, even if the Old Testament may exhibit moral discrepancies, still the New is a great improvement upon the Old, and it is from this that Christianity derives its maxims and precepts for the guidance of human conduct. But this is far from being true, for the two are inseparably linked together, and therefore the New Testament is but a continuation of the Old. This may be gathered from Christ's own words, for he deliberately adopts the obscene literature of the ancient Hebraws, telling his disciples, "Think not I am come to destroy the law* or the prophets, I am not come to destroy but to fulfill" (Matt. v, 17).

Neither is the New Testament any more merciful or just than the Old, for the atrocities it contains add worse terrors to mankind, and especially so in the shape of eternal torments. Upon what principle, except that of the most cruel injustice, can such a saying be explained as this in Matt. xviii, 8: "It is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire." Or this, "To him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall be taken away" (Mark iv, 25). Nor, indeed, is the moral character of Christ anything like that of a perfect man. Does he not tell his disciples that he "speaks in parables, that men may not understand him, and therefore perish everlastingly" (Matt. xii, 10)? Again, does the gospel story of Christ present us a complete and safe example for us to follow morally in all our conduct? Let us see. In Matt. x, Christ tells his disciples, when they are brought before governors and kings for his sake, not to be afraid or take any thought what they should speak, for it should be given them what to say without their thinking, and not to fear them that could only kill the body but could not kill the soul. Now here Christ taught moral courage to his followers, even to death. But did he himself exhibit this moral courage? "Then the Pharisees went out and held a council against him, how they might destroy him. And when Jesus knew it, he withdrew himself from thence, and charged his disciples that they should not make him known" (Matt. xii, 14–16). Why did he withdraw? Why not make him known? Why? Plainly because he was afraid of being taken, imprisoned, and killed. It would do to preach courage to others and tell them not to be afraid, but he must hide himself and be kept secret. O consistency, thou art indeed a jewel!

Is it good, sound moral teaching to say that he that believes not his doctrin shall be damned? Christ said this. Is it good moral teaching to tell us to maim ourselvs, and to make ourselvs eunuchs for the kingdom of God's sake? Yet Christ said, "He that is able to receive it or do it, let him receive it or do it." Is it proper and right to teach the rich that they cannot be saved and enter the kingdom of God, just because they are rich? Christ so taught. Can we not be good moral persons and discharge all our obligations without hating ourselvs, our families, and friends? Christ said not. Is it morally true that the priests of the Christian religion hav power to forgiv sin, so that "whosoever's sins ye remit, they are remitted; and whosoever's sins ye retain shall be retained; and what the church binds on earth is bound in heaven, and what they loose on earth is loosed in heaven?" Christ so preached. Could anything be more pernicious, more immoral, or more hurtful to mankind than these precepts and maxims of Christ? Christ then is no example as a moral teacher. We need a higher and nobler example for us to follow, and a purer system of morality to look up to.

Again, what shall we say to the following: "Let every soul be subject unto the higher power, for there is no power but of God, the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God, and they shall receive to themselvs damnation" (Rom. xiii, 1). What could possibly be more abject and contemptible than this? Such teaching may do well enough to produce a race of slaves and cowards, but it is ill calculated to develop a nation of brave and free men. Where would the freedom and the independence of the American people hav been to-day if our forefathers had been subject to the power that was? The liberty of this nation did not come freely and unsolicited, but it had to be fought for, wrested in a fierce death-struggle from the reluctant hands of tyrants. It was purchased with the life-blood of our best and bravest men. And the men who won it were bold and independent natures, whose heroic souls disdained such tame and craven teachings, and who scorned to submit to the oppression of "the powers that be."

It is also a false moral theory that commands us to obey the king for conscience's sake (1 Peter ii, 13; Rom. xiii, 1–5). It is a false moral theory that recognizes a king at all, let alone honoring and obeying him (1 Peter ii, 17). It is a false moral theory that bids us accept evil, and submit to tyranny as the will of God (1 Peter ii, 15–20; Rom. xiii, 1–4). It is a false moral theory that neglects this life for a supposed next (Matt. viii, 25). It is a false moral theory that prefers belief to reason and thus deprives the individual of his first right to Freethought. In short, the morality that adheres to the accidental belief of childhood, the morality that condemns political reform, the morality that is opposed to the exercise of Freethought by the individual, is a low and inferior morality—unreasonable and unjust. Sad indeed might we be if we had no better, but the Secularist is convinced that he has a better, and right here lies the sum of all the difference between the Christian and the Secularist. The Secularist is preëminently a moralist, and the chief secret of his hatred to Christianity lies not only in its falsity, but because he regards it as propagating and sustaining an inferior morality. And, indeed, upon this one point I am willing to stake the whole of the question at issue, as to the relativ merits or demerits of the two religions—the human and divine. However, my purpose is not to contrast the two religions in this work, but to exhibit the influence for evil that the so-called moral tendencies of the Bible hav had upon the world. Our divines speak of the influence for good that it has had upon the race. But where is it? It is easy to declaim in vague and general language, but I ask for the specific instances. In short, the great object of the Bible, like that of every system of religion pretending to be revealed from heaven, is to render the many mere tools subservient to the purpose of the designing few. Hence the most horrid transactions that hav ever taken place on the earth hav been the result of the coalition of the priests and despotic rulers. They hav discarded all the natural feelings from the human breast, and trampled under foot all the natural rights and privileges of mankind. The combination betwixt despotic rulers and priests is cemented by ties of the very strongest nature. It does not arise from any regard the former hav for the precepts of religion or morality, they do not insist upon a rigid observance of purity in morals, for they know it suits their purpose better to delude and intoxicate their followers by encouraging indulgence in luxury and sensuality, than which nothing can be more disastrous to virtue or morals. And they find in the priest a ready and willing ally, for by their influence on the minds of ignorant and uneducated people, they can sway them as they please, after disarming them of their reason.

*By "law" is meant the Pentateuch, or law of Moses.

In conclusion, I affirm that the entire religious scheme, as contained in the Bible, is immoral, and exercises a depressiv influence on public morality. It is immoral because inconsistent with justice and humanity. It is not above nature, but below it. It is not incomprehensible, but plainly and superficially false. JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

The Secular Union's Monthly Report.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED MARCH, 1890.

R. R. Gurley, M.D., Washington, D. C. (for constitutions)	$1 00
R. H. Scott, Scott's Mills, Ore	5 00
Jasper J. Brown, Oswego, N. Y. (for pamphlets sent him)	25
M. H. Cone, Axtell, Kan	2 00
Channing Burnz, Mt. Vernon, N. Y	2 00
Simeon Russell, Volo, Ill	2 50
John L. Moore, Fawley Place, Quincy, Ill	5 00
Ralph Taylor, Fairmount, Cincinnati (through Investigator)	1 00
Mr. Elder, Fairmount, Cincinnati, (through Investigator)	1 00
Total	$19 75

F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, per I. C. C.

It will be seen from the above report that the last month has not been a very good one for subscriptions to the American Secular Union; and with the amount contributed, we shall not be able to go very far in the work of distributing Liberal literature.

We are preparing what we consider a very exhaustiv tract on "Church Taxation," which will soon be ready for distribution; and we need money to pay the printer and to meet the expenses consequent upon sending it out. We hope that our friends will not forget our needs.

We are working faithfully, and to some purpose; and thus far, we are free to say that we are satisfied with the results. We thank our friends for their support hitherto, and trust that they will respond in this matter at once. R. B. WESTBROOK,

Pres. American Secular Union.

IDA C. CRADDOCK,

Corr. Sec. American Secular Union.

Philadelphia, March 31, 1890.

The Relation which Religion Bears to Theology.

Mr. Junius Henri Browne, long eminent in the literary world, and deservedly so, has an article in the March number of the Boston Arena on the question: "What is Religion?" in which he tries to show that religion is a good, blessed, and divine thing to be sought after and possessed, but that it is theology which is chargeable with all the atrocities perpetrated by the church upon the bodies and souls of men during its whole history, and against which the nineteenth century has at length risen in revolt. This tail-end foremost way of discussing so important a subject shows that a man's judgment may be good on some topics, but very weak and unreliable on others. Mr. Browne givs evidence that he has never traced the genealogy of religion up to its first parents, nor studied the features of its character, as itself has painted them, during the whole of the historic period. He pours out the vials of his holy indignation upon the theologies, which would be as harmless as so many mummies in an Egyptian crypt unless they were animated and made a tool of by religion.

Religion is a sentiment; that is, something which a person feels. It has nothing to do whatever with the faculty of thought and of reason. The multiplication table, and the demonstrations of geometry, cannot influence it in the least. But while this is the case, it is often the very instrument by which error misleads a man by causing him to form a prejudgment on an important question of truth, before he has all the evidence presented to his mind.

Theology is a set of notions, or abstract ideas, about God, which, in the very nature of things, can not be proved true, and therefore, must be received by faith; that is, without evidence, and on the mere ipse dixit of some one who arrogates to himself, or party, the attribute of infallibility. If I could personify the Christian and triumphant grace of Faith, I would endow her with a boundless mouth to swallow, and a boundless stomach to contain and digest, any quantity of falsehoods and absurdities, provided always they be in the department of religion.

No wonder, when we come to think of it, that this age is permeated with Infidelity; for it is an age of inventions and progress in material things. Inventors and mechanical engineers, in all the branches of industry and money-making, finding by experience that a lie, of any size, in the department of mechanics is ruinous in its practical results, will be satisfied with nothing but the absolute and unquestionable truth. The habit of keen observation, the demand for precise measurement, and the study of the nice relationship between the different parts and functions of machinery, hav disciplined their minds to such accurate habits of thought, and created such a reverence for, and confidence in, truth, that when, on the invitation of the church, they turn their attention to the mass of conflicting theologies now in the world, they are not long in perceiving the utter absence of consistency, and, consequently, feel no interest in them whatever. Their sphere of action is in the real world of physics, where every foot-measure contains exactly twelve inches, and where everything is demonstrated to be true, and nothing taken for granted, or accepted on mere authority.

Long before there was a theology in the world man was deeply religious. Theology is metaphysical—that is, above nature and the earth, where all is speculativ. It requires a small but certain amount of intellect to formulate a creed on so unknowable a subject as God. Hence it is safe to say that, both in the order of time, as well as of nature, religion takes precedence of theology. It dates back to the era when man became a genus, having evolved, by the law of change and progress, from the condition of his fellow-beings, and taken his position as master over them all. He was, in intellect, but one remove above his animal associates, and almost imperceptibly advanced; for nature, in her evolutionary processes, never goes by leaps, but gradually, step by step The brutes may hav observed the phenomena of nature, but he not only observed but began to inquire concerning the forces that produced them. His own acts, he knew, were performed by himself, and he judged that all the other forces, such as the wind and the lightning, whose effects were so terrible to his sight, were performed by beings also, but infinitly superior in power to himself. But these beings concealed themselvs behind the phenomens, and refused to reveal their persons; and his utter ignorance and sense of helplessness bred into him the propitiatory feeling which prompted prayer and the offering of worship, and is, to this day, the characteristic feature of every form of religion. It was then that man began his education in religion, under the teaching of ignorance and fear. During thousands upon thousands of years, these two schoolmasters plied their vocation so constantly that religion became a cowardly and consequently a ferocious instinct in their pupil, which he has faithfully transmitted to his posterity, but from which all other living beings are free, thus showing that a little knowledge is a more dangerous thing than absolute ignorance. This accounts for the fact that we hav now millions of people who are as deeply religious, and, of course, zealously so, as our principal ancestors were when they crouched in their gloomy cave-dwellings and were incapable of linking together fine ideas of abstract thought.

In the relation of cause and effect religion is to theology what the invisible power of steam is to machinery. A locomotiv engin standing on the track with a cold boiler is incapable of either good or evil until it is made an instrument by the power of steam. In like manner, formulated in books, the various mysteries of theology are as innocent of evil as so many cold engins in a machine-shop. But as fire converts the visible water in a boiler into the invisible agency of steam, so religion converts a theology into the means of doing incalculable harm. Theology is the club which religion seizes in order to beat down its victims. The theologies are as numerous and antagonistic to each other as the sects which hold them, but religion, the animating and impelling principle of them all, is the same. It never changes. The Puritan Cromwell was one of the most religious men of an age when "religion was the chief concern of mortals here below." His theology was the very opposit of that of the Catholics and identically the same as that of the Scotch. Yet he regarded the Catholics of Ireland and the Presbyterians of Scotland alike, and knocked them both on the head as remorselessly as the butchers in the slaughter-houses of Chicago knock down cattle and swine. It is not theology, in its statement of abstract ideas, which revels in the bloodshed and misery of its victims any more than it is the pistol or the knife on the shelves of the merchant that commits murder. It is religion which converts a theology into an instrument of death to gratify the diabolical spirit which it inherited from its ancestors. If this were not so, then, when a new and improved theology is formulated, as the creed of the Protestants was at the Reformation of the sixteenth century, we might expect that religion also would change its character and become more just and merciful. But when, at the instigation of Calvin, the syndics of Geneva burnt Servetus at the stake for denying the eternal sonship of Christ and that a child could take no part in begetting his own father, the terrible act was approved by all the Protestant ministers of Europe. The Catholics were silent only because Calvin had robbed them of the honor of burning another heretic to death. As steam is a power which will move any kind of machinery, from that of an ocean steamship down to a thrashing-machine, so religion is a sentiment which will avail itself of any theology by the propagation of which it can indulge and exhibit its genuin spirit. Perhaps the most innocent creed in all Christendom is Unitarianism. It consists mainly of a denial of all the essential articles of the orthodox faith, and its claim to be a Christian instead of a Deistical sect rests upon the fact that it calls Christ "master."

According to Mr. Browne's theory, having little or no theology in its creed and bond of union, Unitarianism would hav a good chance to show to the expectant world that, after a long search, it had come very near finding what no other Protestant sect had found, a fine sample of the "true" religion. But we who are old enough remember well that when that great prophet, Theodore Parker, came to Boston to plant another mile stone on the highway of progress, the Unitarians frowned upon him as a teacher of damnable heresy—just as Calvin frowned upon Servetus when he came to Geneva—and as the laws of Massachusetts had been changed and would not permit them to punish him for his crimes, the most pious of the brethren quenched their zeal in prayer to God that he would work a miracle, and put his hook in the nose of this Sennacherib of heresy, and a bridle in his jaws, and turn him back by the way in which he came to Boston.

The Jewish system had only four points in its theology. The first was that, among all the other gods of the nations round about, Jehovah was supreme. Secondly, that a representation of his person by graven images was sinful. Thirdly, that his name was not to be spoken in a careless and irreverent spirit. And fourthly, that the seventh day of the week should be observed as a day of absolute rest, in commemoration of the rest Jehovah took after finishing the six days' work of creation, and of their escape under his guidance, from the land of Egypt and the house of bondage. These four precepts were theological; that is to say, they related immediately to God. The other six were ethical, and intended to be a code of morals for the Jewish people exclusivly, for how could the Fourth Commandment be obeyed according to law in a climate such as ours is half the year, and on a globe revolving on its axis every twenty-four hours?

The service of Jehovah consisted in a strict observance of the laws dictated by him to Moses, and which are recorded at length in the Pentateuch, or first five books of the Bible.

Now, the Jewish theology, consisting of only four points, or phases of faith concerning God, was comparativly a small affair. By actual count of one of these gentlemen who are now engaged in doctoring the divinity of the Presbyterian Confession, that creed has more than two thousand phases of faith. Let us see what was the temper or religious feeling toward those Jews who changed their creed, and adopted that of any of the neighboring nations. The law is laid down in Deut. xiii, and may be examined as it there stands. As the Old Testament is as much inspired and as much a rule of faith and practice as the New, we see clearly how Christianity came to harmonize with Judaism in prosecuting a man by law for holding wrong theological opinions. It was the Jews who first taught this cruel and idiotic doctrin; and in taking their own medicin, administered by the Christians for nearly two thousand years, they hav suffered as no other people under heaven hav suffered. This unceasing persecution of them because they do not exchange their theology for that of the Christians, has altered their national character, and made a trading and commercial people out of a nation of farmers, as they were in Palestine. It has bred into them the humble and craven spirit of fear and subjection to such a degree that, although they hav in large numbers become citizens of the United States and taxpayers, and form little or no part of the pauper and criminal classes, and hav both the spirit and letter of the national Constitution on their side, they uncomplainingly submit to unconstitutional state laws, which rob them of no less than fifty-two working days in the year, as a fine and punishment for being Israelites, and observing the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath appointed by Jehovah, instead of the first day of the week as commanded by the emperor Constantine and the Christian church. In Num. xv, we hav a recorded case, showing the stringency of the law for the observance of the Sabbath in the Jewish theocracy, and the deeply religious zeal and devotion with which the officers of the government enforced it. To save space and labor we refer the reader to the record.

Did the spirit of religion change its character when the meek and lowly Jesus appeared upon the stage, eighteen hundred years ago, as a teacher and exemplar to his followers? Let us see. James and John were his favorit disciples, and Luke, the evangelist, in chap. ix, 51, of his gospel informs us that when the time was come that he should be received up, Jesus steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, and sent messengers to a village of the Samaritans to make ready for him. But the Samaritans, who were mongrel Jews, and committed the great crime of worshiping Jehovah on Mount Gerizzim instead of Mount Zion, seeing that he was bound for Jerusalem, thus discriminating against them, took umbrage at the offense and refused to receive him; and when James and John saw this appearance of disrespect they waxed angry, and said: "Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down out of heaven, and consume them even as Elias did?" Here we see that the persecuting spirit was latent in the hearts of these devoted followers of Christ, as naturally as fire is latent in the cold stone and iron and always shows its presence when the friction of circumstances takes place.

The Moslem or Mohammedan theology is different from ours in that it puts the prophet Mohammed in the place of Christ, the Koran in the place of the New Testament, and Allah in the place of the triune God. If Mr. Browne's logic is correct, there should hav been a modification of the spirit of religion, as the impelling power, corresponding with the radical difference existing between the two theologies. But the animating principle of both is identically the same. The religion of the Moslem, when stirred up with zeal for the glory of Allah, slaughters the Christians with a curved instrument called a cimeter; while the religion of the Christians, when fired with holy ardor for the glory of the triune God, slaughters the Moslem with a nearly straight weapon called a sword. It is religion, per se, which first forms, and then puts the devil of persecution into, every system of theology that exists or has ever existed; and this is the reason why the Jewish, the Catholic, the Moslem, the Episcopal, the Congregational, and the Presbyterian churches, when they had political power, as they all once had, were guilty of the crime of persecution for opinion's sake. The caldron of fire and brimstone is the only alembic where an infernal chemistry can distil out of the elements of ignorance and fear the intoxicating and cruel spirit of persecution that has ever characterized the church as an organization when it had political power. Who ever heard of an Infidel evincing a desire to send a man to prison, or the stake, on account of what he believes or disbelieves in the matter of theology? No one. Why? Because an Infidel has no religion. He is governed in his sentiments and conducts this life by that lofty code of morals which originates out of the natural constitution of things, and which never lowers its requirements to suit the vices and crimes of any age, but is the same, yesterday, to-day, and forever.

This is indeed the ninetieth year of the present century, and the spread of knowledge has so enlightened the world, and the laws of every civilized nation, that even the pope of Rome is disarmed of power, and can no longer persecute a man on account of his religion. But he that reads the literature of that set of religionists now struggling to insert into the United States Constitution a theological creed, and compel by law the observance of religious ceremonies, without the least regard to the wishes and convictions of the overwhelming majority of the American people; whoever notices the despicable trickery, the downright fraud, perjury, and forgery resorted to by the clergy and the devout women, with Senator Blair at their head; whoever has observed that, in the memorials to Congress asking for a union of church and state, there are such false statements made as to the number of petitioners that mealy-mouthed senators declare from their places, and in the ears of the nation, that "the statements" of these intensely religious people "are not true;" whoever, I say, notices these facts and many others like them will come to the conviction, however much against his will, that the sentiment of religion now making a display of itself in our political affairs, is exactly the same as it has always been in the persecuting ages of the past, mean, lying, unscrupulous, essentially traitorous, and the greatest danger that now threatens the existence of this republic.

A. B. BRADFORD.

Enon Valley, Pa., March 20, 1890.

The Plaint of an Old-timer.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: I think I violate no confidence or friendship in sending a copy for publication of the following singular but seemingly well-meant letter addressed to me from an early Connecticut school companion. DAVID BRUCE.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

FRIEND D.: It is seldom I hear from you now. But Oh, how my heart aches when your name is mentioned, dancing as it were over the mouth of hell, the bottomless pit, trusting as it were to something they call science! You well know what the scriptures say about science. But I am afraid the reports I heard of your apostasy from your early teachings is too true.

When Deacon Jones made you his last friendly visit he absolutely saw Tom Paine's "Age of Reason" on your library shelves, and also strewn around your table that Infidel paper called THE TRUTH SEEKER, and many other soul-endangering spiritual papers. Now, my old school-mate D. B., we were reared under the self-restraining laws of Connecticut. Your hair was trimmed to the same lawful length as my own, and with the same shears, and now I fear you are in a state of frightful apostasy, while, thank God, I hav never changed. Thank God, I never change; never, never.

It is true New York city has tended to familiarize you with city vices, with its twenty or thirty theaters and other places of sinful fascinations all tending to hell. I hav no idea of temporizing with sin; with these misleading miscreants who call themselvs Agnostics; creatures presuming to doubt, to exercise human reason. Do you think if the wholesome laws of our forefathers had always been properly enforced that such disturbers as Colonel Ingersoll, Pentecost, and hundreds of others would hav been allowed utterance? By no means. You and your whole set of progressiv thinkers, men and women, would be flogged at the tail of carts until you sang praises to Jesus that you lived in a God-fearing land. As this probably is my last effort to reclaim a ruined soul let me add it is a painful reflection that prospectivly I may be looking down from heaven and see you gyrating and waltzing hopelessly in the flames of hell.

Norwalk, Conn. DEACON WEED.

Christopher Columbus's Bones.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: In your issue on the 15th inst., you hav published that the Dominican government had offered the bones of Christopher Columbus for $20,000 and part of the amount collected during the exhibition in 1892.

I am sorry to say that your good faith has been imposed upon, as you will see by the inclosed letter from the Dominican consul in this city relativ to the subject; and the translation of which, herewith also inclosed, I request of you to publish in your important paper as an act of justice to all parties concerned. JOSEPH FELIX GONZALEZ.

New York.

THE CONSUL'S LETTER.

DOMINICAN CONSULATE IN NEW YORK,
NEW YORK, March 26, 1890.

DEAR SIR: I hav received your letter of yesterday's date about the news published by some newspapers of this city concerning the alleged negotiations initiated by the Dominican government with the object of disposing for a certain amount of the bones of Christopher Columbus. In reply I hav to state that my government has not only authorized me to deny the veracity of said news, but has also informed me of all that has transpired on the subject.

About the middle of last year Mr. H. C. C. Astwood, consul of the United States of America in the city of San Domingo, made proposals to my government about exhibiting the bones of Christopher Columbus in this country. The answer given by my government to Mr. H. C. C. Astwood's proposal was to immediately withdraw his exequatur, and demand that the American government annul, by telegraph, his appointment as consul of the United States of America in San Domingo. I am, etc., (Signed) M. DE J. GALVAN, Lijo.

Mr. Burr Has the Last Word.

BROTHER MACDONALD: Why shouldn't I retort "with considerable acerbity" to an acerb criticism? And is "Oh, hades!" a closer approach to profanity than "Great Jupiter!" or "Lord, Lord?" See?

No "signature on a slate" at Keeler's, so far as I know or hav heard, is "an illegible scrawl," and rarely so on a tablet, except when it is held unsteadily before the curtain to be written on by a visible hand.

Facts are paramount with me. I take little or no interest in arguments between Materialists and Spiritualists. In my experience of more than forty years I hav found avowed Spiritualists to be the most careful, diligent, and critical investigators of the phenomena. I hav known Darius Lyman, late chief in the treasury department, for thirty years past. He certifies to General Lippitt that he has "been present probably at over a hundred of these (Keeler) séances," and has "seen no reasonable ground to suspect fraud." General Lippitt thinks he has himself attended "a hundred or more," many of which he describes in his pamphlet. And I recommend the same to anyone who thinks that the Seybert commission detected any fraud at the single séance at Keeler's which they (i.e., seven of the ten) attended. The upshot of their report is stated by General Lippitt as follows:

First, That Keeler "might hav" surreptitiously got his right arm free.

Second, That once the medium's right arm disengaged, every one of the manifestations "might hav" been produced by himself.

But the evidence reported by the committee, as anyone can see, proves the contrary.

The committee received ten or twelve written messages thrown over the screen to its various members. At the close of the séance the committee declined to read them, saying "they would publish them in their coming report;" but the messages were suppressed.

I once sat with General Lippitt and Mr. Keeler, at a private house. A hand came out between our shoulders. It beckoned to a skeptical German to come up and shake. The German had been allowed to attend the séance under promis to make no disturbance. But he thought here was an opportunity to expose a fraud. So he tried to hold on to the hand, but instead of that he got jerked almost through the curtain and lost his grip. "It ish Keeler's hand," he said. "Why didn't you hold on to it?" retorted the imperturbable Keeler. "You would hav been the first that ever did it."

This disturbance ended the séance, and as we sitters were uncovered, at my request Mr. Keeler extended his arm as far as he could around General Lippitt's shoulders toward mine. Mr. Keeler's hand fell short of the point where the "spirit" hand appeared by about eight inches. And it was that "spirit" hand that gave the sturdy Dutchman such a pull, when, as General Lippitt attests, the medium's two hands were grasping his own right arm.

"Let us hav the facts as they occur," says the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and to that I say amen. BURR.

The Resurrection!

I read Mr. W. S. Bell's essay on "The Resurrection of Jesus," and find that, from a scientific standpoint, according to the law of gravitation, a material body could not then, and cannot now, ascend to heaven, as such a body would necessarily be brought down to earth again. It is true that another law has been discovered (solidarity) that displays the fact that, when one goes up, all go up. Now, according to the Christian religion, confirmation, membership in a church, and holy communion, are not essential or absolutely necessary to salvation. The true doctrin, or essence, of Christianity is to simply believe in Christ Jesus and all his word, and not the preacher's. If the story of the cross and resurrection is not a true one, then, of course, the Christian religion, as a divine institution, must necessarily fall.

Nauvoo, Ill. GEO. ALEX. RITTER.

Items of Science.

The Mount Morgan gold mine in Queensland, Australia, has paid dividends equal to $5 500,000 during the past year. In that time it has produced 323 542 ounces of gold.

Incandescent electric lamps of three thousand candle power each are now being experimented with in Germany. These lamps hav a uniform, clear, yellowish light, differing from the ordinary incandescent lamps only in their greater illuminating power. They are said to hav a life of one thousand hours, require no attention more than to turn them on or off, and are intended to take the place of arc lamps.

A submarine plow one hundred feet long, thirty-five feet wide, and twelve feet deep, is about to be constructed in San Francisco. It is intended to plow out the many bars on the Sacramento river. It will be operated by steam-engins of fifty-four horse-power, and it is expected to scoop out a space six feet deep and forty feet wide at each drive through the bar, the swift current carrying the sand farther down the river. A machine somewhat similar in construction was used in the lower part of the Mississippi river before Eads constructed the jetties at its mouth.

The Eiffel tower, for meteorological purposes, it has been discovered, possesses most of the advantages of a mountain observatory. Recently, while a severe frost prevailed in the streets of Paris, the summit of the tower was favored by a warm breeze, and the temperature prevailing at the summit traveled slowly to the base, reaching it three days afterward.

Lectures and Meetings.

AT the Liberal Club next Friday evening, April 11th, Mr. William Dudley Foulke will speak upon "Civil Service Reform."

W. F. JAMIESON has been lecturing in Nebraska and Iowa to appreciativ audiences. His address at Cooke, Neb., was the first Liberal lecture ever delivered in the town. At Auburn he spoke on the labor question—"Bellamy's Dream." After speaking thrice at Shenandoah, Ia., he visited Peoria. His address is Des Moines, Ia.

THE remaining lectures for April at the Brooklyn Philosophical Association, Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South Second street, are as follows: Sunday, April 13th, Mr. J. A. Skilton; subject, "The Mechanic Arts and Patent Laws." Sunday, April 20th, Dr. L. G. Janes; subject, "Ultimate Social Tendencies under the Law of Evolution." Sunday, April 27th, Miss Helen H. Gardener; subject, "Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle." These lectures are followed by discussion. Lecture at 3 P.M.

FREETHOUGHT has at last secured a foothold in the orthodox commonwealth of Arkansas. J. E. Remsburg has made two trips to that state this spring and has everywhere been greeted with large and appreciativ audiences. At Rogers he has just closed a four nights' debate with the Rev. J. F. Ackers, a prominent Campbellite divine, which drew large crowds, a special train being run for the accommodation of those who wished to attend. The Liberals are jubilant over the result and the Christians are correspondingly depressed.

Communications.

God.

It is quite interesting to trace the evolution and characteristics of the Jewish and Christian God. According to Genesis, God, in Adam's day, was thoroughly anthropomorphic, with real flesh and blood—at least, his sons were, for they came down to earth, courted and married the daughters of men, and raised up families of great strapping boys, who became "giants in those days, men of renown" (Gen. vi, 2, 4). As Ingersoll says, "I don't blame them for leaving such a Shaker community as heaven is represented to be, where 'they neither marry nor are given in marriage,' and joining one where more congenial social relations existed." But it puzzles me, on this hypothesis, how God came legitimately by his sons. Neither does it appear how Christ could be his only begotten son in view of these facts. But perhaps this is part of the mystery of godliness. At this early date this God was not, as now, a spirit, neither was he unchangeable, all-wise, or almighty, as scripture history proves. In those days men acted so wickedly that God repented that he had made man, and it grieved him at his heart. So he drowned him. Now, an unchangeable God could not thus repent or be grieved. Man also did acts of wickedness that had not come into his mind—that he had not thought of. An infinitly wise God scans at a glance the whole cycle of eternity, and knowing all things, cannot thus be taken by surprise. God required his servants to fear him, and sometimes he tempted them, to ascertain whether they did or not, which an all-wise God would not hav needed to do. It is said God tempted Abraham. He commanded him to offer up as a burnt offering his only son Isaac, and, like a similar stupid, irrational, blind victim of a devilish superstition at Pocasset, proceeded to perpetrate the unnatural, fiendish murder. But just as he raised the knife to perpetrate the horrid deed God told him to stop, and gave this reason: "For now I know that thou fearest me." He was no longer ignorant on that point. Speaking of Sodom, God said: "I will go down now and see whether they hav done altogether according to the cry of it that is come unto me, and if not I will know." His servants seem to hav brought so distressing a report of the wickedness of Sodom that he doubted its truth, and he thought if he would go down himself and make a thorough personal investigation of the matter he would know just how it was, so he went down, called with Abraham, had a long talk with him, ate his calf, got his feet washed also, etc. This was all natural enough. At that time the world was flat, the heavens, where God and the angels resided, were only a mile or two above the earth, as the holy, infallible mother church less than three hundred years ago compelled us to believe, or, like Bruno, be burnt at the stake. Sodom was, perhaps, forty miles away. The telescope had not then been invented, and it would require uncommonly good natural eyesight in one so old as God was to see minutely what was going on at such a distance. Jehovah was a Hebrew and Jewish product, and, as is the case generally, was just like his authors, only more so. He was located above their country, and, like them, was fond of the smell of roasting flesh, and when they sacrificed their burnt offerings and the smoke ascended to his abode, he smelt a sweet savor and was happy. The more offerings they burnt the better he liked them and the more surely he would protect them. At least, so they thought. He was not the almighty who never wearies, for he sometimes got tired and rested and was refreshed. He drank wine to such an extent that it cheered his heart. Sometimes he got defeated in a fair fight, as when he and Judah could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley because they had chariots of iron. Neither was he a match for Jacob as a wrestler, and in acknowledgment of Jacob's victory his name, which meant a supplanter, was changed to Israel, which meant God-conqueror.

Sometimes this God exhibited himself and talked face to face with men, as a man talketh with a friend, and at other times he showed his back parts. He seemed to hav very large approbativness, and would get very angry if people did not speak well of him, and praise him constantly. He would even get into such a passion that he would so far forget himself as to use profane language, and swear in his wrath, when it was well to keep out of his way or he might trample you in his fury. He moved David to number the people, and when David had done so he killed seventy thousand innocent people because he did it, and went on with his cruel, merciless slaughter, till even David expostulated with him, saying, "These sheep, what hav they done?" He was killing the sheep instead of the wolf, like the man who killed the goslings because the gander bit him. On another occasion he killed fifty thousand and seventy men who had been reaping wheat in the valley of Bethshemish, because they climbed on a big stone that lay in the field and looked into a venerated old box they called the ark, to see some relics and curiosities he kept in it. At another time he prepared a great fish that it might swallow up a disobedient prophet, and adjusted its internal compartments so that he could liv, but without much comfort, in it. The prophet called the fish hell. Jonah said, "Out of the belly of hell cried I." Christian Theists, while professing to believe in this same God, hav stripped him of many of his anthropomorphic features, and given him a much more spiritual character. They define God thus: "God is a spirit, infinit, eternal, and unchangeable in his being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth. They teach that this earth, and the universe of which it is an atom, were designed by God's wisdom and created by his power. All agree that he knew from eternity exactly what would be the result of his work. And a very large per cent of the Christian world believe that he foreordained or decreed every event, both good and bad—whatsoever comes to pass. If God is infinit in power, he could just as easily, had he so willed, hav made our race strong, wise, and virtuous, as weak, foolish, and vicious. Had he done so, it would hav been saved from the terrible suffering and agony folly and vice hav brought upon it. But he, foreseeing the result, made the world and the race just as he did, preparing a hell in which to torture in eternal fire the nine-tenths, perhaps, of all mankind. He made us too weak to stand, and then damned us for falling. We must believe in Christ, of whom not one in ten of all the billions of the human race ever heard, or be damned. "For every idle word or thought [simply idle] God will bring us into judgment." The catechism declares that every sin, no matter how trivial, deserves God's wrath and curse, both in this life and that which is to come—that is, hell. According to the creed of Christendom, God made no adequate revelation of his laws and requirements to the vast majority of our race, and therefore they ignorantly break them. Yet still he damns them. Orthodoxy teaches that God is no respecter of persons. Yet he selects a few, often the chief of sinners, "makes them willing in the day of his power," and saves them, while to another class of sinners he sends strong delusion that they should believe a lie, that they all might be damned. Of others it is said, "He hath blinded their eyes and hardened their hearts lest they should see with their eyes and understand with their hearts and be converted, and I should heal them."

The church tells us that God demands absolute, perfect obedience to all his laws, moral, mental, and physical. Yet he has, himself, rendered such obedience impossible. How can we obey the laws of health, when the air God has given us to breathe is charged with miasmatic poisons fatal to health and life? The water, also, that we are often compelled to drink, contains germs of various diseases, against which we know not how to protect ourselvs. These diseases often destroy the moral and mental balance, and render perfection, in the absolute strict sense of the catechisms, a sheer impossibility and absurdity. God placed us here without knowledge or experience among fierce, carnivorous wild beasts, poisonous reptils and insects, where poisonous fruits grow upon the trees and vines, and poisonous vegetables in the ground, and did not giv us one word of counsel or information as to how we might know or avoid the terrible and fatal dangers that surrounded us. He left us to learn the fatal character of the serpent's fangs by the agony and death they inflicted, and that of the poisonous fruits and vegetables in a similar manner, and then damned us if we did not love him with all our heart, soul, strength, and mind, and honor and worship him as our kind protector, father, and friend!

Christians defend God's action in this matter by telling us that the infinit God cannot be expected to devote his time and attention to such trifles. But would not giving a little needed instruction to his ignorant children when, according to his own arrangement, their salvation from death and hell depended on it, hav been as reasonable and beneficial as counting the hairs of our heads, or watching the sparrows? Would not the giving of such instruction hav been more creditable to God, and much more beneficial to his rational creatures, than giving directions as to the pattern and fringes of the priest's breeches, and how to besmear the great toe of his right foot, the thumb of his right hand, and his right ear with blood, and the thousand and one other directions and tomfooleries recorded in Leviticus?

God, it seems, could find time to inspire the writers of the Old Testament to record the lewd, vulgar, and disgusting sayings and doings of the old patriarchs and others; and David to write the fiendish exterminating curses on the innocent, fatherless children of his enemies, recorded in Psalms cix; and Solomon to write his prize obscene Song of Songs. But he had neither the time nor the inclination to giv his unfortunate children sufficient information in art, science, etc., to secure to the people that genuin enlightenment and civilization which would hav guaranteed to all education, equal rights, and the enjoyment of civil and religious liberty, and the highest development of the race. Had he done so, mankind would hav escaped the curses of paganism, and the far greater curses of the Christian brutality and heathenism of the Dark Ages.

Is it strange that the great scientists and honest, truth-loving thinkers of our age should repudiate such a God, and retire him with the god-myths of the ancient nations? Such is his inevitable destiny. We are commanded to "be followers of God as dear children." Yet, were we to follow the example he sets us every day, we would deserve the penitentiary or the gallows. To witness a crime we could prevent, and make no effort to do so, renders us equally guilty with the perpetrator of it. But God has been the constant witness of crimes the most horrible and atrocious. He has seen the innocent victims of Christian superstition and hate tortured and starved in dark, dank dungeons; broken on the wheel; burnt at the stake; roasted in ovens; their nails and tongues torn out; their eyes bored out with red-hot irons, and their flesh torn with red-hot pincers. He saw Christians hate, and plot and execute the butchery of sixty or seventy thousand innocent men, women, and children in the massacre of St. Bartholomew, and saw ten thousand other nameless atrocities, which he could just as easily hav prevented as permitted had he wished. Yet he remained as inactiv and, apparently, as unsympathetic as a marble statue. Still we are taught that, all down through the ages, he was taking a deep interest in human affairs. He struck Ananias and Sapphira dead for telling a white lie, at the bidding of Peter, who was himself a perjured liar and still alive.

According to Catholicism, he has been working third-rate miracles ever since. To accommodate a pack of ignorant, besotted priests, he has been constantly changing bread into the real flesh, and wine into the real blood of Christ, so that the faithful could eat and digest him. That is the God they worshiped. He has also been working miracles by means of relics, etc., such as the bones of former saints; sometimes, through mistake, they hav been wrought in connection with the bones of an ancient, defunct ass, they answering the purpose just as well. According to the Catholics, the most important thing their God found to do, as he stood in the midst of the horrors of the Johnstown disaster, was to save the picture of the Virgin, though five thousand of his helpless children, in the agonies of a frightful death, were crying to him in vain for help! Nor was the Protestant God any better. He saw the Presbyterians and Puritans torture and murder thousands of innocent people, on the foolish charge of witchcraft. He witnessed the sickening cruelties of the slave trade and slavery, in this and other countries, without the slightest intimation of disapproval. None of these things moved him. But if he saw some young people bathing on Sunday, or innocently enjoying themselvs in a boat on the water on that day, it affected him, as the church blasphemously teaches, as the red rag does the bull—made him very angry, and he would likely swear in his wrath that they should not enter into his rest, and proceed at once to upset their boat and drown them. Or if he saw parties securing their harvest on Sunday, he would strike their barns with lightning, and burn them. See publications of the American Tract Society on the Sabbath question. Thus the Christian churches picture their God. What a cruel monster they make him!

W. W. WALKER

Is there No Remedy?

The economic inequity, with its long series of social, political, and other wrongs, forces itself upon everybody's attention everywhere, either in its concrete ugliness, or through the daily press, and it is only those who want to ignore it, that affect not to see it. Charity cannot be a remedy, and as a means of temporary relief, it only fosters the demoralizing influences of poverty. Married life, this corner stone of humanism, has become a luxury long ago, because a wage-worker hardly earns enough to support himself steadily. The open and secret prostitution has implanted habits of depravity, and has established such license in the intercourse that flies would be ashamed of it, if they ever had a notion of the family institution. Children under ten years are required to support parents who, through sickness, or for some other reasons, are unable to earn their living. Girls, who ought to be under training and be preparing themselvs to become good wives and loving mothers, are driving out of offices, stores, factories, and shops their fathers and brothers, into prisons and correctional institutions. Suicide is beginning to be looked upon as the only available means for putting an end to misery, and to escape starvation. Respectable living cannot be obtained by honest exertion, and it is only by robbing others of the fruits of their labor that one can provide his family with a comfortable home. Wages are getting lamer and lamer every day, and it is only by being a political worker that one can secure a fair pay. Fair-minded employers of large numbers of hands confess their inability to increase the wages of their men, on account of competition, which compels them to adhere to the lowest current rates, under the penalty of having to close their establishments. Corruption of judges, of the administration, and of the daily press, aggravates the evils by playing into the hands of the rich against the wage-earners. Gambling with all kinds of stocks and securities, together with the organizing of trusts and corners, tends to lower the wages and to increase the number of those who liv comfortably, without working, on the interest on the money legally squeezed out of the producing classes. The distress is considerably intensified by the circumstance that no marketable article can be produced in our days without using improved tools and costly machinery, i.e., without having first spent quite a considerable amount of money in the acquisition of the necessary instruments and means of production. Industry carried on on a small scale almost without capital, as it existed fifty years ago, does not, and cannot, exist now. Add to this frequent lockouts, due to greediness or to the pressure brought by larger capital on the smaller one, and the odds against which wage-earners hav to fight, with nothing but their muscles and willingness to work, are apt to crush the strongest among them.

As this distressing state of economic conditions could not be entirely ignored by political leaders and legislators without compromising them in the eyes of their constituents, we find as a result of their efforts various acts and ordinances passed with the avowed purpose of abating some of these wrongs or for the sake of giving at least partial relief. The bureau of statistics, the investigation of the condition of labor in mining districts, the limitation of the day's work to ten hours, the exclusion of children from factories and mines, the introduction of safety appliances in shops, the compulsory education, the boards of arbitration, the liability of employers, and other measures of minor importance were passed with this object. Whether the fathers of those ordinances were in earnest, or it was for them merely a means of advancing their personal interests, matters little. The result remains still this: That most of those enactments are so much wasted paper, at least for the wage-worker, and hav not brought about the slightest betterment in his conditions. The computation of earnings and of the number of workmen could not increase their wages or improve their chances of making a living. The investigation of distress has not removed the cause of it. The ten hours law does not prevent railroad companies from exacting twenty hours' service from their locomotiv engineers, as it was recently proved to the satisfaction of a criminal jury in a case of manslaughter, of which an engineer was accused for having run over and killed a man, while he, the engineer, fell asleep, with his hand grasping the throttle lever. Children continue to work everywhere, and our streets are overrun with newsboys, bootblacks, telegraph and telephone messenger boys, when they should be attending the school. Safety guards, fire escapes, and belt protectors exist mostly on paper, and capital has even found it profitable to build such dwellings for workmen that they hav no more stability than a toy house. Compulsory education has merely given employment to an army of truant officers who probably would not be able to earn their salt in any other capacity, and it has, moreover, brought with it another evil of sending the truant children to a common prison, as it was found afterward that the legislativ act did not make any provision for a reformatory institution. The boards of arbitration are either playing fools—as they hav no authority of enforcing their decisions—or they hav occasionally a good time with an employer, who invites them to a lunch, and, as a matter of course, they arbitrate for the caterer and the sideboard. The liability of employers has only increased the business of lawyers, who fight each other in the courts and levy heavily on both sides. All these measures are more or less failures in regard to the relief expected from them. They may hav done some good to others, but not to the wage-worker, who became only so much wiser by seeing that capital can defy the law whenever it pleases. Add to this, that the courts hav on several occasions rendered decisions adverse to strikes and boycotting, which for workmen were the only means of expressing their protest against imposition in an effectiv manner.

Simultaneously with these practical attempts at relieving the working masses, there was going on an uninterrupted theoretical discussion and search for means to that effect. The literature of the subject is quite bulky; but, so far, the reformers and agitators are not agreed yet either as to the main cause or the manner of improving the economic conditions. Leaving aside factions and disagreement on points of secondary importance, there are two principal suggestions—the nationalization of land or the single tax scheme, and the nationalization of all means of production. As to the Anarchists, they hav not explained yet with sufficient precision, in what way, by abolishing the political state, will the unrestricted freedom of individual activity destroy the economic inequities.

That the single-tax scheme is not apt to put the economic conditions on a rational basis, is obvious from the consideration, that land is only one factor, but not the whole factor of the production. This has been pointed out in a very forcible manner by a very talented opponent of Henry George's doctrin, who proves that the claims of the immense capital invested in machinery and industrial plants cannot be disregarded.

The second project appears much more radical, so far as the destruction of the existing economic conditions is concerned. But there is not the slightest hint given as to how the new order will evolve from it, and what will be its characteristic features. Will it be of the nature of Fourier's phalansteries—or must we prepare ourselvs for a government of philosophers, in accordance with St. Simon's view—or will Robert Owen's educational scheme prevail—or any other entirely new program?

In view of the above indicated failures of practice and theory to solve the dilemma, what are we going to do with it? To be sitting idly and waiting, that something satisfactory may turn up from some quarter of the windrose, would be a crime, seeing that the evil is assuming larger proportions with every day, and that the masses may be driven to desperation by the increasing oppression. That the dissatisfaction is steadily growing is an open secret, and those who, while enjoying all the comfort money can purchase and industrial arts furnish, express their surprise that workmen are discontented with their precarious mode of living, notwithstanding that they liv much better than their fathers did fifty years ago, reason from a wrong standpoint. You cannot appease a man's hunger by arguing with him that he has just finished his dinner and consequently cannot be hungry, when he knows very well that he had not had enough of it and that the food was not as palatable as he would like to hav it. That his grandfather, probably, would hav been perfectly pleased with the meal he had just finished, is no reason that he should be. It is not the wage-worker, but the wealthy man, who is reasoning from wrong premises and committing the same fallacy which was the cause of the tragic death of Louis XVI. That king of France was as good-hearted a man as ever lived, and even much better than the average kings of France were. Yet his goodness did not save him and he expired on the scaffold for the single error he had committed, viz., that he did not want to put himself mentally into the position of those who were suffering through his extravagant mode of living and his bad administration of public affairs.

My suggestion is simply this, to call a convention of delegates from the states for the purpose of discussing the economic question and of devising some means for the abolishment of the existing inequities. The delegates may be chosen either in accordance with the United States election laws, or under state rules. The convention must sit permanently, until it has agreed upon some kind of proclamation of principles and of a scheme bringing about the reform.

New York city. EDWARD L. STARCK.

Extracts from Father Chiniquy's Book, "The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional."

After twenty-five years of hearing the confessions of the common people, and of the highest classes of society, of the laymen and the priests, of the grand vicars, bishops, and nuns, I conscientiously say before the world, that the immorality of the confessional is of a more dangerous and degrading nature than that which we attribute to the social evil of our great cities. I declare that the confessor himself encounters more terrible dangers when hearing the confessions of refined and highly educated ladies, than when listening to those of a humbler class of his female penitents. I solemnly testify that the well-educated lady, when she has once surrendered herself to the power of her confessor, becomes at least as vulnerable to the arrows of the enemy as the poorer and less educated. Nay, I must say that, once on the downhill road of perdition, the high bred lady runs headlong into the pit with more deplorable rapidity than her humble sister.

Many would be the folio volumes which I should hav to write, were I to publish all that my twenty five years' experience in the confessional has taught me of the unspeakable secret corruption of the greatest part of the so-called respectable ladies, who hav unconditionally surrendered themselvs into the hands of their "holy" confessors.

I hav heard the confession of more than two hundred priests, and, to say the truth, as God knows it, I must declare that only twenty-one had not to weep over the secret or public sins committed through the irresistible, corrupting influences of auricular confession. I am now more than seventy-seven years old, and, in a short time, I shall be in my grave. I shall hav to giv an account of what I now say. Well, in the presence of my great judge, with my tomb before my eyes, I declare to the world that very few—yes, very few—priests escape from falling into the pit of the most horrible moral depravity the world has ever known, through the confessions of females.

Not long ago a printer in England was sent to jail and severely punished for having published in English the questions put by the priest to the women in the confessional; and the sentence was equitable, for all who read those questions will conclude that no girl or woman who brings her mind into contact with the contents of that book can escape from moral death. But what are the priests of Rome doing in the confessional? Do they not pass the greatest part of their time in questioning females, old and young, and hearing their answers on those very matters? . . . What is the difference between a woman or a girl learning those things in a book or learning them from the lips of a man? . . . Let us suppose that each priest hears the confessions of only five female penitents every day (though we know the daily average is ten), it givs the awful number of five hundred thousand women whom the priests of Rome hav the legal right to pollute and destroy each day of the year!

There is not a single one of the Roman Catholic authors who hav written on this subject for the priests who has not deplored the innumerable and degrading sins against purity on account of the auricular confession; but those very men will be the first to try to prove the very contrary when they write books for the people.

Freethou ht Martyrs.

SWEDISH FREETHINKERS WHO HAV BEEN FOUND GUILTY AND PUNISHED FOR BLASPHEMY.

Victor E. Lennstrand, sentenced in Nov., 1888, to three months' imprisonment for "denial of God, a life after this, and the pure evangelical religion," in Oerebro. In Oct., 1889, to three months' imprisonment for blasphemy against God in the lecture, "Why I Am Hostil toward Christianity," delivered at Stalmo. Sentenced at the same time to three months' imprisonment for blasphemy in the lecture on "God," delivered at Stockholm. Sentenced in Dec., 1889, Svea Hofrätt, to six months' imprisonment for blasphemy in the lecture, "Why I Am Hostil Toward Christianity," held in Uppkeddiha. The king has not yet indorsed this sentence, and an additional case is yet to be decided by the courts. The poet Axel Danilsson, sentenced to a fine of five hundred crowns for reprinting Lennstrand's "A Greeting," and to respectivly four, three, and three months for blasphemy, these judgments by Stalmo city court. Henry Branting, sentenced by Stockholm city court to a fine of three hundred crowns for Lennstrand's "A Greeting," and to three and a half months' imprisonment for blasphemy. C. A. Rydgreen, to four months' imprisonment for reprinting the article, "To the Originator of the Universe." Alfred Lindquist, to one month's imprisonment for reprinting the pamphlet, "Who Is to be Damned if Christianity Is True?" for which Lennstrand was twice acquitted by a jury. J. A. Berg, sentenced to one month's imprisonment for delivering a parody on "Our Father."

All in all, thirteen judgments for blasphemy since 1888, and in the nineteenth century, in a civilized country, by a government whose officials profess a belief in the command of Jesus, "Love your enemies."

Brotherhood of Moralists.

Report of the propaganda committee of the Brotherhood of Moralists of Hannibal, Mo., for the month of March, 1890:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

During the month 54 membership certificates were issued, making the total number enrolled 947. The new members are: From Oregon, 25; Texas, 1; New Mexico, 2; Iowa, 13; California, 1; Missouri, 1; Ohio, 1; Georgia, 1; Idaho, 6; Kansas, 1; Colorado, 2.

During the month two local brotherhoods hav been organized: one at Taney, Ida., and one at Prairie City, Ia. The secretary of the former is Thomas Weaver, and of the latter F. V. Draper. We are under obligations to Brothers C. Close, Hatton, Mich; F. M Cone, Axtell, Kan.; J. D. Shaw, Waco, Tex.; George Macdonald, San Francisco, Cal.; H. L. Green, Buffalo, N. Y., for papers and magazines.

F. H. RAU, Sec.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Balance from February	$3 30
Received from Samos Parsons, Cal	5 00
H. Feetish, New Mexico	2 00
L. A. Thornton, Alabama	1 00
G. W. Tillotson, N. Y.	75
Amasa Wood, Mass.	30
R. M. Stender, Missouri	40
S. Kitchens, Georgia	15
J. W. Fitch, Massachusetts; Charles Miller, M. Goulan, Charles Dalkenburg, South Dakota; J. W. Swaysgood, Indiana. each 50 cents	2 50
Dr. Lottridge, Kansas, and A. L. McFarlane, Idaho, each 25 cents	50
G. H. Eversole, F. Steiner, T. Weaver, Charles Lambert, W. G. Morgan, J. Newman, D. Cook, each 10 cents	70
Total	$16 60
Expended in mailing constitutions, circulars, membership certificates, letters, etc	6 35
Balance	$10 25

A. R. AYRES, Treas.

WE should as jealously defend freedom in others as in ourselvs, and see that they are not unjustly dealt with in our interest, any more than against it. The liberty of our opponent may be as important to us as is our own liberty; and we should always concede to all what we ask for ourselvs, and even insist that they hav it when our partisans would withhold it.—Bierbower.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 12, 1890.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Pictorial Arguments Against the Church.

Some other chapters in the Cartoon Book, besides the ones given last week, will be on:

SABBATH LAWS:
- Sabbatarian Efforts in the United States Senate.
- Sunday in a Sabbatarian City.
- The Clergy's Opportunity.
- As the Clergy Desire Sunday (three pictures).

CHILDREN AND THE CHURCH:
- Two Ways to Go.
- Which Shall We Hav?
- A Teacher We Do Not Want.
- The Shadow in Our Schools.
- A New Application of an Old Text.
- The Reptils in the Path.
- Recruiting for Church Institutions.
- A Parochial School Lesson.
- Products of the Parochial Schools.
- A Web for the Unwary.
- The Religious Trap.
- Sunday-School Scholars.
- The Joys of the Sunday-School Boy.

WOMAN AND THE CHURCH:
- Woman's Path from Servitude to Freedom.
- Encouragement to Go Astray.
- St. Paul As a Member of a School Board.
- The Church's Use for Women.
- A Contrast—the "Mother Superior" and the Superior Mother.
- Woman the Supporter of Preacher and Pope.
- Woman Helping the Church.
- When Womanhood Awakes.

Each one of these pictures is accompanied by a full page of reading matter, consisting of facts, extracts from church authorities, historical authorities, Liberal writers, etc., showing how the artist's illustration is but a feeble portraiture of the actual truth.

A Coming Conflict.

The Christian Statesman says:

"We hav come near to a grave crisis in our national history. We stand at the dividing of the ways. Either we shall soon witness a genuin turning of the nation to God, or the nation will cast off the remnants of Christian character which hav clung to us heretofore. The decision of the supreme court of Wisconsin, elsewhere referred to; the provision in the new constitution of Idaho that no religious instruction shall be given in the schools; the strenuous efforts of the Secularists, reinforced later by the Seventh Day Adventist contingent, indicate that we are on the eve of a general discussion of the claims of Christ as the nation's king, and a practical decision upon them. The hour is one of momentous interest and of rare opportunity."

The Statesman is largely right. The sentiment of the country is undoubtedly growing secular. The churches hav ruled the world and proved failures. People are getting tired of the clergy. There is a dim suspicion creeping through their minds that the ministers are more or less humbugs; that the pulpiteers know little or nothing about another world, and that their influence in this is, on the whole, pernicious. Backs that hav long been bent for the clergy to climb on are gradually straightening up; brains that hav been bound by creeds are slowly growing and bursting the bonds; hearts that hav been chilled by fear are warming with human emotions; lips that hav so long been accustomed to say, Lord, I am thy servant, are learning to form new sentences. There is a general stretching of cramped limbs and exercising of unused muscles, a preparation, let us hope, for going out of church.

If there could be stiffer backbones put into our politicians, the Christian Statesman would hav still more cause than it has for alarm. The politicians are yet "working the church racket," as they call it, and it will take some decisiv defeats by Liberals to get the knowledge into their heads that there are people in this country who own themselvs. But we are gaining. The Northwest is permeated with Liberalism. A friend, one of the prominent men in his section of Washington, tells us that he went before the committee appointed to draft the Bill of Rights for his new state and found them to the last man Liberals. The hand of Liberalism was felt in all the new states during the past year, and if we do not mistake the temper of their people, that hand will be laid heavier upon the ecclesiastics during the next twelve months. If Idaho comes into the Union, it will be with a constitution prohibiting the direct use of state funds for religious purposes, though the churches will unfortunately be exempt from taxation.

Let the discussion upon Christ's claims to be king of this country be hurried along. The Secularists are ready for it. The opportunity of the Christians is also their opportunity, and their interest in the question is not less than that of their foes. But "as to the issue of the coming conflict, can anyone doubt? Whatever is resting on fiction and fraud will be overthrown. Institutions that organize impostures and spread delusions must show what right they hav to exist. Faith must render an account of herself to Reason. Mysteries must giv place to facts. Religion must relinquish that imperious, that domineering position which she has so long maintained against Science. There must be absolute freedom for thought. The ecclesiastic must learn to keep himself within the domain he has chosen, and cease to tyrannize over the philosopher, who, conscious of his own strength and the purity of his motivs, will bear such interference no longer. What was written by Esdras near the willow-fringed rivers of Babylon, more than twenty-three centuries ago, still holds good: 'As for Truth it endureth and is always strong; it liveth and conquereth for evermore.'"

The Secularists are on the side of truth. They are for humanity, for liberty. While those who would set up Christ as king are reactionists who would take us back to days that are gone, let us hope, forever.

Sunday at the World's Fair.

The Sabbatarians and God-in-the-Constitution fanatics are already at work on a scheme to shut the doors of the proposed World's Fair at Chicago. The National Reform Association has taken the lead in the matter, and its corresponding secretary, by direction of its executiv committee, has been pestering members of Congress to insert a "Sabbath Rest clause" in the national legislation concerning the fair. The result of his labors is given in the Association's organ in these words:

"Mr. Chandler, of Massachusetts, the chairman of the house committee on the quadro-centennial celebration, was entirely non-committal on the subject, but requested that the suggestion be laid in writing before the committee. A prominent member of the House from a Western state, who is a member of the same committee, was found to be zealously in favor of the opening of the fair on the Sabbath, and his ready reasoning and fluent suggestions as to the various innocent and elevating exercises which could be arranged for the masses on that day, showed that the proposal had already been carefully considered by the enemies of the Sabbath Rest. Another member of the House, from a Southern state, well known as an activ and influential Christian man, was not prepared to express an opinion as to the advisability of the proposed provision in the national legislation, but thought it might safely be left to the commission which would be created for the management of the fair. This was the opinion also of an eminent New England senator who is better qualified by experience than any of his colleagues to speak on the question, and who had no fear that any commission which would be appointed could either be driven or persuaded to run the fair without regard to the Sabbath. Another eminent Western senator jauntily assured us that there was not the slightest danger; that Chicago would not tolerate a Sabbath-breaking exhibition, and that if there was any occasion 'he himself would see to it that the fair should not be open on the Sabbath.' Evidently the senator had not apprehended the gravity of the situation, or the strength and determination of the forces which are even now combining to force the gates of this great commemorativ exhibition open for pleasure and gain on the Lord's day. One distinct impression gained in these interviews was that those who favor the opening of the fair on that day hav maturely considered and definitly decided on the matter, while the friends of the Sabbath in Congress hav hardly as yet given a thought to the subject."

Heretofore, all important events of the nature of this fair hav been run by men who worked in the interest of churchmen. Hawley, the "eminent New England senator" spoken of in the Reform Association organ, closed the 1876 Philadelphia Exposition on Sunday, at the bidding of the fanatics and against the wishes of the majority of Philadelphia's laboring people. Then he and his fellow-hypocrits would escort parties of distinguished people through the buildings on that day, thus making it a politician's and aristocrat's day. This is a common thing for the pious-for-votes officials to do. It is only two weeks ago that Mrs. Wanamaker, on a trip South, was taken through a horticultural show on Sunday, when the public was excluded, though she and her husband are rabid Sunday advocates. If the World's Fair at Chicago be closed on Sundays, the day will be used by the officials as their day.

However, sentiment has greatly changed in regard to this question since the Centennial Exhibition. In the West several local fairs of considerable magnitude hav been, after a contest between the Sabbatarians and the people, opened on Sunday, and the indications are that when this World's Fair is started it will be opened every day in the week. The matter will probably be left to the commission which manages the fair, and before that body decides the matter the people can be heard from. Liberals should consider the subject and be prepared to act when the time is auspicious.

Attendant Reforms.

It may be noted that Infidelity never stands unaccompanied, a solitary belief; that this principle of denial of the Christian religion does not occupy exclusivly the space of any publication denominated Infidel, or constitute the sole theme of any Anti-christian lecturer. It appears that whenever disbelief in Christianity is established in the mind, there immediately succeeds an opening up of the nature to a thousand influences, an arousing of the faculties to a thousand useful activities, before ineffectiv and inert. Let us glance over the chief of these reformatory movements.

The first is Freethought. Freedom of thought, of speech, of press—the surpassing value of these to the human race quickly becomes evident to the man who has sloughed the Christian creed. He is ever afterward foremost in demanding these inestimable blessings, and sacred birthrights, for every individual on earth.

Liberalism follows. It is not sufficient, the Infidel soon sees, that opinion be merely free. But we must, besides allowing our neighbor the right to tell us his thought, also exercise toward it a charitableness, a hospitality, a gratification in receiving and an impartiality in examining, that go beyond this.

Abolition of war is an end toward which we find many Freethinkers directing their endeavors. Notwithstanding some injunctions in favor of peace given by Christ, the influence of the church has always been, either by direct or by indirect means, conduciv to the maintenance of war. Those men whose writings are the fullest of assaults upon the practice, and whose influence has done the most to stop its continuance or mitigate its ferocity, hav been those who are the most noted as destroyers of Christianity. The Christian opposition to warfare has consisted of naught but feeble protests without a reason subjoined. The Freethinker's antagonism to the custom has brought to bear upon it a tremendous array of convincing argument and scathing satire that turn against this evil every man of sense that reads.

Infidels believe in opening the labor question to a full and free discussion. Some of them think it possible to devise a system under which labor-products shall be awarded more exactly in proportion to labor and merit than they are at present. Others, again, regard the present system as the best, and as needing no change. But, whatever their divergencies of opinion on this point, Infidels one and all concur that the problem should receive the most searching inquiry and freest debate. There is among them none of the tyrant's repressiv and silencing policy, so characteristic of the man of Christian habits of thought. They see the discord, and continual danger of resort to force, that now exist, and know that this is owing solely to a default of a demonstration of the truth on the matter in shape so clear that all may be convinced and misunderstanding pass away. The scientific method—a conscientious and dispassionate ascertainment of the facts of the matter, of the inflexible laws that they know must govern this just as they do every other department of the moral or physical universe—this is what Infidels insist upon. They hav experienced how the scientific method operates with religion, and they rest with unfaltering confidence upon its ability to solve demonstrably and finally every other problem. Whichever way the decision may go, they do not care, if it be only that which Science has laid her hand upon and stamped as the truth.

In examination of the causes why so many remain benighted in the Christian superstition, the Infidel soon detects, as one of the chief causes of their continuing void of true knowledge on religion or any other subject, the engrossment of much or most of their time in study of profitless things. Said Thomas Paine: "As the Christian system of faith has made a revolution in theology, so also has it made a revolution in the state of learning. That which is now called learning, was not learning, originally. Learning does not consist, as the schools now make it consist, in the knowledge of languages, but in the knowledge of things to which language givs names." Says Professor Oswald: "The experience of the last three hundred years has as yet failed to disassociate the ideas of Latin and Greek from the scholastic notions of culture, and the time may come when practical educators will almost fail to realize the possibility of the fact that, in our own rapid age of discovery and invention, millions of our most gifted students had to waste from one-third to three-fifths of their time on the study of dead languages." The hours devoted to the dead, continues this writer, "leave not a minute's time for the study of such problems of life as biology and rational hygiene; not a minute for anatomy, political economy, philosophy, rhetoric, or non-sectarian ethics." "What," says Herbert Spencer, in bitter contempt of those who foster the antiquated system, "what shall we say of the wisdom of those, including nearly all who occupy influential positions, who persist in thinking that preparation for successful and complete living (which is the purpose of rational education) is best effected by learning to speak and write after the manner of two extinct peoples, and by gaining knowledge of their chief men, their superstitions, their deeds of war, etc.—who, in their leading school, devote two hours per week to getting some ideas about the constitution of the world they are born into, and thirty-six hours per week to construing Latin and Greek, and making verses, of small sense or none; and who, in the competitiv examinations they devise, giv to knowledge of words double the number of marks which they giv to knowledge of things? That, it seems to me, is not a very worshipful degree of intelligence which fails to recognize the obvious truth that there is an Order of Nature, pervading alike the actions going on within us and without us, to which, from moment to moment, our lives must conform under penalty of one or other evil; and that therefore our first business must be to study this Order of Nature." In this urging of reform of the selection of subjects of education, Freethinkers are unremitting in endeavor.

A reform of a similar nature, that Infidels are prominent in demanding, is reform of our present scheme of grammar. The existing system is a legacy of barbarism. Its rules are abitrary, illogical, conflicting, and in number a hundredfold more than is necessary. In but a few decades more, children will be enabled to learn in a few hours or days a simple and logical grammar, and to devote the remainder of the years now wasted to acquiring knowledge of "the Order of Nature" in and about us.

Infidels are conspicuous in the ranks of those who advocate a reform and simplification of spelling, aimed at the same purposes and productiv of as great benefits as the reconstruction of grammar mentioned. And THE TRUTH SEEKER has in the spelling in its columns taken the first of the steps in the installation of this theory in practice.

To Infidels, as they become more and more imbued with the scientific conception of the universality and immutability of law, it is gradually suggested that we may by ascertaining the laws of the moral world as fully as we hav those of the physical world, find it as easy to produce results in the moral world—for instance, to produce characters of whatever degree of intellectuality and morality is desired—as it is now to produce our magnificent material effects. Infidels would substitute for cure, prevention; for punishment, the production of beings who will not need punishment; for the gallows, text-books of heredity. Says Prof. Frances Emily White: "The triumph of the scientific method is, as yet, far from complete; and not until a science of morals is as definitly recognized as a science of eclipses, or of any phenomenon whatever, can the era of science be said to hav more than begun. When she shall hav mastered the principles of morals, as she already has the principles of physics, and when the science of morals, thus formulated, shall hav become an applied science, then real progress in morals will be assured, and will be as much more rapid than it has hitherto been, as the advance in physical science in these modern times has surpassed the slow growth of the pre-scientific era." "The intelligent people of the world," says Colonel Ingersoll, "many of them, are endeavoring to find out the great facts of nature that control the dispositions of men. So other intelligent people are endeavoring to ascertain the facts and conditions that govern what we call Health, and what we call Disease, and the object of these people is finally to produce a race without disease of flesh and without disease of mind. These people look forward to the time when there need be neither hospitals nor penitentiaries."

Such are a few among the numerous reforms, full of lofty promis for coming generations, to which whoever emerges from the Christian prison of the mind soon commences to devote his labor, his means, and his thought. And the more he studies and labors upon them the deeper becomes his conviction that the necessary condition to them is the abolition of religion. Men bound by religious conservatism cannot be influenced by humanitarian appeals.

Sectarian Influence in New York's Schools.

The Bennett school law now in force in Wisconsin, making education compulsory, contains besides this clause:

"No school shall be regarded as a school, under this act, unless there shall be taught therein, as part of the elementary education of children, reading, writing, arithmetic, and United States history in the English language."

The law is opposed by the Catholics and Lutherans because the membership of those churches is largely German and Scandinavian, and it is the policy of those churches to keep their supporters ignorant of the English language in order to hold them more closely. By perpetuating old-country ideas, and preventing the acquisition of general information, the members of those churches are more easily controled and fleeced. Both churches hav established parochial schools, wherein such instruction as the church allows is given in a foreign tongue. The Bennett law strikes at these schools.

Considering this subject on Friday, the 4th inst., the Sun of this city was moved to say:

"If the local authorities of New York were to direct that Greek or Latin should no longer be taught in any of our colleges; if they undertook to furnish the text-books of history to be used in private schools, and to interdict all others; if they assumed to interfere with the religious training of the young, either in parochial or Sunday schools, a strong expression of dissent would promptly follow. The state maintains its own schools, and there is no interference of any sort, sectarian or political, with their management."

The last sentence in this paragraph reveals a degree of ignorance or moral recklessness surprising in a journal so generally well informed. It is one of those statements to which Horace Greeley would reply, "You lie, sir; you lie!" On the very day when the statement appeared, every public school in New York city was closed because—why? It was "Good Friday!" That looks very much as though sectarian, if not political, influence interfered considerably in the management of our schools.

New York needs a Bennett law, a Wisconsin supreme court decision, and a few other laws regulating the public schools, and taking them out of the hands in which political deals and combinations hav placed them. And some of our daily journals need to hav their truth-telling capacity enormously enlarged.

Discreet Discretion.

In a very recent issue of the Christian Advocate the Rev. J. M. Buckley falls into a reminiscent and reflectiv mood, the latter mood being so rare with a Methodist that it is worth chronicling. The subject of his meditations is the late Courtlandt Palmer and the method and work of the Nineteenth Century Club.

It appears that Mr. Palmer was desirous that Mr. Buckley should appear before the Club, and on four different occasions wrote him to that effect. The matter is recalled to Mr. Buckley's mind at this time by the receipt from a thoughtful correspondent of an inquiry whether, if a club similar should be founded in the correspondent's city, and the correspondent should be asked to read one of three papers (the other two representing Infidelity and Spiritualism) before it, the invitation should be accepted?

The question sets Mr. Buckley off on his reflectiv train. Beginning with the "carefully-formed" opinion that a "Christian minister has no place in such a symposium," his recollection slides gracefully back to the time when he himself was tempted, and to how he resisted the seductiv invitations of Mr. Palmer. These are the reasons why he would not speak at the Nineteenth Century Club, as set forth in a letter to Mr. Palmer:

"First, because I cannot attend regularly; and if I attended occasionally, and not regularly, the community would connect me with a general indorsement of the propriety of discussing the various topics which are handled in the clubs in an organization of that kind; whereas it is a fundamental conviction, which I hav often expressed, that religion derives no benefit from oral discussions not conducted in a religious, as distinguished from merely an intellectual atmosphere."

Subsequent events hav confirmed James in his views. "A short time ago," he says, "the full text of the discussion in the Nineteenth Century Club, between Colonel Ingersoll and two distinguished lawyers, the Hon. F. R. Coudert, a Roman Catholic, and General Stewart L. Woodford, a Protestant, was published by an Atheistic house. As usual, the advocate of Infidelity had both the opening and the closing." We admit that we hav published the full text of the discussion, kindly revised by all the eminent gentlemen engaged therein, but why, we ask, is complaint made that, "as usual," the champion of Freethought had the opening and the closing? Is it always so? Is the whole world in league against the church to never allow her champions fair play? Or rather, is not the arrangement of debates governed by well-established rules, one of which is that the affirmer shall hav also an opportunity to set up again, within a very small proportion of the time consumed in the opening, so much of his argument as he can that his opponents hav tumbled down? If Mr. Coudert, or General Woodford, had opened the discussion on the Limitations of Toleration would not he hav been entitled to the closing? What significance, then, hav the words, "as usual," except as a disingenuous attempt to lead the readers of the Advocate to believe that in a debate between Freethought and Christianity, the latter never had, nor can hav, equal chance with the former? or are they used to bolster up Mr. Buckley himself in the seemingly timid position he holds?

Be this as it may, the result of the publication of that discussion is to strengthen our discreet friend in his castle. He reflects: "Having attended some of the most able discussions of fundamental questions before promiscuous audiences between representativs of open Infidelity and Christianity, and read those which hav been reported, we doubt whether, in a single instance, Christianity ever made the slightest gain. A shrewd unbeliever can, in half an hour, utter objections to Christianity which could not be answered in thirty discourses of an hour each, and which could never be answered to the satisfaction of those who carry through the entire discussion a doubt of the being of God." From Mr. Buckley's conduct and words there does not seem to be more than one conclusion to be drawn, and that is that he knows, given debaters of equal ability, discussion between Freethinkers and Christians can only benefit Freethought; and, like a wise general, he does not propose to giv aid and comfort to the enemy. For if the man is wise who fights and runs away, how much wiser is he who fights not at all

Letters from Friends.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 31, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please put me down as a subscriber for the book of pictures. JAMES L. FOSS.

CENTRAL CITY, COL., March 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find $2 to pay for the new picture-book when ready. C. S. JONES.

CHATHAM, N. Y., March 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find $1. Send the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL. Use the balance for the Distribution Fund.

Most respectfully, T. R. BURROWS.

NORTH HUDSON, N. Y., March 9, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $4.25—$3 for subscription for THE TRUTH SEEKER for one year, $1 for the Heston cartoon fund, and twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL.

JAMES M. COSAD.

SOUTH OIL CITY, PA., March 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5—$3 for THE TRUTH SEEKER, twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL, and balance for the pictures. Should the pictures fail, then apply it to the TRUTH SEEKER office. CHAS. HENSHAW.

BELLE PLAINE, IA., March 26, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $2. Please send me the new cartoon-book as soon as issued. I hav often wished I could hav all the pictures that hav appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER. They are silent arguments that cannot be evaded.

Yours truly, C. P. HOSMER.

CLINTON, MO., March 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav not yet succeeded in getting a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER, but I herewith inclose $2 in payment for the first-page-cartoon picture-book, as advertised in THE TRUTH SEEKER. I want the book to lie on my center-table. S. E. PRICE.

ST. PAUL, MINN., March 14, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I thought it was about time for me to write again and send you some money, and ask you to continue the cartoons in THE TRUTH SEEKER. Very often I hav no time to read, but I always take time to see the pictures.

Yours truly, MAX WARSHANER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., March 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I see that you are getting up a book of the pictures. I hope you will do so. You can count me for one when it is ready. I hav had THE TRUTH SEEKER for the last seven years in my room. I cannot do without it. Two dollars is nothing for that book. The pictures I hav got here are worth the money. JOHN HEANEY.

AINSWORTH, IA., March 29, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please put me down for one of Heston's picture-books. My father gets THE TRUTH SEEKER, and we all enjoy it very much. I would like to get you a subscriber, but cannot. There are four gospel-shops here where they feed poor dying sinners with the blood of the lamb. Find inclosed $2. J. W. MORGAN.

LEADVILLE, COL., March 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed money for B. F. Underwood's "Woman: Her Past and Present, Her Rights and Wrongs." We read THE TRUTH SEEKER, and my husband desires me to say that we like the pictures, and think one chance at the pictures will set some people to thinking who would not stop to read the paper. METTIE WERTMAN.

LAGON, ILL., March 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5. Please renew my subscription and add to your list one new subscriber. It is discouraging to think how many Freethinkers there are all around us, but how few take interest enough in the question to subscribe for your paper. This is the first subscriber I hav obtained in many years. However, the Liberal ideas are growing. EDWARD GREEN.

SPRING MILLS, PA., March 19, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: It gave me much pleasure to learn that Heston's high talent shall not be hid under a bushel. The forthcoming book is very cheap at $2, and will be an eye-opener to many of our orthodox friends. By all means let the pictorial arguments be continued in THE TRUTH SEEKER. Please send me a TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL, and one of the pictorial books as soon as they are out. J. W. GROH.

SODOM, O., March 6, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $2—twenty-five cents each for the ANNUAL and the following other books. For the other dollar count my vote one in favor of the continuance of the pictures. As yet I hav failed to get a new subscriber, but I shall ever be on hand to do so whenever the opportunity presents itself. If I cannot get a new subscriber, at least you will never lose an old one in me.

Yours respectfully, ROBERT BROWN.

MT. JACKSON, VA., March 19, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I vote for the pictures. Friend Heston's pictures are good enough for me, and I think ought to be good enough for all open-minded Liberals. I hav been taking the good old TRUTH SEEKER ever since April 17, 1879. Please find $8—$3 for THE TRUTH SEEKER, $2 to Mr. Heston for the pictures, $2 for the pictures in book form when ready to send out, and $1 for four TRUTH SEEKER ANNUALS for 1890.

Yours very truly, LEONARD WALTERS.

GIBSON, GA., March 22, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I see that you are going to publish in book form all of Heston's pictures in your paper, THE TRUTH SEEKER, up to the 1st of January, this year, and that said work will contain about four hundred pages, and that it can be furnished at $2 per copy. Now, this is to say, Mr. Editor, that you may put me down as a subscriber for one copy at least. I think such a book would be very entertaining as well as interesting. SEABORN KITCHENS.

NEWARK, N. J., March 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER, which I wish to renew and perpetuate, for however stringent times may get to be, I cannot do without the ever dear old TRUTH SEEKER, founded by the equally dear Bennett. And allow me also to say a few words in commendation of the social gathering of the officers elect and friends and members of the American Secular Union at the house of our esteemed friend Doctor Foote, in Lexington avenue, for long, long will that event be cherished as one of the green spots of an eventful life. Ever yours,

H. G. AVERY, of the Newark Liberal League.

CLINTON, IA., March 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $8. Hoorah! I hav got a new subscriber. Apply $5 to pay for four ANNUALS you sent me a fortnight ago, and use what is left as you see fit, and some time when I hav not the ready cash I may send for something else. And the other three apply on one new subscription. I find it a pretty uphill job. I circulate my Freethought, Twentieth Century, Investigator, and TRUTH SEEKER among my acquaintances, where I can find anyone to read. But so far I hav been able to get only two subscribers, one for the Investigator and this present one for THE TRUTH SEEKER. Fraternally, JAMES A. GREENHILL.

BUTLER, PA., March 29, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Some time ago I informed you that I was in favor of having the pictures continued, and also sent a new subscriber to help support my vote. But as some object to the pictures, I would suggest that they be printed on separate sheets. Then we could present the paper to Christians with or without the pictures, or we could hav them framed and placed on the walls of our rooms, or by the time Ingersoll's "coming man" gets here we may induce Christians to decorate the walls of the Sunday-school rooms with them, as they would be splendid lessons for the children, and the teachers might get a good deal of useful knowledge from them. J. O. FULLERTON.

ASPEN, COL., March 23, 290.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please allow me to say a few words in praise of Heston's picture of March 8th, "How Mankind is Crucified between Two Thieves?" This picture is admirable, and ought to be distributed all over the United States. It means a great deal. A man who could not read a word of English could read that, and you ought to hav seen the grin crawl over his face when he saw the light. Allow me to suggest if Heston's pictures were printed and distributed from house to house, I believe they would be productiv of good to yourselvs and readers. If I had one thousand or five thousand I would personally spare the time and see the effect they would hav on the people. Believe me to be,

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty, W. MASON.

ORILLA, ONT., March 26, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose you the sum of $6 to renew my subscription and to pay for a new subscription. This makes three regular subscribers here. We all vote for the pictures. I expect to hav ten or a dozen TRUTH SEEKERS coming to this town before the end of the year. I think of giving you an order for a few copies and selling them out to those that want them at retail, as I am a merchant, and do a good business with both Christians and Liberals. I knew R. G. Ingersoll when I was a boy in Illinois. My father was a neighbor of his, and our farms lay not far apart. I often think of him. I also think of Lincoln, Grant, Oglesby, Yates, Logan, Douglass, and other great men who are an honor to the state of Illinois. I believe that in the near future THE TRUTH SEEKER will hav the largest circulation of any paper in the United States. I will here add a list of Liberals in the neighborhood, to whom you can send samples. THOS. W. MOFFATT.

ARENZVILLE, ILL., Dec. 28, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: I believe I am the only one who receives THE TRUTH SEEKER at this office, and I thought a word from here would not be amiss. I reside five miles from Arenzville, our nearest town. This is a thickly populated section, and twenty years ago was full of religious superstition, but it is different now. The old inhabitants hav all passed away, and the present generation is quite Liberal. There has not been a sermon preached within two miles of my residence for two years. They all know that I am an Infidel, yet I hav as many friends as any man in the neighborhood. In fact, I hav no enemies. I know I could get you a few subscribers if I was able to get around, but I am an invalid and confined to the house most of the time. I hope you will be able to continue the pictures. Our dear old TRUTH SEEKER would look bad without them, and they are certainly great object-lessons.

The only pleasure I hav in the world now is reading THE TRUTH SEEKER. T. G. SPRINGER.

HAVANA, ILL., March 6, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3.50—$3 for subscription, fifty cents for the pictures. I vote for the pictures, of course. They look ridiculous, but they represent absurd and ridiculous things. I say, keep friend Heston at those pictures. They speak volumes. I look upon THE TRUTH SEEKER as the greatest advocate of Freethought. It has fought the battle bravely, and I hope it will long liv to continue in this grand work. The Presbyterian church is beginning to feel the mighty blows dealt it by Colonel Ingersoll. He has exposed its vile and inhuman creed, its doctrin of eternal hell-fire for unbelievers. Infant and heathen damnation is becoming very unpopular, even among their own members. Now they talk of changing their creed. If they do, we can truthfully say Colonel Ingersoll did it. Evil minds produce evil things. This accounts for the creed of the Presbyterian church, which emanated from the mind of that inhuman and vile wretch, John Calvin. J. A. WEABER.

HANOVERTON, O., April 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I regard THE TRUTH SEEKER as the ideal Freethought journal, affording to all an opportunity to express their peculiar views upon all subjects of a proper nature. For this reason, I hav made an effort to secure at least one new subscriber from among the half-dozen professed Infidels in this place. But the effort has been fruitless, because they are only professed Infidels, and, in fact, fear the frown of the clergy as much as those whose obligation is obedience. Next to submissiv orthodoxy, the clergy look with a self-satisfied smile upon the man whom they can bully into silence; the man who fears to express his real sentiments, and, curlike, licks the hand which inflicts punishment upon all who think with him and possess the manhood to express their unbelief. But what must such men think of themselvs when they consider that their cowardly submission is to advance the interests of the only class of men whom the law permits constantly to obtain their money under false pretenses and then traduce the character of everyone with brains enough to refuse to contribute to their support in idleness and luxury? Such is the character of the vampires whom weak-kneed Infidels practically support.

In conclusion, I will say that I consider THE TRUTH SEEKER contributors the ablest in the country, its artist very effectiv, and its editors and publishers as models of their class, all of whom I wish abundant success.

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty, W. H. KINTNER.

MCCUNE, KAN., March 26, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $5 for the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. For the last year I hav given more time and study to the preaching of the Christian religion than I hav for many years before this. I want to say it has strengthened my belief in Freethought. I am growing more confirmed as an Agnostic all the time. I am sure I enjoy the confidence of a large majority of my Christian friends, and yet I compromise nothing. I was elected justice of the peace at the last election. I am president of a very interesting Literary and Debating Society. There we often take up Liberal questions and discuss them freely. The society is carried on in connection with our high school.

My vote is to let the pictures come, the more the better. If they were stopped, the paper would lose half its usefulness to thousands of your readers.

I hav one strong desire; that is, when I or my wife die and are in the arms of death, that some good, noble, true Liberal like R. G. Ingersoll will speak the truth to the living friends that may gather around.

It seems as though there is an effort being made, after so long a time, to make Lincoln a Christian. I lived near Springfield, Ill., from the time I was a child, and at the time Lincoln came before the people and during the time he was president his enemies called him an Infidel and his friends did not deny it then. M. S. GOWIN.

PARIS, GA., April 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: A newspaper lately contained the following:

Dr. James Stacy, of Newnan, has in his possession a piece of timber which formed a part of the original framework of a grave inclosure erected in old Midway cemetery, Liberty county, in 1776. The timber is a species of pine quite common along the seaboard in the early part of the present century, but which is now extinct. It was known as the two-needle pine, and was remarkable for its lasting qualities. The inclosure referred to was one of the oldest in this historic burying-place, and its antiquity was established beyond question. It was removed last year.

Parson Stacy is a dear lover of sacred trees. It would make a carpenter think about whetting his tools to hear him talk about the cedars of Lebanon and the oak of Bashan. The tree the parson admires most is the Calvinistic pine, with five needles. But it, like the two-needle pine, has been driven from the original forest. Only decayed fragments of this ancient timber can be seen about old Presbyterian churches and graveyards. This timber flourished in the Dark Ages, and was worshiped by those in power, mainly for its five needles. This timber gave nothing to commerce or architecture. Ancient and modern history shows that this timber was not fit for anything but to make sacred crosses and to furnish fagots to burn philosophers and Freethinkers. The Calvinistic pine with its five sharp-pointed needles, could not stand the light of the Ingersollian sun or the cyclones of Freethought. J. WOODROW PERKINS.

NEW YORK, March 27, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav read so many letters in your paper on the subject of the right of burial in Calvary cemetery by Catholics inside the pale of the church, and by those who are outside who are known as Dr. McGlynn's followers, that I thought I would giv my views on this Calvary cemetery business. I am a follower of myself, Simon F. Cummings, whom you know as the builder of a yacht named Robert G. Ingersoll. I am my own sky-pilot between this world and the next. For that reason I cannot be buried with the dust of my father, mother, and brother, notwithstanding I hold the deeds of those graves. And a foreign potentate issues his mandate forbidding my burial with them because I no longer believe in popes and kings, and American political judges of this secular government that guarantees the right to every man to think for himself. If a private individual would run a cemetery in the same way that Calvary cemetery is run, he would be serving the state in the garb of a convict. The Catholic church is a power in politics, and our lawmakers must comply with their wishes or they cannot be elected to office. And the unthinking people wonder at the discontented mass of toilers, and why Anarchists, Communists, and Socialists are produced by such a government as ours, and think they are all made in Europe. They are made here, and by the same causes that produce the effects there, and these causes will continue to do so until the people rise in their might and throw off the yoke of popes, kings, and politicians. Very respectfully, SIMON F. CUMMINGS.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., March 20, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The Prize Moral Manual for schools should, in my estimation, be short, simple, to the point on positiv facts, and in the common English language as spoken. As our future generation is desired to be, so it must be schooled. It must be instructed and brought up in manly and good habits; enabled to select useful occupations, and imbued with personal independence. Good moral standards should be attained. Religion has ever been a stumbling-stone, causing dissensions, disputes, and bloody wars. It is time to abolish it. Introduce the ancient teachings of moral philosophies, now spiritualized, especially in schools wherein scholars of a mixed population meet together. Harmonize all phases of life and occupations, in learning to think right. In speaking truthfully, and dealing and acting honestly, the rising generation will acquire the distinction between right and wrong. Oscar H. Cooper, state superintendent of public schools, lectured here on the subject, stating that Germany induced the schools to teach on the rudimental moral philosophies; that he studied there himself; he recommended that America educate her rising generation likewise into better, honest, and upright citizens.

I would suggest to hav one or two pages in your excellent publication exclusivly for Spiritual literature.

Fraternally yours, CARL E. KREISCHE.

JOPLIN, MO., March 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The indignation of the Christians' God has at last been ignited, and his huge forked tongue is reaching out for me. My Sunday-school circular has caused some of the faithful to daub on the war-paint and raise the whoop of blasphemy. Charges hav been preferred against me by some of the members of the profession to hav me expelled from the Jasper County Medical Society; charges, using ungentlemanly, unprofessional, and blasphemous language behind the back of some of the faithful. I tell them that during the thirty years that I hav been engaged in the practice of medicin, I hav many times been compelled to lose patients, little dimpled babes of Christian families. When I would see dissolution near at hand and would tell the mother that I thought her babe would never recover, many, many a one of these Christian mothers would kneel beside the cradle and pray for Christ's sake to spare the life of her darling child, at the same time bathing the cheek of the dying infant in the bitter tears of agony, and planting kiss after kiss on its fast turning brow. I tell them that there is one of two things—that every tear dropped upon the face of a dying infant by a Christian mother, and every kiss planted on its brow, is a seal that that book called the Bible is a lie, or else all the professed Christians are hypocrits, for the New Testament declares that Christ told his disciples that whatever one truly asked for in prayer shall be given. The Christian God may be a very good fellow, but he always fails to put in an appearance when he is wanted. For my part, a God that would forsake me in this world in time of trouble I would not want to trust in the next. F. D. OWEN.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find money for my subscription and for six months' subscription to each of the herein-named friends. The lady is an apostate Roman Catholic; a cultivated, intelligent Freethinker; poor, but longing for Freethought literature. I sent her a TRUTH SEEKER and it pleased her. Personally, she is an entire stranger to me. If either of these parties hav subscribed already, then you can send the paper to some other worthy person who would be glad to get it, but does not feel able to pay for it.

Our Philadelphia presbytery here are now struggling hard to save the infants from damnation. They are growing merciful! I am sure all good people will rejoice to hav them succeed.

J. E. Remsburg had a good audience here last Sunday night. His arraignment of the church and orthodoxy was terrific and overwhelming. Five of our family were present to take the lesson.

I regretted not to be able to attend the annual Secular convention and get better acquainted with more of the workers in the cause of freedom.

Remsburg's demolition of Abraham Lincoln's Christianity is a complete success.

Liberals could not do without THE TRUTH SEEKER. Your editorials are always to the point—just what ought to be told.

Dr. Foote's article to Burnham and Severance is timely and well put. It is manly and generous.

But I need not praise the paper. I read it all with avidity. But I find so few interested in its teachings and literature. Busy people cannot read it, stupid people will not, shallow people do not, weak people dare not. So you hav but the few elect as patrons.

Yours for truth and righteousness,

T. E. LONGSHORE.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., March 18, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: In the year 1862 I became a thoroughly converted Baptist—close communion at that, based upon the most selfish principles. I may as well state that I was born a Lutheran, or Dutch Reformed; was baptized, raised up, and educated as such until 1862 I dreaded to hear even the mildest criticism of the Christian religion. I studied the Bible thoroughly to find the right path to heaven. I dreaded hell, and sometimes wished I had not been born. I read all the books I could get bearing on the subject of religion. I heard ministers, deacons, brothers, and sisters explain their views as they understood the word of God. And a Bible class composed of over fifty young men discussed various questions which could not be understood by either the wise or unwise. In those days religion was a matter of vital consequence. This life was but a moment compared with the one to come. Hell or heaven, was the question. And the chances of landing in hell were appalling. Why, it was enough to make a man quit business and look out exclusivly for the hereafter. In my religious education I had been taught that even a thought bearing on an investigation of my religion came from the devil, the master of hell. The investigation would at once be dropped, but then I could not help my thinking. I was told not to think—"Fight it off; when you do that you are fighting the devil. God will reward you for it." I read the Bible through. Finally all those things began to look fishy. My mind became more easy. I became acquainted with people who would enlighten me now and then, and to-day I look upon any religion as a thing of the past, a thing of deceit and misrepresentations, without a foundation—not even a thing. To-day I am one of the happiest mortals on earth. I am contented and satisfied. I am satisfied when I die it is the end. I shall liv a good, moral, Liberal life; do all I can to make everyone happy, to be honorable in all my transactions with my fellow-creatures. "Happy is the man who neither paints nor patches, veils nor veneers. Blessed is he who wears no mask." C. B.

NEWCOMB, TENN., March 11, 290.

MR. EDITOR: The following is a quotation from the Jacksboro Sentinel:

Judge Ridley, of the criminal court at Nashville, decides that the church raffles are illegal, and charges the grand jury to indict not only those persons who bought and sold tickets, but those who contributed to the running of the raffles. He said: "The churches ought to assist the courts in suppressing gambling, but instead they are violating the law by holding raffles."

Brave judge, thou hast ruled righteously, and may thy days be long upon the earth! Why should church people hav a power which the individual has not? Why should the church property go untaxed when the poor man's home, the most sacred thing on earth, is taxed? Special privileges for none, equal rights for all, is a good motto. But mottoes and sayings are plentiful and cheap. Read our Declaration of Independence, then look at the conditions of the people. We, the people, are given to dealing in glittering generalities and philosophizing, but to practice our teachings would be inconsistent, with Americans. However, it is to be hoped that the near future will lead us to practice at least some of the principles enunciated in our Declaration of Independence and laid down in the Constitution of the United States. We may read the Constitution with great profit yet. Go into any state in the Union and you will there find laws upon top of laws that conflict with the Constitution of the United States. Take this state, for instance. We hav a law here compelling the citizens to work the country roads twelve days in the year if necessary. The Constitution of the United States says: "Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction." It seems to me that such a law as that spoken of above is in conflict with the general Constitution. I am of the opinion that over one-half of the state representativs hav never read the Constitution of the United States, or, if they hav, not done so thoughtfully. Equal burdens and equal taxation, has been the great cry of the Democrats throughout the country in every election campaign, but in the Southern states the burden of this same unjust road law prevails, as does Democracy. I am a Democrat, but not in the sense of a partisan. I believe in freedom for all mankind.

S. P. HERRON.

MILWAUKEE, ORE., Jan. 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Will you allow a would-be reformer to raise his voice against these self-satisfied "Liberals" who constantly din in our ears the old, old story, not of "Jesus and his love," but one equally absurd, and that is, that the doctrin of hell fire has been cooked. When I hear a man say you do not hear any more "hell-fire preachin'," I put him down as a very misinformed individual, or, what is worse, an inert Liberal. They tell you that it is preached no more, that for the last twenty years the "other place" has been laid up for want of fuel or for repairs. That makes a very pretty joke, but of course a very old one, but the truth of the matter is, that the doctrin is still preached not only in the country, but in every town that has a spire in it.

I am attending a shorthand school, training myself for the fight with the orthodox "God." In this school there is an average attendance of about one hundred scholars. I circulated the "protest" against the Blair bill, and, strange to behold, did not get six names in that great number of students, and among the teachers none. One of the professors is given to "cuss" words occasionally, and I naturally thought that he would be Liberal enough to sign the protest, so I gave it to him to read. He read it, and took the infinit pleasure to open up his "vials of wrath" on me in the presence of the entire school. He said, pointing to the words on the protest, "No one but an Infidel would print such an article." My reply was that no one else did print it. He "tacked" then and has not referred to it since. I asked one of the other professors, and he said it was unnecessary, as the objects of the bill would not be carried through.

So much for the men; now for the gentler sex. We had a speech dictated from the "Hon." John Wanamaker, better known as "Holy John." Without warning our teacher stopped and asked one of the students, "What position in the government does the 'honorable' occupy?" He replied, "Postmaster-general." Then she wished to know what else he was noted for. Unfortunately the query was addressed to a Jew and the reply wished for was not forthcoming. She had to be satisfied to hear that he did not know that he was noted for anything beyond the great price he paid to get into the cabinet and for meddling with the affairs of the people. She waxed wroth, and said, "I think his equal has not been since the time of Jesus Christ, and in all the noted men of history I cannot find anyone who so resembles the 'meek and lowly Jesus.'" She also gave us to understand that she believed in Satan, etc. Now, here is food for thought. Party of the first part, as the lawyers would say, is the "Hon." John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia; party of the second part, Jesus Christ, formerly of Nazareth, present whereabouts unknown. Now, party of the first part can run his hand down into his pocket and pull forth, at the very least calculation, $5 or $6 in change and perhaps a postage stamp. Out of whose pocket the aforesaid coin of the realm comes is a mooted question and not in the province of this screed. Now for the party of the second part. In the entire "authentic" history of this somewhat prominent and obsolete individual we hav no direct data that he ever possessed fifteen cents, and that, gentlemen of the jury, is my first point of resemblance of the two Dromios under consideration.

In the next place, the party of the second part is reported to hav said, "Sell all that you hav and giv it to the poor," but some are so irreverent as to say that the party of the second part sells all the poor that he can to giv it to the poor —Wanamaker.

Ah, but does not Wanamaker giv all his employees a part of the profits of his house? Why, certainly; we never thought of that. He rob—we mean, makes a profit off the poor outsiders and doles it out to those within the ring. And when this great and good man goes to meet his Jesus these same profit-sharing employees will be expected to contribute from $1 to $50 for flowers. That is all right, is it not? But suppose that in spite of the profit-sharing an unlucky wight—and there are such—should happen to be financially embarrassed—if one who shares profits can ever come to that stress—and could not contribute—why, he would be a monster of ingratitude, would he not?

In the last round of the wind-up he tells us why we do not get along any better. His closing words are, "We can only really get what we deserve in this world and the next. And that is my speech to you to-day as your friend." Now, there you hav it in a nutshell. There is no use in trying to liv up to any standard. In fact, it is not necessary to liv up to any standard, for we only get what we deserve. That is a fine incentiv to effort, is it not? That is what will make us better men and women. The same old doctrin of pre-destinatio that so many of our Liberals buried years ago. And it is no materialized ghost of it either. It is the veritable article you covered with six feet of material earth—or thought you did, but you mistook your conceit for a more substantial article, and the same old doctrin still holds out at the same old stand.

Now a word about the "next world." Is Brother Wanamaker a medium? If not, on what authority does he prophesy? Is he on intimate terms with those in the next world, and if so, how do they know whether we will hav our "just share," whatever that may be?

There was wonder and some indignation expressed when Wanamaker had the medium Reid of Wisconsin arrested for claiming to receive messages from the dead. Now, it is clear as moonshine. You know, as a rule, one medium is always jealous of another. But "it beats Dutch" how a man with the whole United States and Anthony Commonstock under his thumb should try to down a poor medium, and then go into the same business, and with less capital, and base his prophecy on infinitly slimmer grounds than Reid did! Why did not some one serve a warrant on him for making this prophecy? Oh, that is so; he got no money for the prophecy he made. But the pastor of the church he attends gets a salary for preaching "the same old seventy-six." Is not he equally liable under the law as Reid? The preachers hav been preaching the same old thing for many a weary day and hav never attempted proof, while this medium and others hav always given proof of what they claim, or at least there are a great many able men who think this information has been vouchsafed them and in this way.

But admitting that Reid and all other mediums are frauds, are the preachers any the less so? Are they outside of the law, as their joss-houses are outside of the tax-gatherer's hands? If so, is this legislation for the people, etc., or for the "chosen of God?"

Victor Hugo once said something as follows: "In every village there is a lighted taper. That is the schoolmaster. But in every village there is an extinguisher, and that is the priest." If that is true of France she is far in advance of this country, for in nearly every place, and the country especially, the teacher is examined as to his orthodoxy—not as to his knowledge of practical education. I do not say that all Christians are fools, but I do say that a good per cent of the Christians are fools and knaves as well. Neither do I say that all Liberals are self-satisfied and inert, but I do say that this class buried the hell doctrin years ago; are of no practical use to themselvs or to the advantage of the progress we hav made and are making, in spite of the church and its influence.

And the more we get to stand forth for free speech, for free thought, and freedom from any and all ecclesiastical meddling, the better the world will advance, and the more beautifully less will be what we deserve according to Wanamaker and his ilk. "We get what we earn and that is all we do deserve." MAURITZ S. LIDEN.

Children's Corner.

Edited by Miss Susan H. Wixon, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Loving Looks.

She turned upon me her soft clear eyes,
Limpid as mountain brooks;
"If you wish your flowers to thrive," she said,
"You must giv them loving looks."

I smiled and mused. If the whole sad world
Might be nurtured in this sweet way,
Life would be full of flowers and fruit,
And December would bloom like May.

So, poet maiden, go, shed your lore
O'er the wisdom of men and books;
And the desert shall blossom as the rose
In the light of your "loving looks."

The Sun.

In contemplating the heavens the sun first demands our notice and admiration. Over our little family of worlds the sun is monarch.

All other celestial lights dwindle into insignificance when compared with the sun; at least, it seems so to us if we attempt to study the universe without the aid of science and the telescope.

But this is a delusion. The smallest speck that can be seen on a starry night may be many times larger than our sun.

Vast though it is, our great luminary is only a star of the Milky Way and has many rivals in that nebula. The reason it appears so large and powerful to us is because we are nearer to it than to any other large star. If we were to travel for some millions of miles toward some other member of this nebula, our sun would diminish in size as we receded from it; while the other star would increase in its dimensions to a sun, perhaps larger than ours.

Upon the sun we depend not only for our well-being, but for our very existence.

If the sun were to disappear or in any way lose its relation to the earth, our planet would become dark, cold, and desolate. Rain would cease to fall; birds would quit their singing; the merry hum of voices would be quieted, and even the chickens would sit on their roosts for days together, waiting for the morning light.

The ancient Greeks entertained some curious ideas regarding the great star. They asserted that it was only a foot in diameter. and supposed that the earth was a flat plain around which the sun revolved; and they also believed that Apollo was lord of day, and that the sun was a golden car in which he rode. This car was thought to be drawn by glorious white horses driven by Helios. The Greeks were the originators of a large number of curious stories about many of the heavenly bodies.

When Peru was discovered by the Spaniards, in 1526, the nativs had the most complete system of sun worship of which we hav any account. The incas, as the Peruvian monarchs were called, claimed to be the children of the sun and his representativs on earth. The Peruvians built magnificent temples and offered many sacrifices to this heavenly body.

Of the distance from the earth to the sun we can form no definit conceptions. As reckoned a number of years ago it was nearly 96,000,000 miles. Other observations since that time hav reduced it to 92,500,000 miles, according to some, and 91,430,000 miles as reckoned by others. The result of these observations would make a range of nearly 5,000.000 miles, which to us seems very indefinit. The best American authorities upon this subject hav agreed upon 92,750,000 miles, which is now considered the correct distance; but Mr. Hind has estimated the mean distance to be 91,328,600 miles.

This star is 1.400,000 times larger than our earth, and is 600 times greater than all known planets. The quantity of matter contained in the sun, as measured by weight, exceeds that of the earth 365,000 times, and is 740 times that of all planets at present known. If the earth were to be placed in the center of the sun, with the moon at its present distance, the moon would still be 187,000 miles from the surface of the sun.

It may be interesting to some to know the weight of this enormous body; it is this: 2,154,106,580,000,000,000,000,000.000 tons.

Most European astronomers reckon the diameter of the sun to be 852,584 miles. Some, however, decide it to be 860,000 miles, but it is generally thought to be 850,100 miles, or 107 times the mean diameter of the earth.

The sun rotates on its axis once in about twenty-five and a half of our days. The direction of the rotation is from west to east. This motion has no immediate effect, because it does not produce alternate day and night, as on our globe. The surface of the sun enjoys perpetual day, and has neither seasons nor years.

The sun describes an immense orbit in the skies, which fact was discovered by long continued observations.

Herschel observed that, in portions of the heavens, stars were becoming less dense, and that, in other parts, they were greatly increasing in numbers.

In performing this motion the sun moves at a velocity of nearly twenty thousand miles an hour, carrying the whole solar system with it. The sun is traveling toward a star in the constellation of Hercules, but when it reaches there we shall hav been dust, or mud, if it happens to be rainy weather, many thousands of years.

From the fact that the sun is moving toward a given point in the heavens, it must not be inferred that it is moving in a straight line. On the contrary, it performs a somewhat circular motion.

The sun has still another movement and, although overlooked by many astronomers, the study of the sun would be incomplete without its mention; it is the perturbating movement. The orbits of the planets differ much in size, some being larger and, consequently, more remote from the sun than others.

The farther a body is from the sun, the less that body is attracted by it; so that it would move with less rapidity than those nearer. It is, therefore, apparent that, at certain times, several, or all, of the planets may be on one side of the sun at one time. The combined attraction of these bodies is sufficient to draw the sun toward them for a distance equal to one-half of its diameter. The planets would then separate, and the sun would continue its course through the skies.

The sun is spherical in form and slightly oblate. Convincing proof of this lies in the fact that it rotates on its axis.

The sun has an atmosphere which extends beyond it for a distance of varying from two hundred thousand to three hundred thousand miles. It is composed, principally, of hydrogen, and also of ether, nitrogen, and oxygen. During a total eclipse of the sun by the moon, projections are seen to extend out beyond the general mass, for distances ranging from one thousand to two thousand miles. This is called the corona, and is formed by large quantities of hydrogen gas being thrown out beyond the general bulk in the form of enormous hydrogen flames.

Attempts hav been made to ascertain the correct temperature of the sun, but the estimates range from three thousand to eighteen thousand degrees. The interior of the sun is thought to be composed principally of gas, heated several thousand degrees higher than the surface. It is concluded that the great degree of heat in the interior would be sufficient to reduce matter to a gaseous state, while the less degree near the surface may be sufficient only to reduce it to a fluid condition.

It is estimated that the heat of the sun could melt in one second a block of ice measuring 1,590 square miles at the base, and 192,000 miles high. It is calculated that heat and light will travel from the sun to the earth in about eight minutes.

There are a number of theories as to the formation of the sun's crust. The gaseous theory attempts to prove that the crust of the sun is composed of gases under the immense pressure of the surrounding atmosphere. This theory has now but few supporters.

A number of eminent physicists think it to be "cloud-like," or between a vapor and fluid.

There are a few of our ablest reasoners who suppose the crust to be in a fluid condition, and about as dense as tar, or not unlike molten iron. Professor Young concludes that the crust cannot be less than ten thousand miles in thickness. All these theories leave the question undecided, and we can only wait for further developments.

Some three hundred years ago the sun was considered the emblem of purity and magnificence. When Galileo discovered that there were spots on the sun, he was ridiculed and slandered, but their existence has since become an established fact. Very few spots hav been observed beyond latitude 30°, and sixty-three per cent are within twenty degrees of the equator. Few persons hav ever attempted to account for this limitation of sun-spot area. It is a well-established fact that these spots are immense cavities in the crust of the sun. These cavities are estimated to be from thirteen thousand to one hundred thousand miles in diameter, and from four thousand to ten thousand miles in depth. They act as great chimneys through which the steam and gases of the interior escape. They do not remain permanent but last for different lengths of time, being filled by the material composing the surface of the sun. It was by means of the spots that the rotary motion was discovered. Astronomers watched the course of the spots across the disk of the sun and noted their reappearance, and from that they were able to judge the length of time necessary for one rotation.

The fuel of the sun has been a subject for much speculation and a number of theories hav been advanced. Some authorities conclude the fuel consists of comets, and others are of the opinion that electric currents are the source of the immense amount of heat radiated from the sun.

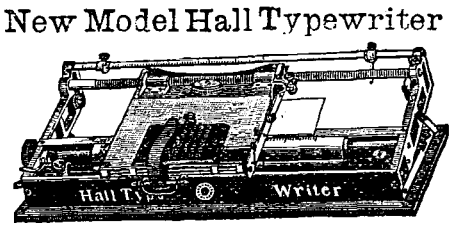
Regarding the question of the extinction of the sun, Professor Young estimates that the sun has been thirty millions of years reaching its present condition, and that ten millions of years will elapse before its light and heat are entirely extinct.

The study of the sun teaches us a lesson of humbleness. We learn that we and our earth are almost nothing when compared with this great body. It is not surprising, therefore, that some people, recognizing its importance but not acquainted with its true condition, should personify it, and worship it as if it understood their prayers.

I marvel not, O sun! that unto thee
Man should in adoration bend the knee,
And pour the prayer of mingled awe and love;
For like a God thou art, and on thy way
Of glory sheddest, with benignant ray,
Beauty and life and joyance from above.

Worcester, Mass.

Walter W. Clark (age 14).



Correspondence.

Worcester, Mass., March 14, 1890.

Dear Miss Wixon: Find inclosed an essay on the sun, in competition for the prize offered by the Corner. If everyone who reads it learns as much from it as I hav, I shall be more than repaid.

Yours for Freethought and God-out-of-the-Constitution, W. W. Clark.

New Model Hall Typewriter

The Best Standard Typewriter in the World.
Cheap, Portable, No Ink Ribbon, Interchangeable Type in all Languages, Easiest to learn and rapid as any. Agents wanted everywhere.
Warranted as Represented. Address
National Typewriter Co.,
10 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. P. O. box 5159.
Send for catalog and specimens of work.

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.
Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
tf

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price. 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.
tf

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.
MEN, WOMEN & GODS.
BY HELEN H. GARDENER,
Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.
Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.
The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.
Photo-engravings of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 40c.; with autograph, 50 cts.

Agents for the Truth Seeker.

CALIFORNIA.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 23 Third st., San Francisco, Cal.
Dr. J. L. York, San Jose, Cal.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearny st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 313 Grant ave., San Francisco.

CANADA.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
W. B. Cooke, 170 1-2 Yonge st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
Knowles, Cor. George and Granville st., Halifax, N. S.

COLORADO.
J. G. Jenkins, 400 Arapahoe st., Denver.

FLORIDA.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

IDAHO.
A. Erwin, Murray.

ILLINOIS.
Post-office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
E. A. Stevens, 558 West Madison st., Room 1, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 302 State street, and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 56 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

INDIANA.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
T. P. Monroe, postmaster, Dunkirk.

LOUISIANA.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Joseph Marsh, Northampton.
Johnson Bro's 5 N. Main st., Fall River.

MICHIGAN.
A. Atwood, Eaton Rapids.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, 138 S. Division St., Grand Rapids.
Swan & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Horace Haynes, Leslie.

MISSOURI.
Phillip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Lang & Co., 709 Olive st., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Eaton & Smith, 1234 O st., Lincoln.

NEW YORK.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
M. B. Edinger, 1243 Third ave., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, cor. Fulton and Nassau st., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.

OHIO.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior street, Cleveland.
Van Epps & Co., 259 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Emory P. Robinson, Sydney.

OREGON.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
C. H. Wilcox, Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 1106 Leopard st., Phila.
W. F. Schade. 3.706 Butler street, Pittsburgh.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.

TENNESSEE.
Wm. B. Fisher, 331 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

TEXAS.
L. Andruss, Denison.
P. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
H. S. Kratz, 306 Houston st., Fort Worth.

UTAH.
James Ashman, Salt Lake City.
W. F. Reybould, Salt Lake City.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
W. Wedeken, Montesano.

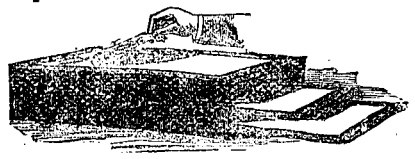
ENGLAND.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet street, London.
Progressiv Pub. Co., 28 Stonecutter st., London, E. C.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

AUSTRALIA.
Mrs. J. Hadfield, Park st., Sydney, N.S.W.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N. S. W.

NEW ZEALAND.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 833pp., silk cloth, $3.



Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo. 245pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ANTICHRIST.

PROVING conclusivly that there was no Christ crucified under Pontius Pilate, but that the real Jesus, the illegitimate son of Mary by Joseph Pandera, was stoned and hanged for sorcery about 75 years B.C. Cloth, 446 pages, with full Index. Price, $1.50. Former price, $3.00. For sale at this office.

Indispensable to AUTHORS and BUSINESS MEN.

Combines the simplicity of the Hektograph without its great disadvantages, viz., waste, washing, etc.

"THE SIMPLEX."

The Simplest and Cheapest Reliable Duplicator extant.

100 copies from one original writing (original written with any ordinary pen).

No washing, no inking roller, no stencil, no dotted lines.

The only really satisfactory process for duplicating any writing, music, drawing, typewriting, etc.

☞ Special sizes: Note, $4.50; Letter, $6 50; Cap, $7.50. Cash with order.

Circulars and samples of work mailed on application.

T. BENSINGER and CO., 5 Dey st., New York.
Headquarters for manifolding devices.

Giordano Bruno.

His Life, Works, Worth, Martyrdom, Portrait, and Monument.

With a complete list of the American subscribers to the fund for the erection of the monument.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, THOMAS DAVIDSON,
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, KARL BLIND,
LYDIA R. CHASE.

Single copies 15 cents; ten copies for a dollar.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ROMANISM,

OR

DANGER AHEAD.

The Reason Why a Good Roman Catholic Cannot be a Good Citizen of this Republic.

By A. J. GROVER.

Price, paper, 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

NOW READY.

A VOLUME OF THE WRITINGS OF

HORACE SEAVER.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume comprises some of the ablest and best editorials written by Mr. Seaver during the past forty-five years. It is neatly printed on cream-white paper, bound in cloth, and contains a fine likeness of the venerable editor of the Investigator. Every Liberal should hav this book in his home. It is now ready for delivery.

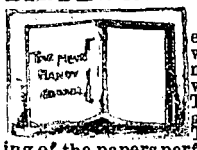
Price, $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.



It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BINDER for THE TRUTH SEEKER

For the benefit of our readers who preserve their papers we offer a new style of binder, made for the purpose, and with the heading of THE TRUTH SEEKER printed in gold letters on the outside. This binder allows the opening of the papers perfectly flat. It also allows the taking out and replacing of one or more papers from any part of the file without disturbing the other parts.

Sent by mail, postpaid, for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
tf 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

FREETHOUGHT

IS IT

DESTRUCTIVE OR CONSTRUCTIVE?

A SYMPOSIUM

BY

COL. R. G. INGERSOLL,	R. B. WESTBROOK,	CAPT. R. C. ADAMS,
E. B. FOOTE, JR.,	SALADIN (W. Stewart Ross),	L. K. WASHBURN,
H. O. PENTECOST,	GEO. E. MACDONALD,	SUSAN H. WIXON,
E. C. WALKER,	SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,	F. M. HOLLAND,
LUCY N. COLMAN,	PARKER PILLSBURY,	MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL,
C. B. REYNOLDS,	CHARLES WATTS,	J. H. BURNHAM,
W. F. JAMIESON,	THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.

SUBJECTS OF PAPERS:

Is there an Affirmative, Positive, Constructive side to Freethought?
If not, the reason why?
If there be, in what, in your opinion, does it consist, and in what should it consist?

PRICE 25 CENTS.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Correspondence Wanted.

A gentleman of fifty-six years of age, of healthy and robust constitution, thoroughly imbued with Freethought principles, wishes to correspond with a lady of forty to fifty years of age with a view to matrimony. She must be a strictly Freethought advocate in her views.

DAVID L. SWAN, Goshen, Utah.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

BIBLE INQUIRER;

OR,

A Key to Bible Investigation.

Containing 148 Propositions
With References to the most Plain and Striking Self-Contradictions of the so-called Inspired Scriptures.

BY A. JACOBSON.

Third edition, carefully revised and enlarged.

Every Liberal needs a copy for ready reference. As a pamphlet to loan to Christian friends, it is the most effectiv Iconoclast ever published.

Price only 25 cents.

THE

CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:

THEIR

Crimes and Persecutions.

8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

ON THE WORD GOD.

By Milton Woolley, M.D., Author of "Hebrew Mythology," "The Career of Jesus Christ."

The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God.—[Ps. xiv, 1.

Children and fools speak the truth.—[Old Saw.

Paper, 12mo, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

GIRARD'S WILL

AND

Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

rice $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE

MARTYRDOM OF MAN.

A COMPENDIUM OF UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

By WINWOOD READE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill.—[Literary World.

You turn over his pages with a fascination similar to that experienced in reading Washington Irving.—[Inter-Ocean.

His history has a continuity, a rush, a carrying power, which reminds us strikingly of Gibbon.—[New Haven Palladium.

The sketch of early Egyptian history, in the first chapter, is a masterpiece of historical writing. He has a style that reminds us of Macaulay.—[Penn Monthly.

Eighth edition. Extra cloth, 12mo, 543pp., $1.75.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

The Reign of the Stoics.

THEIR

History, Religion, Philosophy, and Maxims of Self-Control, Self-Culture, Benevolence, and Justice.

With Citations of Authors Quoted from on Each Page.

BY FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.

Read the philosophers, and learn how to make life happy, seeking useful precepts and brave and noble words which may become deeds.—Seneca.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

This book shows that many Christians might learn much from these ancient heathen.—American Bookseller.

One of the most valuable helps for those who would understand the character of human progress in all ages.—National Quarterly Review.

The author has shown himself a diligent student, an ardent admirer, and a faithful interpreter, of some of the most remarkable monuments of ancient thinking.—New York Tribune.

Reading this book, we find the doctrins of the Stoics to be almost identical with the views held by the broadest and most enlightened minds of the present day.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Lecky says of Marcus Aurelius: "The purest and gentlest spirit of all the pagan world." Merivale says: "Of all the line the noblest and dearest." Taine says: "The noblest soul that ever lived." John Stuart Mill says: "He preserved through life not only the most unblemished justice, but the tenderest heart."

Extra Cloth, 12mo, 248 pp., $1.25.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place. New York

The Candle from Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

Miss Wixon's Works.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300pp., $1.50.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383pp., $1.25.

Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-Book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller: large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

SOCIAL WEALTH,

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in the Acquirement and Apportionment.

By J. K. INGALLS.

Price, Cloth, - - $1.00.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1890.

Edited by CHARLES WATTS.

CONTENTS.

Agnosticism and Immortality.....Samuel Laing.
A Sonnet.....Joseph Ellis.
Who Was Moses?..H. J. Hardwicke, M.D., F.R.C.S
The Comfort of Agnosticism.....E. Lynn Linton.
Are Miracles Credible?...Constance C. W. Naden.
The Contest Between Agnosticism and Theology, John Wilson, M.A.
Above: A Poem.....W. Stewart Ross.
The Evolution of the Agnostic Idea, R. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.
The New Fatalism.....B. Russell.
Descartes's Proof of the Existence of a God, F. J. Gould.
A Poem.....W. B. McTaggart.
The Free Expression of Opinions..G. F. Underhill.
Fragments.....William Maccall

Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office

WHAT KIND OF A MAN CLARK BRADEN IS.

BY B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.

PRICE, TEN CENTS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll

IN THE

TRIAL OF C. B. REYNOLDS

FOR

"BLASPHEMY,"

At Morristown, New Jersey.

Stenographically reported, and revised by the author.

Handsome 8vo, 86 pp., beautiful type, fine paper. Price, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 25 cents, or $2 per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

Obituary.

Herman Bohda was born Feb. 22, 1829, and died at Martinsburg, W. Va., March 9, 1890, aged 70 years and 15 days. He died as he had lived, a free man. He was an earnest Freethought worker, and the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER will recollect having met him at the Philadelphia congress. The following selection was read at his funeral:

"With all his wondrous endowments it has not been given to man to read the riddle of his own existence. From the blank chaos of the past we spring into being like bubbles on the ocean or flowers on the plain. The spark of our material life burns flickeringly on until extinguished by the touch of death, and it becomes us as rational beings, to submit without a murmur to that which we know to be inevitable. Death is both natural and inevitable. Birth and death are in fact mere processes of all animate nature. Both are but the fulfillment of nature and law, and whether in life or in death, we are still in the arms of nature; still subject to the same mysterious and incomprehensible power from which we derived our being. Why should we then fear that which comes to all? The future has been filled with terrors, and stained and polluted by superstition, but all should be brave enough to meet what all the dead hav met. The earth that nourished our bodies shall claim each and every one of them to be dissolved to earth again. All that breathe shall share our destiny, for all shall sleep beneath the shadow of the clouds regardless alike of the sunshine and storm. Death is a monarch who reigns over all creatures that liv upon the earth. In every land he maketh all heads bow and all hearts cease to beat at his command. Death knows nothing of earthly titles, fame, or power, nor of the endearments of friendship and love, or of the charms of grace and beauty. The great, the proud, and the rich must submit as well as the unknown and the humble and the poor. The silent messenger is no respecter of persons. He cuts down the strong man in the possession of all his powers; the young maiden in the beauty of youth, and the smiling babe in its mother's arms. No prayers nor virtues can keep him back. Every form that livs must die, for such is the law of our physical being, and no human power can break the stern decree. Man springeth up like a tree. At first as a tender plant he puts forth buds of promis, then blooming into maturity, for a time he basks in the sunshine and battles with the storms of this life; but ere long his strength fails, his eye grows dim, his locks are whitened with the frosts of time, and he passes away to make room for other generations of men on earth. His hopes and aspirations, like the countless leaves of the forests, may wither and be blown about by the adverse winds of fortune, but his laudable efforts, which spring from the fruitful source of wise endeavor, fructify the earth, from which will rise a blooming harvest of happy results to mankind. His epitaph might be written: 'Here lies an honest man, a friend of and believer in humanity. He sought to make the world better for his having lived in it. The world was his country, and to do good his religion.' Solemnly, reverently place the earth over his honored bones, and over the mound which marks his resting-place let us plant fragrant flowers of sweet memories that will blossom and twine their loving tendrils around our hearts and keep forever green the memory of the loving one at rest in mother earth. Rest, departed comrade, in the grave sacred to those who still stand in the ranks from which you hav fallen."

LOUIS WOLFES.

PAINE'S WORKS.

Paine's Theological Works, including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Letter to the Bishop of Llandaff, Reply to Mr. Erskine, Letter to Camille Jordan, etc., etc., with a life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 12mo In paper covers, $1.00; cloth, $1.50.

Paine's Great Works (complete) in one volume. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, $4.50.

Paine's Political Works, including Common Sense, The Crisis, and Rights of Man. Cloth, $1.50.

The Age of Reason. An investigation of true and fabulous theology. Without a peer in the world. Paper, 25 cents, or 5 for $1. Cloth, 50 cents.

The Age of Reason and An Examination of the Prophecies. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Common Sense. Paine's first work. 15 cents.

The Crisis. Containing numbers from I. to XVI. inclusiv. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Rights of Man. For the oppressed of humanity. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FESTIVAL OF ASHTAROTH.

A tale of Palestine, founded on the destruction of the Moabites by the Jews.

By A. C. MIDDLETON.

Price, ... 10 cents.

BIBLE—WHENCE AND WHAT?

By R. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price, $1.

Socialism and Utilitarianism.

By JOHN STUART MILL.

Price, $1.

A Legacy to the Friends of Free Discussion.

By BENJAMIN OFFEN,

Formerly Lecturer of the Society of Moral Philanthropists, at Tammany Hall, New York.

Price, $1.

APOCRYPHAL NEW TESTAMENT.

The Gospels, Epistles, etc., attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - $1.

ASTRO-THEOLOGICAL LECTURES.

By REV. ROB'T TAYLOR.

Price, - - - - $1.50.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, 10 cents.

RELIGION OF COMMON SENSE.

By PROF. LIEBRECHT ULICH, of Germany.

Price, 25 cents.

THE SUNDAY QUESTION.

A Historical and Critical Review. With Replies to an Objector.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, 15 cents.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, 75 cents.

AN EYE-OPENER.

"Citateur, Par Pigault."

Le Brun, Doubts of Infidels.

By ZEPA.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Antiquity and Duration of the World

By G. TOULMAN.

Price, - - - - - 20 cents.

ASTRONOMY AND WORSHIP OF THE ANCIENTS.

By GILBERT VALE.

Price, . . . 20 cents.

Autobiography of Robert Cooper.

Price, 15 cents.

BHAGAVAD-GITA.

A Discourse on Divine Matters between Krishna and Arjuna.

Translated by J. C. THOMPSON.

Price, $2.

BIBLE IN INDIA.

Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

Price, - - - - - - $2.

BIBLE IN THE BALANCE.

A Text-Book for Investigators.

By REV. J. G. FISH.

Price, ... $1.50.

BIBLE INQUIRER.

148 Striking Self-Contradictions of the Bible, and 152 Marvelous Occurrences.

By A. JACOBSON.

Price, - - - 25 cents.

BIBLE MYTHS.

Their Parallels in Religions of Heathen Nations of Antiquity; Origin and Meaning. Copious Notes and Authorities. "Cyclopedia of Reference." Many Illustrations.

8vo, 600pp., . . . price, $2.50.

BIOGRAPHY OF SATAN.

Historical Exposition of the Devil and his Fiery Domains.

By KERSEY GRAVES.

Price, 35 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

MYTHS AND MYTH-MAKERS.

Old Tales and Superstitions Interpreted by Comparative Mythology.

By JOHN FISKE, M.A., LL.B., of Harvard College.

Price, $2.

BEYOND THE VEIL.

Claimed to be Dictated by the Spirit of P. B. Randolph, aided by Swedenborg, through Mrs. F. H. McDougall and Mrs. Luna Hutchinson. [Spir.]

Steel Engraving of Randolph. Price, $1.50.

THE KORAN.

A New English Edition of the Koran of Mohammed, to which is added the Life of Mohammed, or the History of that Doctrine which was begun and carried on by him in Arabia.

SALE'S edition. Price, $1.50.

HUME'S ESSAYS.

Essays and Treatises. Autobiography and Dialogues on Natural Religion.

By DAVID HUME. Price, $1.50.

SUPERSTITION IN ALL AGES.

By JEAN MESLIER (born 1678), A Catholic Priest who Renounced Christianity.

Portrait.

Price, pap., 50 cts.; clo., $1.

Man's Nature and Development.

By HENRY G. ATKINSON, F.G.S., and HARRIET MARTINEAU.

Price, - - - - $1.50.

Infidel's or Inquirer's Text-Book.

Thirteen Lectures on the Bible.

By ROB'T COOPER. Price, $1.

Origin and Development of Religious Ideas and Beliefs.

By MORRIS EINSTEIN. Price, $1.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

With Explanatory Observations on his Writings.

By GILBERT VALE. Price, $1.

A BUSINESS MAN'S SOCIAL AND RELIGIOUS VIEWS.

From a Poor Man's Standpoint. Price, $1.

KNEELAND'S NATIONAL HYMNS

Price, cloth, 35 cents.

LETTERS TO EUGENIA.

A Preservative Against Religious Prejudices.

By BARON D'HOLBACH.

Price, - - - - - - $1.

CAREER OF RELIGIOUS IDEAS.

Ultimating in the Religion of Science.

By HUDSON TUTTLE. [Spir.]

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

LIFE OF PAINE.

By J. E. REMSBURG.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Mortality of the Soul and the Immortality of Its Elements.

By A. S. DE PELLEGRINI.

Price, - - - - - 15 cents.

JEHOVAH UNVEILED.

Character of the Jewish Jehovah Delineated.

Price, 35 cents.

MORAL PHYSIOLOGY.

A Treatise on the Population Question.

By R. D. OWEN.

Price, - - - - - 35 cents.

AN HOUR WITH THE DEVIL.

By D. M. BENNETT.

Price, - - - 10 cents.

IF, THEN, AND WHEN.

Church Doctrines.

By W. S. BARLOW. [Spir.] Price, 10 cents.

The Liberty of Printing, and Reply.

By HURLBUT and WAKEMAN.

Price, 10 cents.

ICHABOD CRANE PAPERS.

Daringly witty and inexpressibly laughable onslaughts on Christianity.

Price, 10 cents.

BLASPHEMY AND THE BIBLE.

By C. B. REYNOLDS.

Price, 5 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Christ of Paul; or, the Enigmas of Christianity.

Frauds of the Churchmen of the Second Century Exposed.

By GEORGE REBER.

12mo, 400pp., - - Price, $2.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN.

A Compendium of Universal History.

By WINWOOD READE.

Sixth edition, 544pp., - - $1.75.

SCRIPTURE SPECULATIONS.

With Creation, Stars, Earth, Primitive Man, Judaism.

By H. R. STEVENS. 419pp., $1.50.

ETHICS OF POSITIVISM.

A Critical Study and Survey of the Moral Philosophy of the Present Century.

By GIACOMO BARZELLOTTI, Prof. of Philosophy at the Licco Dante, Florence.

Price, $1.50.

OLD FAITH AND THE NEW.

A Confession.

By DAVID FRIEDERICH STRAUSS.

Authorized translation from sixth German edition by Mathilde Blind.

Price, ... $1.50.

HEALTH HINTS TO WOMEN.

Important Information for All, and "Danish Cure." With Portrait.

By MME. W. SCHOTT. Price, $1.50.

The Legends of the Patriarchs and Prophets.

By S. BARING-GOULD.

Will be seized with avidity by all students of the Bible.—[Congregationalist.

Price, $1.50.

RADICAL PULPIT.

Discourses of Advanced Thought.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM and FELIX ADLER.

Price, $1.

INSTITUTION of MARRIAGE.

And Remarkable Divorce Cases.

By PHILANTHROPUS.

446pp. - - - - Price, $1.

The Contrast: Evangelicalism and Spiritualism Compared.

By MOSES HULL.

Paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

PERSONAL IMMORTALITY

AND OTHER PAPERS.

Candid Arguments for and Against Immortality

By JOSIE OPPENHEIM. Price, 75 cents

SIXTEEN SAVIORS OR NONE.

By KERSEY GRAVES.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Truth Seeker Collection of Forms, Hymns, and Recitations.

For Organizing Societies; for Marriages, Funerals, Naming of Infants, Obituaries, Epitaphs, etc. Also 525 Liberal and Spiritualistic Hymns for Social and Various Public Occasions.

18mo, 550pp. Price, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Nunneries.

By W. HOGAN.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Shelley: Philosopher and Reformer.

By C. SOTHERAN.

8vo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Lithograph of D. M. Bennett

Heavy plate paper 22x28. Price, 50 cts.

Lithograph of Bennett Monument.

In 4 colors, 22x28. Heavy plate paper.

Price, 50 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

With Remarks on Rousseau and Comte.

By CALVIN BLANCHARD.

Paper, - - - 40 cents.

SOUL PROBLEMS.

WITH

Theological Amendment and State Personality.

By JOS. E. PECK.

Price, - - - - 25 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I., and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two Volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

Thirty Discussions, Bible Stories, Essays, and Lectures. 700 pages. Paper covers, 75 cents;

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity, between D. M. BENNETT and Rev. G. H. HUMPHREY. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. BENNETT and CYRUS ROMULUS R. TEED. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents;

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. BENNETT and G. M. MAIR, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion.

2. Miracles and supernatural achievements hav been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus.

3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history.

BENNETT affirms; MAIR denies. This is an exhaustiv discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This givs a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon MR. BENNETT. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cents.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist Church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. Cloth, $1.00

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers 10 cents.

The Great Religions of the World. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Sinful Saints and Sensual Shepherds 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

W. S. BELL'S PAMPHLETS.

LIBERTY AND MORALITY.

PRICE, 15 CENTS.

Accept my thanks for your excellent and useful discourse.—James Parton.

I am much pleased with your address, and will notice it in Man.—T. B. Wakeman.

A beautiful pamphlet of 36 pages. It is a very able paper, and deserves wide dissemination.—The Age.

ANTI PROHIBITION.

PRICE, 20 CENTS.

The number of heads under which you hav divided the subject matter of the pamphlet, and the concise manner in which the point is discussed, should be highly commended. Therefore I take great pleasure in recommending "Anti-Prohibition" to the consideration of every person who is interested, not only in the cause of temperance, but in the principles of self-government.—J. J. McCabe.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LIFE OF Joshua Davidson:

MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,

As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.

BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,

Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.

Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.

☞ This book was suppressed by the first American publisher. ☜

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE NEW GOD.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,

Secretary of the American Secular Union.

Price 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE SAFEST CREED,

AND

TWELVE OTHER DISCOURSES OF REASON.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

Extra cloth, 12mo, 238pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR BOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Career of Jesus Christ.

An Exposition of the True Meaning of this Character as described in the New Testament. By Milton Woolley, M.D., author of "Hebrew Mythology." Paper, 8vo, 25 cents.

SPECIAL SALE OF WATCHES AND DIAMONDS.

Good American Nickel Stem-winders, $2.50, $4, $6. Best grades in silverine case, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; adjusted, $16. For 3 ounce coin silver case, add $3.50; 4 ounce, $4.50; 5 ounce, $6. In best open-face filled gold, dust-proof case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; adjusted, $24.50; hinged cases, $3 more; hunting cases, $6 more.

The New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

All modern improvements: in silverine, $19; 3 ounce coin silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25. BEST open-face filled screw case, $27; hinged, $30; hunting, $26; Louis XIV style, $2 to $10 more. Ladies' best gold filled, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18.50; 15 jewels, $25; adjusted, $35; 14 kt solid gold, $10 to $20 more. Ruby and diamond ornamentations up to $100 extra.

DIAMONDS.

An elegant 3 stone, 8kt., solitaire pin and drops, $603, worth $900; a magnificent hair ornament and pin and pendant combination, rosette, 29 brilliants, $200, worth $300; one do., heart-shape, sapphire and ruby in center, same price and value. Pins, rings, drops, studs, from $300 down to $10; same proportionate discounts. All bought before late advance.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 5th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Admission free. Discussions follow lectures.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston,
Meets every Sunday (from October to June) at 2:45 P.M., at Paine Memorial Building, Appleton street.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,
Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

Essence of Religion.

By L. FEUERBACH.

Translated from the German. Cloth, 12mo, 75pp., 50 cts.

The truth-teller is ill-mannered, therefore immoral.—Extract.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indescretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT.

"Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. R. P. Fellows is an outspoken Infidel and very successful physician. He is worthy of an extensiv patronage.—The Liberal.

News of the Week.

THE International Labor Conference at Berlin recommended that women and children do not work in mines, that women do no night work and occupy not over eleven hours daily, and that coal mines be scientifically protected. After making these suggestions, which no power was provided to enforce, it dissolved.

FRENCH and Dahomans are fighting.

THERE has been blood shed between Apaches and Mexicans in Mexico.

THE new extradition treaty between England and the United States has gone into effect.

CASTELAR says that what German labor needs most is disbandment of the standing army.

IN India typhoid fever has spread so as to be as much feared as cholera, and government will investigate.

THE Congo state is establishing subordinate stations for the purpose of abating cannibalism, slave trade, and human sacrifice.

THE women of Farmington, Mo., are carrying on a crusade against beer, and hav waylaid and destroyed one or two wagon-loads of it.

THE great eight-hour movement was opened on the 7th at Chicago by a strike of five thousand carpenters for forty cents an hour and the eight-hour day.

AMONG the measures proposed by the Pan-American congress, the one being pushed the most effectivly is that establishing a common coinage between the American nations.

THE house has passed by a vote of 202 to 49 the World's Fair bill referred to it by the Senate, but has postponed the time to 1893.

AT Baltimore recently members of the Polish Catholic church of St. Stanislaus got into a row that necessitated the arrest of the whole party and the interference of the courts.

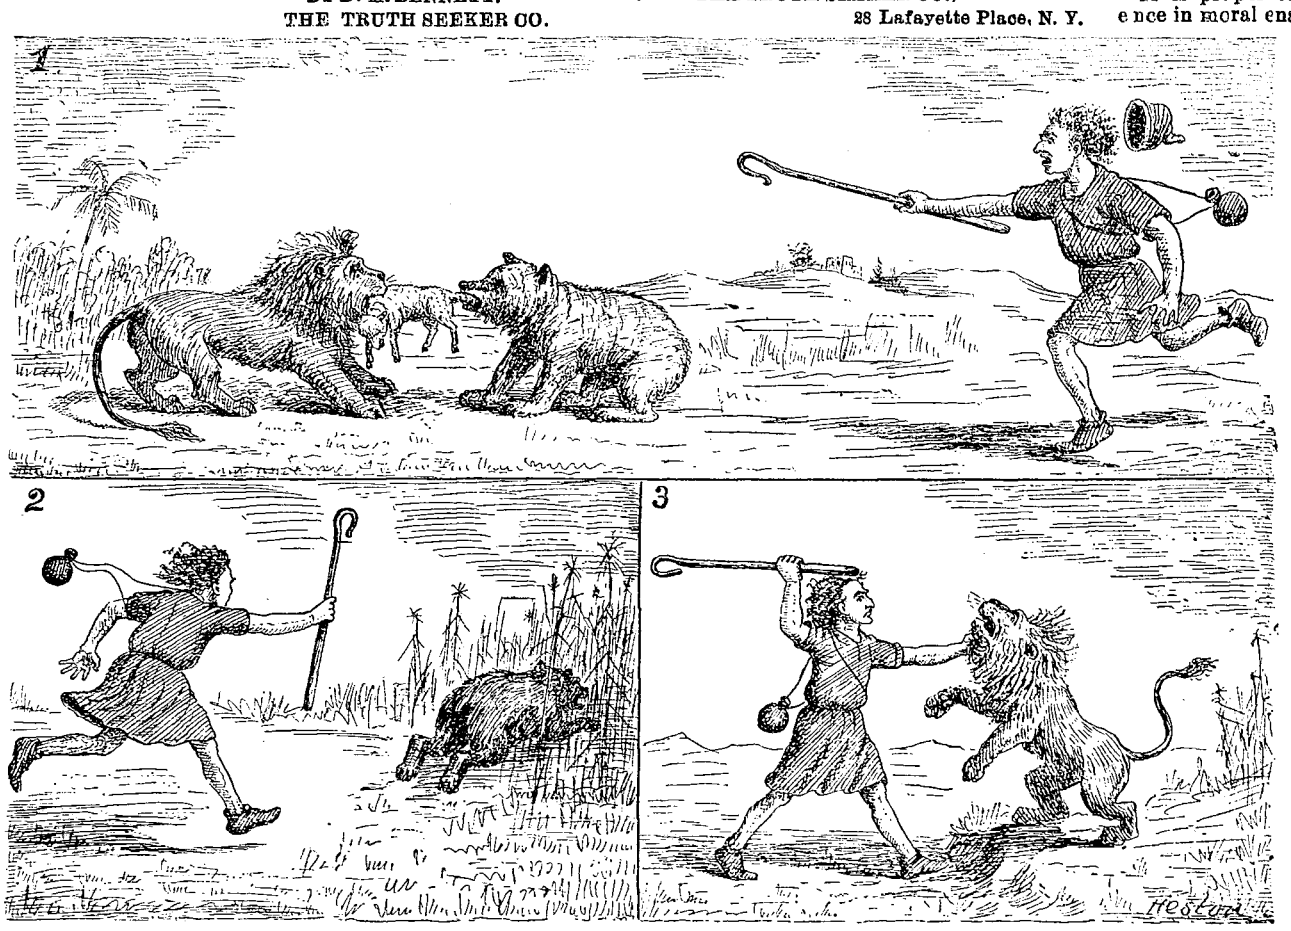
JACOB ANDRESEN hanged himself in New York city recently while crazed by the belief that he was pursued by devils. The same belief, in a mitigated form, is harming many millions in varying degrees.

GERMANY maintains its character of being the nation having the least illiteracy, only by vigorous effort and disciplin, the city of Berlin alone having been compelled during 1889 to punish 6,800 cases of violation of the school law.

DOM PEDRO has refused to take the proceeds of the forced sale of his property in Brazil ordered by the provisional government. Of late he has been failing in health and in mind, and he is now reported as bordering on insanity.

MR. JONES (Ark.) has introduced in Senate for Mr. Ingalls a bill to promote the marrying by women who will care for them, of soldiers that hav lost eyes, arms, or legs, the inducement to the women being pensions of $12 a month when they become widows.

THE dikes on the Mississippi hav suffered breaks in several places. Considerable land has been overflowed. The blacks showed a tendency to become panic-stricken and unguidable. Near Henrico, Miss., a negro Baptist church floated off while services were in progress.



THE head of the Mormon church, President, or Prophet, Woodruff, said at the sixtieth annual conference that opened on the 4th that the day of revelations has ended; that God has revealed enough of the mysteries for the people to see salvation, and there need be no looking for more divine utterances.

IN experiments of the French army with the smokeless powder, infantry hidden in brush poured a heavy fire on opponents without betrayal of their whereabouts by smoke-puffs as formerly, while on the other hand, troops not under cover could no longer conceal their movements under friendly clouds of smoke from supporting batteries.

THE other day Mrs. Wolf, the young wife of John Wolf, a German living near Monticello, stole up behind her husband and crying, "God has ordered me to kill you, John," felled him with a club. He disarmed and quieted her, but after a few hours she stole to the woods with a babe, and though she was retaken the babe has not been found.

GODS AND RELIGIONS
ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.
Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.
BY D. M. BENNETT.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.
Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.
BY D. M. BENNETT.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

A RATHER MIXED STORY.

And David said unto Saul, Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion and a bear, and took a lamb out of the flock; And I went out after him, and smote him, and delivered it out of his mouth: and when he arose against me, I caught him by his beard, and smote him, and slew him.—1 Sam. xvii, 34, 35.

Gems of Thought.

IN nations where governments are established, there is at least a third part of errors and abuses, a third part of tolerable customs, and another third of calamities and misfortunes.—Voltaire.

IT is proper to advert to one specific influence in moral enactments, serving to disguise the Ethical end, and to widen the distinction between morality as it has been, and morality as it ought to be. The enforcing of legal and moral enactments demands a power of coercion, to be lodged in the hands of certain persons; the possession of which is a temptation to exceed the strict exigencies of public safety or the common welfare. Probably many of the whims, fancies, ceremonies, likings, and antipathies, that hav found their way into the moral codes of nations, hav arisen from the arbitrary disposition of certain individuals happening to be in authority at particular junctures. Even the general community, acting in a spontaneous manner, imposes needless restraints upon itself, delighting more in the exercise of power than in the freedom of individual action. —Bain's Moral Science.

WERE any girl that is now with child to say, and even to swear it, that she was gotten with child by a ghost, and that an angel told her so, would she be believed? Certainly she would not. Why then are we to believe the same thing of another girl whom we never saw, told by nobody knows who, nor when, nor where? How strange and inconsistent is it, that the same circumstance that would weaken the belief even of a probable story, should be given as a motiv for believing this one, that has upon the face of it every token of absolute impossibility and imposture.—Paine.

MIRACLES are probable only in the far past or the very remote future. The present is the property of the natural. You say to a man, "The dead were raised four thousand years ago." He says, "Well, that's reasonable." You say to him, "In four million years we shall all be raised." He says, "That is what I believe." Say to him, "A man was raised from the dead this morning," and he will say, "What are you giving us?" Miracles never convinced at the time they were said to hav been performed.—Ingersoll.

THE dogmas of the Christian church hav smitten its victims with the nauseous disease of hypocrisy. The atmosphere of our whole social life is tainted with the poison of cant and dissimulation. By invoking the aid of the secular powers to protect the authority of dogmas which to all clear-sighted men hav become a mixture of blasphemy and absolute nonsense, the church offers a premium for intellectual dishonesty. Every lover of truth is branded with the reproach of eccentricity by the upholders of a system whose center has always been an untruth, and generally a very transparent untruth.—Professor Oswald.

TYRANNY begins her arguments by fettering
free speech,
Begin your reply by breaking your fetters.
—Mirabeau.

CHRISTIANITY is a degrading religion. Only mental slaves or moral cowards can accept it. A believer must begin by abandoning his reason, and end by shifting the burden of moral responsibility from his own to other shoulders. Gautama, the founder of Buddhism, in stating his noble eightfold path to happiness, put first the acceptance of "right views." But, in order that a man should know what views are right, he must hav freedom to think. Gautama saw this, and therefore urged his followers to inquire diligently after truth. The founder of Christianity was not so wise. He cared not how stupid or thoughtless men were so long as they believed in him. In fact, he declared that he was "the way, the truth, and the life;" and that no man could be saved from the wrath of a merciful God but by accepting him. "Believe and be saved; disbelieve and be damned," was the foundation-stone of all his teachings. In point of fact it came to this, that so arrogant and dogmatic was this peregrinating preacher that he led many to suppose that he was God almighty; and Christians to-day are driven into the position either of regarding Jesus as the very God, or of repudiating him altogether as an impostor.—Arthur B. Moss.

THE Truth Seeker Annual
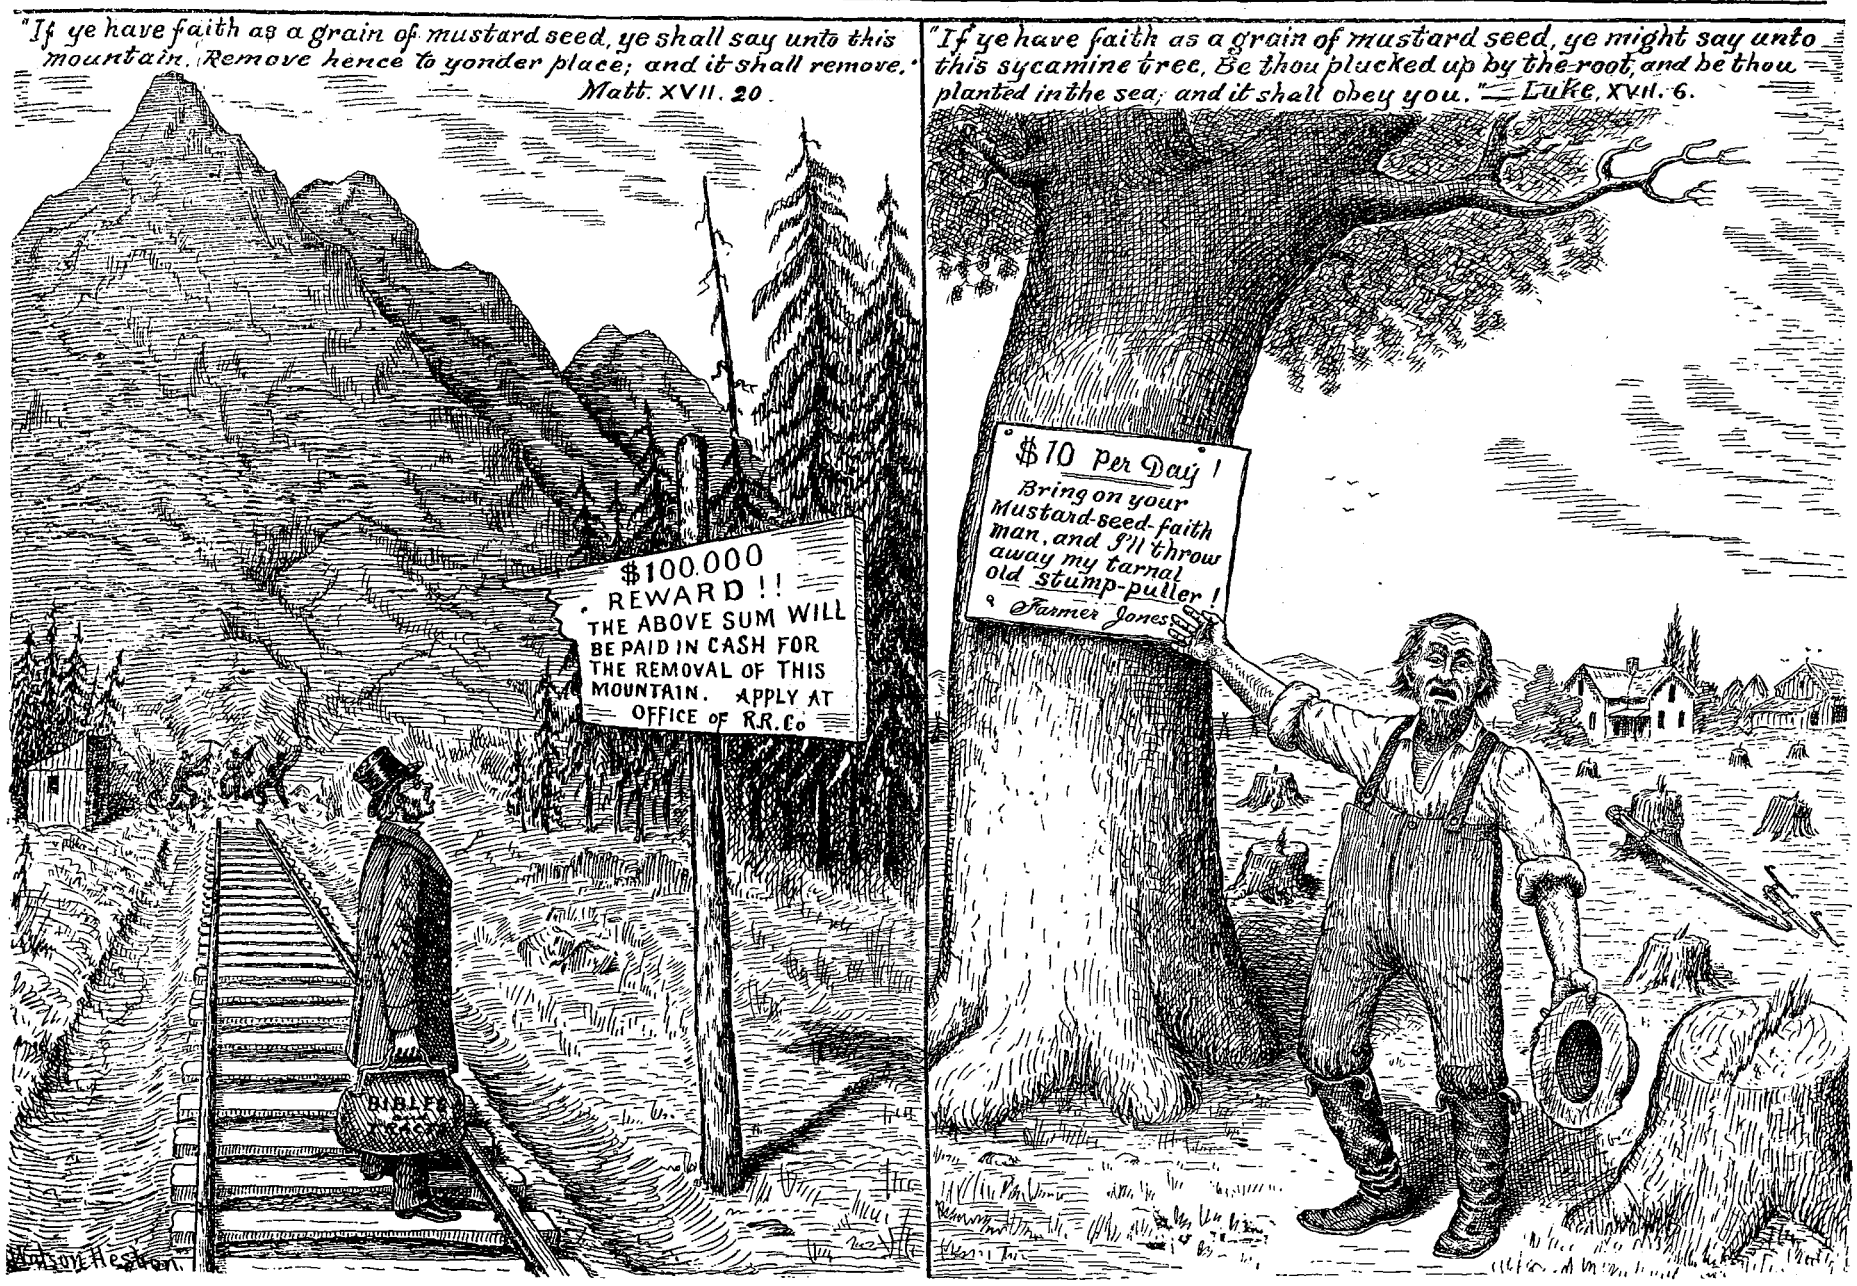
—AND—
Freethinkers' Almanac,
1890.
(E. M. 290.)
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Calendar for 1890,	5
Freethought in the United States, 1889,	17
Faded Flowers. Poem by J. E. Remsburg,	24
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue. T. B. Wakeman,	26
Mostly Fools. W. Stewart Ross (Saladin),	36
Record of the Spanish Inquisition,	44
Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas,	44
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral. Helen H. Gardener,	45
The Middle Ages. Illustrated,	69
The Priest,	70
The Supernatural World,	71
The Reformation,	73
Future Terrors,	77
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated,	79
Freethought Journals in the United States,	96
In Search of a Spirit. E. M. Macdonald,	97
Why I Left the Church. H. O. Pentecost,	109

NEW YORK:
PUBLISHED AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE.



PRICE, 25 CENTS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 17. No. 16. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 19, 1890. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

WORK FOR THE FAITHFUL.

Notes and Clippings.

RECENTLY an Indian medicin woman residing on Rock Creek, east of Goldendale, Ore., failing to cure one of her patients, was taken out by some of the noble braves of that vicinity, a rope put around her neck, and she was dragged to death.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY denies the rumor that she intends to remove to Wyoming and there enter the race for the United States Senate. Nevertheless she hopes to liv to see the newer states of the Union sending female delegates to the national legislature. She has great hopes of North and South Dakota and Wyoming.

THE Province of Ontario is deeply exercised over a circular issued by Archbishop Cleary, of Kingston, ordering his priests to refuse the sacrament to Catholics who send their children to public in preference to parochial schools. This, says the sender of the dispatch, will greatly intensify the religious feeling throughout Canada.

GENERAL HOWARD, in an Easter contribution to the New York Independent, says: "Boys who lived in the interior of Maine fifty years ago, knew little or nothing of Christmas or Easter." The Catholic Union and Times unkindly adds: "We doubt if the boys had much the advantage of the rest of the population in those days. We always had a suspicion that those Maine Puritans were not Christians at all."

THE Sunday baseball games in and near the cities of the United States are inducing the railway companies to provide new cars, engins, trains, and other appliances for carrying tens of thousands of passengers to and from the ball grounds. Last Sunday over twenty thousand spectators witnessed the games at St. Louis. On the Pacific coast, at San Francisco, and on the shores of Lake Ontario, at Windsor Beach, near Rochester, and at other popular resorts, preparations are making to transport from twenty thousand to thirty thousand people every Sunday throughout the season.

STOVE-POLISHER MORSE, Representativ in Congress from a Massachusetts district, recently lectured in a Congregational church in Washington on "a business man's view of the gospel." This is the gem of his lecture, as reported in the daily papers: "Mr. Morse referred to Mr. Ingersoll's last lecture in Boston, and said Mr. Ingersoll was as powerless to stop the progress of the gospel as a chipping squirrel sitting on a railroad is to stop the Chicago lightning express. He referred to Mr. Ingersoll's inquiry as to whether anybody ever saw the God of the Bible, and asked: 'Did Mr. Ingersoll ever see his own brain?' and if he had he had not seen much. 'The sun,' continued Mr. Morse, 'is 95,000,000 miles from the earth, and if it was a hollow sphere it would contain 1,000 worlds like ours. There are 80,000,000 of solar systems floating in space; every star of the Milky Way is a solar system, and, for aught I know, they all revolve around the throne of God; and when a man asks you and me if we had ever seen God, I pity that man. Mr. Ingersoll says there are three hundred contradictions in the book. They are in his poor brain. The book is all right when rightly understood.'" Mr. Morse appears to be the monumental jackass of the House, as Mr. Blair from a neighboring state is of the Senate.

COLONEL NEW, consul-general in London, made a speech the other day in which he said that if England ever got into difficulty the sympathy of the people of the United States would be with her rather than with a non-English-speaking race. To this the Sun of this city says: "Colonel New's English hearers made a great mistake if they took this amiable nonsense as an expression of the sentiments of Americans in general. Not only would the United States render no assistance to Great Britain, should the latter need assistance, but a very large proportion, probably the majority of Americans, would be well pleased to see 'the old mother country' in difficulty, and her integrity and ascendency attacked and destroyed. She has been no friend of this country. This country is no friend of hers. There are old scores between them which may hav to be settled yet. Colonel New's after-dinner view of the relations between the two countries is different from that held by most of his fellow-citizens. As a matter of cold fact, the English as a nation heartily dislike America and the Americans, and this dislike is heartily returned." The Sun is talking to the Irish, and Mike Corrigan should ask the pope to send Mr. Dana the apostolical blessing. Perhaps Bernard Reilly, too, may now lower the price of his fourteenth-century communications to the Sunday Sun.

THERE is trouble between the inmates of heaven, and those who hav been cast out are saying hard things about the Lord. The heaven meant is not the one where Mumbo Jumbo reigns, but the one presided over by Lord Schweinfurth at Rockford, Ill., a much more real place than the other. Mr. J. T. Morgan became a follower of Christ Schweinfurth about three years ago. He was at the heaven in Rockford for two years. Then he had a happy family consisting of a wife, son, and daughter. Now he is living alone in Minneapolis, his wife is at the house of Christ Schweinfurth's chief apostle in the same city, his daughter is the runaway wife of a worthless disciple, and his son is a sort of body servant of the new Christ. Mr. Morgan speaks reproachfully of the Beekmanites. When lingering in heaven a doubt was infused into his brain by hearing Schweinfurth declare in his pulpit, "I am God and beside me there is no other." His doubt turned to absolute disbelief when he saw how this "God" grasped at all the money in sight and how he behaved toward the women in his heaven. One of these, he says, is a Mrs. Tuttle, who left a husband and four children in St. Charles, Minn., and went to liv at Schweinfurth's. Mrs. Tuttle has borne children since she went there—by order of the new Christ, she says. Mrs. Tuttle is Schweinfurth's right-hand woman. He is king; she is queen. His confession of faith is, first, to acknowledge him as the only savior; second, to promis perfect obedience; third, to deny yourself, which means giv up money, lands, and family to him. This line of conduct did not meet Mr. Morgan's views, and he is now a backslider from the faith. However, Schweinfurth has quite a household of fools left, and Mr. Morgan will probably not be missed so long as his wife remains true to the faith—and the apostles.

Communications.

Christianity and Science.

(Suggested by Heston's cartoon of the pope and the comet.)

A science is not born in a day. Every thoughtful person knows that a science is a thing of slow growth. One fact and then another and another, all bearing on the same subject, hav to be collected, arranged, and systematized, so as to be easily taught and understood, before they are erected into a science. Astronomy, chemistry, geology, and all other sciences hav been built up in this way.

We hav been gathering facts upon which the science of astronomy rests for more than four thousand years. We hav Chinese records which show that these ancient people were studying celestial motion as long ago as the time mentioned. Thence we trace the contributions to this science through the Chaldean observers to Thales, Pythagoras, Copernicus, and Galileo down to the present time.

While a class of scientific delvers hav been trying to lift the minds of men out of the ruts of tradition and superstition, a class of visionaries who claimed to be inspired by God, hav been engaged in writing out commands and instructions from this heavenly boss whom they knew as little about as the pope did about the comet. And it so happens that the truths which these scientists enunciate are constantly coming in contact with what the visionaries hav written.

The scientist says: Here are a thousand facts which hav been gathered by the most careful observers, and arranged by the most competent and patient toilers, and these facts do not agree with what the visionaries declare their God has set forth. The visionaries reply: Your science is not ripe. It is only in the bud. When you shall hav gathered a thousand other facts, classified and arranged them, science will be then in accord with the word of God.

Years roll on. The scientist says: We hav collected a thousand other facts, and they all point in the same direction as those collected before. There are now two thousand facts which contradict your so-called holy writ.

The holy egotist replies: God has said it. Let God be true and every man a liar. Whatever contradicts God's word is of the devil.

The disinterested savants hav been the few. The bigoted and intolerant hav been the many, and the power of the brain has too often been sacrificed to the power of ignorant numbers. No one can tell to what hights we might hav attained if science had not been compelled to succumb to superstition.

To compare the uncertainties of superstition with the exact work of science is the object of this article.

In the year 1456 a large comet made its appearance. It spread a greater terror than an earthquake that would hav sunk a dozen cities. It must be remembered that at that time the power of the church was at its zenith, and shaped the minds of the people as the potter shapes the clay.

Scientific aspiration had been crushed out, schools of learning abolished, and even high church dignitaries were controled more by superstition than reason.

The nature of comets at that day was little understood. But still there were a few who knew something about the theory of Thales and Pythagoras, and had good reason to believe that the harmless comet belonged to a grand and harmonious system, and that its mission was not to terrify or work injury to the human race. But they well knew that prison doors would fly open and fires would be kindled if they gave utterance to their thoughts.

A history of this comet would help us to understand the ignorance of the times when the rule of the church was supreme, more than any other single circumstance.

At the time of its appearance the belief was entertained by all classes of the people, and no doubt magnified by the wiles of the priesthood, that the comet would strike the earth and that the judgment day was at hand. It was also believed that the Turks would overrun all Europe, and this added to the general gloom.

To prepare the world for the doom which awaited it, Pope Calixtus III. ordered the Ave Maria to be repeated three times a day instead of two. To the Ave Maria the prayer was added, "Lord, deliver us from the devil, the Turk, and the comet." Once each day the devil, the Turk, and the comet had to suffer excommunication. The churches and cathedrals were crowded for confessions of sins, and treasures beyond computation were poured into the lap of the church.

It may be stated as a fact, though not generally known, that the great wealth and consequent power of the church was derived in a great degree from the appearance of this comet.

After curses and excommunications repeated day by day, the much abused yet harmless comet beat a retreat from those who did nothing but dread and curse it, joy soon returned to the people, but their money and houses and lands, never.

As is always the case with the wire pullers in the church, the pope made the people believe that he had driven the monster from the skies, and that their money had saved their lives and kept the world from being jammed to powder by this great fiery pestle, and though they had poured millions of treasure, like water, down the dilated gullet of the church, their safety and that of the world had been purchased at a cheap rate.

These historical facts help us to understand, in a great degree, the hypocritical claims of the church. It is put forth with a seeming confidence, worthy of a better cause, that those whom God has inspired or called or regenerated are given a clearer vision—that they see with the spiritual eye what is forever hidden from the unregenerate man—that they are guided by the spirit and less liable to err than those who put their trust only in an "arm of flesh" and never put their trust in God. Now let us try this claim by the test of science and historical fact.

The great comet of 1456, which so terrified the pope and the people, is now known as Halley's comet—the first, as far as we know, whose orbit was ever computed. In 1680 Newton attempted to ascertain whether the great law which he had discovered also held the comets in its grasp. In that year a wonderful comet appeared, but it was a bad comet to experiment on, owing to its vast period of 600 years and the great eccentricity of its orbit.

The comet which so badly frightened the pope appeared again in the year 1682. To the investigation of this comet Halley applied all the energies of a great mind. Looking back through all the records, even to the vanishing-point of cometary history, he found in the years of 248, 324, 309, 1006, 1456, 1531, and 1607 accounts of comets which he believed to be identical with the comet of 1682.

Here was a pretty strong hold on the fact that the comet had returned at stated periods, and that the period could not vary far from 76 years. If you take the date of its first appearance, 248, and add the number 76, the sum will be 324, the date of its second appearance. If to the last number 76 be again added, the sum will be 399, the date of its third appearance, and so on.

But this will not produce the exact dates at which the comet appeared in every instance, because the period of the comet is not exactly 76 years, and because there were other influences which affected the motion of it, which cannot be fully explained in an article of this kind, which is designed to be historical rather than scientific.

After obtaining these facts Halley set himself down to the task of computing its orbit. There are few who can understand the difficulties attending the solution of the problem at that day. It suffices to say that after he had gone through the maze of figures he was astounded at the result. His calculations showed that in its aphelion the distance which intervened between it and the sun was no less than 3,400,000,000 miles.

He was sure his calculations were correct, and predicted that the comet would return at the close of 1758, or the beginning of 1759. He knew he could not liv to witness its return, but, modest as all great scientists are, he lost sight of his own fame to giv glory to his country. He only asked posterity to do justice to his country by remembering that this first prediction of a comet's return had been made by an Englishman.

Now, I ask any fair-minded man to compare this scientific triumph with the farcical attitude of old Calixtus III., and all his deluded and ignorant dupes.

If the Christian religion be true, the pope must hav been under the direct control of God. The people believed him to be infallible—one who took his cue from Jesus Christ himself, through St. Peter the head of the church. If there was a man in the world who should hav occupied the very highest position in the world among civilized people, it was he.

If the Christian religion carries with it the elements of civilization, Christians ought to hav occupied at that time a position which civilized peoples would hav envied. It was the noonday of the church's power, and yet we find the pope and all his people ringing bells, uttering prayers, and pronouncing curses upon a comet which had peacefully visited us hundreds of times before.

If Christianity had not been interfered with by scientific research, at every unusual appearance in nature men would still be upon their knees howling like dervishes, and imploring an imaginary power which never did and never can help them. Every knee would quake and fear would be upon every countenance.

Instead of going down upon his knees, Halley went to investigating comets and their orbits. He wiped away the cobwebs of superstition by subjecting them to the most rigid analysis, and demonstrating to the world that they were subject to the same law which governed the planets in their orderly courses. Oh, what a contrast between this scientific treatment of a comet and the mummery of the pope and his people.

Instead of working upon the minds of the people with objects of fear and dread, Halley satisfied them that, for perhaps millions of years, these fiery visitors had been shooting athwart the sky, and had never worked injury to the planet on which we liv, or any other.

The most acute minds hav investigated the subject, and are well satisfied that there is not one chance in a million for us to be injured by one of these law-abiding travelers. The fears of the people hav been calmed, and, among the more intelligent, perfect confidence obtained in regard to the orderly movements of all celestial bodies. Oh, what a boon it has proved to the people to hav these superstitious fears driven from the mind.

Having glanced at what can be accomplished when mind is guided by reason, let us see what is accomplished by Christians who put not their trust in an "arm of flesh," but trust in the living God, and who are governed by prophecies and revelations, rather than reason.

When I was about ten years old it was predicted that, on a given day, the world would come to an end, and I waited with terrible anxiety and awful foreboding for the fatal day. I looked upon the day preceding as my last day on earth. On the day appointed I was up before the sun, which I watched, hour by hour, and then minute by minute, until I saw it sink behind the western hills. And it seemed as though I had been taken from under a crushing weight when night closed in and I was still alive. Oh, what a day for a timid, sensitiv boy. The horror of that day will never be erased from my mind. On that day I could hav been induced to pray, or join the church, or do anything else to avert the awful calamity. The fear of hell has built up the church. It has always been the policy of the priesthood, in some way, to keep the people frightened. They are never as pliant as when thoroughly scared. How many times a general smash-up has been predicted, I am unable to say, and yet the old world undeviatingly pursues its course without paying any attention to these biblical lunatics.

But in the year 1842, or about that time, the fright was brought to a white heat by announcing that Gabriel was on the rampage and would blow his long horn without mistake.

This calculation was based on the prophecies; the whole ground had been gone over; the old tables had been recast; every error had been eliminated, and the true date of the final destruction had been ascertained. There was only one fact which these astute calculators had overlooked, and that was that a prophecy is something like a cloud which looks to one man like a whale, and to another like a weasel. Well, the date had been fixed, and men perambulated the country exhibiting charts showing all the horned and hideous monsters which ever inhabited earth, air, or sea, and many which never existed anywhere. I hav seen those charts filled with such horrible monsters as would lead one to believe that they had been designed by somebody who had snakes in his boots, for they would throw anyone into delirium tremens who looked at them. Many times I hav seen the problem worked out with mathematical exactness, and the true date arrived at. Then the speaker would turn to the audience and say, "These figures are based upon the word of God."

Many believed that God's word must stand, and that the end was near. Business was abandoned by many, farms were deserted, property was given away. What was the use of it all, when in a few days they would be caught up into the clouds? Ascension robes were prepared and everything made ready for the day of doom.

When the final day arrived the earth did not "melt with fervent heat," the heavens were not "rolled together like a scroll," nor did anyone get "caught up into the clouds," nor was "the sun darkened." But the earth attended strictly to business—revolved upon its axis as though it had got used to it, and pursued its journey around the sun as though it was of too much importance to be interfered with.

Such is the folly of Christian calculation resting upon the sayings of such men as Moses and David, and such the folly of trying to make science conform to the babblings of men who were far enough beside themselvs to believe that silly drivel was inspired by supreme wisdom. That men of the nineteenth century should hav more confidence in the ravings of such holy blatherskites than they do in the scientific deductions of such men as Copernicus, Kepler, Newton, and Halley, can only be accounted for in one way, and that is, that lunatics often believe themselvs to be the keenest men in the world.

Before closing this article I wish to compare one or two other scientific triumphs with the nightmare of Revelations, and with the prophecies, and the story of the shadow which moved back on the dial, and that of the feat of Joshua the great planetary juggler, and any other fish story or snake story found in the Bible.

It was not long after the discovery of Uranus that geometers fited it out with an orbit, which at first represented its place in the heavens. But it was soon found that the planet was getting out of place. It seemed in no way inclined to follow the path prescribed for it. Old tables were reviewed and new calculations made, but no orbit was constructed to correspond with its position. It seemed determined to jump the track and bid defiance to every known law. It continued to swing out, until in 1838 the difference between its actual place and its presented path was greater than the distance between the earth and the moon. Many theories were given for the planet's deviation from its computed place, but none gave entire satisfaction.

Such was the condition of the problem when Leverier, a young French geometer, undertook a solution.

It would be too difficult to follow Leverier through all his calculations, but it may be stated that he weighed with the utmost exactness every known influence which could effect the position of the planet. Then he commenced by a series of mathematical reasoning to ascertain where the disturbing influence was located, which by its attracting power was dragging the planet out of its course.

It would be quite difficult to convey to the mind of the general reader an adequate idea of the intricacies of this profound investigation.

There was much already known which helped him in the solution of the problem. And yet the complexity of the vast work before him is far out of the reach of those who hav given but little attention to the subject.

In brief it may be stated that from the manner in which Uranus was pulled out of its orbit, and from the distance, Leverier had to cipher out the position of the disturbing influence and the power of its attractiv force.

On Sept. 18, 1846, after Leverier had by his mathematical calculation located the new planet, he wrote to M. Galle, of Berlin, asking him to direct his telescope to the point in the heavens where his figures had placed the planet, in order that the correctness of his reasoning might be verified.

The same night that M. Galle received the letters, he turned his telescope to the quarter of the heavens indicated by the letter, and there lay the beautiful stranger within less than one degree of the place pointed out, throwing its light back to us from a distance of more than 3,000,000,000 of miles.

I can do no more than giv a brief sketch of this wonderful scientific achievement.

A thousand times it has been asserted that the Bible is the word of God. And as evidence of what is assumed as a fact it is claimed that man could never hav produced such a book. Now I ask any fair-minded man to look through the books of Moses, and through Revelations and the gospels, and through the prophecies, and see if anything can be found at all comparable with this one mental achievement.

I will giv one other instance to show what can be accomplished by the human mind without inspiration or any help from God, and to show also that all that has ever been said by so-called inspired writers is but as the chatterings of a magpie compared with the great scientific triumph which I am about to notice.

In the distances between the planets from Mercury outward there seems to be something like a harmonious proportion, with the exception of the distance between Mars and Jupiter. Between these two planets was found an immense gap, which, so to speak, destroyed the "harmony of the spheres."

So sure were astronomers of the existence of an unknown planet, which revolved between Mars and Jupiter, that an association of astronomers was actually formed to search for the new planet.

On Jan. 1, 1801, Piazzi, of Palermo, discovered a small planet between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. He traced it only through four degrees of its orbit when he was taken ill, and the planet was lost.

Every telescope was brought in requisition to rediscover the lost planet, but in vain. Gauss, a young astronomer, undertook, from these meager data, to compute the place of the planet. It must be remembered that a year had elapsed since the planet was seen, and then followed through only four degrees of its orbit.

Few can conceive the close and rigid analysis that this intricate problem involved.

After he had completed his calculations, he turned his telescope to the point in the heavens where his figures had located the planet, and, behold, it burst upon his astonished gaze as bright as a diamond. Such are the wonderful triumphs of science—such the power and scope of the human brain.

Now let the Bible writers, who had a God to help them who knew everything, be compared with these grand scientists. From Genesis to Revelations there is not a single chapter which has a scientific basis. Think of the Christian calculations based upon the prophecies from which were predicted the end of the world, as compared with the calculations of astronomers. Think of a great pope, the head of the church, and God's viceregerent on earth, who is supposed, by thousands, to be the greatest man in the world, cursing a comet and calling upon an imaginary power to withdraw the fiery monster from the skies, and millions of his dupes upon their knees asking to be delivered from a thing as much subject to law as the moon, and just as harmless. Instead of praying, "Deliver us from the comet," a more rational prayer would hav been, "Deliver us from ignorance." Then think of a patient toiler like Halley following that comet backward for nearly two thousand years—comparing the dates of its appearances, satisfying himself that it was the same comet which had appeared, and following it out into space 3,400,000,000 miles and correctly predicting its return after a journey of 76 years.

Were these mighty achievements wrought out by studying the Bible, or praying to a God without "body or parts?" I never knew a man who was always poring over his Bible to find out the will of God, who was mentally keen. Such men as Copernicus, Newton, Kepler, Halley, Gauss, and Leverier did not obtain their knowledge by studying the Bible.

I often think how many Newtons and Keplers and Halleys there might hav been to bless the world if all the time and means spent for religious purposes had been used to make the people wiser and better. My mind is always stretching forward to a time when the mind shall be freed from the trammels of superstition—when most of the precious time will not be spent upon subjects which it is impossible for us to know anything about, and when the whole power of the human intellect shall be turned to the improvement of the race.

While science has weighed worlds as in a balance, Christianity has been on its knees asking an imaginary power not to damn the human race for doing just what that power designed they should do. For if one thing can happen without God's design, then the design argument is not worth a penny whistle.

When Christianity was at the zenith of its power the planets and stars were studied, not to ascertain their motions, magnitudes, revolutions, and distance, but to build up a Christian science known as astrology. To this so-called science the church was indebted for much of its wealth and power.

Christian schemers imposed upon the people by making them believe that by studying the aspect of the planets they could read every page in the book of fate and foretell future events and predict with certainty the success or failure of any enterprise or undertaking.

When the minds of the people were fairly captured by this hallucination, and when it is seen what a leverage it had on the minds of the masses, it will seem like no wonder that vast sums were extorted from the Christian simpletons. Ignorant of the true principles of astronomy, they regarded every comet and eclipse as a harbinger of some awful calamity, and these trembling, terror-stricken wretches crowded the confessional in every church and cathedral, and in many instances they gave up their all to the priesthood.

Is it any wonder that astronomers were persecuted and put to death for unfolding the cause of the appearance of the celestial phenomena which they beheld?

When it was shown that an eclipse was only the shadow of one dark body falling upon another, and could do us no more harm than a shadow falling upon the ground, and that the time of its occurrence could be calculated with the nicest exactness, the people could no longer be frightened out of their wits, eclipses ceased to yield revenues to the church, and a great burden was lifted from the shoulders of the people.

When it was demonstrated that comets were peaceful messengers, and their orbits calculated, and their return predicted with certainty, they lost their terror and neither pope nor priest could longer extort money from the people whom in times before they first frightened and then robbed. Until they were brought under the searching analysis of science they were regarded as the precursors of war or famin or some other great calamity. Now every celestial phenomenon is viewed by the eye of science with tranquillity and eager delight. By banishing such superstitious dread from the minds of the people astronomers in a great degree destroyed the power of the church, and the church burnt astronomers.

The church insists that a snake persuaded a woman to eat an apple six thousand years ago, which so thwarted the plans of God that he was compelled to kill his own son instead of killing the snake. The belief in this story is of more importance to Christians than all the scientific achievements which hav ever been wrought. But has such belief ever done the world any good?

Goodyear, wrestling with poverty and want year after year to make the bud of a thought ripen into fruit, is a grander subject for contemplation than all the snake stories which hav ever been told. There is scarcely a house or business or profession that is not using some article of utility or comfort as the result of that thought. He conferred a greater blessing upon the world than all the saviors which hav been worshiped or dreamed of. This great blessing was the result of a scientific mind. It was not derived from the church, neither was it obtained by kneeling in prayer or from reading the Bible.

There was a Scotchman who scratched his sandy head and scratched out an idea. That idea is doing more work in England, Scotland, and Ireland alone, than could be accomplished by the whole civilized world without it. Wherever there is a footprint of civilization the blessings of that idea hav been carried out. In every home in every country there is something of comfort or utility as the outgrowth of that idea. It was the engin which rendered the power of steam available. And let it never be forgotten that that idea was born on Sunday. Was there any Bible about that? Was that great invention the result of prayer—was it a child of the church? The plan of salvation dwindles into littleness and nothingness when compared with it. The one has cost the world millions of treasure and oceans of blood, the other has proved a real savior.

"Poor John Fitch," who is really entitled to the credit of applying steam to the propelling of boats, conferred a greater blessing upon human kind than all the popes and priests who ever imposed upon an unsuspecting people. The same is true of Stevenson, Gutenburg, and Morse, and many others. In short, all the great scientific triumphs which hav added such innumerable blessings to the people of the nineteenth century are in no sense the outgrowth of the church, neither are they the creatures of Christianity nor of any other system of supernatural religion. They are children of the brain, the result of thought, which the church has always tried to cripple and dwarf.

Of course Christianity claims that wherever the people are most on their knees there will be found the most grit and push and enterprise, and that the fruits of science will most bless the people. That is to say that the more weight a horse carries the faster he can run.

To say that many of these great inventors and scientists were Christians does not help the matter any more than to say that they had gray eyes or black hair.

The people who are ever upon their knees and spend half their time pondering an old book written by those who had made no proficiency in scientific attainments, and spend half they produce in building churches and cathedrals, whose cardinal doctrin is that their kingdom is not of this world, and that they are to take no thought of the morrow, are not the ones to bless the world with scientific discoveries or great inventions.

What militates against the Christian's claim is the fact that as Christianity arose and became dominant, European learning declined. When Christianity was in the zenith of its power and influence learning was at its lowest ebb, and when learning revived Christianity declined. The day of great churches was the worst day for institutions of learning. When the cross was upon every church and grave and banner, the teachers of learning were most persecuted.

Notwithstanding the great inventions and discoveries of the nineteenth century which so much distinguish us, it is next to impossible for us to measure the hights to which we might hav attained if it had not been for the drag-weight of the Christian religion. Nor will the human mind ever fully understand its powers and capabilities until it is freed from the trammels of every system of supernatural religion.

Science has weighed worlds as in a balance, numbered the stars, and even measured their distances. It has harnessed the steam and made the winds do the will of man. It has tamed the lightning and brought men within speaking distance throughout the civilized world. Through the printing-press a speaker has all the civilized peoples of this world as an audience.

While scientists hav been wrestling with these mighty problems, Christianity has been inventing instruments of torture, and hunting these scientists through the world like wolves. While science has showered its blessings upon every home, Christianity has deluged the country from the north of Europe to the Holy Land with blood.

With bowed head I pay this tribute of homage to science. In the name of outraged humanity I bring this terrible indictment against Christianity.

Naples, N. Y. JOHN PECK.

THE sound of the Sabbath bell far away, now breaking on these shores, does not awaken pleasing associations, but melancholy and somber ones rather. One involuntarily rests on his oar, to humor his unusually meditativ mood. It is as the sound of many catechisms and religious books twanging a canting peal round the earth, seeming to issue from some Egyptian temple and echo along the shores of the Nile, right opposit to Pharaoh's palace and Moses in the bulrushes, starting a multitude of storks and alligators basking in the sun.—Thoreau.

AN honest opinion, like an honest dollar, should elicit respect. We should demand no more for our views than for our property rights, but remember that the like rights of others are part of the same system which makes ours possible.—Bierbower.

The Miracles of Religion.

Extracts from a Symposium in the New York Sun.

1. Do you believe there is such a thing as a miracle, or that there has ever been?

2 What is your explanation of the miracles referred to in the Old and New Testaments?

3. Can modern magicians, that is, the magicians of to-day, duplicate or equal those ancient marvels?

JOHN RANSOM BRIDGE PRESIDENT OF THE BOSTON THEOSOPHIC SOCIETY.

. . . The firing of a cannon would be to a savage who knew nothing of powder or guns a miracle. The wiser a people become the less they can be imposed upon by the priestly hierarchies which, wiser than the common people, hav always worked their "miracles" to mystify and delude the ignorant.

PROF. E. D. COPE, OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

1. Interference with the laws of matter and energy is not to be expected. I hav never known of a case.

2 Careless observation, inexact recording, and absolute fabrication.

3. They can perform some of them. Others can not be duplicated.

DR. ALLAN M'LANE HAMILTON.

1. As I understand a miracle to be the occurrence or performance of an impossibility, I certainly do not believe such a thing has ever taken place, and, of course, this means the total disbelief in many so-called holy things. As everyone knows (putting aside the question of biblical authority), the miracles of all ages hav been shown to be in the most part simply forms of deception or instances of legitimate delusion. The elder Disraeli, in his "Curiosities of Literature," dryly describes the thousand and one instances of deception and the manufacture of spurious relics, mentioning in particular the Gloucestershire miracle of the blood of Christ, which was visible only to those who were not in mortal sin. It turned out to be the blood of a duck which was contained in a vial having one side opaque and the other side transparent, and the monk upon whom devolved the duty of showman turned the side he thought desirable to the pilgrims, being governed somewhat by the size of the offerings made by the latter. The religious history of the Middle Ages is so full of these instances of trickery that there is usually no difficulty in divesting the so called miracles of their supernatural significance. Personally, I believe there are no miracles that cannot be repeated or explained in these days of the telephone and phonograph. Houdin, Pepper, and others hav exposed the Delphic oracles and many of the supposed workings of the miracles of the scriptures, and those which occasionally occur to-day depend upon visual or auditory illusions or hallucinations. The visions of the patients in the wards of Saltpetrière are as startling in their way as those which hav come to be accepted as inspired. I can very easily imagin how a person in a state of religious enthusiasm which borders on insanity can believe in a communication from heaven, and I see such cases every day. A supposed miracle of great importance in certain religious sects is cutaneous hemorrhage or stigmatization, which in hysterical women is often a symptom of their disease, and may sometimes be cured by a strong mental effort.

3. Modern magicians and sleight-of-hand performers, especially those who possess a keen insight into human character and the weaknesses of credulous people, are able with very little apparatus to duplicate many of the ancient marvels, turning water into wine, taking liberties with fire, and apparently producing tangible and visible materials from space.

MAGICIAN HERRMANN.

1 and 2. I think the "miracles" were simply sleight-of-hand tricks, or what we to-day term illusions, practiced by adepts inspired sometimes with purposes that were laudable, some with purposes that were the reverse. I think, for instance, that Moses was an excellent sleight-of-hand performer and adept prestidigitateur, who did not hesitate to use his skill in this direction to fortify and strengthen his position as a leader. The ignorant masses are always greatly given to credulity, and are only too ready to ascribe anything that their limited understanding and intelligence cannot reason out to the supernatural. Upon very slight provocation they are ready to shout, "A miracle!" Even in these days of civilization, general education, and popular intelligence any ordinary magician who chose to fraudulently claim that he was gifted with supernatural powers could, by performing some of the commonest and easiest tricks known to magicians, acquire a large following who would uphold him as a supernatural being and a miracle worker. Witness, for instance, the tendency of thousands in all parts of the world who place implicit confidence and belief in so-called Spiritualists, clairvoyants, mediums, seventh daughters of a seventh daughter, etc. Human nature has, and always has had, a strong leaning toward the inexplicable, the seemingly supernatural.

3 Magic, like most other mundane matters, has progressed with the advance of time and the perfection of mechanical contrivances. I think that the magicians of to day are the best magicians the world has ever known. In all probability the performances of the ancient magicians hav been greatly exaggerated, as most things are apt to become by repetition. If we could see those same tricks exactly reproduced on some modern stage we should very likely find them very crude. To answer the question directly, I say that I think pretty well any of the old-time "marvels" could be reproduced by the magicians of to-day, and that they could be reproduced with improvements on the original performance.

DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.

. . . Those statements in the scriptures which set forth facts commonly styled miraculous are, in my judgment, false; their falsity coming rather from mistakes of fact made in relying upon traditions with their primitiv credulity, which is seen in all eastern peoples.

KELLAR, THE MAGICIAN.

1. No. I believe there is a natural cause for every event, although we may be ignorant often of the cause of the phenomenon. As we all hav a grain of superstition in our nature we are prone to ascribe to some supernatural power things that we do not understand.

2. My opinion is that Christianity is a new form of solar worship; that Christ is a sun god, and that all the miracles ascribed to him in the New Testament are merely a history of natural events veiled in allegory, caused by the sun's action on the earth. For instance, the changing of water into wine is the transformation by the sun's warmth of the waters of January into the grapes of September; the changing the five small loaves into sufficient to feed five thousand, and when they had all eaten there remained fragments sufficient to fill twelve baskets, is a miracle performed annually by the sun, when his rays fecundate the earth and change the grains sown by the husbandman into the autumnal harvests. Christ's death and burial and his resurrection on the third day is, in my opinion, allegorical of the winter solstice, when the sun is further south and apparently stands still, as far as his north and southward motion is concerned, for about three days before he starts on his northern course again and rises toward the zenith of his glory to giv comfort, cheer, and new life to all countries north of the equator, that by his absence were left cold, dark, and desolate. There are many reasons for believing that Christ was the sun personified: He was born on the 25th of December, when the new sun is born. Christ was ushered in by John the Baptist, who baptized with water; the new sun is also ushered in by Janus, or Janarius (January). And the sign of January is the waterman. A very singular fact is John saying to the multitude: "I indeed baptize you with water, but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose. He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Christ had twelve apostles; the sun passes through the twelve signs of the zodiac. One of the apostles was a doubter; his name was Thomas, also called Didymus, which being interpreted means a twin; the doubting stars in the zodiac are called the twins. Regarding the miracles of Moses, some of them now take place every year. The changing the waters of the Nile into blood occurs every season; when the waters rise they turn to a blood red, caused by the flood washing down the red mud from the upper countries. The miracle of the plague of lice and flies occurs every year; in fact, Egypt is never free from these pests. The plague of locusts also is a common occurrence in the east; in fact, I hav seen such swarms of them in the air as to obscure the sun and turn the day into Egyptian darkness.

3. No; for reasons I hav examined in answer to question 2.

Are These Statements True?

From the New York Herald.

Theoretically woman suffrage shines with the bright electric light of a panacea for all the evils contained in a political campaign. Practically it is not the glittering success which its leaders fondly predicted when they obtained a foothold in the Sunflower state. Perhaps the women who carried to success the exciting campaign at Edgerton, Kan., will not accept just yet any such idea as this. Their triumph, as described in a dispatch to the Herald, will not lose any of its brilliancy in their eyes until they hav experienced the difficulties and vexations of administering government. Then so many of the men think they will be only too anxious to lay down their new-found powers.

As each succeeding election comes, the female vote grows smaller and beautifully less, until it has now come to be a recognized fact that the only female voters who go to the polls to drop their ballots are those who insist that they are ladies and those who think they hav a principle to maintain by upholding their franchise.

There are a few reasons why the suffrage for women will never be a political success. These hav been developed in the recent municipal elections throughout Kansas. When women find that equal suffrage means social equality on and for a few weeks before election day they begin to hesitate before they will place themselvs in such a position that they may be compelled to appear on the same social plane as their servant. This one question of social equality cuts by far the largest figure in the matter of influence on the day of election of all things that are calculated to bias the mind of the voter.

Then, too, there is the apprehension which arises in the minds of most women that they will be accused of having been influenced by some other of their sex who may be one of the activ workers for their candidates. This alone has caused a woman to vote for an aspirant for office whom she has used influence against before the day of election.

In fifty-seven cities in Kansas elections were held last week, but only in a few of them did female suffrage cut much of a figure. The female vote was an element in all the elections, but in most of the cities it was merely an incident to which little importance was attached. In some of the elections, however, the female vote and the consequence thereof were of more than ordinary importance. An instance in point was the election of Mrs. Dr. Jackson, at Emporia. This lady was nominated for member of the school board, and her opponent was a leading druggist who has many times been under arrest for violations of the Murray law. One would naturally suppose that the women would turn out en masse in support of one of their own sex, especially when she was standing as the exponent of temperance against a known lawbreaker.

But Mrs. Jackson, in addition to her aspirations politically, aimed at being a social leader, and in this she overstepped the bound placed by the social leaders in her city. A council of the elect was called, and it was decided to make a fight on Mrs. Jackson and elect the whisky-seller. Here is where one of the anomalies of the election comes in. The temperance men, the church men, and all that class of citizens who are recognized as being the exponents of law, order, and morality, were ranged on one side, while on the other were their wives hobnobbing with the bum element and buttonholing toughs and negroes in their endeavor to defeat a woman politically whom they did not desire to become a leader socially. Prohibition was thrown to the winds when social distinction was in danger of being invaded by one who was not thought to be one of the elect.

But in the defeat of her opponent at the polls Mrs. Jackson gained a double victory. Her campaign was conducted in an admirable manner, and her tact was so great that she went through the fight without causing harsh feelings, and the result was that she was given the social as well as the political distinction she desired.

Probably the most striking incident of the whole range of election was the campaign at Salina. The election was for aldermen and members of the school board. The suffragists nominated lady candidates from the third and fourth wards for members of the school board. There was a bitter fight against the nomination of women, and the anti-suffragists determined to deal the whole fabric a death-blow. Mrs. James Roberson, the wife of a leading merchant, and Mrs. Frank Anderson, the wife of a lawyer, were the candidates. They were recognized as being two of the best educated ladies in the city, and it was a difficult matter to get anyone to allow his name to be used against them for the position, as it would mean almost social extinction for their families, even though they should be elected.

Late at night, just before the election, the anti-suffragists met and concocted a plan which was carried to a successful ending next day. The colored element is a power at the polls at Salina, and neither side had ever recognized the negroes when it came to the distribution of the offices. Here then was their chance of defeating the women and making the whole thing obnoxious, not only to the ladies but to the men who were backing them. Both Mrs. Roberson and Mrs. Anderson had colored servants. Lydia Fulkerson and Mollie Booker were the dusky damsels who found themselvs suddenly lifted out of their obscurity and placed on the pinnacle of political equality.

It was not a difficult task to persuade the girls to allow their names to be used. They were told that if they failed of election they need hav no fear of losing a position by their action, for their nominators would see that they could rule a kitchen if not a school board. What was the horror of the proud dames next morning, when they donned their best apparel and started on their campaign, to find that their cooks were ahead of them in the field, and were using all the family secrets which had been learned during their reign below-stairs to create an impression against their whilom mistresses? The fight was on, and it was too late to retreat. It was a question of life or death for the suffragists, yet they could use no arguments against their opponents that would not redound to their own defeat. They dare not ask the people to reject them on account of their color, for that would be going against their own avowed principles. They could not bring their sex against them, for that would be talking against themselvs.

Here was a dilemma, and they could grasp neither horn. The only thing they could depend upon was their individual popularity, and they at once began to work the voters in true candidate's style. Hacks were furnished the colored women by their sponsors and all day long the battle raged. The negroes voted solidly for their own race and the whites were badly split. It was decided to carry the war into Africa, and the ladies were seen riding around the negro quarters soliciting votes with an energy that would hav done credit to a candidate for mayor where the office was worth thousands of dollars, instead of being done for an office which paid nothing except abuse to the holder from everyone else in the district.

All day long they worked, but the colored women seemed to hav the "pull," and went into office with an overwhelming majority. The suffragists were taught the woes of the candidate and the ladies were compelled to accept the situation, and their only satisfaction was derived from the hasty manner in which they sent their ungrateful help out into the cold world.

Hiawatha remembered its experience of last year and the offices went begging. The ladies had enough of it, and the men said they felt so much relieved since the women had taken the matter of governing from them that they did not care to resume the reins. The result was that only two hundred votes were polled and nobody would hav the position of councilman. A school board was elected, but Hiawatha is governed by the same set of aldermen, or women, if you please, who ran things last year. They caught the place then and can't let go. It was one of the curious incidents of the workings of woman's suffrage. The women had enough of their power, but were unable to get free from the net which they had drawn about themselvs. Instead of working for an election the soliciting was to get some one to help them let go.

At Manhattan the taste of brief authority was not so bitter. At this city the ladies two years ago captured all the offices from mayor down to janitor of the school-house. They were in full control of the whole political machine and ran it as if they had served their full apprenticeship at the business. They appointed women as judges and clerks of the election, and placed a ticket in the field in which men were not recognized. The Republicans and Democrats both had tickets out, but when election day came they "were not in it."

One of the prominent lady candidates is the proud mother of two fine babies born last January. Her husband is an outspoken opponent of women's suffrage, and has spent much time in electioneering against the woman's ticket. The leaders of the Republican party depended upon him to do much poll work on election day. But the hours went by and he came not. At last, when the managers saw that things were in a bad shape, they sent a messenger to the house to find out what had become of their worker. Mrs. Williams, the wife, had been at the polls and around the city all day doing good service for the cause of suffrage, but Williams was not to be found.

The messenger arrived at the house and found the man who was supposed to be able to sway the multitudes, sitting with a baby on each knee, holding two nursing-bottles, from which the infants were obtaining their sustenance. His wife had asked him to hold the children for a minute and then basely left him tied to the house with no possible way of getting away until she came and relieved him. She had taken all the ladies of her acquaintance into her confidence and they not only refused to relieve him, but had prevented him from hiring anyone to take his place long enough to let him go to vote. A council of war was held and it was determined that the men should take turn about in caring for the "kids" while Williams went to the polls. An attempt was made to carry this into execution, but the infants set up such a howl of protest that the poor man was left to his fate.

At Leavenworth the Republicans placed four women on their ticket, but the Democrats made a clean sweep. The Women's Christian Temperance Union took a hand in this fight and marshaled their forces to do electioneering at the polls where the voting for the women was to be. They set dainty tables with free lunch and invited all who would to partake of their coffee and sandwiches. But the men had not yet been educated up to the use of coffee as a campaign beverage and were easily persuaded to follow a man who would hold up to view a talismanic beer-bottle cork. The lunch was elegant, but it wasn't the right stuff to arouse campaign enthusiasm.

Probably Kansas City, Kan., showed more clearly the objectionable features of woman's suffrage than any other city in the state. This city is the home of an element which bears the generic title of "hobo." That liv in what is known as "Hell's Half Acre." In this locality the "hobo" is both male and female, and if there are any odds to be given for vileness, it goes to the favor of the female. Still, the women of this city had a principle at stake, and it was necessary to carry "Hell's Half Acre" in the interest of one of the aldermen. The ladies shuddered at the prospect, and only two of them were brave enough to go down among the heathen on their missionary work They will never repeat the experience. They were received with mock humility by the denizens of the delectable neighborhood and escorted through all the vilest portions of the section until they had been fully shown, and then a howling mob of women reviled and jeered at them until they were compelled to call for police assistance to escort them out.

Protestant Clerical Hypocrisy.

From the Manitoba Free Press.

It is proposed, or has been, to do away with all tax exemptions. It has been held that churches and church property should be taxed, the same as property of any other kind. They are benefited by municipal improvements—hav their electric lights and sidewalks and fire protection in common with the rest of the municipality; they should, therefore, it is claimed, be made to pay their share of the cost. Exemption, again, is but another name for state endowment. Every religious denomination in the province of Manitoba possessing property that is exempt from taxation is endowed by the state to the amount of that exemption. This should be clear to everyone.

With few exceptions the Protestant clergymen of Winnipeg hav been urging the government to make short work with separate schools. There should be no connection, they said, between church and state. By granting public moneys to separate schools the state was simply endowing the Catholic church. That was their strong argument. Why should this particular church be favored more than the others? It is a downright outrage that $1 of public money should go to the support of separate schools in which the distinctiv tenets of the Catholic church were taught. What was this but the perpetuation of the connection between church and state, which Protestants in Canada had renounced? Away, then, with separate schools, and down with those Catholic privileges. Such was the cry, joined in from the highest to the lowest. It was useless to point out that separate schools were as much entitled to state aid as the Protestant schools; that the money was given in both cases in aid of education, not of this church or that. Separate schools were Catholic schools and no good Protestant required to know more. Through those schools the Catholic church was endowed by the state, and that must no longer be tolerated in this free British country. Away with them.

But exemptions—ah, that is quite another question. To do away with church exemptions—which is another name for church endowment—would be to hit us Protestants as well as the Catholics. That will never do. All well enough to abolish separate schools, for that hits Catholics only; but to abolish exemptions comes home to us as well. We are quite willing to cry out against any union of church and state so long as Catholics alone are affected, but where we are concerned it is really a very good thing. As good Protestants, we are rather glad than otherwise to hav every Catholic privilege abolished; but our privileges, gentlemen of the legislature, are to be preserved and respected. So hands off church exemptions, which means so much money in pocket to us.

Readers of the free press who hav kept an eye on our news and correspondence columns will bear witness to the sudden change of tune, as also that this is the burden of the present one. There are Protestants by the hundred in Manitoba who will blush at the inconsistency of the men who are content to stand by and applaud the raid on the Roman Catholics, while they are thus zealously careful to protect their own privileges. So long as church property is exempt from taxation there is the most direct connection between church and state. It was through a pretended horror of the principle involved in that connection that there was so much union among local divines in depriving Catholics of their schools. But in these there was no church endowment, while in what they are now seeking to preserve for themselvs there is.

W. E. Reid Convicted.

From the Grand Rapids, Mich., Telegram-Herald of April 7th.

The Reid trial is at last ended. When the United States court opened Saturday morning, Judge Severens delivered his charge to the jury, which is as follows:

Gentlemen of the jury: The indictment in this case, in several counts, charges what, for practical purposes, may be regarded as substantially the same offense.

The substance of the charge is that the defendant, having contrived a scheme to defraud the public, employed the mails of the United States in the prosecution of that scheme. That, shortly stated, is the substance of the offense with which the defendant is charged. There is a statute of the United States upon which this indictment is framed, which in effect, makes the use of the United States mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud previously formed by the party so using the mails, an offense. The policy being, to prevent the facilities afforded by our postal arrangements, from being employed in uses which are prejudicial to the interests of the public.

The defendant in this case founds his defense upon the claim, as urged by his counsel, that this was not a scheme to defraud. In order to lay the foundation, and to establish the ground of the accusation contained in this indictment, as the jury will see from what the court has just said, it is necessary that the scheme should be fraudulent and, secondly, that the mail should be used in the prosecution of that scheme. The question of fact is, upon this first head, what was the intention, or more precisely, what was the belief of the defendant as to his capacity or power to get answers to questions contained in sealed letters from the spirits of the departed.

Now, gentlemen, every man has an absolute right to believe what he will. It is a phase of religious privilege which is guaranteed by the fundamental law of the land to every citizen. This right of belief and the right of association for its promulgation is complete, and the party holding any belief may engage in any practice founded upon it unless he thereby injures the peace and welfare of the public. A man may not carry his belief into conduct which is injurious to the public and contrary to law. This is a distinction of great importance in view of the guarantee of religious freedom and of opinion in all matters of belief which is secured by the constitutions of the several states, and in large measure by the Constitution of the United States. It is the difference between belief and action, of opinion and conduct in practical matters. If a man carries his belief into a practice or business involving a fraud, and known by him to be such, he is liable to be dealt with by the law, and if he also uses the mails to promote such business, he is liable to indictment and punishment in the courts of the United States. The interests of society require that every man's conduct should conform to the law; and while it protects him in his freedom of opinion and belief in all religious or spiritual matters, it will not permit him, under the guise of that belief, to do a thing which the laws of the country condemn. To permit this (to employ the language of the Supreme Court of the United States in dealing with an analogous question) would be to make the professed doctrins of religious belief superior to the law of the land, and in effect to permit every citizen to become a law unto himself. There could be no government under such circumstances, and it could not be tolerated.

Upon the question whether there is an intent to devise a scheme to defraud, the rule is this: If the scheme be adapted in its plan to work a fraud upon others, and the defendant knew that a material representation therein contained and calculated to deceive was not true, or if he did not believe that it was true, then the intent is made out. So that the material question here is, did the defendant devise his scheme or business in good faith? Did he believe that he could obtain answers to sealed letters from the spirits of the departed relativs and friends of the inquirers? Evidence has been laid before you bearing upon this question, and you are the sole judges of its weight, credit, and the effect to be given to it. You are to look at this proof and determin the issue by the exercise of your own sound sense. You must not abandon the search of truth upon the suggestion that the elements of inquiry are not open to your pursuits, if your reasons seem to you sufficient to see the facts. In other words, you are not to disregard or fail to giv effect to your own convictions, upon the testimony, about the facts, by a cloud of mysteries which you cannot penetrate. For the purpose of administering the law we must adhere to what is practical, and solve all questions by the best practical means at hand. No man has a right to embark in a business and insist that the legality of it shall be tested by principles beyond the understanding of others, and not by the apprehension of the courts and juries of the country, if when tried and tested by common human understanding the purpose is found mischievous and unlawful.

In order to convict this respondent, you must find upon the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that he did not believe that he could do what he represented he could do. All the other questions in the case are eliminated by concession, so that the whole case is resolved into the question of the defendant's good faith in the conception and prosecution of his scheme. If he acted in good faith then there was nothing criminal in what he did, because the law looks, in determining the question of fraud, to the intent with which the act charged to hav been done was done. The court does not feel called upon to elaborate any more fully in these instructions to the jury in this case, for the reason that, as already stated, the point is simple. There is but one question of fact for you to determin in view of the testimony in the case, and that is, to repeat it again, Did the defendant believe that what he pretended he could do he could do? It is a question of actual good faith. If this was a scheme gotten up by him, without any belief on his part that he could get answers to sealed letters from the spirits of the dead, and if, without regard to the question of his ability to do this, he devised this scheme for the purpose of imposing upon and gulling the public, and getting money through that means, it was a fraud and should be denounced as such. If, on the other hand, he honestly believed he could do this which he advertised he could do, then there is no fraud.

Now, gentlemen, you must apply your own sound discretion and common sense to the case, and determin it, in view of what is conceded, upon the effect which you giv the testimony in the case upon the point, which has been presented as the issue.

The jury retired and took one ballot, when they returned a verdict of guilty as charged. The verdict produced a decided sensation in the court room, and many of the doctor's friends were stricken with grief. The defendant and his affianced were as calm as usual, however. The defendant was released on a bond of $1,500, and thirty days were given in which to move for a new trial.

Lectures and Meetings.

MR. JAMES A. SKILTON will deliver his lecture on "The Evolution of the Mechanic Arts," at the Liberal Club meeting, Friday evening, April 18th, at 220 East Fifteenth street.

THE Secular Union of Des Moines, Ia., held its quarterly meeting for the election of officers Sunday evening, March 31st. For president, Franklin Steiner; vice-president, T. A. Carpenter; secretary, Mrs. N. Zediker; treasurer, Mrs. D. H. Cross; financial secretary, A. L. Yoeman.

Communications.

A Search for a Christian.

The writer has many times been solicited by ministers of the gospel and other self-styled Christians to unite with the church, or, as they expressed it, to become a Christian, and when I asked what constitutes a Christian, they hav almost invariably replied to the effect that Christianity consists in believing the Bible and following the teachings of Jesus Christ as laid down in the New Testament.

This agrees with the definitions in Webster's Dictionary, where I find that a Christian is one who professes to believe, or is assumed to believe, in the religion of Christ—especially one whose inward and outward life is conformed to the doctrin of Christ. I find by the same authority that Christianity is the religion of Christians, the system of doctrins and precepts taught by Christ. But I hav searched in vain for a single follower of these doctrins and precepts, or a single one whose inward and outward life is conformed to the doctrins of Christ. Nevertheless each one of the holy brothers with whom I hav spoken claims that he tries to follow all of them, although he does everything which Christ forbade and neglects everything which he commanded, and this, so far as I can discover, has but one exception. And when I ask for explanation I am told that Christ does not mean what he says.

We are commanded to wash each other's feet (John xiii, 14–15), but Christian friends say he means that we must not wash them literally, but in a spiritual sense. But he washed the feet of his disciples literally, saying: "I hav given you an example that ye should do as I hav done." And if we fail to do so, he may well exclaim, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say" (Luke vi, 46)?

We are forbidden to hav riches. "A rich man shall hardly enter the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. xix, 23; Mark x, 23; Luke xviii, 24). "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. xix, 24; Mark x, 25; Luke xviii, 25). "If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell all thou hast and giv to the poor" (Matt. xix, 21; Mark x, 21). "Yet lackest thou one thing, sell all that thou hast and distribute unto the poor" (Luke xviii, 22). But they tell me that he does not mean what he says, but only those who are very rich and make ill use of their wealth. But what is ill use? They say that the word all does not mean all, but a very small part. "Sell all that thou hast and giv to the poor" means to giv one per cent or less. "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul" (Mark viii, 36; Luke ix, 25)? Yet every Christian in the world is trying to gain all he can of it. "Woe unto you that are rich" (Luke vi, 24). "So likewise whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath cannot be my disciple" (Luke xiv, 33). Here again is the word all, which, of course, means a small part of wealth and no part of anything else. "When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, and the blind" (Luke xiv, 13). But no Christian does this. They sometimes giv crusts to tramps and beggars, but feast only those who are able to feast them in return, and which is positivly forbidden. "When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen nor thy rich neighbor, lest they also bid thee again and a recompense be made thee" (Luke xiv, 12). But these are the very ones who are always called, because when Christ forbids us to call our rich friends, brethren, kinsmen, and rich neighbors, he means that we must call them, in order that we may be recompensed for the all that we hav given to the poor.

If there is any one thing between the lids of the "holy" Bible which Jesus Christ condemned in the clearest, most positiv and emphatic language, it is the ownership of property. But there is not a Christian in the world but who owns or desires to own property. "And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say" (Luke vi, 46)?

We will next consider the sayings of our Lord and savior regarding the observance of the Sabbath. We find that he was himself a Sabbath-breaker. He went through the corn fields. He and his disciples plucked ears of corn on the Sabbath day (Matt. xii, 1; Mark, ii, 23; Luke vi, 1), and defended the same, saying that priests profane the Sabbath and are blameless (Matt. xii, 5). He healed the sick and the lame, restored the blind, and commanded a man to carry his bed on the Sabbath day (John v, 8). "Are ye angry at me because I hav made a man whole on the Sabbath day" (John vii, 23)? "What man shall there be among you that shall hav one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath day, will he not lay hold of it and lift it out" (Matt. xii, 11)? "It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath day" (Matt. x, 11; Luke vi, 9). "Thou hypocrit; doth not each one of you on the Sabbath day loose his ox or his ass from the stall and lead him away to watering" (Luke xiii, 15))? "Ought not this woman . . . be loosed from this bond on the Sabbath day" (Luke xiii, 16)? "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath. The son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath" (Mark ii, 27, 28).

Christians call Sunday the Sabbath and pretend to observe it, although there is not a word in the whole of the New Testament to authorize such observance, and not only do they violate the will of their Lord themselvs by neglecting to follow his example, but they will not allow others to follow it. "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath," but Christian law makes it just the reverse. "It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath day," but if I want to save my hay or care for my crops on that day I am prevented by Christians, who neither do well nor allow others to do so. "And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

"Forgiv thy brother not seven times, but seventy times seven" (Matt. xviii, 22). "Resist not evil; if smitten on one cheek, turn also the other (Matt. v, 39; Luke vi, 29). Did any Christian in the world ever do that? Instead of forgiving seventy times, an offense is rarely forgiven at all. Brothers are beaten and abused, clapped into prison, fined, and sent to the gallows by people who call themselvs brothers in Christ.

If any man take your coat by law, giv him a cloak also (Matt. v, 40; Luke vi, 29). But giving a cloak seems to mean giving a kick, for if caught, the thief is imprisoned, or the one who sues is hated and despised, receiving curses instead of a cloak.

If compelled to go a mile, go twain (Matt. v, 41). But no Christian who was compelled to go anywhere against his will ever doubled the amount of that compulsion; but they resist evil, or what they consider evil, in every possible manner, and continually seek vengeance instead of forgiving seventy times seven times. Yet they claim to be following the footsteps of Christ. O hypocrits! "why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

"Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat . . . or what ye shall put on. Is not life more than meat and body more that raiment?" (Matt. vi, 25). But we are told that the command, take no thought, means that we must take thought, and for the very things forbidden. Of course Christ always means just the reverse of what he says. Or we are told that it is impracticable or impossible to follow such commands, which is simply saying that Christ did not know what he was talking about, or that he is unable to fulfill his promises. "Take no thought for the morrow" (Matt. vi, 34; Luke xii, 22). This, of course, means that we must take thought for the morrow. We must sow our seed in autumn and spring for the next summer's crops. We must raise wheat in summer in order to hav bread the next winter. Take no thought for the morrow means that we must be continually thinking and providing for the future. Oh, yes; Christ always means just what he did not say, and never what he did say!

I cannot accuse Christians of loving work any too well, but they do it because they must, and, as they say, because it is a religious duty. Certainly. Christ says: "Behold the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns, yet your heavenly father feedeth them, are ye not much better than they? . . . Consider the lilies of the field how they grow, they toil not neither do they spin, and yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, . . . shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Therefore take no thought, saying, what shall we eat or what shall we drink, or wherewithal shall we be clothed? For after all these things do the gentiles seek. . . . But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matt. vi, 26–33). Then there is no reason or necessity for the vast amount of labor performed by humanity in order to liv. The fowls of the air sow not, neither do they reap nor gather into barns, and why should we? Our heavenly father feedeth them and are we not much better than they? The lilies of the field toil not neither do they spin, and why should we? If God so clothe the grass of the field, shall he not much more clothe us? Shall we not sit down in the grass, or upon a rotten log, fold our arms, say, "Lord, I believe," and wait for food and clothing to come tumbling out of heaven? Oh, no; Christ did not mean what he said, but something which he did not say, and which directly opposes what he did say. But "the father hath committed all judgment to the son" (John v, 22), and what is the use of our calling him Lord, Lord, unless we are willing to do the things which he says, and not what we may think he means.

"If any man come unto me and hate not his father and mother, and wife and children, and brethren and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple" (Luke xiv, 26). I regret that some people who call themselvs Christians do follow this command, but the majority do not. There seems to be love, or at least a kindly feeling, among the members of nearly all Christian families. But we must hate our relatiVs, or we cannot be disciples of Christ. But he did not mean that, they say. Oh, no, of course when he says hate he means love. "I come not to send peace, but a sword," I am come to put man at a variance against man (Matt. x, 34). This may be considered the one exception, the one command of Christ which Christians hav always followed with great zeal. History is a record of bloodshed and carnage, and, as Ingersoll says, "the world is covered with forts to protect Christians from other Christians." In this one instance they hav called him Lord, Lord, and done the thing which he said.

"Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you" (Luke vi, 26). But there is not a church-member in Christendom who does not seek or desire fame and popularity, or who does not prefer a good name to precious ointment; but of course the Lord did not mean what he said.

"They which shall be accounted worthy to attain that world, neither marry, nor are given in marriage" (Luke xx, 34). From this we must infer that they who marry shall not be accounted worthy to attain that world; but it seems that he did not mean that either, when we consider the amount of marrying done in the church.

But Christ said black, therefore he means white.

But let us see what our great redeemer says about prayer. "When thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrits are, for they love to pray in the synagogs and on the corners of the streets that they may be seen of men . . . but when thou prayest enter into thy closet and when thou hast shut thy door, pray in secret" (Matt. vi, 5, 6).

But there is not a church which has not its public prayers. Very few people, if any, ever enter their closets and shut the doors for the purpose of secret prayer. The Salvation Army howl about the corners of the streets; Methodists, and some other denominations, during their revival meetings, jump and shout like a set of maniacs, but since Christ always means just the reverse of what he says, public prayer is consistent with his teachings. "And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, ye shall receive" (Matt. xxi, 22). "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask whatsoever ye will and it shall be done unto you" (John xv, 7). "And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name that will I do. . . . If ye shall ask anything in my name I will do it" (John xiv, 13, 14). It seems that he did not mean any of these things either, for Christians daily ask hundreds of thousands of things which are never granted. Almost the entire Christian world prayed for the recovery of Garfield; thousands prayed for the deliverance of themselvs, or their friends, from the terrors of the Johnstown flood; a dozen helpless girls in the upper story of a burning building in Indianapolis, beyond human help, prayed for rescue; hundreds of horror-stricken spectators prayed also, but our loving savior allowed them to suffer a most cruel death, although he says: "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name that will I do."

The most probable explanation of this is that he did not mean what he said, i.e., that he would not do what we may ask in his name, or that we call him Lord, Lord, and do not a single thing that he says; and he is, therefore, relieved of all obligations.

He approved the use of wine, made it an emblem of his blood, and even became a distiller of wine himself (John ii, 7, 8). But Christians desire to be advocates of temperance, gospel temperance indeed, but, in this instance, he has occasionally laid a heavy hand upon his disobedient subjects. He burnt Talmage's Tabernacle, and, in a still more striking instance, sent a cyclone upon Washington Court House, O., which tore out a number of churches, wrecked several more, but carefully avoided the saloons, not harming one of them. Had it been just the reverse, all Christendom would hav howled about the vengeance of God visited upon the saloons; as it is, they are quiet.

My search for a Christian is ended. I hav failed to find a single one who follows the teachings of our great redeemer except in the matter of cutting the others' throats; failed to find a single one who is followed by the signs which were to be the test of the believer; failed to find one who can cast out devils, speak with new tongues, take up serpents, drink deadly things with impunity, or lay hands on the sick and heal them (Mark xvi, 17, 18). Well may the loving savior look from his great throne down upon his pretended followers and exclaim: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

"Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. vii, 21).

Locust Corner, O. CHAS. O. HAYS.

Kissing the Book.

There appears to be a great deal of trouble occurring in the courts recently in the administration of oaths. To me it seems like nonsense and foolishness, whether it be by the uplifted hand, burning papers with prayers written on them, by joss-sticks, by crosses, or by kissing a book, dirty, greasy, and filthy outwardly, and full of dirt, smut, filth, and obscenity inwardly.

What is the use of any kind of monkey-show about the business, anyway? A simple affirmation, under the pains and penalties of perjury, to tell so much of the truth as the court and counsel will permit, to the best of one's knowledge and ability, ought to be sufficient.

A far better way than that would be to hav all oaths bills repealed. Let perjury be defined as giving false testimony. Then enact that all testimony before any and all officers shall be under the pains and penalties of perjury. That would place all men, saints and sinners, citizens and aliens, on a common, legal level before the law.

Then John Smith would tell his story. Pat O'Flynn would tell his, and Ah Sin, Ole Oleson, Hans Dumblesprecht, et al, would tell theirs, while the jury would sift and weigh their testimony just the same as now. And if any of them were untruthful, they could be prosecuted for it just the same as if they had kissed a book, dirty and greasy on the outside, and dirtier and filthier on the inside.

For myself, I would as soon think of kissing the caudal appendage of a mud monkey as of kissing any book, and especially one so vile and filthy that it could not be admitted into a mail-bag.

Judge Arnold was right, and I say, all honor to the young lady that had bravery and independence enough to assert her right. I thank her for her act more than I can tell. I doff my hat to her and the judge, hoping that their rebellion may be as near the end of legal superstition as John Brown's was near the end of human slavery. L. L. Goodwin.

St. Elmo, Tenn., April 6, 1890.

Our London Letter.

Mr. Gladstone has contributed to a semi-religious publication the first of a series of articles on "The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture." It is only the power of his name that givs any importance to these, as, to judge by the present instalment, there is nothing said likely to be of any importance to a Freethinker, whatever it may appear to a believer. As he is willing to grant to specialists the right of negativ and destructiv inquiries as to age, text, and authorship of the books of the Bible, only holding to himself the ideas conveyed by them, he practically givs up the defense, as he thereby tacitly admits that the doctrin of inspiration is untenable, and more fully when he goes on to acknowledge certain limitations, as, imperfect comprehension of that which was communicated; imperfect expression of what had been comprehended; lapse of memory in written transmissions; changes with the lapse of time in the sense of words; variations arising from renderings into different tongues, and that there are three variant chronologies of the Old Testament according to the Hebrew, the Septuagint, and the Samaritan Pentateuch. And he wishes his readers to look at the subject as they would at the British constitution or the poetry of Shakspere. Why, he is actually admitting all the points that Freethinkers hav been persecuted for urging, and, in the face of these admissions, yet claiming to hold a firm belief in Christianity. He appears to be gaining light in spite of himself, and if he goes on in this manner, he may, in a few more years, blossom into an avowed Atheist. Of course, some of his statements are erroneous, such as declaring that Christendom regards the Bible as an inestimable treasure. I do not think he will find, on inquiry, the Roman Catholic church holds this opinion. And he is scarcely correct in saying the Bible invites, attracts, and commands the adhesion of mankind, unless he holds that those who do not believe the contents of the book are outside the pale of humanity. He intends to show in succeeding articles that science and research hav done much to sustain the historical credit of the Old Testament, but if he does not make out a better case than he has in his opening article his work will be so much labor in vain.

A story from Russia has recently gone the round of the papers to the effect that a farmer died suddenly in the village of Lovroffsky—or rather, apparently died, as when the coffin was being lowered into the grave the lid was forced open and the supposed dead man rose up, to the great horror and fright of the mourners, who all "left him and fled." The poor wretch scrambled out of his grave and made for the village, but found all doors barred against him, but one, into which he entered for shelter and warmth, but meanwhile the peasants, arming themselvs with poles and stakes of aspen wood, attacked the miserable man, whom they deemed a wizard, and pinned him with the stakes to the ground, and made a genuin corpse of him. This is very terrible to an enlightened person, but why "Christians" should speak of it as a "horrible superstition" passes my comprehension. They profess to believe that the book containing the command, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch [or wizard] to liv" is divinely inspired, but shudder with horror when one of its express commands is carried into execution. What splendid hypocrits are true believers.

I see it stated in Light, a Spiritualistic organ, that a society has just been founded called the Christo-Theosophical Society, of which Mrs. Besant is one of the lecturers, and presumably a member. Judging by the name, I cannot see what it can possibly hav in common with Atheism, but perhaps it may be more closely allied than appears to the uninitiated.

Mr. Bradlaugh's action with regard to the eight-hours labor question has excited much comment, and it is difficult to see why a strong Radical in politics should be in opposition. He contends that the working classes should combine and help themselvs, which may be quite right in theory, but unfortunately the vast majority cannot do so, being mere children in organizing powers. Their constant work with no time for play or relaxation stultifies the brain, and leaves them completely helpless in the hands of the capitalist. But few men hav his power of self-help. Determination of will is possessed by a very small minority. J. D.

A Long Farewell.

[The following funeral address was recently delivered at the grave of a young Freethinker, in Graceland cemetery, Washington, D. C.]

The soul's farewell to the body, and the living's farewell to the dead.

We are here to giv a respectful burial to a respectable stranger. The young man has not been in this country long enough to make friends. To all here except two he was unknown. Of these two, one knew him and knew his family in France, and the other not only knew him at home but crossed the Atlantic a few weeks ago in companionship with him. Both speak well of him. For myself, I saw him alive only once. But one look at his frank, intelligent face was enough to tell me that he was an honest man. A single glance at his personal belongings was sufficient to convince me that he tried to liv like an honest man and a gentleman. Now, if Alexandre Courtemanche has gone to travel in a land beyond this grave; if he has gone to journey in an undiscovered country, these two considerations should be the amplest guarantee that he will be welcome wherever he goes.

It is under circumstances extraordinary and solemn that we meet together at this grave. Alexandre Courtemanche once belonged to the Catholic church, but for years he had not been a Catholic in the full and practical sense of this word as this church understands it. From being a good Catholic he became a good Freethinker, to use his own term and the term employed by the good priest who was requested to visit him on his deathbed. The sick man rejected the services of the priest and declared he would die as he had latterly lived, a Freethinker.

Whether his decision would hav been the same had he been in full possession of all his senses and faculties, we do not know. Had he accepted the proffered ministrations of the church, which in the delirium of his sickness he rejected, the majestic funeral rites of the church of Rome would hav solemnized his burial instead of the few weak words we now utter.

The Christians teach that after death there is judgment. Well, if an account of our lives is to be rendered beyond the grave is it not reasonable to hope that he to whom this account must be given is just and generous, prompt to acquit a man of responsibility when he has been bereft of his reason? The delirium preceding this poor young man's death was the visitation of providence. It was incidental to a terrible malady against which no human intelligence could guard and which no human skill could master.

Alexandre Courtemanche came to this country a few weeks ago. A few days ago he came to this city. Within a week of his arrival here he was taken ill with pneumonia, and within another week he died despite all the doctors could do for him. Dying as he did, estranged from the church and far away from his friends, it becomes our duty under the broad laws of humanity to giv him a decent burial. His family and his friends in France may not yet know of his death. When they receive the unwelcome news, as they must before long, it may be some consolation to them to know that humanity is not so inhuman but that here in Washington, thousands of miles from his home, there are people who to their natural respect for the dead add a hearty sympathy with the living who survive to mourn.

In obedience to a command which all must obey, the spirit of Alexandre Courtemanche has gone hence. Our solemn duty to-day is to lay the body in the earth easefully and reverently, as becomes the long farewell which the living must take of the dead.

The soul is a thing about which we know little. To the human gaze it seems to be identical with this life, and with the parting breath it takes its departure. Is the soul merely another name for the life of the body, and with the death of the body does the soul become extinct? When we say that the spirit has departed do we simply mean that the body is dead, or do we mean something more? When we speak of the soul's departure, do we merely express a change in the condition of the physical man—a change from life to death—or do we really mean that some living part of a man, something immortal, leaves us here and goes to another place, where under other conditions it continues to liv? And if we mean this, where is the continuation of the parting soul? Whither does it go?

Faith alone can answer; and faith sees only through the eyes of imagination. When life is no more the soul is invisible. We do not see it without light. It is like the taper's light, and seems to go where the light goes when the flame is extinguished. Will it liv again? Does it continue to liv, only changing its environment? Or, is it as defunct and annihilate as the perfume of last year's flowers? Has it graduated into non-existence like the minutes and hours that we spent yesterday, like all the time that men hav killed in the past? In short, is the soul immortal? Is it to liv forever, or does life terminate with the body's parting breath? We do not know.

But if the soul is immortal, let us hope that he who, in his wisdom and his power, gave it everlasting life, will, in his goodness, giv it everlasting happiness.

David Lewsley.

Doubters and Honesty.

As Freethinkers we often hav the statement thrown at us, that we are not sincere in our belief, and that we merely assert our opinions for the sake of notoriety, or merely to hav something to say. In fact, among ignorant Christians, this idea predominates. This base slander, when spit in the face of an honest man, who has, perhaps, borne much humiliation, and endured the

> Whips and scorns of time,
> The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely, simply because he has dared to express his honest thoughts, in an age noted for its shams and shows, this falsehood rouses a spirit of righteous indignation. These thoughts came forward with great emphasis in the mind of the writer, when he heard a prominent evangelist, in addressing a religious meeting, make the assertion that there is not an honest doubter in the world!

In the first place, what is a doubt? Webster defines it as "a fluctuation of mind arising from defect of knowledge, or evidence." Sir William Hamilton says, "Doubt is the beginning and the end of our efforts to know." In other words, when we attempt to investigate a subject, if a doubt arises in our minds, it shows that we hav made an effort to gain knowledge upon that subject, and the doubt precludes our accepting either side of the question. Unless new evidence is brought forward, which will abolish the doubt, so that we may decide upon one side or the other, it may be said that that is the end of our knowledge upon the subject, although it may not be the end of our efforts to obtain that knowledge. True doubt, then, as defined above, must carry honesty with it in order to be a doubt. A man may, by influence of prejudice, leave unnoticed certain evidence against his particular opinions, or, if he does notice it, his prejudice may be so strong as to prevent him from giving it its proper weight. In this case the man is bigoted, but not dishonest. In this case it shows that his mental organization is so constructed that he can accept only the one opinion. On the other hand, if the man, upon examining the evidence, is convinced of its validity, and yet abstains from acting thereon, that man is dishonest, but he is not a doubter, for he is convinced of the truth, and will not acknowledge it. These two instances apply to people of all shades of opinion, and it is absurd to say that either one applies especially to one sect or another.

Christianity is built upon alleged supernatural occurrences. It professes that its early founders did certain things beyond the power of ordinary men, under ordinary circumstances. We know that such things do not occur to-day. We know that time does not add to probability, and hence, in default of further evidence, we are compelled to say that we doubt the reality of the miracles. Some would go even further, and deny their reality. But, to use the mildest term, we doubt it. Christians themselvs apply this rule in every-day life.

The same applies to every doctrin of Christianity, except where there is positiv evidence against the doctrin. The laws of nature are the only guide we hav. They form the only one which we know anything about. As Pope says in his "Essay on Man:"

> Say first, of God above, or man below,
> What can we reason, but of what we know?
> Of man, what see we but his station here,
> From which to reason, or to which refer?

When any person declares the truth of an occurrence beyond the power of nature to accomplish, we hav the right to doubt the truth of his statement, or even to deny it, until he givs us some proof of its reality, for, so far as we know, the laws of nature are immutable. Any man who says that there is not an honest doubter in the world, is deficient either in honesty or common sense himself.

Des Moines, Ia. Franklin Steiner.

Send for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 19, 1890.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

THE Book.

Some more chapters in the Cartoon Book which hav been compiled during the past week are these:

STUDIES IN NATURAL HISTORY:
A Question for Theological Ethnologists.
Some Problems in Evolution.
The Prototype of the Methodist Revival.
Religion in Man and Instinct in the Brute.

THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE:
Geology and the Bible.
Geography and the Bible.

THE CLERGY AND THEIR FLOCKS:
Shearing Time.
The Clergy's Hold Upon the People.
One of a Very Numerous Class.
The Physician to the Flock.
Duty to the Clergy.
Conference Time.
Work of a Methodist Conference in New York in 1886.
The Burden of the Cross.
The Theologian's Conception of Clerical Privileges.
The Ark of the Lord.
Sympathizing With their Pastor.
One Triumphant Saint.
Appearance and Fact.
Chaplains in the Army and Navy.
A Desirable Bargain.

Considerable encouragement in the shape of advance orders has been received in the same time, which has caused much diligence on the part of the editor. The price of the book is $2.

The Methodists and the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

At the Methodist conference held in this city last week Dr. James M. King presented a report which was adopted, consisting of an argument against the recent decision by the Wisconsin supreme court that the Bible is a sectarian book and therefore not entitled to a place in the public schools. The gist of the argument was that as it is the interest of government in education to provide for a citizenship made up of morally accountable beings, public schools should be neither secular nor sectarian, but should be religious from the Christian standpoint. The report says:

"In the present state of the controversy we hold it to be the duty of Christian citizens of a commonwealth Christian in its history and in the character of its laws to deny that the Bible is a sectarian book, and claim for it a place wherever the state attempts to educate youth for the duties of citizenship."

This conference report was preceded by an editorial in the Methodist organ in this city, in which the same thought was advanced, the argument being that as "all truly Christian bodies" accept the Bible as a divine revelation to man it cannot therefore be a sectarian book. Each truly Christian body, says the organ, "appeals to it as supporting the particular doctrins it advocates. It is not the Bible that is sectarian, but the interpretations of it on which the sects build their creeds. Universalists do not believe in eternal punishment, which, as the court says, the Bible seems to teach; but they would be the last to claim that the Bible is therefore sectarian. They claim, though forming a very small minority, that, rightly interpreted, the Bible teaches Universalism, and not eternal punishment."

Of course, if this is not so, if any one of the sects does not believe the Bible to be a "divine revelation to man," then the argument falls to the ground. And, of course, if it is divine revelation, it must be faultless, for a perfect God could not teach error. What then is the Bible to our Unitarian friends who ever since the Arian controversy hav denied the dogma of the divinity of Christ, holding him to be not equal to God, but only an exalted man whose life and teachings, rather than his alleged supernatural origin, constitute the real Christianity? Or will the organ squirm out of this by asserting that the Unitarians do not believe that the Bible teaches the divinity of Christ?

There is, however, a point the organ overlooks, and which it must admit renders Bible reading impracticable if perfect fairness between the sects is to be maintained. The Wisconsin court said, and the organ must admit its accuracy, that "some of the portions [of the Bible] so read seem to inculcate doctrins of the divinity of Jesus Christ and of the punishment of the wicked after death." This being so, in fairness to the Unitarian and Universalist children other portions combating these views must also be read, else sectarian instruction is an accomplished fact. And so with all other sectarian differences. Texts supporting all doctrins must be read or none at all. To do otherwise would constitute unfairness between the sects themselvs. But to do this is utterly impossible, and even adopting the organ's line of argument, that the Bible, as it embraces all, cannot be sectarian, the only way to please all is to please none!

But the view that the Bible, being the source of all Christianity, can be lawfully used, cannot for a moment be maintained without the acceptance first of another premis—that this is a Christian country. Were this true, if every man, woman, and child were a Christian—even then the Bible, as we hav seen, would be a source of trouble between the sects, for the reason that all sectarianism could not be taught equally, and because members of one sect would not desire their children to know the tenets of the other sects. Of course the Methodists hold this to be an "eminently Christian country," and so do some others. But the supreme court does not so hold, and state courts hav decided both ways, according to the fanaticism of the judge. But the Christian religion is excluded from the national and state constitutions, and tradition and the general spirit are against the notion that the country is Christian. Certainly it is not legally so. George Washington spoke for the whole people, and, let us hope, for all time, when he said that the government of the United States is in no sense founded on the Christian religion.

This being so, what becomes of the organ's hair-splitting? Christianity being only one of several religions taught in the country, and having no legal preëminence above any one of them—all forms of religion being equally recognized in our courts—it becomes only one sect, a sect being, according to the organ, a division. The people of the country are divided into Christians, Jews, Atheists, Agnostics, Confucians, Positivists, and there are probably a few Mohammedans and other "heathen" among us. To a Jew the New Testament is mental poison. To an Atheist the whole Bible is superstitious folly. To an Agnostic it is a mythical compilation, about the truth of which he knows nothing, except as human experience has taught him that the majority of its statements are false. To a Rationalist, it is the barbarian's idea of the origin of the universe—the folk lore and religious aspirations of uncultivated people. Among many religions, therefore, Christianity is but a sect, a division, with no more right to thrust its peculiar religious book upon the public schools than has any other religious division. As well might the Jews claim to hav the Talmud read; or the Mohammedans, the Koran; or the Positivists, the "General Principles of Positivism;" or the Agnostics—and there are a host of them—the polemical essays of Professor Huxley; or the Atheists, Büchner's "Force and Matter;" or the Confucians "the five King" or "the four Shoo."

It is true the individual states could, according to the United States court's interpretation of the binding force of the amendments to the Constitution, establish religion if they pleased; but the majority hav not pleased, and hav placed in their constitutions prohibitions of any such act. They are therefore restrained like the national government, and in general the same legal argument holds good in all the states. Christianity is not a part of their laws, and they are not "Christian states." The Bible, being the religious compilation of one division of the people, cannot be other than a sectarian book, so far as it is a book at all; and whether viewed from this broad plane, or from the narrower one of the Wisconsin court, the decision must in either case be the same. As between the evangelical and non-evangelical churches—leaving out the Catholic church—the Bible is a strong supporter of the former, and the probabilities are great that the child of a non-evangelical, taught simply to believe the Bible, would become an evangelical Christian if left to itself and the book. Unitarianism and Universalism hav to read into the Bible all the humanity and morality they extract from it. Read literally, it maintains the absurd and horrible doctrins of the Roman Catholics and the evangelicals.

The Catholic Standard is nearer right than the Methodist organ, for it says that the decision of the Wisconsin court is the only logical and possible conclusion that can be reached with the principle of unsectarian public schools as the premis.

We Again Correct a Contemporary.

We hope that in time some of our esteemed contemporaries may be induced to pay more attention to accuracy of statement, but hav to confess that our genial ironplated friend of Indianapolis is a difficult subject. In the Age of March 29th, in announcing the defeat in the United States Senate of Blair's Educational bill, he said:

"This bill, the religious features of which were so artfully concealed, we believe would hav at least passed the senate again but for the determined and dogged opposition of the religious sect known as Seventh Day Adventists. It had the luring bait of a $77,000,000 appropriation to be distributed amongst the states in proportion to the density of illiteracy. But the chief object of the bill was to enforce religious instructions in the public schools by national authority and the acknowledgment of Jesus Christ as the supreme ruler of nations. And to think that a measure so un-American, so pernicious, so unconstitutional as this could poll so large a vote as it did in the Senate of the United States in this age of general intelligence must make every true patriot shudder for the welfare of his country."

In transferring this to THE TRUTH SEEKER, for the purpose of pleading for accuracy, we remarked:

"Senator Blair is the responsible author of so many iniquitous and crazy measures that it is not strange, perhaps, that his critics should occasionally get mixed up. But the bill recently voted on was not the one to which the criticism of Dr. Monroe would apply. This was a bill 'to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools,' and it provided for a grant of some seventy odd millions, extending through a series of years, by the general government, to the states, for the maintenance of common schools, the money to be divided on the basis of illiteracy of population. A careful perusal of the bill (which the Senator kindly forwarded us) fails to show any direct advantage to the churches from it. Opposition to it proceeded from political rather than religious reasons.

"The measures which the Adventists opposed are Senator Blair's Educational Amendment to the Constitution and his Sunday law bill. The first provides that the general government shall guarantee that the various states shall maintain schools in which shall be taught the principles of the Christian religion; the second provides for the religious observance of Sunday so far as the general government's jurisdiction goes. The errors which may be counted in our esteemed contemporary's remarks are, therefore, as follows:

"1. The Adventists hav not doggedly opposed the Educational bill. 2. The object of the bill was not to enforce religious instruction in the public schools. 3. It does not acknowledge Jesus Christ as the supreme ruler of nations (the Educational Amendment does not do that). 4. The bill was not unconstitutional, not particularly un-American, and not pernicious from a Liberal standpoint. As a political measure Jeffersonians wou'd oppose it, but several Southern Liberals, whose states would get the major portion of the money, favored its enactment into law.

"To Senator Blair's Educational Amendment to the Constitution, however, Dr. Monroe's criticism applies with pertinence, with the exception of the line about Jesus Christ. Setting up that ancient individual as the supreme ruler of nations is the notion of the National Reform Association, otherwise known as the God-in-the-Constitution party."

Now, what does our genial friend say? Why, this:

"It is a weakness of genius at times to mistake its own obfuscation for other people's obtuseness of vision. March 29th, we spoke of the defeat of the Blair Educational bill, not in the least confounding it with the Blair Sunday Rest bill. The chief features of the defeated bill were briefly referred to and not at all confounded with those of any other bill introduced by this crazy and blatant Puritan. So THE TRUTH SEEKER must look into its own mental machinery for the muddled condition that inspired its courteous but misdirected criticism upon our simple announcement of the defeat of the Educational bill. Senator Blair is a mischievous pest and a national bore and ass, but we did not believe him smart enough to so confuse a level-headed Infidel Editor as to make him believe his own mental muddle the condition of some man a thousand miles away."

Let's see how this paragraph stands as regards accuracy! Did we say that our genial contemporary had confounded the Educational bill with the Sunday Rest bill? We do not find such an assertion. The confounding was with the Educational Amendment to the national Constitution. And the "chief features of the defeated bill," as Dr. Monroe states, are a provision of that amendment, and a plank of the National Reform Association's platform, which piece of pious lumber is neither in the Blair Educational Amendment nor in the Blair bill! He distinctly says: "The chief object of the bill was to enforce religious instruction in the public schools by national authority, and the acknowledgment of Jesus Christ as the supreme ruler of nations." But the bill does not do either, and his "chief features of the defeated bill" are not in the bill at all. The bill says nothing about religion and nothing about Jesus Christ, but specifies the instruction in the schools benefiting by the act to be "the art of reading, writing, and speaking the English language, arithmetic, geography, history of the United States, and such other branches of useful knowledge as may be taught under local laws." And it further provides "that the moneys distributed under the provisions of this act shall be used only for common schools, not sectarian in character." The word sectarian is all the reference to religion the bill makes So it is seen that his "chief features" were confounded with the other measures—one Blair's Educational Amendment, the other, the National Reform Association's platform.

Considering the facts in the matter, our genial friend's comments upon our correction seem to be pointless; or, at best, reveal a disposition to deceive, which is much to be regretted in so stanch a friend to George Washington.

A Queer State of Things.

The criticisms of THE TRUTH SEEKER upon the use of filthy words in Mr. Harman's crusade against social vices and brutish abuse of marital privileges has revealed a queer state of affairs among his thick-and-thin supporters. They seem to think that he and they are the only ones who should say anything, and that unless people can agree with him and them they should keep quiet. Some of them even go so far as to assert the old Jesuit maxim, the end justifies the means. Others, like Dr. Abbie Knapp—a woman for whom we hav a sincere respect—think that it must necessarily be a lack of moral courage which prevents an unqualified support of the use of filthy expressions. By others we are warned that we cannot afford to utter any condemnation of the trash, and one good man holds that if Mr. Harman goes to prison it will hav been THE TRUTH SEEKER which put him there. Read these lines:

In Lucifer of March 28th, Mr. C. M. Overton, of Salida, Col., says:

"I hav just been reading THE TRUTH SEEKER'S savage criticism, and take time to say that my daughter, Mrs. Whitehead, a pure-minded, intelligent, and somewhat conservativ woman, differs in toto from friend Macdonald, both as to the animus and merit of the contribution which has caused the second arrest. A righteous end, she holds, justifies any means essential to the end."

Lucifer, of April 4th, has this from Dr. C. H. Drayne, of Sebree, Ky.:

"THE TRUTH SEEKER of March 8th devotes more than a column to an illogical, unfeeling, and uncalled-for attack upon the editor of Lucifer for printing the O'Neil letter. It seems to me that a brother and co-worker in the noble cause of liberty, when he finds, 'as he thinks,' that another brother has stepped aside or in any way done an injury to the cause, instead of jumping on him with both feet, or dealing him blow after blow, straight from the shoulder, it seems to me that it would be much better to pass it by in silence.

"It strikes me that the spirit that prompts a man to utter such language about a co-worker in the ranks of Liberalism is the same devilish spirit that established the Auto-dă-fé and lighted the fagots around its victims.

"I am an old reader of Lucifer, and with my head whitened by the frosts of many winters, I can truthfully say I hav never yet seen an article, a sentence, or even a word which I would call vulgar or indecent in its columns."

And our readers will recollect these words by Dr. Knapp:

"If you hav not the moral stamina requisit to aid in this work, for our sake, do not, I beg, hinder those who hav."

Mr. E. H. Heywood prints this oracular utterance in his Word:

"Relativ to the last assault on that clean, brave, able pioneer in Freethought, Moses Harman, perhaps Eugene Macdonald, Moses Hull, and other editors can afford to speak or be silent, in the way they are doing, but I doubt it."

What shall we think of the mental condition of these critics? If the end justifies the means, then, to accomplish a good purpose, murder is justifiable! It is the argument of the fanatic. To get men into heaven the church has persecuted and murdered them here—and used Mr. Overton's conservativ daughter's argument to justify the crime. Freethinkers, however, who do not possess the virtue of conservatism, hav usually condemned the acts and despised the fallacious argument.

And why should we keep quiet, when we do not agree with Mr. Harman's methods? Does he remain silent when he disagrees with us? Must we also pass by in silence the utterances of the Christians because we do not agree with them? Must we be restrained from condemning Comstock's law—the very one under which Mr. Harman suffers—because we do not agree with its principles? And why did Dr. Drayne say anything concerning our "unfeeling attack" upon Lucifer if he disagrees with us? Would it not hav been better, if he finds that we hav stepped aside or in any way done an injury to a noble cause, to pass it by in silence? Dr. Drayne's logic would forever prevent any protests against wrong, and silence Mr. Harman himself! It won't do, as Colonel Ingersoll would observe. Speech must be free; the press must be free; the mails must be free; and those who hold one idea must be as free to protest against what they conceive to be wrong as those who hold any other idea. Mr. Harman and his friends protest against the abuse of persons; cannot we protest against his abuse of the English language? For, notwithstanding Dr. Drayne's remarkable certificate to its purity, if Dr. O'Neil's letter is not vulgar and indecent, those words never truthfully described any language.

As for Dr. Knapp's opinion, it occurs to us that it requires more moral stamina to reprove a friend than to score an enemy. But, really, is it a sign of a lack of courage to say that a vulgar and useless screed, even though written by one of those highly privileged characters called physicians, should never hav been printed, and that it is an insult to a person to hav it thrust upon him, as though that were the sort of literature the editor knew he wanted? It is true it does not require much courage to say it, for nine hundred and ninety-nine of every thousand persons will agree with the opinion, but neither is it a sign of moral cowardice to express it. We are as willing now as when we wrote the sentence Dr. Foote's Health Monthly recalls to "fight for another's right to differ with us," but how is it with our critics? Are they willing to fight for our right to differ with them? It looks very much as though they were not. We shall sustain Mr. Harman's right to hold and propagate any opinions he pleases upon any subject, but we cannot uphold his invasion of other people's rights by printing matter that would teach corruption. Supposing a child obtained that copy of Lucifer before such child was, in the judgment of its parents, old enough to be warned against the beastliness of some degraded specimens of the race? Would not its parents hav good cause to reprove the editor for thrusting it upon them in a paper they trusted and had previously taken in good faith? Out upon such stuff! There is no sophistry in the world, in all the books of all the Jesuits, that can get around the fact that a parent has a right to protect his child from contamination. The only way Mr. Harman could hav justified sending that copy of Lucifer to his subscribers would hav been to write to each a private letter and ask them if they wanted such literature. Even Mr. Heywood, who goes as far as anyone in urging the right to print everything, admits that he has no right at all to send his broad-gage linguistic notions to those who do not desire them.

As to whether we can afford to speak as we do or be silent—in other words, whether we can afford to do anything but support Mr. Harman's conduct, we imagin we can always afford to tell the truth and say what we think. When we cannot, the church will be our haven. And why not? Does Mr. Heywood propose to persecute us for expressing our opinion? Is anyone who differs from us going to do that? What form will our punishment take—ostracism, boycotting, dungeon, or a grave? If that shall occur, what becomes of our critics' logic? of their pleas for freedom of expression? Why shouldn't we speak as well as Mr. Harman, or Mr. Heywood, or Dr. Knapp, or Dr. Drayne, or Mr. Overton, or Mr. Overton's conservativ daughter? Do they form a consensus of the competent with whom everybody must agree or be silent? If so, who made them the consensus, and, above all, who made them the competent?

The statement that every person has the natural right to do as he wills, provided that in doing it he infringes no other person's equal freedom, is perfectly impregnable—but that infringement! ah, there's the rub. We invite our friends, and especially friend Harman, to study the matter a little more closely.

Bad Advice.

The appended letter is from a friend who livs in Oswego:

"BROTHER MACDONALD: Get a sitting with Dr. Slade, and when the slate you hold under the table with your right hand begins to 'push back,' drop it and instantly grab his foot, and you'll not look for a spirit very long.

"A. H. WALKER."

We do not propose to follow this violent suggestion. It is unnecessary, and would probably lead to a row. The fact that Mr. Slade used his foot to push the slate held under the table is as well established by sight as by feeling. When we visit mediums we shall go to them in the gentlest spirit of inquiry, conscious of the imperfections of our skeptical nature, and seek light through their own willingness to shed it. If they are not willing, then the light won't be shed. There is no use fighting one's way into the spirit-land. And a medium who will not afford every opportunity for preventing sleight-of-hand manipulation, the use of chemicals, or other trickery, lays himself open to the suspicion that he needs one of them to produce slate-writing. Wait till McArthur finds a medium who will let us hav everything our own way and then see what occurs.

Editorial Notes.

C. B. REYNOLDS, secretary of the Washington Secular Union, writes that the board of directors of that organization propose to test the question of the right of the school teachers to read the Bible or compel school children to recite in concert the Lord's prayer or to open the school sessions with prayer, as is now done in some of the public schools in that state. This is a good move, and the Secular Union should hav the activ encouragement of every Freethinker in Washington. The office is located at 1526 Sixth street, Seattle.

THE following is from the Working Woman, published by Charlotte Smith at Washington, D. C.: "One of the brightest and brainiest women of the East is Susan H. Wixon, of Fall River, Mass., who has been flooding that section with Woman's League literature in behalf of woman's recognition in the management of the World's Fair. Susan and her sister co-workers are indefatigable in the cause of women and reform. Miss Wixon has spent both time and money and should be recognized by Governor Brackett as one of the women appointed from Massachusetts to represent the educational and industrial women of that state at the World's Fair Exposition at Chicago."

NOT alone in Sweden are the Scandinavians waking up out of their religious sleep. The last four numbers of the Svenska Folkets Tidning (Swedish People's Journal), of Minneapolis, devote two or three editorial columns to the church's war against science (Kyrkans Strid mot Vetenskapen). They go over the whole ground of its opposition to astronomy, geography, geology, and medicin, especially its opposition to the use of anesthetics in labor cases; and tells again of the persecution of Galileo and the martyrdom of Bruno. The writer shows the church's errors in the domain of economics even down to Luther's time, and quotes from that worthy as follows: "Every usurer is a thief, and ought to be hanged. I call him an usurer who lends money on interest." This is notable in a Swedish paper having many Lutheran subscribers. The paper concludes: "We see here, in great and small matters, how mankind step by step has had to struggle with unspeakable pain against the church's despotism that was so wicked as to attempt to destroy all possibilities of human weal."

Letters from Friends.

SORGHO, KY., March 9, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I vote for the pictures. M. F. BALEE.

DENVER, COL., March 11, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Register our votes for the continuance of the cartoons. Very respectfully, FRITZ THIES.

BARNUM, MINN., March 20, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Sen me the ANNUAL. I shall vote for the pictures. A. M. TOWNSEND.

ENGLEWOOD, April 2, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I will send you $2 in a few days for the cartoon book. JOHN HUDSON.

MARTINSBURG, W. VA., March 24, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I am glad to see that the pictures are to be continued, and when the book comes out I expect to get one. LOUIS WOLFES.

JAMESTOWN, March 17, 1800.
MR. EDITOR: I am more than pleased with the work of Heston, and shall, I hope, shortly giv him some proofs of my admiration. Yours very truly, JOHN SPRING.

CHARLES CITY, IA., April 1, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I would vote in favor of continuing the publication of the pictures, as they are excellent—just the thing to show our orthodox friends. ANDREW HIGH.

COHOES, N. Y., April 7, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Please send one copy of your picture book. I think that this book will do more good to the cause of Freethought than any book yet published. D. MCELWAIN.

HAY SPRINGS, NEB., March 8, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I will continue to try to get more subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER. But debts are the terror of the settlers here, as in all new countries.
Yours for Secularism, E. W. MINER.

HUDSON, O., April 1, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Please send me two copies of your cartoon book. If you publish the Bible illustrations, I want them also. They are the best thing yet. MORRIS JOHNSON.

GOUVERNEUR, March 20, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find $7.25 for renewal, Heston's picture book, and the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL. Keep Heston busy making pictures, for God's sake.
Yours with respect, M. W. BAOON.

NAUVOO, ILL., March 29, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $1.25, for which you will please send me one dollar's worth of the staff of life, commonly called THE TRUTH SEEKER, and the ANNUAL for 1890. W. H. FULTON.

NOOKSACK, WASH., March 11, 290.
MR. EDITOR: I hope you will giv Heston room. C. B. Reynolds was here and left his tracks, i. e, an organization of seven, with one office heaped upon your scribe, local state secretary. DR. J. W. BELL.

FOSTORIA, O., March 31, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I send money for the ANNUAL and a new subscriber. We send our votes for the pictures. Giv us the portraits of some of our free writers and free speakers on the last page, instead of so much old Bible.
Yours for truth, WHIT. STEVENSON.

REDDICK, ILL., March 29, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I hav tried hard to get a new subscriber, but cannot, as times are very hard here. I like the paper with or without the cartoons. As the most of the subscribers seem to like them, I do also. Wishing you success, I am, Yours for liberty, HENRY PALMER.

LASSATER, TEX., March 24, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I send a new subscriber. I would like to send a good many more names, but the people in this country are so narrow-minded that they are almost afraid to even look at my paper, and often tell me that I am on a sure road to ruin. Your friend, W. P. JEMISON.

VICTOR, MONT., April 3, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find fifty cents—twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL and the rest for pictures. I say, giv us all the pictures you can, for they are convincing and instructiv. You can count on me as a life subscriber, for I would not do without the paper. Yours for truth, M. KERCHNER.

SNOHOMISH, WASH., March 28, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: If there is anything left after squaring my account, please turn it over to the Literature Fund. Put me down for two volumes of the picture book, one to be sent to the friend's address inclosed, and the other to myself with bill for the two volumes. J. S. MARTIN.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 5, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I received a sample copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER which you so kindly forwarded, and was glad to receive the same. Often, when at home in England, I hav heard Mr. Foote, and other eminent Atheists, speak in terms of the highest commendation of your paper, and I was anxious to learn for myself what this fearless exponent of Secularism might be like. The reality surpassed even my most sanguin expectations; for though we are taught that America is the land of freedom, yet it is a fact, a deplorable fact, that the press is notorious for its "lickspittleness" and subserviency. I am glad that your paper is a noble exception to this rule; and I trust that the ultra-refined feelings of those who are agitating for the discontinuance of the pictures will hav no weight with you. Ridicule is a strong weapon, and a fair weapon to use against a superstition which has wrought incalculable mischief wherever it has been taught.
Yours truly, W. MILLYARD.

ROCHESTER, N. H., March 26, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I am highly pleased with the picture-book idea. One for me for the first off-go, and very likely several others in a short time. Yes, by all means keep Heston at it. I inclose $4.50—$3 for renewal, twenty-five cents for Remsburg's "Bible Morals," twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL, and $1 for the cartoons. E. J. FOSS.

CENTRALIA, ILL., March 2, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I am glad you will publish the first-page pictures in book form, and I send you the following six names as buyers of the book, with check to pay for the same. I add money for fifty cents' worth of "Crimes against Criminals." All of the names given are TRUTH SEEKER readers, and all vote for the pictures. F. D. REXFORD.

BARBOURVILLE, N. Y., April 1, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I think it just about as easy for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven as it is for me to get another subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER. I vote for the pictures. I would rather hav them detached from the paper. They would be so nice to send to Sunday-school for them to illustrate from when they hav a superintendent that cannot read very well, as in our case last year. EDGAR BURNSIDE.

SODOM, O., March 5, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $5, for renewal, ANNUAL, and books as named. The balance giv to Heston for his pictures Do not let the pictures go out of existence. It is just the stuff to make the Christian ashamed of his old Jewish God and his Bible. There is no chance to get you a new subscriber for the paper in this place. There are too many Christians of the U. P. kind. I will try and do all I can to get one. R. A. WEBB.

GARNETT, KAN., March 19, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1 to continue the cartoons, which is according to promis in my last, and I must say, that for unadulterated truthfulness, and incomparable accuracy in delineating and setting forth in true colors the maneuvering of the church and the Bible's absurd and foolish yarns, Watson Heston beats all creation, and "Auld Clooty" besides. So let the cartoons come, and I will do more when I can. CHAS. GREGG.

MISSOULA, MONT., March 23, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I hasten to renew, as I do not wish to lose a number of that G. O. P.(aper), THE TRUTH SEEKER. Send me the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL. I would like to get that "Try-Square," but cannot just at present. I hope to send for some books soon, among which will be that book of illustrations. Long life to Heston, and long may his services be retained by the Truth Seeker Company to keep the paper what it is at present, the greatest paper on earth.
W. H. REID.

KOKOMO, IND., Dec. 31, 1889.
MR. EDITOR: I had expected to go to the congress at Philadelphia, but the sickness of my brother, Dr. C. N. Willis, of Grantville, N. C., prevented. He passed to spirit-life November 3d. My brother was a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and a worker for justice, liberty, and equal rights, and far more radical than most so-called Infidels. He was a Spiritologist. He knew spirit-life to be a fact, and I hav conversed with him frequently since he has been living outside of his worn-out earth body. W. L. WILLIS.

MAITLAND, MO., March 27, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find bills, for which please renew my subscription, and send me the ANNUAL and apply twenty-five cents to the picture fund. My experience with the pictures is that they do much good. I keep the papers lying around where they can easily be seen, and many persons coming in pick them up, look at them, and laugh and comment on them, frequently in anything but flattering terms to Bible and church; and occasionally one will ask to take them home, a favor I always grant. The pictures do good, and I would like to see them continued. H. B. MAXWELL.

ROME, GA., March 26, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I cannot get any subscribers in this hell-ridden place. What with the Young Men's Christian Association and fifteen churches in a town of fifteen thousand, superstition reigns supreme. But I will keep on trying, though it is an almost hopeless task. I want to say that I am heartily in favor of Heston's pictures, and hope they will be continued. You can count on me as a subscriber for life. I hope your paper will keep on getting better, as it has during the short time I hav been a subscriber.
AUGUSTUS L. HANSON.

COVELO, CAL., March 17, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I see so much said about Heston's pictures, I claim the privilege of adding my vote for pictures, and the more pictures the better. The pictures got you one subscriber from this place that I know of. I say, giv Heston a chance. I think he must be inspired. We hav but one fire insurance agent here of the Presbyterian persuasion, but the people do not seem to be in any hurry to get out any policies against fire in the next world. It has cost at least $2,000 since they can claim to hav saved a soul by conversion, but when the sick and destitute ask for help it is non-members that respond with a will and almost without an exception. Success to Heston. IRA C. HOXIE.

DAYTON, O., March 28, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I would like replies to the following from some of your able contributors, as well as yourself:
1. Is man sympathetic?
2. Is man a production of nature?
3. Is nature sympathetic?
4. Is nature non-sympathetic?
5. Is it possible for a non-sympathetic element to produce anything containing sympathy?

I would like to hear from Colonel Ingersoll on this matter if possible. I. S. BRADLEY.

ROSLYN, WASH., March 31, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find an order for $14, for which send five copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER cartoon book as herein stated, and use $3 for renewal for a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and use the rest for books and pamphlets as in orders inclosed. The cartoon books will be monuments of arguments, and there should be one in every theological graveyard. Hoping that the cartoon book business will be a success so that you can begin work on the pictorial Bible, I will look around for some more oliv branches before the water gets too low. HENRY BEIOHLING.

HANKINS, N. Y., March 21, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I see by THE TRUTH SEEKER of last week that you are about to publish a book of the illustrations of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Good! If it is a possible thing, I will be more than anxious to hav one or more copies. I am very much pleased to know that we hav elected Heston for another year, at any rate. I am the only Freethinker in this place that I know of. This place is about equally divided between Catholics and Protestants, and I hav to smile when I think of some remarks that were made to me shortly after I came here, about a year ago, such as, "Mr. Galloway, you must be a very good Christian." I ask, "Why?" "Because you never swear, and always are so kind and obliging, always willing to help anyone that is in need," etc. My answer was at that time, "No, I do not profess to be a Christian, but do as near right as I am able."
Yours for liberty, WM. S. GALLOWAY.

MILFORD, PA., April 2, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: I should hav written long before this what my family and myself think of the pictures, but hav delayed doing so, thinking I could get you a new subscriber. I tried at three neighbors of mine, but did not succeed, although they all liked THE TRUTH SEEKER. But I will try again when there is any chance of success. My wife and myself want the "Try-Square," the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL for 1890, and the cartoon book when ready; also "For Her Daily Bread," a novel. You sent me this book over one year ago, and I hav lent it to a friend, and when it is returned shall lend it again, but want another copy to keep, as I like it so well. And I send $1 toward the pictures both on the first and last pages. We all like them, the children especially. Even our one-year-old baby Norma will soon be interested, and looks them over now.

I like President Westbrook's proposal to put woman suffrage among the Secular Demands, and it ought to hav been one of them when they were made; it being no more than just, no matter what the result may be. C. C. FISK.

DETROIT, MICH., March 30, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: Just forty years ago I was branded as an Antichrist. Instead of my outgrowing the effects of that mark, the scar has been growing more indelible from that day to this. Therefore the Lord did not see fit to let me prosper as he did my Christian neighbors, who often tell me that it is a wonder that God permits me to liv at all; consequently I am now too poor to subscribe for THE TRUTH SEEKER or anything else. But I manage to hav eight cents each Saturday to buy a copy of the paper at the news-store. I hav a sort of weakness that prompts me to mark articles with which I am forcibly impressed; then I lend those marked papers till they are worn out or fail to come back. Those pictures speak volumes, and their argument is utterly unanswerable. A dozen copies of your paper, with Heston's pictures, judiciously distributed among a lot of Sunday-school pupils or a Young Men's Christian Association, will work just like so many dynamite bombs thrown into a soldiers' camp. They will break up the nest every time. Try it, all. CARL BLITZ.

CHICAGO, March 29, 1890.
MR. EDITOR: While there is so much being said in your paper about Spiritualism, and ye Editor's search after a spirit, and some ridicule at those who do believe in the continuation of life beyond the grave, I would like to know what portion of your subscribers are in possession of this knowledge. I for one know we do liv beyond the grave, and that friends who hav left this life can and do return and communicate, under favorable conditions, with those in the body. In the nine years I hav been investigating this subject I hav had evidence enough to convince every reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER, including Brother Macdonald, Colonel Ingersoll, and Mrs. Slenker. I do not hav to go from home, or outside my own family, for evidence. I am considered neither a crank nor a fanatic. I am a Freethinker, and read THE TRUTH SEEKER every week, also a half dozen Spiritual papers. This is not a belief or a religion, but a fact, which every intelligent man and woman may know if they care to investigate. You may put me down for ten copies of Heston's picture book at $2 each, if that is to be your price. I would giv $10 for one rather than miss it.
Yours truly, S. M. BIDDISON.

MONGO, IND., March 30, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5 to pay for two subscriptions. I am sorry I can send you but one new subscriber. This is a Liberal community and priestcraft has but a small hold. Liberals in this community are like all others, they care only for themselvs. I know of men and women that belonged to the church for twenty, thirty, and even forty years; they attended the sanctuary every Sunday to tell God how good he was and how mean they were themselvs, and paid their money liberally to the clergy; and when they were convinced of their error and foolishness you could not get a dollar from them to support the cause that liberated them.

Now, as to the pictures, I think they are half the paper. There is not less than a dozen little boys and girls that come to my house regularly every week to look at Heston's pictures, and it is a lesson to them that will ever remain stamped on their minds. Then again, any person that has his modesty shocked by the cartoons is not a Liberal and belongs to the pews in the church. Those weak-kneed Liberals say they are afraid of hurting the feelings of Christians. Did it ever occur to them that a Christian was careful about treading on Liberals? I sometimes attend meetings out of curiosity, and I hardly ever escape without being told that I am only fit to be burnt. No, by all means continue the pictures, and I will giv $5 for a book with all the pictures Heston has made in THE TRUTH SEEKER. NATE REED.

CELINA, O., April 5, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: As you are calling for a vote on the pictures, I will send in my mite. Let us hav the pictures continued. I am convinced they attract more than they repel. I do not think any loyal Liberal can object to them. They teach more useful lessons than all the preachers in Christendom. I think the few that dare not show their paper for fear of the pictures offending are very lukewarm Liberals, and they will never set the world on fire by their efforts to advance our cause. Are the dear Christians so tender of our feelings that they will hesitate at anything for fear of offending us? No, indeed; they call us heathen, and fit subjects for that country where apples never freeze, and by all the rest of the epithets that come so readily to the Christian's tongue. Now, what we want is good and loyal live men and women that will fear nothing and dare everything for the cause of justice and right. We want men and women that will speak their mind at all times and in all places, and will work for mental freedom at all times. I think a Liberal that will mugwump and hold his peace is a detriment to the cause. We want live men and women who are not afraid to show their papers for fear they may offend. Why, I hav a little girl ten years old that is braver than that. She does not hesitate to say to anyone that there is no God. Let us all do all we can. There is no one but has some influence. Then let us make the best use of that influence and speak a good word for a good cause whenever and wherever we can. If we all do this we are sure to gain ground and keep the dear old flag afloat. MRS. MATTIE NICOUM.

SAN JOSE, CAL., Dec. 22, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: For the inclosed stamps please send two copies of the ANNUAL for 1890. I shall make a huge effort to gain some new subscribers to help retain the pictures. Colonel Ingersoll once said that "anything that could be laughed out of this world ought not to stay in it." There is no better nor speedier way of getting rid of the priests and converting their foolish followers than by laughing and ridiculing their religious nonsense out of them, and common sense into them. And no man is doing a greater service in this cause than Mr. Watson Heston by his striking illustrations. "But," say our orthodox friends, "those horrible pictures shock our senses." I hav no doubt of that, my Christian friends. You hav inherited a shocking disease, and nothing will ever do you any good except a shocking dose of your own shocking medicin. Take it, as directed by Dr. Heston. Giv it to the children; their merry laugh will help restore your reason, and in time you will get rid of your shocking complaint. Yes, let us vigorously employ every humane method to get rid of this infamous, lying, hypocritical fraud, Christianity. All the murdering, plundering, deceiving schemes to rob the human race ever conceived by the brains of human devils, Christianity excels. It is the very essence of villainy. It commenced in blood, it has fed on blood—but let us try to bid it a bloodless adieu. In its present attempt to destroy our liberties, I hope the love of liberty will destroy it. We cannot shirk this trouble. It is already here. Let us do all we peacefully can to educate and raise up from the present generation a nation of men and women intelligent enough, and brave enough, to stand forth and declare: No God, no Christ, no pope, no priest, no cross of Christ, shall ever tower above our sacred Constitution and the American flag. L. R. TITUS.

SANTA FE, N. M., March 22, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I expect to be able shortly to add a new subscriber to your list, or will remit something myself toward keeping up the pictures. They are a very important and necessary feature of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and many persons notice them who do not care at first to read the paper. As it is, I got you two lady readers here during the winter, but as times are hard they find it easier to buy their papers every week at the news depot. They are or were both good church-members, and the "shock" received by looking at those horrible pictures seems to hav been very beneficial in its effect. Do not be too hard on our Catholic fallow-citizens, for we Freethinkers ought to consider them a very necessary help in keeping up the balance against our hypocritical American Protestants. It is true they cause some trouble in our public school system, but then they hav good cause as long as the Protestants will keep up their Bible-reading and prayer practice. The Jews, too, hav just cause for complaint, but that class of people are singularly submissiv, and care for nothing but money-making. I cannot help but think what a power the Jews could exercise with so much wealth at their command. I do not agree with you in calling the religious persecutions in this country un-American. I think they are strictly American, and the Liberal people of this country hav always been and are as yet in a deplorable minority. Here a man can occupy no public position of importance unless he conforms seemingly to the accepted religious notions. It is here where the Talmages find their richest harvests, as in no other country, and even President Lincoln had to become a hypocrit in his riper years and issue pious state papers. No wonder his friends at home laughed over it (see Remsburg's Lincoln). They should hav cried over it, properly. I repeat, we hav nothing to fear from the Catholics. The pope may issue bulls, but he cannot enforce them. The Catholics themselvs are progressiv, and as proof of my assertion I refer you to Italy, France, Mexico, Brazil, and other countries; also our state of California, where Catholics and foreigners are largely represented.

LEWIS SCHOEMOYE.

MILFORD, MASS., March 30, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: In the story of the exodus from Egypt we read that there were six hundred thousand Israelites on foot that were men, besides children. It makes no reference to any women, thus eclipsing the story of the immaculate conception, as in that affair the woman was one of the main factors. God put the "pillar of the cloud" between the Israelites and the Egyptians, giving light to the Israelites and darkness to the Egyptians. The Israelites had not provided themselvs with any victuals. God sent quails—not on toast, but covered the camp with them—and then rained bread from heaven, that if not picked till the next morning bred worms and stank. That cuisine might do for Red sea travel, but would not satisfy the tourists on a Cunarder. The cartoons, unlike the "pillar," giv light in all directions, and aid many people to escape from a superstition worse than the despotism of Pharaoh, and THE TRUTH SEEKER furnishes a kind of food that does not breed worms if not used till morning, and always retains its flavor. When you announced your purpose of issuing the book of pictures, I began to send to friends what TRUTH SEEKERS had been saved for the pictures, hoping that some may feel moved to send you $2. I am anxious to see the book of pictures. Why not? Inclosed I send you $4, for which send two copies of the book. It has been said that "people who like the pictures ought to be religious." If they are, the religious element seems to be on the increase, and to THE TRUTH SEEKER be all the praise. Whittier in his last poem says:

No longer forward or behind
I look in hope or fear,
But grateful take the good I find,
The best of Now and Here.

That must include THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHARLES C. JOHNSON.

SOUTH AMBOY, N. J., March 27, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $3 for one year's passage on the iron-clad TRUTH SEEKER boat. I hav only been a subscriber for six months, and regret I did not know there were any Freethought papers in existence until I read it in the Twentieth Century. When I first subscribed to THE TRUTH SEEKER I was a Theist, but since then, after reading works by French authors on the laws of nature, I hav become a pronounced Materialist. From my boyhood I hav always been a rationalist, like most Germans that still cling to orthodoxy but are indifferent to its teachings. There are very few Germans of the orthodox type that pray, although they go to church as a mere matter of custom. I hav never implored the blessings of an imaginary personal God, but when a school-boy was compelled to learn my catechism. All that is required of a consistent Christian in Germany is to go to church and take communion every once in a while, no matter how much beer the communicants drink or how much they gamble after the service is over. In almost all parts of Germany you will always find a saloon close by the house of the Lord Jesus Christ, where the pious indulge a little before and after the church service. This priest-ridden town is full of pious church-members, and there is not a town in Jersey where you will find more rum-shops than here according to the population. Those of the church-members that do not drink do not pay the debts they contract. I know any number of these hypocrits who wear fine clothes to Sunday meetings and praise the Lord that they are not like other people, but do not own the clothes they hav got on their back. All crimes, licentiousness, etc., are done by professors of religion in this town, and still, when one of the pious dies, he goes straight to heaven, because at the last moment he repented his wickedness. I would rather be damned to hell-fire forever than associate with such a crowd of fanatics in heaven that only believe in mouth service and are far from being honest in their dealings. I hav never been as happy in my life as since I embraced the teachings of the only true bible, nature, in which no man can be deceived. Vive Heston and John Peck, the uncompromising foes of superstition. I am, Yours truly, AUGUST BEHN.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., March 9, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me to express my thanks for Remsburg's masterly exposition of the truth of history in regard to Lincoln's belief on religious topics. It is not denied by anyone here, that I hav spoken to, who is old enough to know, that Abraham Lincoln was an Infidel. There are plenty of people here who believe that Christianity is a fraud, but there is a lamentable lack of intellectually honest people. If it were not so, we would not hav the Bible, that filthy collection of ancient tales, read in our public schools. I believe there are not ten young people of school age, in this city of thirty thousand, who hav the least doubt that Abraham Lincoln was a model Christian. Last April, during the celebration of the Washington centennial, the preachers here all spoke of Washington as a Christian. One of them said, in making a temperance speech, that Washington never touched alcohol in any of its forms. Yet Lossing, in his "Field Book of the Revolution," page 839, speaks of him as drinking a glass of wine on taking leave of his officers at Fraunce's tavern; but a preacher does not hesitate to do evil that good may come of it. But I fail ever to hear that they return good for evil.

I think that Freethought and mental liberty among the masses can best be hastened by study and solution of the social problem. There can never be Universal Mental Liberty while there is universal industrial slavery. The concentration of wealth in the hands of a few, as shown in Thomas G. Shearman's article in the Forum, "Who Owns the United States," is truly alarming. When we consider that there are, according to the Illinois bureau of labor statistics, recorded farm mortgages to the amount of $124,000,000, in this state, bearing interest at the rate of eight per cent; and when corn sells for twenty cents per bushel in the central part of this state, and wheat for seventy cents per bushel, you can get an idea as to how the concentration is going on. Forty-nine million six hundred thousand bushels of corn out of the annual production to pay the interest on farm mortgages alone! And then the taxes, the tariff tax, the tax on improvements, and the road tax. Now, what is the cause, and what is the remedy for this state of things? I believe, with Henry George and Thomas G. Shearman, that the cause is land monopoly, and the restricted production that springs therefrom; and the tariff and other taxes that hinder and restrict trade and exchange. And I also believe with them that the remedy lies in a single tax on land values; for carried out to its logical conclusion, it would do away with the landlord, who, as such, does not justify his existence by doing anything useful or necessary. And then the increased production due to the freedom of opportunity which would then prevail, would be equitably divided between capital and labor. And poverty, and the evils that spring therefrom—not the least of which is the degrading superstition known as Christianity—would be banished from the land. HENRY WALKER.

ROGERS, ARK., April 2, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: In this section I think we hav more religion of the assorted varieties than in any other part of the country; and especially the sort which requires supreme ignorance and blind faith in the make-up of its devotees. We hav Methodists—both sides of Mason and Dixon's line—Presbyterians, "soul-sleepers" and "sanctificationists," "Disciples of Christ," and "Latter-day Saints." And a bigoted lot they are. They hav been fighting each other with as much hatred as the followers of the "meek and lowly" are wont to exhibit. Well, we hav furnished these fanatical followers of a three-ply God with some new material to divert their minds. Last month Mr. J. E. Remsburg gave "Sabbath Breaking" and "False Claims" in our Opera Hall, which so aroused the ire of some of the faithful that they determined to run Mr. Remsburg out of town if he attempted to lecture again. Well, the Freethinkers, knowing how given to lying these prophets are, decided to giv them a chance to hav the one prophecy fulfilled; so had Mr. Remsburg come back the 25th of March—and behold, the "Lord put a lying spirit into the mouth of the prophet," and the "son of Belial" again knocked the props from under the structure reared by superstition. Mr. Akers, the Christian minister, took exception to some statements of Mr. Remsburg in his lecture "False Claims," and after the lecturer had been gone three weeks, and was a thousand miles from here, issued a challenge in our local paper to debate. Mr. Remsburg, being duly notified by the secretary of the Secular Union, promptly came to the scratch, much to the consternation, I think, of Mr. Akers, who had to face the music, or back squarely out. He bravely came to the front, and for four nights the people had to listen to one of the most one-sided discussions since the Whitecaps used to take people from their beds at midnight, and with the Bible in one hand and a rope or shotgun in the other, "argyfy." Mr. Remsburg affirmed two nights the question, "The Bible is of human origin, and contains many historical and scientific errors, immoral teachings, and glaring contradictions," Akers denying. Two evenings following, Akers affirmed, "The Bible is of divine origin." From the very first start our J. E. Remsburg had a clean walk-over. Akers accused Freethinkers and Infidels, and the "whole lot," of being free lovers. It would hav brought joy to your heart and laughter to your lips to hav seen our J. E. Remsburg dispose of that fling. He stepped to the pulpit, and laying his hand upon the Bible, said, "You accuse Infidels of being free lovers, and charge that their teachings lead to a violation of the sexual relations"—then snatching the Bible and holding it between thumb and finger with countenance which indicated a fear of being smeared with something, exclaimed—"Do you read that book? Hav you heard of the saintly Solomon with his numerous wives and concubines? And the celestial David, the man after God's own heart? And do you then accuse Infidels of being free lovers?" Then giving the book a contemptuous fling, not even looking where it went, he continued, "Tell us we teach the violation of the sexual relations! Will the gentleman go with me to the penitentiaries and examin the records? If he will, I will agree to giv him $5 for every Infidel or Liberal he will find there, if he will giv me $1 for every clergyman sent up for violation of laws governing the relation of the sexes."

I am hopeful of getting some subscribers soon. I vote for the pictures, and will take a volume of them when it is ready. GEO. N. BIXLER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

A Little Visitor.

Somebody tum to us las' night,
The dearest little midget;
He's des as wee as he tan be;
He tum all by hisself, an' he
Des laughs, an' cries, an' winks at me,
An' keeps me in a fidget.

He des tum in from babyland,
The angels bwung him over;
And papa told me that he found
The little fellow on the ground,
An' he was sleeping des as sound
As I do, in the clover.

'Tourse I ain't sorry that he tum.
I's glad to see him—only
I wants some love and tisses, too;
For since he tum, they don't—boo—hoo!—
Play wis me like they ust to do,
An' I is awful lonely.

He's des bran new—an' that is why
They fuss about him! maybe;
An' papa said I musn't cwy
'Tause he'd det bigger by an' by,
But ain't he little now? Oh, my!—
He's only des a baby.

Dood dracious!—won't he ever stop?
I tan't hear nuffin near him.
No wonder all the angels thought
That they could spare this little tot—
He cwies so much, that's why they brought Him where they couldn't h'ar him!

—C. M. Snyder in Pittsburg Bulletin.

Composition about Boys.

[DEAR MISS WIXON: Here I am at your door again all covered with mud as usual. I hav brought my sister Mary along, and if you will not let us in we will love you just the same. What I want is for the boys to love the grand old TRUTH SEEKER or some Freethought paper, then this country will be safe. Come, boys, let us get right in and lift.—J. M. F.]

As boys and girls are the most important subjects in this world, I hav selected boys to write about. Boys belong to the animal world and are made of clay, which ought to account for their faces being muddy when it rains. The mud, too, is liable to get on a boy's clothes. When a boy wants to go forward he goes sideways—first one side is pushed ahead and then the other, and he goes most always on one end. Boys are the truck they make men of, and that will account for their looking some like boys, otherwise they might look like the devil. A boy has a knot on the up end of his body called a pericranium, or poll by the assessor, and his poll costs $4 every year in this county when he gets big. Some polls are no good.

Some boys (buoys) stay all the time in the water near rocks or harbors, and if the wind blows they sing. Most presidents hav been boys, and if a boy has a dirty face, knees out, and only one "gallis," the better president he will make. That is because he needs to be tough. Mr. Harrison is not much good. Bears like boys to eat, but lions will not eat a man if his name is Danyell. I like a boy that will not always mind, because he who obeys is a slave. Some day I will tell you what the world has gained by the heroic boys that would not mind. There is a fine place in Idaho called Boise City. You never heard of girls' city, did you? And then there is Manchester and Manhattan—lucky he had a hat on, old Comstock would hav had him long ago if he hadn't had something on. Mothers are said to love their boys the best. That is because they can get wood, milk the cow, and drudge. When a boy gets old he has made his mark in the world, and you can most generally tell by looking at the mark the kind of a boy he has been. A boy sometimes livs to the age of eighty or ninety years, but he is not a boy all this time, only the first twenty and the last twenty years of his life. Oh, it is fine to be a boy. JAS. M. FOSTER.

Elk Grove, Cal., Dec. 1, 1889.

MARY'S REPLY TO COMPOSITION ABOUT BOYS.

I want to say a few words about boys that James seems to hav forgotten. I am pretty sure boys came up from the lower animals. I can only giv you a few hints why I think so. Where did boys get such a foolish play as leapfrog? Can any boy tell how old that play is? Did you ever notice how boys take to water in the spring? Do you know when doctors want to learn anything about boys they get a frog and dissect it, and then they know all about boys. Funny, is it not?—only it's a little tough on the frogs. "Girls ain't done nothing, oh, no." Well, we'll see. Ida Ho (Idaho) is a thousand times larger than Boise City. He can see Manchester, but he cannot see Victoria. There is a state in this Union called the Mother of Presidents. Did you ever hear of a state called the father of presidents? Did he never hear of Miss Ala Bama (Alabama)? Then there is the Carolina girls, and Callie Fornia (California), and Miss Flora Day (Florida), and the two Misses, Mississippi and Missouri, and little Rhoda Island, and Louisiana, and dear Minne Sota, and sweet Ori Gon (Oregon), and there is my Maryland—dear old Maryland with her lovely daughter Anna Polis. Why, this country is overflowing with splendid girls. Why, look at the Pacific girls, there. Why, you ought to thank Miss Gaute Mala every morning of this life for that delicious cup of coffee made by a lady's hand, so delicious as only a mother or a sister knows how to make. There is Miss Allie Meda and Amy Door (Amador county), Callie Varis (Calavaris county), and Mary Posey. Yes, and we hav a saint, too—Santa Clara."

James (rising): "We hav more Saints in California and Mexico than they hav harps for up there."

Teacher: "James, sit down!"

"Why, the largest river on this continent is a lady, Miss——"

James here interrupts, saying: "Father of Waters! Father of Waters!"

Mary: "Miss doesn't stand for father—nothing stands for father—but the old cow and her calf would, too, if father were here."

James sits down.

"The largest river in South America bears a lady's name, Amy Zone. They say, 'Girls ain't done much'—oh, no. The horrid wretches! What won't they claim nex'! 'The hand that rocks the cradle moves the world.' And a boy was never known to rock the cradle five minutes at a time in his life."

James (rising): "Take me to the Isle of Man."

Mary: "Take me to mother."

Elk Grove, Cal. MARY V. FOSTER.

His Very Own.

Little Tommy passes for a very practical youth. The other day his Uncle John brought him, as a birthday present, a "word game," which Tommy had never played, and which did not seem to be particularly attractiv to him.

Nevertheless Tommy thanked his uncle; and by and by, edging around his chair, he asked:

"Say, Uncle John?"

"Well?"

"This game truly belongs to me now, don't it?"

"Why, of course."

"To do just what I want with it?"

"Certainly."

"Then I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll sell it to you for ten cents."—Youth's Companion.

Correspondence.

PAGOLET, S. C., March 10, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As Sister Essie is writing to you about religious Joe, I want to write too. I am ten years old. I hav the "Story Hour" and love to read it. And I sometimes read the godly books too. I love to read about old Abraham and his sheep, and goats, and about old Mrs. Lot stewing herself down to salt as mamma makes soap, and about the children going through the river. Of course I don't think that God wrote it. But it sounds funny to me. I must close.

Yours truly, MELLIE THOMASON.

WEXFORD, PA., Feb 24, 1890.

DEAR AUNT SUSIE: I suppose you will think I hav forgotten to write. It has been two years since I wrote to you. Harry and I go to school every day when we are well. We hav a good teacher this winter. His name is Mr. A. E. Stevenson. He boards at our place. The directors tried to put him out because he was a Freethinker, but as that was all the fault he had, they could not do it. Grandma was seventy-four years old on the 21st, and she is as smart as some at sixty. Uncle Andrew Beveridge will be sixty-four years old on the 19th of March, and he is going to hav a party. We each hav a present for him. I will write again soon.

I send you one of my name cards.

From your little friend.

EFFIE J. PEARCE.

[Thanks, Effie, dear, for the little flower card. It is very pretty.—ED. C. C.]

PAGOLET, S. C., March 10, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I want to tell my little Liberal friends about a negro boy that we hav. His name is Joe Tucker; he is fourteen years old, has a bony face, long mouth, flat nose, wears a cap that comes down over his ears, chews gum, and carries milk to supply mamma's customers. When he first came here he was very religious, prayed to Jesus, and thought us very wicked to speak hard things against the Bible; but, one day, my sister, Zeelemina, told him that Christians say the Bible teaches that when one got to heaven, if he should see his mother in hell, he could smile at her punishment. Joe said "that if the Bible taught that, it tells a cussed infernal lie!" And since that time Joe does not pray so much, and says but little about Jesus.

I am going to school; am thirteen years old, and love the Children's Corner very much, and love all of your books. "Apples of Gold" is the best book I ever read.

ESSIE THOMASON.

WHEELING, W. VA., March 1, 1890.

DEAR AUNT SUSAN: I heard you were in Washington and saw Mrs. Lyndall. She stopped here on her way home. She told us that you said for me to write again, and not to forget you. Thanks to you for requesting us to write to you.

Mrs. Lyndall read the poetry you composed and read in the convention. It was grand.

I hav been reading about the Washington monument.

We are having very cool weather here.

I am studying phrenology.

Well, the church bells are making so much noise I can hardly write.

My pa and Mr. E. A. Watkins are going to hav a debate this evening. The subject will be, "Is the God of the Bible the God of the Universe?" They are going to hav it in the G. A. R. Hall. We went to the debate last night. The hall was well filled, and the audience was deeply interested throughout. They are going to hav another next Sunday evening. Subject: "Resolved, That the Constitution Should be so Amended as to Recognize the Christian's God and that a Strict Observance of the Christian Sabbath Should be Enforced." E. A. Watkins affirms and pa denies. We expect a good time, for it is an important subject.

My sister will write before long. I would like some more of the Liberal boys and girls to write to me. Good-bye.

Respectfully yours,

ORLO INGERSOLL NOE.

MOODY, TEX., March 10, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: It is with a sad heart that I write a few lines to the Children's Corner, to let them know the sad news of my loving father's death. He died March 1st and was buried March 2d, 1890. This is my second letter to the Children's Corner. I wrote one last summer. I told you that my grandma and pa were sick. Grandma died the 14th of November, 1889. Oh, children, you don't know how we miss our loved ones, unless you hav had a trial of it. Pa had not been able to do a day's work for ten months. He suffered a great deal till the last two days. He died easy. He said he didn't want us to grieve after him. He said when he was dead he would be at rest. Father was a plain, straight, and Liberal man. He loved to read THE TRUTH SEEKER and thought it was a good paper. Our time is out for the paper now, and as we are not able to pay for it ma says she will hav it stopped coming, and I am sorry. Brother George and I liked to look at the pictures and read the funny pieces in the good old TRUTH SEEKER. My uncle, Frank Fitch, has spent the winter with us. He was lots of company to his poor sick brother and stayed by him till the last. He is going to stay with us this summer. I don't know how we could do without him, for he is so good and kind to all of us. Oh, dear little children, be good and kind to your parents, for you may be left fatherless or motherless some day. And you will hav enough to think about anyway. I am eleven years of age and my brother is fifteen. I am going to school and hav a good teacher. Her name is Miss Sallie Denton. I remain a true Liberal friend, ALLIE FITCH.

TWELVE
samples of our Black Silk Dress Patterns
FREE to any lady who will mail her address on a postal card to
O. S. CHAFFEE & SON,
Mansfield Centre, Conn.

O. S. Chaffee & Son are manufacturers of the finest and best Black Silk Dress Goods made, and they ship direct from their mills to individuals, hence in buying from them you get all the profits usually made by the store. Buy of them and get a perfect dress.

1 16

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.
Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid, for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
tf

Agents for the Truth Seeker.

CALIFORNIA.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco, Cal.
Dr. J. L. York, San Jose, Cal.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearny st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

CANADA.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
W. B. Cooke, 170 1-2 Yonge st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
Knowles, Cor. George and Granville st., Halifax, N. S.

COLORADO.
J. G. Jenkins, 400 Arapahoe st., Denver.

FLORIDA.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

IDAHO.
A. Erwin, Murray.

ILLINOIS.
Post-office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
E. A. Stevens, 558 West Madison st., Room 1, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 302 State street, and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 56 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

INDIANA.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
F. P. Monroe, postmaster, Dunkirk.

LOUISIANA.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Joseph Marsh, Northampton
Johnson Bro's 5 N. Main st., Fall River.

MICHIGAN.
A. Atwood, Eaton Rapids.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, 138 S. Division St., Grand Rapids.
Swan & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Horace Haynes, Leslie.

MISSOURI.
Phillip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Lang & Co., 709 Olive st., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Eaton & Smith, 1234 O st., Lincoln.

NEW YORK.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
M. B. Edinger, 1243 Third ave., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, cor. Fulton and Nassau st., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.

OHIO.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior street, Cleveland.
Van Epps & Co., 259 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Emory P. Robinson, Sydney.

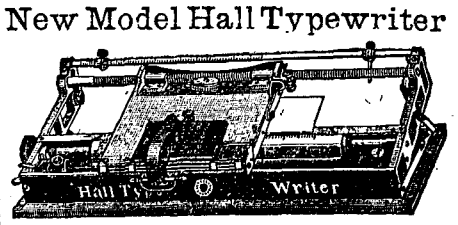
OREGON.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
C. H. Wilcox, Portland.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 1106 Leopard st., Phila.
W. F. Schade, 3.706 Butler street, Pittsburgh.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.

TENNESSEE.
Wm. B. Fisher, 331 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

TEXAS.
L. Andruss, Denison.
F. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
H. S. Kratz, 306 Houston st., Fort Worth.

UTAH.
James Ashman, Salt Lake City.
W. F. Reybould, Salt Lake City.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.



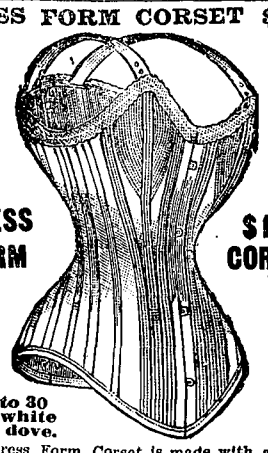
WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
W. Wedeken, Montesano.

ENGLAND.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet street, London.
Progressiv Pub. Co., 28 Stonecutter st., London, E. C.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

AUSTRALIA.
Mrs. J. Hadfield, Park st., Sydney, N.S.W.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N. S. W.

NEW ZEALAND.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

New Model Hall Typewriter



The Best Standard Typewriter in the World.
Cheap, Portable, No Ink Ribbon, Interchangeable Type in all Languages, Easiest to learn and rapid as any. Agents wanted everywhere.
WARRANTED AS REPRESENTED. Address
National Typewriter Co.,
10 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. P. O. box 5159.
Send for catalog and specimens of work.
13t10

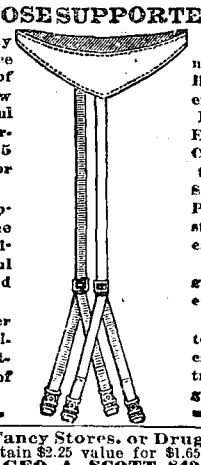
GIVEN AWAY WITH

DR. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC CORSET

To introduce Dr. Scott's beautiful new Electric High Hip, Dress Form and Summer Corsets to the readers of this paper, The Pall Mall Electric Association of London and New York will, until further notice, make the following inducements: If you cannot get these Corsets at your nearest stores remit at once for one of our High Hip Corsets at $1.25, or a Dress Form or Summer Corset at $1.50, accompanied by 15cts. for postage, mentioning this paper, and we will send you FREE with the Corset, postpaid, a Set of our Patent Gored Belt Hose Supporters retailing at 50cts., and a copy of that eminently interesting work, "The Doctor's Story," price 25cts., or a choice of Dr. Scott's 50ct. Electric Hair Curler or two of Dr. Scott's Electric Plasters instead of the Supporters. This special offer to run for limited period only, so that all feeling inclined to accept it should do so at once and not delay. Address DR. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

DRESS FORM CORSET $1.50.

DRESS FORM $1.50 CORSET.



18 to 30 in. white and dove.

This Dress Form Corset is made with shoulder straps, detachable in sizes from 18 to 30 inches, dove and white. It is fitted with our patent combination spinal supporting back, invaluable to all Ladies. A beautiful silver-plated compass accompanies each corset, with which to test its power Price, $1.50, and 15c. for postage, with free premium.

HIGH HIP CORSET, $1.25.

It is made of fine Alexandria cloth, dove and white, in size 18 to 30 inches; it is unusually strong and durable; a perfect fit; it possesses strong Electro-Magnetic curative qualities, and as such is cheap at $5.00. It has our patent combination spinal supporting back, invaluable to all ladies. Price, $1.25, with 15c. for postage, and the premium free.

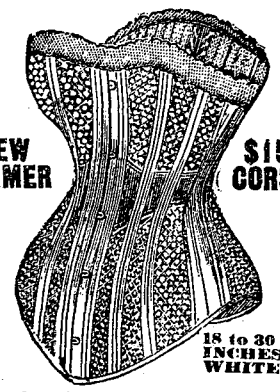
THESE HOSE SUPPORTERS FREE to every Lady remitting price of either of these three new and beautiful Electric Corsets, with 15 cents extra for postage.

These Supporters are the most convenient and useful kind made and sell at 50cts.



State whether Lady's or Children's is wanted, and size of waist.

Any person not desiring Hose Supporters can select Dr. SCOTT'S Electric Hair CURLER, or two of Dr. Scott's Electric PLASTERS instead, value of each, 50cts.

We want a good agent in every town.

☞ Send for terms. FREE catalogue illustrating all our goods.

SUMMER CORSET, $1.50.

A NEW SUMMER $150 CORSET.

18 to 30 INCHES WHITE.

This is a beautiful Electric Summer Corset, made of extra strong and fine quality Nottingham net out of double thickness. It has a girdle-shaped waist-band which firmly secures the material preventing stretching and getting out of shape. It is made in white only, 18 to 30 inches. Has our patent spinal back invaluable to ladies. Price, $1.50, and 15c. for postage with free premium.

If you cannot obtain them at your Dry Goods or Fancy Stores, or Druggists, we will mail any Corset including either premium, postpaid on receipt of price with 15cts. for postage added. You thus obtain $2.25 value for $1.65 only. Agents Wanted. Remit by post-office money order, draft check, currency or stamps in registered letter payable to GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 BROADWAY, NEW YORK. Mention this paper.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.

PRICE, TEN CENTS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Giordano Bruno.

His Life, Works, Worth, Martyrdom, Portrait, and Monument.

With a complete list of the American subscribers to the fund for the erection of the monument.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, THOMAS DAVIDSON, THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, KARL BLIND, LYDIA R. CHASE.

Single copies 15 cents; ten copies for a dollar.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price, 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.
tf

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER,

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photo-engravings of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 40c.; with autograph, 50 cts.

ROMANISM,

OR

DANGER AHEAD.

The Reason Why a Good Roman Catholic Cannot be a Good Citizen of this Republic.

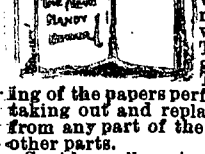
By A. J. GROVER.

Price, paper, 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.



It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BINDER for THE TRUTH SEEKER

For the benefit of our readers who preserve their papers we offer a new style of binder, made for the purpose, and with the heading of THE TRUTH SEEKER printed in gold letters on the outside. This binder allows the opening of the papers perfectly flat. It also allows the taking out and replacing of one or more papers from any part of the file without disturbing the other parts.

Sent by mail, postpaid, for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
tf 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

FREETHOUGHT

IS IT

DESTRUCTIVE OR CONSTRUCTIVE?

A SYMPOSIUM

BY

COL. R. G. INGERSOLL, R. B. WESTBROOK, CAPT. R. C. ADAMS,
E. B. FOOTE, Jr., SALADIN (W. Stewart Ross), L. K. WASHBURN,
H. O. PENTECOST, GEO. E. MACDONALD, SUSAN H. WIXON,
E. C. WALKER, SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, F. M. HOLLAND,
LUCY N. COLMAN, PARKER PILLSBURY, MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL,
C. B. REYNOLDS, CHARLES WATTS, J. H. BURNHAM,
W. F. JAMIESON, THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.

SUBJECTS OF PAPERS:

Is there an Affirmative, Positive, Constructive side to Freethought?
If not, the reason why?
If there be, in what, in your opinion, does it consist, and in what should it consist?

PRICE 25 CENTS.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

ASTHMA—CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE. DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

THE

CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:

THEIR

Crimes and Persecutions.

8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religions, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

BIBLE INQUIRER;

OR,

A Key to Bible Investigation.

Containing 148 Propositions
With References to the most Plain and Striking Self-Contradictions of the so-called Inspired Scriptures.

BY A. JACOBSON.

Third edition, carefully revised and enlarged.

Every Liberal needs a copy for ready reference. As a pamphlet to loan to Christian friends, it is the most effectiv Iconoclast ever published.

Price only 25 cents.

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 533pp., silk cloth, $3.

Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Reign of the Stoics.

THEIR

History, Religion, Philosophy, and Maxims of Self-Control, Self-Culture, Benevolence, and Justice.

With Citations of Authors Quoted from on Each Page.

BY FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.

Read the philosophers, and learn how to make life happy, seeking useful precepts and brave and noble words which may become deeds.—Seneca.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

This book shows that many Christians might learn much from these ancient heathen.—American Bookseller.

One of the most valuable helps for those who would understand the character of human progress in all ages.—National Quarterly Review.

The author has shown himself a diligent student, an ardent admirer, and a faithful interpreter, of some of the most remarkable monuments of ancient thinking.—New York Tribune.

Reading this book, we find the doctrins of the Stoics to be almost identical with the views held by the broadest and most enlightened minds of the present day.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Lecky says of Marcus Aurelius: "The purest and gentlest spirit of all the pagan world." Merivale says: "Of all the line the noblest and dearest." Taine says: "The noblest soul that ever lived." John Stuart Mill says: "He preserved through life not only the most unblemished justice, but the tenderest heart."

Extra Cloth, 12mo, 248 pp., $1.25.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York

The Candle from Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

ON THE WORD GOD.

By Milton Woolley, M.D., Author of "Hebrew Mythology," "The Career of Jesus Christ."

The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. —[Ps. xiv, 1.

Children and fools speak the truth.—[Old Saw.

Paper, 12mo, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Every Liberal Should Read

THE BIBLE AND EVOLUTION.

By ARTHUR B. MOSS.

WITH PREFACE BY DR. HARDWICKE.

INTRODUCTION.

Chapter I, Bible Astronomy and Evolution; Chapter II, Bible Biology and Evolution; Chapter III, Bible Myths and Evolution; Chapter IV, Bible History and Evolution; Chapter V, Bible Morality and Evolution; Chapter VI, Bible Miracles and Evolution; Chapter VII, Miracles Incredible; Chapter VIII Bible Poetry and Evolution; Chapter IX, Bible Art and Evolution; Chapter X, Bible God and Evolution; Chapter XI, Soul and Future and Evolution; Chapter XII, Heaven Hereafter; Chapter XIII, Conclusion.

Handsomely bound in cloth. Price $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Brad augh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

Obituary.

On Sunday night, March 31st, James Allen, one of our oldest and most highly respected citizens, passed gently away in death. Father Allen has been an outspoken Freethinker for over a third of a century, and had been a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER for fifteen or more years. He put to flight the Christian fanatic's idea of a Liberal's death, and died as serenely and happily as any Christian who ever lived, remaining firm and steadfast to his convictions in religious matters.

Prof. F. S. Reefy, editor of the Elyria, O., Democrat, an able Liberal, conducted the funeral, at the oft-repeated request of the deceased. Mr. Reefy was listened to with marked attention by the neighbors, friends, and kindred of Father Allen, and one and all, Christian as well as Liberal, spoke highly of his address.

Father Allen and the writer were the only two Liberals in this community who were readers of your paper, and now I am left alone, although we hav a score or more Liberals in this community. You can depend on me remaining a subscriber as long as I liv; and as I am yet a young man, it may be for a long time. Long liv THE TRUTH SEEKER! May she continue to send forth red-hot shots of truth for universal mental freedom, is the prayer of Yours respectfully,

Wilmot, O. E. W. SPIDELL.

Cyrus Fillmore passed away in his eighty-eighth year. He was a brother of the ex-president. He was a stanch Liberal, and a constant reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER; fearless and outspoken in defense of the principles he so firmly advocated. He was a priest-hater. He gave never a dollar for the church, but to the needy and those that were worthy he was a liberal giver. He was a man that did right because it was right, not because he was afraid of the resurrection in another world. He took the precaution to make arrangements a year before his death for his funeral. He selected Dr. Furgeson, a Materialist, to preach his sermon. His remains were followed to his resting-place by a large concourse of people. He leaves a host of friends to mourn his loss.

ROME OR REASON

A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience.

By NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS.

A very critical analysis of both Protestantism and Catholicism, from the vantage-ground of an intimate personal experience with the two systems. It deals the most trenchant blows which pure logic is capable of inflicting.—[Critical Review.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.75.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE
FREETHINKER'S MAGAZINE

For April is a valuable number. The contents are as follows:

Picture of Girard College.—Too much Clericalism. By B. F. Underwood.—Warriors and Scientists. By Nellie Booth Simmons.—Unreported Scenes in Paris and Florence. By G. J. Holyoake.—The Gods (Continued). By Robert G. Ingersoll.—Looking Backward. By Zoa Topsis.—Reminiscences (Continued). By Lucy N. Colman.

Literary Department: The Tenant. By Carol. Cathcart Day.—The "Frizzletop" Papers, No. 1. By J. Edd Leslie.—Monism and Agnosticism. By Dr. Edmund Montgomery.—Liberalism in New York and Brooklyn, No. 2. By H. J. Clark.—Dividing Matter from Spirit. By L. M. Wilson.—Do Spirits Hav Teeth? By Henry Snarp.

Editorial Department: Elizabeth Hannah Church. An Obituary Notice (with Portrait).—The Women's Convention.—All Sorts.—Book Review.

Copies for sale at the Truth Seeker Office. Price, 20 cents.

SCIENCE VERSUS RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

BY T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SAKYA BUDDHA.

A Versified, Annotated Narrativ of his Life and Teachings.

With Citations from Buddha's "Path of Virtue."

BY E. D. BOOT.

I take pleasure in speaking in praise of this work.—Prof. J. M. Peebles.

The book has been introduced into Buddhist schools in Ceylon. The "Banner of Light," "Religio-Philosophical Journal," and many Spiritualist papers and lecturers hav spoken highly of the book.

Extra Cloth, 175 pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Essence of Religion.

By L. FEUERBACH.

Translated from the German. Cloth, 12mo, 75pp.; 50 cts.

The truth-teller is ill-mannered, therefore immoral.—Extract.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

PIONEER PITH.

THE GIST OF LECTURES ON RATIONALISM.

By CAPT. R. C. ADAMS, President of Montreal Pioneer Freethought Club; author of "Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason," and "Evolution—A Summary of Evidence."

A compendium of scientific and critical lore. Best handbook for introducing the general reader to the principles and data on which Rationalism is based.

Paper, 12mo, 100pp., 25 cents.

EVOLUTION THEORY.

Three lectures by PROF. THOS. H. HUXLEY.

Paper, 10 cents.

Thirty DISCUSSIONS, BIBLE STORIES, ESSAYS, and LECTURES.

By D. M. BENNETT.

Pap., 700pp., 75 cents.

BENNETT-TEED DISCUSSION.

"Jesus the Lord God, Creator of Heaven and Earth."

By D. M. BENNETT and REV. MR. TEED.

Paper, 30 cents.

BESANT-HATCHARD DEBATE.

BETWEEN

ANNIE BESANT AND REV. A. HATCHARD

ON

Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity.

Price, 25 cents.

BIBLE BALANCED.

Comparing the Bible's Best Teachings and Sayings with those of Philosophers who Lived previous to Bible Authors.

By G. C. DARLING.

Paper, - - - 50 cents.

BIBLE FABRICATIONS REFUTED.

Errors Exposed.

By O. B. WHITFORD, M.D.

Price, 15 cents.

BIBLE MORALS.

TWENTY CRIMES and VICES Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS in the United States and Canada.

By M. E. BILLINGS.

Price, . . . 25 cents.

BUDDHIST NIHILISM.

By MAX MULLER, M.A.

Price, 10 cents.

GOLDEN MEAN in Temperance and Religion.

By JOHN E. BURTON.

Price, 10 cents.

INSPIRATION OF BIBLES.

By JNO. E. BURTON.

Price, 10 cents.

Christianity and Materialism.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 15 cents.

CHRISTIANITY A REWARD FOR CRIME.

By O. B. WHITFORD, M.D.

Price, 10 cents.

CHRISTIANITY from a SCIENTIFIC and HISTORICAL STANDPOINT.

By W. N. MCLAREN.

Paper, 50 cents.

Chronicles of Simon Christianus.

Adventures in the Land of Cosmos. New Scripture (evidently inspired). Discovered by I. N. FIDEL and A. HOOK.

Price, 25 cents.

THE CRISIS.

By THOMAS PAINE.

Written during the American Revolution, and by order of General Washington read to the army.

Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75.

CULTIVATION OF ART.

ITS RELATIONS TO

RELIGIOUS PURITANISM AND MONEY-GETTING.

By A. R. COOPER.

Paper, 20 c.; flexible clo., 35.

THE DARWINS. A Domestic Radical Romance. By Mrs. E. D. Slenker.

Pap., 50c.; clo., 75.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

EVOLUTION:

A SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE.

By CAPT. R. C. ADAMS.

"One of the cheapest and best books on the subject."

Paper, 15 cents.

Advancement of Science

The Belfast Address.

By PROF. JOHN TYNDALL.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69pp., 10 cents.

AGE OF REASON.

INVESTIGATION OF

TRUE AND FABULOUS THEOLOGY.

By THOMAS PAINE.

Paper, 8vo, 152 pages, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

With EXAMINATION OF THE PROPHECIES, pap. 40c.

ALAMONTADA,
THE GALLEY SLAVE.

By J. H. D. ZSCHOKKE.

"A philosophical romance."

Paper, 25 cents.

LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRIN.

Being a chapter from "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Paper, 8vo, 170pp., 25 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions and Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT.

Paper, 146pp., 25 cents.

AWFUL DISCLOSURES OF MARIA MONK.

CONVENT MYSTERIES.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, 15 cents.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

better than

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, 10 cents.

ROARING LION ON THE TRACK.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, 10 cents.

SUPERSTITION:

RELIGION OF

"BELIEVE OR BE DAMNED."

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, 15 cents.

Why Don't God Kill the Devil?

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, 25 cents.

THE CLERGYMAN'S VICTIMS.

A LIBERAL STORY. By Mrs. J. E. Ball.

Price, 25 cents.

JESUS CHRIST:

His LIFE,

TEACHINGS, and IMPERFECTIONS.

By W. S. BELL.

Price, 25 cents.

RESURRECTION of JESUS:

CONTRADICTIONS Involved In.

By W. S. BELL.

Price, 10 cents.

FIRST EPISTLE of

BENNETT, Apostle, to TRUTH SEEKERS.

By D. M. BENNETT.

Price, 10 cents.

GODS OF SUPERSTITION.

By D. M. BENNETT.

Price, 8 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

BURGESS-UNDERWOOD DEBATE

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80.

COMMON SENSE.

By THOMAS PAINE.

Written in 1776.

Price, . . . 15 cents.

Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 10 cents.

IS AMERICA THE NEW WORLD?

By L. L. DAWSON.

Price, . . 10 cents.

DEACON SKIDMORE'S LETTERS.

(Zion Hill Baptist.) His Evolution out of Christianity. By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75.

ECCE DIABOLUS.

Jehovah-Worship and Devil-Worship Identical—i.e., Bloody Sacrifices and Burnt Offerings.

By the Very Rev. Evan Davies, Arch-Druid of Great Britain.

Price, . . 25 cents.

RELIGIOUS POSITIVISM;

OR, POSITIVIST CALENDAR. Brief Exposition of the Comtean System.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50.

Eight Scientific Tracts.

EVOLUTION, DARWINISM, etc.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD and others.

Price, 20 cents.

EPIDEMIC DELUSIONS.

By F. R. MARVIN, M.D.

Price, 10 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, 10 cents.

ESSAYS AND LECTURES.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Paper, 300pp., 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

By T. E. LONGSHORE.

50c., 50c. per doz., 25 for $1.

THE UNSEEN WORLD.

By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

Price, 10 cents.

GOSPEL OF ATHEISM.

By ANNIE BESANT.

Price, 10 cents.

GOTTLIEB: HIS LIFE.

A Romance of Earth, Heaven, and Hell.

By S. P. PUTNAM.

Price, 25 cents.

Heathens of the Heath.

RADICAL ROMANCE.

By WM. MCDONNELL.

500pp., paper, 80 cents.

HOLY BIBLE ABRIDGED.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Pap., 30c.; clo., 50.

THE

LOGIC OF DEATH,

OR,

WHY SHOULD THE ATHEIST FEAR TO DIE?

By J. G. HOLYOAKE.

Price, 5 cents.

THE

LOGIC OF LIFE,

DEDUCED FROM

THE PRINCIPLE OF FREETHOUGHT.

By G. J. HOLYOAKE.

Price, 5 cents.

Secular Responsibility

By G. J. HOLYOAKE.

Price, 5 cents.

GENESIS I, II:

BIBLE NARRATIVE OF CREATION

By A. R. GROTE, A.M.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A History of

ALL THE WOMEN WHO FIGURE IN THE BIBLE.

BY

An Ungodly Woman of the XIXth Century.

Pap., 50c.; clo., 75.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I., and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two Volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

Thirty Discussions, Bible Stories, Essays, and Lectures. 700 pages. Paper covers, 75 cents;

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity, between D. M. BENNETT and Rev. G. H. HUMPHREY. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. BENNETT and CYRUS ROMULUS R. TEED. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents;

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. BENNETT and G. M. MAIR, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion.

2. Miracles and supernatural achievements hav been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus.

3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history.

BENNETT affirms; MAIR denies. This is an exhaustiv discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This givs a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon MR. BENNETT. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cents.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist Church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. Cloth, $1.00

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

The Great Religions of the World. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Sinful Saints and Sensual Shepherds. 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

W. S. BELL'S PAMPHLETS.

LIBERTY AND MORALITY.

PRICE, 15 CENTS.

Accept my thanks for your excellent and useful discourse.—James Parton.

I am much pleased with your address, and will notice it in Man.—T. B. Wakeman.

A beautiful pamphlet of 36 pages. It is a very able paper, and deserves wide dissemination.—The Age.

ANTI PROHIBITION.

PRICE, 20 CENTS.

The number of heads under which you hav divided the subject matter of the pamphlet, and the concise manner in which the point is discussed, should be highly commended. Therefore I take great pleasure in recommending "Anti-Prohibition" to the consideration of every person who is interested, not only in the cause of temperance, but in the principles of self-government.—J. J. McCabe.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LIFE OF Joshua Davidson:

MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,

As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.

BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,

Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.

Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.

☞ This book was suppressed by the first American publisher. ☜

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE NEW GOD.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,

Secretary of the American Secular Union.

Price 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE SAFEST CREED,

AND

TWELVE OTHER DISCOURSES OF REASON.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

Extra cloth, 12mo, 238pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR BOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Career of Jesus Christ.

An Exposition of the True Meaning of this Character as described in the New Testament. By Milton Woolley, M.D., author of "Hebrew Mythology." Paper, 8vo, 25 cents.

SPECIAL SALE OF WATCHES AND DIAMONDS.

Good American Nickel Stem-winders, $2.50, $4, $6. Best grades in silverine case, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; adjusted, $16. For 3 ounce coin silver case, add $3.50; 4 ounce, $4.50; 5 ounce, $6. In best open-face filled gold, dust-proof case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; adjusted, $24.50; hinged cases, $3 more; hunting cases, $6 more.

The New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

All modern improvements: in silverine, $19; 3 ounce coin silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25. BEST open-face filled screw case, $27; hinged, $30; hunting, $26; Louis XIV style, $2 to $10 more. Ladies' best gold filled, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18.50; 15 jewels, $25; adjusted, $35; 14 kt solid gold, $10 to $20 more. Ruby and diamond ornamentations up to $100 extra.

DIAMONDS.

An elegant 3 stone, 8kt., solitaire pin and drops, $600, worth $900; a magnificent hair ornament and pin and pendant combination, rosette, 29 brilliants, $200, worth $300; one do., heart-shape, sapphire and ruby in center, same price and value. Pins, rings, drops, studs, from $300 down to $10; same proportionate discounts. All bought before late advance.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Admission free. Discussions follow lectures.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston,

Meets every Sunday (from October to June) at 2:45 P.M., at Paine Memorial Building, Appleton street.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,

Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

HISTORY OF THE INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT Of Europe.

Revised Edition—2 vols—Price, $3.

By JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER, M.D., LL.D.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indescretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

Inquiries are frequently received asking what we know about Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, N. J. First, we know that he is a reliable gentleman of rare professional skill, who has earned success by good work. Second that he fulfills all his agreements to the letter. Third, that he has performed cures of hopeless cases that in the olden time his skill would have been called miraculous. Fourth, and last, we know him to be an honest man and a stanch Liberal.—The Better Way.

News of the Week.

THE need of moral instruction in schools is pointed out by the Paris inspectors of child labor. who after visiting factories say: "The lack of moral instruction among these children is very painful. To all our questions about their duties to the family, to society, to their country, they responded poorly, or not at all."

SAMUEL J. RANDALL died last Sunday morning.

FRENCH scientists and engineers are contemplating a railway across Sahara.

IN Spain Carlist and anti-Carlist feeling is causing conflicts between troops and the people.

THE Iowa legislature is much exercised over prohibition, or restriction, of the liquor traffic.

BISMARCK'S seventy-fifth birthday was celebrated with many honors from the German people.

STANLEY thinks the Germans are getting too much of Africa, and that England should hav more.

ANOTHER attempt has been made on the czar's life, and he has been forced to giv up an intended trip.

AT Rome on the 13th a meeting of unemployed workmen used such anarchical language that the police dispersed them.

THE Farmers' Alliance in Georgia wants the government to build warehouses in which farmers may store their grain, obtaining loans thereon.

IN Russia the demand for a constitution and a parliament has secured support in the czar's private circle, and he may accede hoping to end the attempts on his life.

ON May 1st there will be great labor demonstrations in nearly all the European countries, with agitation in favor of eight hours. That dav may be made an annual labor holiday in Europe.

IN Boston British-Americans and Irish-Americans are engaged in a wrangle that arose from the presentation by the former of a United States flag to a public school, which the Irish scholars resented.

ON the 8th tornadoes did damage at several places in Michigan, and Norwalk, O. It visited Illinois, with less violence. Buildings were blown down and a church steeple or two taken off. One or two lives were lost, and a number were injured.

THE recent Methodist conference at New York passed resolutions against the Secularization of the common school education. "Purely secular education," say the resolutions, "is impossible in a land whose literature, history, and laws are the product of a Christian civilization. Christian citizens must deny the right of the state to assume to giv such an inadequate education."

AT Vienna on the 8th a meeting of strikers came into conflict with the police, whom they stoned. The rioters then damaged some buildings, but were dispersed by cavalry and infantry. Many civilians and fourteen police were hurt. Later, 8,000 unemployed men held a meeting, and demolished a police guard room, set fire to a spirit shop, kept the fire service away, and sacked several Jews' shops. At night rain fell, and helped the troops to disperse the rioters.

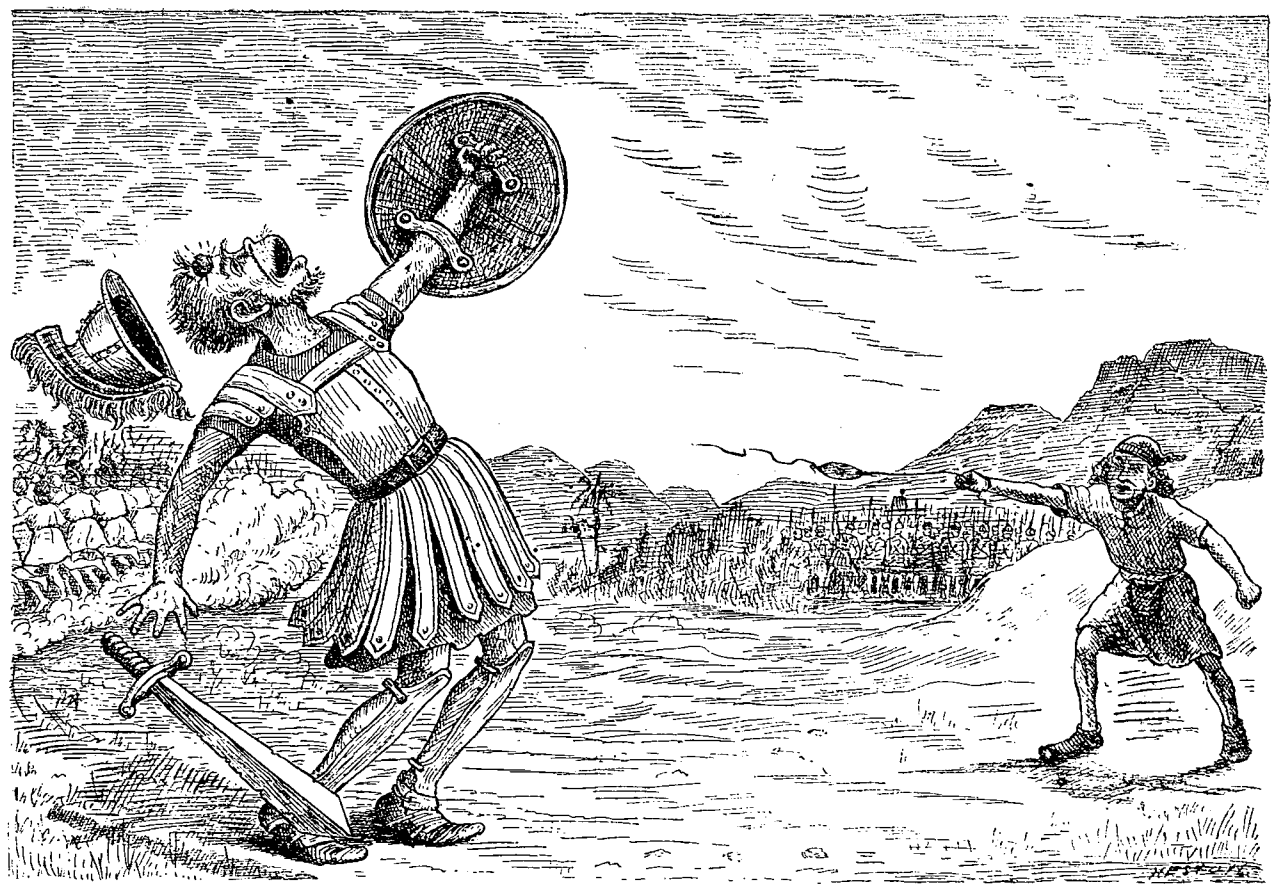
THE provisional government of Brazil, having decreed all the great popular measures demanded by the people, is now trying to avoid the danger and inconvenience that attended the adoption of the American Constitution. They hav nominated a number of well-known specialists to frame a constitution which is to be presented to the constituent assembly. The republic is composed of states, federal districts, provinces, and territories. The government is representativ, federal, and republican. Each state shall be governed by its own laws. The federal government shall guarantee to all a republican form of government. The federal government shall interfere in the government of the states only for the purpose of guaranteeing a republican form of government, the sanction of sentences of the federal courts, and in case of rebellion. In the last-named contingency a state of siege may be proclaimed and the federal power will assume the government until the cause of the trouble be removed. Provinces are to be regularly organized political bodies that require pecuniary assistance from the supreme federal government.

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.



WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

DAVID KNOCKETH GOLIATH OUT.

So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone, and smote the Philistine, and slew him; but there was no sword in the hand of David.—1 Sam. xvii, 50.

THE

Truth Seeker Annual

—AND—

Freethinkers' Almanac,

1890.

(E. M. 290.)

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Calendar for 1890,	5
Freethought in the United States, 1889,	17
Faded Flowers. Poem by J. E. Remsburg,	24
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue. T. B. Wakeman,	26
Mostly Fools. W. Stewart Ross (Saladin),	36
Record of the Spanish Inquisition,	44
Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas,	44
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral. Helen H. Gardener,	45
The Middle Ages. Illustrated,	69
The Priest,	70
The Supernatural World,	71
The Reformation,	73
Future Terrors,	77
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated,	79
Freethought Journals in the United States,	96
In Search of a Spirit. E. M. Macdonald,	97
Why I Left the Church. H. O. Pentecost,	109

NEW YORK:

PUBLISHED AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Gems of Thought.

EVEN in countries said to be free, it is in vain to look for that freedom which violates none of the natural rights of man, and which secures indefeasible possession and uncontroled exercise. On the contrary, the liberty existing there, founded upon a positiv right unequally shared, confers upon an individual prerogativs greater or less according to the town which he inhabits, the class in which he is born, the fortune he possesses, or the trade he may exercise. In these countries, however, civil and personal liberty are guaranteed by the law. If man be not all that he ought to be, still the dignity of his nature is not totally degraded; some of his rights are at least acknowledged; it can no longer be said of him that he is a slave, but only that he does not yet know how to become truly free.—Condorcet.

THIS is not liberty which we can hope for, that no grievance ever should arise in the commonwealth, that let no man in this world expect; but when complaints are freely heard, deeply considered, and speedily reformed, then is the utmost bound of civil liberty obtained that wise men look for.—Milton.

THE author of a great reformation is almost always unpopular in his own age. He generally passes his life in disquiet and danger. It is therefore for the interest of the human race that the memory of such men should be held in reverence, and that they should be supported against the scorn and hatred of their contemporaries by the hope of leaving a great and imperishable name. To go on the forlorn hope of truth is a service of peril. Who will undertake it, if it be not also a service of honor? It is easy enough, after the ramparts are carried, to find men to plant the flag on the highest tower. The difficulty is to find men who are ready to go first into the breach.—Macaulay.

WERE we as thankful for what we hav received as the favors of society deserve, we should think more kindly of men generally, since nearly everything comes from some source unknown. Our ancestors, our predecessors, and our contemporaries hav all done something for us, which we can return only in gratitude to the race.—Bierbower.

NATURE is a book that is open to all peoples; it recognizes no distinction of color, or nationality, or sex; it is free to impart its wonders to all who are prepared to read its ever-unfolding pages.—Arthur B. Moss.

The analogies of body and mind are most strikingly exhibited in the development of physical and moral poison habits. At first every poison is repulsiv. Children abhor the very smell of alcohol. The first effect of tobacco is that of a nauseating drug. The disgusting taste of opium prevails through every disguise. Nature protests against the incipience of an insidious "second nature," and this protectiv instinct often saves where neither law nor science yields its aid. . . . Gross vices do not achieve an easy conquest: the protests of a faithful conscience warn us again and again; but, if that protest is persistently disregarded, nature at last adapts herself to the abnormal condition, and the instinctiv repugnance givs way to a morbid craving for the unnatural stimulus. Healthy food grows insipid. The toper becomes a slave to his drug; and, by educational influences, the baneful habit may develop into a hereditary or even national vice. In a similar way, such moral poisons as hypocrisy, the miracle-mania, and pessimism hav to overcome the resistance of every healthier instinct before they can enslave the mind of a whole nation. In southern Europe, the doctrins of the Galilean church hav achieved this victory. Among the Caucasian races of the Mediterranean peninsula millions of our fellow-men hav lost the normal instincts of their species, and hav come to enjoy the poison of anti-naturalism. The Greek and Roman monks vied in self-abasement, self-mutilation, and the voluntary sacrifice of their reason, as their forefathers vied in science and heroic games. Patriotism has withered under the influence of anti-natural dogmas. Unmanliness has ceased to be a reproach. Manly self-reliance and athletic sports hav lost their charm. The prescriptions of the Jesuitical poison-mongers hav made simple truth insipid: their victims hav contracted a morbid craving for supernaturalism, and love cant for its own sake.—Prof. Felix L. Oswald, M.D., in The Secret of the East.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 17. No. 17. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 26, 1890. {28 LAFAYETTE PL} $3.00 per year

THE PAPAL COLOSSUS.

Beneath the shadow of that papal curse stalked the specters of war, pestilence, famin, desolation, and death.—La Croix.

Notes and Clippings.

In the course of an article on "Flaws in Ingersollism," in the April North American Review, the Rev. Lyman Abbott expresses surprise that the "inspiring story" of Abraham should hav no attraction for Colonel Ingersoll. Abraham, it will be remembered, was commanded by the Lord to kill his son, and appears to hav been willing, if not anxious, to obey the command. A similarly "inspiring story" now comes from Faulkton, South Dakota, to the effect that E. Eckhart, while suffering from theological dementia, stabbed his two young sons with a bread-knife, and cut his wife's throat. Eckhart claims that the Lord told him to commit the murder. Since this incident, says Freethought, involves the killing of three persons instead of one, Dr. Abbott should find it three times as inspiring as the story of Abraham.

This is the Milwaukee Sentinel's estimate of the Bennett law: "The very pith and marrow of the law are in these two provisions: 1. Every child between the ages of seven and fourteen shall attend school—unless excused for good reason—for at least twelve consecutiv weeks in each year. 2. That every child, as above, shall during the period mentioned, receive instruction in reading, writing, arithmetic, and United States history in the English language. Nothing is said about parochial schools. If it is shown that a child receives this instruction for the time mentioned in any school, or at home, or has already had instruction equivalent to that mentioned, its parents are exempt from all penalty. The parochial schools may teach religion much, little, or altogether; may teach German or any other language exclusivly the year round; may do exactly what they choose to do, as far as this law is concerned. The law only prescribes that parents shall see that their children get twelve weeks of schooling each year, a part of the studies to be conducted in English." And the fact that the children must hav twelve weeks' schooling in useful studies in the English language is just why the foreign Catholics and Lutherans of the state are against the law!

During the discussion on the public worship estimates in the lower house of the Prussian diet on the 18th, Dr. Windthorst, the leader of the clerical party, asked for the creation of a Catholic section in the ecclesiastical affairs department; a settlement of the question relativ to the appointment of priests; the abrogation of the sperrgesetz, by which priests in certain cases are deprived of their stipends; a supervision of the schools by priests; the free admission of Catholic religious orders into Prussia, and the prohibition of the use of Catholic churches by Old Catholics. Dr. von Gossler, minister of ecclesiastical affairs, in reply to Dr. Windthorst, said that the government could not comply with the demands of the clericals. Particular denominations, he declared, could not claim to be represented in the ministry. Catholic matters were attended to by Catholic officials. In affairs affecting the schools and universities the opinions of the Catholic leaders were taken. Dr. von Gossler announced that a bill dealing with the sperrgesetz would be introduced in the diet. He declined to interfere with the Old Catholics. The government, he said, had received no complaints regarding them. The question of the entry of religious orders into Prussia, Dr. von Gossler declared, could not be decided by the ministry of ecclesiastical affair, alone.

A friend of Henry G. Marquand, who is perhaps more largely responsible than is any other one man for the failure of the trustees of the Metropolitan Museum to open it to the public on Sundays, has this to say in the World, of the reasons which influence Mr. Marquand in this course: "It is all a question of money, of expense, and not of sentiment or devotion. There are a few persons like Mrs. Robert L. Stuart who giv and will continue to giv, as long as the museum is kept closed on Sunday, a handsome yearly sum to cover the daily expense of keeping it open, of policing it, and lighting and cleaning it. Those donations would stop were the museum to be opened Sunday. But opened it would be, nevertheless, if the trustees saw any certainty of getting elsewhere, from the city or from other public-spirited citizens, an equivalent sum to pay current expenses. The custodians and special officials must be men of good character and good address. Such men cannot be secured for less than $3 a day. A score of them, for several are necessary in each room or department, eat up a large sum every week. Who will supply that sum and open the museum Sundays? Some years ago costly Etruscan gold ornaments were stolen. Nothing can be made away with now, the trustees believe." We scarcely credit Mr. Marquand's assertions, for the museum managers defeated a bill providing for the maintenance of the museum on condition that it was opened Sundays.

Foster North, of Kewanee, Ill., a son of a Truth Seeker correspondent and subscriber, has filed a petition in the supreme court for a mandamus to compel the trustees of the University of Illinois to restore him to the privileges of the university, from which he was suspended six weeks before he was to graduate in June, 1885, because he refused to attend religious worship in the chapel. He alleges that absence from the chapel is the only offense with which he is charged; that the institution is supported and controled exclusivly by the state, and that the constitution provides that "No person shall be required to attend or support any ministry or place of worship against his consent." He claims that these religious services in the university are illegal, and the rule requiring attendance is illegal and void; that excuse for absence from such exercises cannot be required; that as he has violated no legal rule, and has fulfilled all lawful conditions necessary to the enjoyment of the advantages of the university, he has a legal right of attendance there. Shortly before his suspension Governor Oglesby and the penitentiary commissioners, believing that attendance upon religious worship could not justly and legally be required of convicts in the state penitentiaries, ordered that such convicts be allowed to absent themselvs from any or all religious services without being required to giv any excuse or reason therefor. He thinks that students, as well as convicted murderers and thieves, hav rights which the authorities of the state are bound to respect. The late decision of the supreme court of Wisconsin, in Wells vs. School Board of Edgerton, in which Bible-reading in public schools was declared illegal under constitutional provisions similar to those of Illinois, fully sustains the position of Mr. North.

Communications.

What Is Spirit?

If spirit is what it is said to be, then it is a veritable chameleon nondescript. It is anything ideality, speculation, and metaphysics may make it. The word "spirit" represents an abstraction and not an entity. But superstition and the imagination hav invested it, as they hav terms representing many abstract virtues and moral qualities, with the halo and glow of a divine personified imagery. Justice is represented by the image of a divinely human figure holding the scales to balance righteousness.

Mercy is another tender human representation, inclining over the humble, repentant sinner, with the posture and aspects of forgivness and sympathetic love.

Liberty is personated by the erect or sitting female figure, in the habiliments of freedom, with her staff and banner floating in the breeze. In ancient Greece more than now, the abstract virtues, the passions and emotions, were imaged by varied impersonations, which were deified and titled as their gods. It is only mature minds and philosophic thinkers who dispense with these external representations of abstract conceptions. Immature, undeveloped intellects, inexperienced, limited, and uncritical thinkers, can never rise above physical associations and personifications in their attempts at abstract thought, or in their conceptions of psychical or metaphysical questions. Nations, as well as individuals, liv and die and never advance beyond this sensuous, rudimentary mental state, from what may be called arrested intellectual development. Those who are religious, or the spiritual-minded—so called—priests and people, teachers and taught, the educated and ignorant, the cultured and refined, are invariably and voluntarily the victims of this ancient illusory faith, that originated in the earlier ages, the childhood of the race.

The terms spirit or spiritual cannot be thought of in connection with man, without the conception of an image, an entity, which, in some sense, exists as a personality, either with or without the individual homo. Civilized or Christian nations owe their conceptions of the spirit to the ancient mythological records that hav been preserved, reproduced, and interpreted by the savants and leaders in literature and religion, which hav molded and given direction to civilized thought.

This theory and literature of ghosts, or personified moral and physical forces, is as ancient as written language. It is the earliest and oldest method of generating and impressing thought. It belongs to the cave, the wigwam, and the tent, to prehistoric man in his gropings for mental illumination. Its antiquity imparts to it a seeming of divine authority, and inspires the affection and tenacity with which it is cherished. It is cherished now with a confidence that the world would go to ruin and chaos, and heaven be unfilled, without it. It is reverenced as a God-given boon, to save man from perdition. To abandon it for any cause, we are told, would be to surrender all motiv or restraint, all moral sense and obligation, all regard for life or death, time or eternity, heaven or hell, man or God.

Science has assaulted and taken the outposts, and is storming the very citadel in which this mythical impersonativ faith is intrenched. But such is the affection for this time-honored, all-absorbing delusion, that every inch of ground is being contested and maintained with an inveteracy that has always characterized the zealots of superstition. It is wonderful with what a fatuity and desperation the feelings and faith cling to that which cannot be logically maintained and is without foundation! It is wonderful how illusions can be so implanted, and interwoven with every moral fiber of being, that life seems to depend on them for its continuance!

Thinking and wise men coin words for practical use; the thoughtless and visionary pervert and abuse them in defense of ignorance and to maintain superstition. The Greek word representing spirit, meaning life and energy, has been captured by the blind and bigoted, construed into several meanings, and made to do service in behalf of the bias and to support the vagaries of the visionary religious enthusiast. Everyone wrests or defines it to suit his fancy, or to build up his own faith. One says that it is a synonym of soul; another, that it is a synonym of mind; another, that it is a synonym of life; and another says that it is a supernatural entity, and represents a disembodied human being, an organized personal intelligence, an intangible or ethereal duplicate of the previous personality.

Others among the more illiterate ancients, notably as described in the scriptures, believed in a realm of spirits, existences independent of men yet with the power of coming to them and entering into and taking possession of their persons and functions. Many of these were called evil spirits or devils, and those whom they occupied were said to be "possessed of devils." The evil spirits are described as producing various disturbances of the nervous system, driving their victims into spasms, fits, and extremes of impropriety, from which there was no release till the spirits could be exorcised or expelled by some magic or superhuman power, which was said to hav been exercised successfully for that purpose on many occasions.

All these different definitions of the spirit prevail in society now, and lead to great confusion of ideas among those who undertake to compare views or to instruct each other in the mysteries of spirituality.

It is a popular idea with some that the spirit or spirits make revelations to the human mind or feelings of the high or profound and otherwise inscrutable ways and purposes of the divine arcana, concerning the welfare and destiny of man.

With all these and still other definitions of the spirit, it can readily be seen in what interminable confusion and embarrassment are placed all those who indulge in the literature and theories of spirit and devote their time to making acquisitions to their stores and stock of spiritual knowledge. Scarcely any two assign to the word the same definition.

What is called spiritual impression, or any form of the spiritual craze, is generally an irremediable malady. When deeply seated it assumes supremacy over the intellect, and no evidence or reasoning presented to the mind can expel it from its throne in the mental citadel. Facts, arguments, proofs, and demonstrations fall ineffectiv when led against the network the spirit has woven around the mind. Every verbal doubt may be silenced, every vestige of sophistry in defense of the faith may be proved fallacious and visionary, yet the presence and power of the spirit remains the supreme arbiter unshaken and unchallenged by any logic. When the intellect, the understanding and reasoning powers, are subjugated to the blind impulses and fancied dictates of the spirit, there is seldom any hope of relief from the infatuation. If we can save the young, it is our only hope. If we can teach them intelligent, rational views of the spirit before they are captured and enslaved by the terrorizing power of the fabulous ones, they may be saved in a condition of sanity, with the mind open to the lessons of reason and truth. They must learn from the demonstrations of science that there is but one proper meaning for the word spirit, and that is, to represent the physical, moral, and intellectual life of man; and learn that when these leave a man he has lost his life, or soul, or mind, and all that remains with us that is cognizable is the lifeless form that will molder into earth. This is the intelligent thought for which the word was made to stand, and it still remains so for the honest, unsophisticated, rational thinker. Between him and the spiritual lunatic there is a chasm, that cannot easily be bridged, because of the utter incompatibility of science and superstition.

Spirit, soul, mind, or life, in their separate or combined sense, in any practical, scientific, comprehensible sense, are one and the same thing. They express when cursorily and separately used, generally but parts of what in a united sense they represent, as the product and sum of the vitalized activities of a living human being. We cannot understand them, and neither can they be of any intelligent use to us, unless we ascribe, and can trace them, to a physical basis. They indicate only conditions, qualities, and functions of the activ organism. Of a man we can say, He is of a "meek and quiet spirit;" or of a "sweet and tender spirit;" or of a "bold, daring, and warlike spirit." We speak of a large-souled man, a magnanimous soul, a grand or a mean soul; or say, He puts soul in his business, or, He has no soul in his work. A man of great mind; or, He has a mind of his own; or, He improves his mind or neglects his mind; or, He uses his mind; or, He does not mind his business—are other expressions very common, and in this sense they are uniformly understood.

The "life" of a man means simply the unsuspended functions of the organic structure. To hav life is to hav the spirit, soul, or mind still represented in the body, as the product of this life. We say, a useful life, an activ life, a low or high life, a fruitful or valuable, or an instructiv and interesting life, when we speak of a biography. Only when we associate these words with a physical basis, with a cognizable being, can we use them to convey intelligent thought. Our observations and experiences, the cognition of our senses, familiarize us with their meaning when they are used in connection with the functions of living, moving beings. But the moment we attempt to think of them as something separate or self-existent we flounder in the realms of the interminable, the fantastic and deluding. When the imagination is released from its moorings to some real substratum, its range is without law and limit. In this region nothing is known or expected to be known; everything is believed. No common ground between partisans of faith can be found; but every imaginable aspect of the fields of illusion is occupied.

What do we know about these abstract, metaphysical subjects? And what can we learn of them except the speculativ opinions of the benighted past, as left on record by the ancients? And how can we know what these ancients really thought or meant, by the very indefinit and obscure way they hav come down to us?

In the New Testament we read, "God is a spirit;" and then, "God is love," not a love; "God is light," not a light. Here we see the indefinit article used before spirit, meaning that God is one spirit. The implication is that there are other spirits, or that there is a realm or order of spirits, and God is one of them. If that was not the belief of the writer, he would hav written, "God is spirit," which would hav been accordant with the other two forms of expression. We are informed by the late revisers of the New Testament that the translators of the authorized copy were not at all particular or accurate in the use or disuse of the articles in that version. They sometimes used them when the Greek text did not justify it, and at other places they dropped them where they should hav used them. And then again, they inserted the indefinit a where they should hav put the definit the; and at other places they dropped both and substituted the adjectivs this and that, where there was no warrant for so doing, materially changing the sense of the original text.

These changes, with many more, were unjustifiably made, sometimes from carelessness, oversight, or neglect, and in other instances, on purpose to change the text to accord more with the individual bias or with the popular superstition. The revisers rectified some of these errors, and they admit they let some remain unchanged, because readers so long accustomed to them would not receive the improvement or correction of the text if they had made it, on account of their attachment to and faith in the old and false. Were it not for this prejudice the revision could hav been made to read, God is spirit; or, God is a love; or, God is a light; or the spirit, the love, the light, just as well as in the way we hav it now. The revisers evidently desired to make such changes as they deemed expedient, and as far as they thought the readers would tolerate, in the direction of modern scientific thought, and in the direction of accord with the revelations and discoveries of the latest enlightened biblical scholarship.

If God is spirit, light, and love, then spirit, light, and love are God. And this scientific idea of spirit and of God is rapidly gaining credence and acceptance in all the higher, advanced, intelligent circles of society, as notably among the clergy as among the scientists. The old fabulous, personifying beliefs and teachings hav had their day, hav done their work, and must now rapidly giv way to the more rational demonstrations of science.

Such expressions as, the spirit of God, and, the spirit of Christ, are often used; but when we attempt to analyze them in order to ascertain what meaning or thought they contain, we find it utterly impossible to giv them any definition, or to make them convey any thought or idea that is adapted to the human understanding. They are archaic sounds or words addressed to the feelings or faith, which make an impression so indefinit that the understanding or intelligence cannot recognize or describe it. The reverence for the words is all the significance there is in the sentences that contain them. To be more specific in statement: In the first place, we say God is spirit, and think we agree in that. Then immediately we proceed to speak of the spirit of God, making God something else besides spirit, and spirit as one of his properties, as though God could hav a spirit when he or it is nothing else but spirit. The spirit is the whole of the reality of what we call God or deity. God being spirit, how can we speak of his spirit and say the spirit of spirit, and make any sense? What can we understand by such language? How can we make an attribute of a thing out of the thing itself? We can just as well and truly say, the universe of the universe, the God of God, or the man of man.

"The spirit of Christ," means nothing, and really is without sense. Christ is a word in the Greek, which stands for wisdom, or its equivalent in our language. Scholars all agree that it simply represents a title, and not a name or a person. Jesus was never known by that name. It became associated with his name in after centuries, on account of his lessons and life, to distinguish them from those of others. We know that wisdom has no spirit. Thought has no spirit; neither has ignorance or want of thought. There is no spirit in an abstraction or a principle. There is a spirit in a man or an animal—in all living personalities. There was a spirit in Jesus, but there is no spirit where there is no life. There is no spirit in wisdom or Christ. Then the expression, spirit of Christ, is meaningless verbiage.

While such conflicting, paradoxical use is made of the word spirit; while the word is used with equal freedom and license to make it represent something or nothing, so rendering the term a misnomer or mystery, bringing it into discredit and dishonor among earnest, thoughtful, intelligent people, those who use it so flippantly and ignorantly are doing harm rather than good. It is time some intelligent standard definition were established and the abuse and misrepresentations of the word abridged. Expressions without intelligence, from otherwise respectable and exemplary people, tend to embarrass and distract the minds of inquirers, and create a d gust or aversion for religious questions, and an indifference for the virtues which true religion should teach.

We hear such expressions as, the "spirit of the gospel," the "spirit of the law," the "spirit of the Constitution," and in the scriptures, the "letter killeth but the spirit maketh alive"—spirit in this last use meaning the intent, object, or end to be accomplished by what was written or taught in the letter, and not a mere unappreciativ conformity to the written word without any higher or further motiv than a literal fulfillment of the letter of the law or verbal assent to it. Here, by metaphor, spirit is given to lessons, laws, and teachings, and does in some measure represent distinct thought, but only in a figurativ sense. The paucity of words to express all forms and shades of thought may be a sufficient excuse for resorting to metaphor, and it can not produce much harm, provided it is known and understood as metaphor.

It is when metaphor is taught and taken as the literal reality, that the heavens and the earth are peopled with invisible spirits, and the personifications of metaphor are made to represent wandering ghosts, holy or otherwise, and demons from a fancied spirit world, haunting, pervading, inspiring, and prompting the human family to every action they perform, with the belief that all life depends on spirit in the sense, "of myself I can do nothing"—it is then that faith in the spirit works its greatest mischief. It then destroys volition, paralyzes energy, opposes intelligence, blights reason, and produces more or less mental inanity. It may seem to be a negativ and harmless illusion only, but it is a positiv obstruction and destroyer of human progress; an incubus that poisons the well-spring of life and keeps the mind in a state of perpetual bondage.

We hav received our definition and meaning of the word spirit more from Greek mythology and polytheism, than from Hebrew Theism and metaphysics. The New Testament, a product of Greek writers, has been more precious and authoritativ to us than the Hebrew scriptures. Modern conceptions and speculations about the spirit, and all the various ideas and uses we make of the word, we hav inherited from our pagan Greek ancestors and their coadjutors, their barbarian Roman allies. They come from nowhere else, and every student of history and ecclesiasticism knows this to be an absolute certainty. We owe to the benighted barbarians all we hav, all there is, and all we can make of our wonderful "spirit illumination." When we look back to the violent conflicts, to the fierce and bloody wars, to the Crusades and Inquisitions, to the martyrdoms and tortures, to the millions that hav been sacrificed by the commands and duties laid upon the human family by this ghostly phantom called the spirit, we may well estimate the value of the dear illusion, and what our present conflicting views of it hav cost the world in human life and treasure. T. E. LONGSHORE.

Philadelphia, Sept., 1889.

Freethought in Sweden.

In Sweden the fourteenth judgment for blasphemy since 1888 has seen the light of day. Victor E. Lennstrand has by the king's court been sentenced to an additional three months' imprisonment.

Now, we hav always had sympathy for the old and feeble, and a word or two in praise of those who assist them, so as to make their last days comfortable, yet in all cases we invariably drew the line seven feet above the earth's surface. The compassion taken upon old Jehovah by King Oscar II. and his ecclesiastic and civil authorities is nothing if not ridiculous. The gentlemen are evidently yet chewing the rubber ring given them by their respectiv mammas. To think that these poor, miserable mortals act as self-appointed guardians and defenders of an old sinner, an almighty and immortal being who, if he appeared here on earth, would require the strait-jacket and inhabit the murderer's cell! What conceited and inconsistent fools these mortals be! Yet we can assure them that, whatever may happen to them, they can always be sure of a living. Any enterprising dime museum man will gladly pay them $100 a week apiece to hav them pose in his museum as natural monstrosities or live fossils.

This new instance of persecution has, however, not diminished the ardor of our brethren. They are activ and busy as ever. The petitions which we mentioned in a late letter hav received nearly fifteen thousand signatures, and Captain Thomson and S. W. Hentzer are kept more than comfortably busy, while Henry V. Berghell, following the example set by Jesus, travels all over the country giving lectures, forms branches of Utilistiska Samfundet, and makes old orthodoxy raise her long ears and bray.

If our friends will now but organize so as to show a solid front toward the enemy, and leave all money matters out, we can predict that victory will ere long be theirs. The attention of the civilized world is directed toward Sweden, and it is the attitude of her Freethinking men and women that will decide whether future historians shall note the present Freethought movement as a deed or as a saga blott.

G. N.

Nationalism: Is It Fact or Fancy?

Nothing has so stirred the heart of the multitude for a long time as the force called Nationalism. The advent of a new book is not so very important a matter in this age of many books; but Bellamy's "Looking Backward," from whence sprang into being a strong, energetic power, has swept from end to end of the continent, and like some magic influence, wide spreading and far-reaching, it has sped across the ocean, finding lodgment wherever a human heart throbbed in pity or longed for better circumstances than it knew. What has caused this furore? What mighty impulse has so shaken and thrilled humanity?

The book seemed but to adapt to present thought many ideas already known to the world through its thinkers and reformers. The question arises, were the ideas given by reformers aforetime precipitated upon the world too soon? And has the mind of today grown ripe enough to welcome the advent of Nationalism and comprehend its deep and powerful meaning?

It is worth while, in passing, to note the condition of humanity in the economic world when Nationalism, like Jove in thunder, burst upon the half-bewildered minds of men.

Let us see.

One who inclined his ear at the time of the advent of the book "Looking Backward," would hav heard the great pulsing heart of the wage-working world beating, beating with a strong and fierce determination. The beholder would hav looked upon a strange spectacle—on the one hand a chaos of poverty, dissatisfaction, strikes, riots, anarchism, labor unions, miners with grimed faces and bloodshot eyes whose little children, with wan, pinched faces, begged piteously for bread, railroad employees demanding increase of wages to purchase the very necessaries of life, and all pleading for better food and warmer clothing. On the other hand were arrayed a multitude of trusts, combines, pools, syndicates, ever increasing to larger proportions, and a host of millionaires with swelling coffers, living in palatial residences far superior to the palaces of kings in olden times. Each millionaire held in his hand a lash, made thick and strong with banknotes to hold the masses in check and to keep them at their tasks. Wage-workers formed unions to protect themselvs and to assist in the battle for enough to keep soul and body together. Capitalists combined, they said, to keep posted on prices of raw material and to regulate the wages of those who did their bidding.

On the one side appeared want, toil, misery, ignorance, poverty, privation, poor pay, and starvation; on the other, ease, pride, plenty, luxury, pleasure, idleness, abundance, and much polished pretension.

There was heard the surging of a coming storm—the rushing of a human tide, like the lashing waves of ocean ere the whole fury of the winds bursts upon them.

Thought moved swiftly. It traveled back a hundred years—to France, and the uprising there, after Vergimond's famous speech declaring the country to be in danger, and then it moved forward with lightning speed, forward a couple of years to 1892. They who watched with keen vision the progress of events said: "Is a transition period at hand? Will it be a repetition of that dreadful slaughter in France that rent that beautiful country with strife and discord, that shadowed it with horror and dismay, or will it be a painless passing to a higher, better, nobler birth?" It was evident that something must be done, and that quickly.

In the midst of much confusion came Nationalism with its one splendid sentence crowded with great meaning: "The nationalization of industry and the brotherhood of man."

It has made a lull in the nearing storm. It has made a rift in the clouds, through which has come a glimmer of warm sunshine.

While, practically, the situation in the economic world is unchanged, a better feeling has grown with the ever-increasing numbers of believers in the philosophy of Nationalism. People are beginning to think it may be possible to harmonize the present tumult and disorder—that the inequalities in the social world can be, and should be, leveled—that crooked paths and crooked individuals can each be made straight—that there can be improvement made in all departments of living. They are beginning to see that competition is not kind and brotherly; that it is a survival, not of the fittest and noblest, but of the cruel, selfish, and savage instincts of humanity. They are beginning to feel that only in warm whole-heartedness, in the actual demonstration of brotherly love and tenderness, in coöperation, is true progression.

They are beginning to understand that the increase of capital in the hands of a few, and, at the same time, the multiplying of paupers, is not compatible with a healthy state of human society, for,

> Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
> Where wealth accumulates and men decay.

Great monopolies of that which belongs to the whole people can only entail the worst consequences. Humanity, the good of the whole, should be the first consideration, not the last.

If Nationalism is a solid and substantial reality, and not a chimera, a fancy doomed to fade like dew before the morning sun, then it contains the very essence of true life, real liberty. Its picture of a new national life holds untold good in the advancement and enlightenment of the race.

The past hundred years in this country has been characterized by material growth. It is as the physical development of the child. Will the next century, under Nationalistic influences, develop the moral and intellectual sphere of a nobler manhood and loftier womanhood? Is the time ripe for the flowering of the real genius of America? Has the hour struck when selfishness must be eliminated from the mind, from the thought and deed? And, in its place, shall the pure white rose of unselfishness and tender interest bloom for all?

Wealth has followed in the wake of successful competition, but it has left evils in its path, pain, sorrow, and suffering. There is another kind of wealth. It is the strong, harmonious wealth of right-doing, right-living. It is the recognition of the brotherhood of the race. It is the sweet heritage of all the good there is—the heritage, not of a few, but of all.

Shall not the people hav their own?

S. H. WIXON.

Eminent Women.

MERCY OTIS WARREN.

While the men heroes of the American Revolution are historically worshiped and remembered, we hav but few and scanty records of the women heroes, whose hearts were as loyal, and whose words and works were as earnest, as were those of the other sex.

Considering their inferior position, socially and politically, women truly did far more than men could or would hav done in their condition. Woman, being of the superior sex, and being, through her motherhood, the head of the race, is the natural leader, guide, and protector. But man has dominated her, relegated her to the kitchen, nursery, and home as her proper sphere, making it a virtue of her sex to appear modest, retiring, and inane. Therefore, if any woman did a deed worth recording, it was published in some man's name, or if she received a share of the credit, it was merely mentioned as an aside adjunct to the history of the day, hence the names and deeds of many of the bravest, noblest, and best of the patriots of the Revolution are entirely unknown to us. A few are here and there spoken of in brief mention, and even then few only make their mark on the minds of scholars and historians, while the general reader knows nothing of them.

One of the remembered heroes of the times that tried human souls—women's as well as men's—was Mercy Otis Warren, a sister of James Otis, whose fiery, enthusiastic utterances did so much to arouse and intensify the feelings of the colonists against British tyranny and oppression. This brother and sister were patriots of the purest water, and true and warm friends and co-workers in the cause of freedom.

The home of Mercy was the resort of the patriots and the headquarters of the rebellion, and as she herself wrote, "By the Plymouth fireside were many political plans organized, discussed, and digested." She corresponded with eminent men of the Rebellion. She was the first one who based the struggle upon "inherent rights," a phrase afterward made the corner-stone of political authority. Jefferson was one of her correspondents, and the Declaration of Independence shows the influence of her mind. She was the first person who counseled separation, and pressed these views upon John Adams when he sought for advice before the opening of the first Congress. At that time even Washington had no thought of the final independence of the colonies, emphatically denying any such intention or desire on their part, and John Adams was shunned in the streets of Philadelphia for having dared to hint such a possibility. Mercy Warren was his mentor, and encouraged and urged him on to bold and brave work for independence. Her advice was sought in many an emergency. She believed not in the freedom of man alone, but in that of woman as well.

All honor to this true hero, and may her name be blessed and remembered by all human kind wherever freedom and equal rights are the watchwords of the race.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

Snowville, Va.

The Hope of the World.

From the Industrial Age, Duluth, Minn.

THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes in a pamphlet of 82 pages an interesting symposium, by the leading Liberal thinkers of the age, in answer to the question: "Is Freethought destructiv or constructiv?" The hope of the world is in the affirmativ, positiv, and constructiv side of all the progressiv movements of the day. This side of Liberalism is ably presented in THE TRUTH SEEKER'S Freethought Symposium by Colonel Ingersoll and nineteen other leading Freethinkers. It will well repay a careful perusal. Price 25 cents. Address the Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York city.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
R. B. WESTBROOK, President, 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia, Pa.
E. B. FOOTE JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
J. E. REMSBURG, Vice-President, ... Oak Mills, Kan.
JULIET H. SEVERANCE, Vice President, . . . Milwaukee, Wis.
IDA C CRADDOCK, Secretary, 930 North 17th st., Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, 930 North 17th street, Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Church Taxation.

The promised pamphlet on "Church Taxation," issued by the American Secular Union, is now ready for distribution among our members. It is written by President Westbrook, and is a resumé of just the facts that our people need to hav at hand in their missionary work.

A moderate estimate, according to Dr. Westbrook's researches, places the value of the present untaxed church property in the United States at about $1 500,000,000. This sum, at two per cent taxation, would yield the state governments the sum of $30,000,000 annually. Church property, however, as has been more than once shown, is always estimated far below its real value. For instance, in New York, the church buildings of the Protestant Episcopal church alone, exclusiv of its hospitals and other charitable institutions, are estimated at only $13,319 000; "whereas it has recently been shown by Louis N. Megargee, a well-known journalist," says Dr. Westbrook, "that this does not cover the exempt property of Trinity church corporation alone."

The above, with other interesting statements, will be found in our pamphlet on "Church Taxation." Dr. Westbrook sums up his argument at the close, in the following POINTS.

1. The exemption of churches from regular taxation is in violation of every principle of equality and justice, and is an evident disregard of the most obvious obligations of public morality.

2. The church does not render an equivalent for this exemption. Two-thirds of the people do not regularly attend any church; and they should not be taxed to pay for the other third. Moreover, those who attend the churches are, for the most part, of that educated and refined class who do not need any special moral restraint to secure the observance of law.

3. It creates a prejudice against the church, and drives the masses into an attitude of antagonism, because of the huge injustice of the church's increasing their personal taxes and receiving favors to which it has not the shadow of a claim.

4. It detracts from the glory and independence of true religion to be a pauper and a leech upon the state; and all honorable persons should be ashamed to imply that the church needs this favor from the state, even if an incidental service be rendered.

5. The people are in duty bound to carefully consider whether any given appropriation of the public money is wisely made; but, as exemption from taxation is the same as appropriation, they hav no opportunity to judge and act in this matter.

6. The taxation of church property would make very little difference to church-goers, as they are already mainly taxpayers, and what is saved to the church by exemption is added to the duplicate of personal taxation.

7. A system of mendicancy is encouraged by the exemption of convents and similar institutions, where the vow of poverty is taken, and convent expenses are paid by the proceeds of beggary.

8. The same reasons can be given for the exemption of many other kinds of property from taxation, that are given for the exemption of church property; and if these additional exemptions were allowed, the state would become bankrupt, and sequestration and revolution would be the result.

9. Why should the church assume the character of a beggar, asking remission of taxes, instead of paying its full share of the cost of protection and defense, and thus rendering unto Cæsar that which rightfully belongs to Cæsar?

10. We do not attack the rights of the church when we insist upon the just taxation of its property, but we champion the rights of the people in claiming that all property, except that belonging to the state, shall be equally liable to taxation.

11. In new countries there may hav been some excuse for encouraging the building of churches by exempting them from taxation; but this policy does not apply to our large towns and cities. The most valuable property on our principal streets is owned by the churches, Catholic and Protestant alike, which pay no taxes. This is manifest injustice, if not downright dishonesty.

12. The people are ready for the just policy of taxing church property in common with other property.

One very curious fact came to light during the compilation of this pamphlet. In the census of 1880, no returns for churches, schools, cemeteries, and other similar institutions were made. In 1850, 1860, and 1870, however, the figures seem to hav been obtainable, as President Grant gives the amounts in his message to Congress in 1875. For details see the pamphlet.

Why did the census of 1880 omit an estimate on the untaxed church property of the United States?

Why, indeed, but because there was somebody who was interested in suppressing the facts? That our latest and most thorough census should hav left completely out of account the statistics of $15,000,000,000 worth of property, is inexplicable upon any other hypothesis but this. Of course, the church is the party specially interested in maintaining the present unjust system of taxation, by which all citizens are obliged to help support places of worship, whether they attend them or not.

The census of 1890 is now being arranged for by the powers that be. Will the statistics of untaxed church property be omitted this time also? It is quite possible. Silently as well as openly the church is massing its forces for a great and final war of extermination against religious liberty and freedom of thought; and it would be a poor general indeed who sought to display his sources of strength before the day of battle, especially when he is the attacking party, and when he knows that the enemy, though unorganized, are far greater in numbers than his army.

American Secular Unionists, here is a matter in which you can do practical work for the cause of Freethought. Insist upon our census-takers being instructed to make returns on all untaxed church property. In your local papers, where you hav influence, by personal appeal to your friends and neighbors, by the distribution of our pamphlet on "Church Taxation;" in short,

To all the people you can,
At all the times you can,
In all the places you can,
In all the ways you can, do your best to make apparent the facts and figures and the injustice of allowing churches to escape taxation.

Within a week or two from now, one of these pamphlets on "Church Taxation" will hav been mailed free to every member of our society. We want you to read them over carefully, fortify yourselvs with the facts and arguments contained therein, and pass the word along to others. These pamphlets are not sent you to be tucked away on your closet shelvs, out of sight; they are weapons put into your hands to do battle with, every day, if possible; and they should lie on the table in your living-room and on your office desk. If one pamphlet be not sufficient to do our missionary work, so much the better. Send us ten cents for another copy, or sixty cents for a dozen, and so help to put money into the treasury, at the same time that you supply yourselvs with more ammunition. Our treasury is very low, and we are straining a point in sending out these pamphlets now to you, without waiting for the postage and printing money for which we appealed to you a week or two ago. But we realize how pressing is the need that more light should be turned upon this subject throughout the length and breadth of our land.

We have been obliged, through lack of money chiefly, to move more slowly than we at first planned to do. This pamphlet on "Church Taxation," as you will see, deals with the first of our "Nine Demands;" and we propose to take the others up, one by one, as money and opportunity offer. But, until the other eight pamphlets do appear, we trust that you will make good use of the weapon which we now hav ready to put into your hands. Many and many a conservativ church-member will be found willing to agree with us on this subject of church taxation, and, if rightly approached, even to ally himself with us. Let us, one and all, work hard to swell our ranks, and press steadily forward all along the line to do battle in behalf of this, the first of our "Nine Demands"—"the equitable taxation of church property in common with other property."

IDA C. CRADDOCK,
Corr. Sec. American Secular Union.

A Swedish Helper.

It is a great honor to be king or president, but it is better to be an honest and Liberal-minded man. We can do without kings, political frogs and theological vampires, but the world cannot be enlightened very well without Liberals. I for my part do not need or want a clerical loafer to think for me as long as I can do my own thinking, or to act as a middle party between me and God, if there is a God, the existence of which I neither deny or affirm. And if there is a God, and he is such as the Bible paints him, I would hav nothing to do with him, for he is not an honest God, but a cruel and unjust monster. I would sooner worship a tiger, because there is more mercy in him than in the Christian God. Oh, what a loving God, who creates people only to fling them into a burning hell forever! A God who punishes the innocent for the guilty and blesses all who will persecute Freethinking men and women! No, the Bible is a humbug from beginning to end, and its defenders ignorant slaves or superstitious cranks, and the rest of them nothing but a lot of lazy and intriguing hypocrits. I hav been a city missionary myself in Chicago, and as such hav had plenty of time to study church people and I know them as well as myself. I preached for the money that was in it, just like the other hypocrits, and kept it up about a year and a half; but it finally became so unbearable that I gave it up and once more became an honest man. I had no true peace, no joy, and what pleasure I had was found through the back doors. I did just as the other gospel workers did, but it was a living hell to do so. I had to sneak out like a thief, afraid of being found out, and had no friends except a lot of narrow-minded cranks, whose company was a torture to me. Out of forty missionaries, evangelists, and preachers with whom I was personally acquainted there were only four or five really sincere men who believed what they preached, and the rest of them were nothing but frauds. I watched them as they watched me, and I tried to come to a secret understanding with them to show ourselvs to each other as we were and thus lighten our burden. But although I myself had seen them doing crooked things, they would not come to an understanding with me, and tried to make me believe I was mistaken, and asked God to hav mercy on me, a poor backslider. They disgusted me, and as I still had some respect for myself, I left both them and the church forever. Four years hav passed since then, and those four hav been the best part of my life, and neither gods nor devils can change me from being a Liberal. From a financial standpoint it is no success, but although I see myself ignored and despised, I enjoy a truer peace than ever and hav nothing to fear. I would rather be scorned and prosecuted for telling my honest opinions than earn a good living as a lying preacher. Money cannot giv the peace and pleasure that truth givs; and when I now and then discover new truths in your valuable paper, I feel as happy as a half-drunken preacher over a large collection, if not more so. I intend to giv Secular lectures next month among my countrymen, the Swedes, and will try to organize a Secular Union among them, if such is possible. I hav many enemies to contend against, who will do all they can to hinder me and blacken my reputation; but I am going to pitch in anyway and see what can be done.

I am glad to see that THE TRUTH SEEKER takes such a lively interest in the Liberal movements of Sweden. I wish I were over there now to fight for the cause, which I could do with better success than Mr. Lennstrand—not because of ability, but because I am an American citizen, and as such they could not put me in prison. I never could think that such a mighty battle would take place in Sweden this century, and I should not be a bit surprised if this fight for religious liberty would overthrow the whole government and a republic be established in a short time. I hope I shall liv to see that country liberated from royalty, aristocracy, and a state church. Mr. Lennstrand, who is still in prison at Stockholm, wrote last month to a friend of mine a letter, of which the following is a translation:

LANGHOLMEN PENITENTIARY, March 15, 1890.

MY DEAR FRIEND: It is an earnest battle that recently has commenced here—a battle which surely will awaken nobler principles than the ones that are now considered sufficient for our salvation. Be assured I never in any of my efforts or in any of my lectures hav done or said anything improper. Every lecture was carefully prepared and every word fully considered. But it caused a stir among the people, and thousands who were indifferent began to awaken, and I took it all in earnest and acted accordingly. A general cry for organization was heard, and it was just in this that danger was seen. The authorities began to tremble and wished everything restored to its former tranquillity; but they used the wrong means to obtain this. Imprisonment only helped to bring forward new and strong champions for our cause, and when I am set free again my voice shall be stronger than ever.

I am not fighting against the good in Christianity, but against the false and absurd that is found in it. But unfortunately it is this way, that doctrinal theology is the essential part of Christianity, and by which Christianity is separated from Buddhism, Stoicism, and so forth. You know as well as I do that Christianity never has given the world anything new in a moral meaning, or that the new it has given is not true. And it is because of this I attack Christianity. Take that part away and we hav nothing but rational ethics remaining. This must be explained aloud to the people, who hav always listened to and blindly believed the jeremiads and harangs of ignorant preachers. The spirit of to-day can not be fettered by old and rotten laws—cannot liv inside the narrow boundaries of the three articles of faith; it craves something better and more substantial and free from nonsense.

Giv my best regards to my friends in the far-away West, who, with me, are longing for something higher and truer than what the churches are offering to us. Our age has its own truths to liv on, and has no longer any need to see its only savior in him who died on the cross. Jerusalem is no longer our city, and we hav better Bibles than holy robber stories and licentious epistles written two thousand years ago. The old border stakes are torn away, and the Herculean rivers of the dark past are explored, and a new, resplendent country begins to appear with light and joy and with truer bliss than ever was dreamed of in the age of barbarism. This life becomes of higher importance, and to lighten its burdens becomes our duty. The gods disappear more and more and the man steps forward. For man and by man, must be our motto if anything of lasting value shall be possible to do. And above all things, every human being should hav the right to express his honest opinions, even if they be against old and conventional laws and custom. Free speech is a public as well as an individual right. Only the defender of lies and falsehood will suffer from a free and public discussion; but truth has nothing to fear and can forbear criticism. This seems to me to be the conclusion they of my American friends hav come to, who take such an interest in me, and I am glad of it. Truth's free republic is bound by no oceans; it is as extensiv as the universe, and all are friends and brothers who are citizens of that republic, no matter if it is on this or the western half of the globe. There is an unseen link, a link of love and sympathy, that unites the free sons of reason.

I see the dawning of a better day in this country. I do not stand alone in this struggle, for thousands hav declared themselvs willing to fight for truth and liberty for this and coming generations. Our organization is growing stronger every day, and I only wish my countrymen in America would do something jointly to drive away all nonsense, prejudice, and superstition that has bedimmed our eyes and stolen away interest for our real welfare.

I hav of late received many encouraging letters from countrymen in America, but hav not had time to answer all of them. They hav seen that when superstition is attacked there is always a crowd who shout that we are trampling upon their religious feelings and that we blaspheme their saints and heavenly beings and other imagined creatures. It always was and will forever be so. Truth was always a blasphemy before ignorance and bigotry; but coming generations will think otherwise. But if truth shall conquer we hav got to fight for it and to the bitter end. None can do everything in that battle, but none is superfluous.

(Signed) VICTOR E. LENNSTRAND.

It will take a long time yet before Mr. Lennstrand is free again, because there are other indictments hanging over his head and he will be rearrested as soon as released from his present term. The authorities seem to intend to punish him for every lecture he has delivered—punish him for one at a time, and thus he can be kept for years in prison. It makes me wild when I think of the tyrannical government of Sweden and its hypocrit of a king. He knows that Mr. Lennstrand has done no wrong, and almost every office-holder in the whole kingdom is a Freethinker, yet they are against Lennstrand, because if they should admit he is right they might lose their office, and that would not do. And thus you see what a bitter fight he has before him, and I earnestly wish some of your readers would assist him financially to his defense. He is a poor man, and deserves a better fate. And where they cannot assist him with a dollar or two, I know he would be very much pleased and encouraged if some of our American friends would send him a few friendly and encouraging lines. They could send their help either direct to himself or by THE TRUTH SEEKER. I ask you in the name of truth, justice, and humanity to do for him what you can. There is not at present a single man in all Europe who is so severely persecuted as he is, for telling the truth.

LOUIS HEDENFELT.

Seattle, Wash., April 10 1890.

A Lett r from Captain Thomson.

MR. E. M. MACDONALD, Dear Sir: I notified you by telegram, March 31st, of Mr. Lennstrand's new sentence to an additional three months' imprisonment. The following day, April 1st, I headed a deputation to Prince Charles and delivered a protest against the shameful persecutions of the authorities against Mr. Lennstrand, signed by more than nine thousand persons. The prince received us very kindly and spoke at first very freely, but he became more and more guarded and reserved in his expressions as the conversation proceeded, which lasted under three-quarters of an hour, when he dismissed us. He promised to the very same day lay our protest before the government and forward it to his father the king when he came home. The lecture for which Mr. Lennstrand now is for the second time sentenced has been after the sentence read publicly by other persons, attended by numerous audiences, and received with applause; and sharp protests hav been given at the same time against the judicial authorities. The lecture has been in print for this two months without any remark; now it is at last prosecuted by demand of Utilistiska Samfundet in order to get it judged by a jury. I hope Mr. G. Nelson will explain more when he gets No. 8 of Fritänkaren.

We are in full activity to make it as unpleasant for the authorities as we can. The opinion is turning against them all over the country. They see that we are challenging them, and that we do not care for them. Mr. Lennstrand is as cheerful and brave as ever.

We hav to thank you, Mr. Macdonald, for your kindness in making our movement in Sweden and ourselvs so well known in America, and so favorably forwarding the movement as you hav done in the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

I called on Mr. Lennstrand yesterday. He was well, cheerful, and resigned, and he entreated me to forward his best wishes to you and all his New York friends, in which I join heartily. OTTO THOMSON.

Stockholm, 25 Bryggargalen, Sweden, April 2, 1890.

The Penitentes.

I witnessed a scene the day before yesterday (Good Friday) that carried me back four centuries. I refer to the self-inflicted flagellations of the penitentes, or the good, devout Mexican Catholics who hav committed grievous sins within the past year, and who believe they can square accounts with an angry deity by beating themselvs unmercifully. The performances last for three days and include a crucifixion, not a very mock one either, for often the self-elected victim succumbs to the brutal scourging which precedes it. But I missed that part of the play, as I was unwilling to lose much time to attend all the ceremonies; all I saw was the procession to the cross.

After a semi-barbaric blowing of whistles and rattling of stones in a box, the penitentes issued from a shanty on the hillside in much the same attitude that Jehovah assumed when he had his celebrated interview with Moses, only the penitentes were clad in a pair of cotton drawers. As they issued forth they began beating themselvs over the back with their whips, and formed a procession to a cross some two hundred yards distant. They were accompanied by a number who had already settled up their little accounts, and were therefore in the odor of sanctity. The pace was very slow, and soon after leaving the hut the penitentes were covered with blood. Arriving at the cross they circled it two or three times, then one took it up and slowly carried it back (it must hav weighed two hundred pounds), the rest whipping themselvs as before. By this time their sole garment was soaked with blood. The exhibition was disgusting in its brutality, and I frankly confess that I endured it more in the hope of seeing some of the sublimated idiots kill themselvs than anything else.

The officials of the Catholic church claim that they forbid these demonstrations, and that if they are persisted in, excommunication will be the fate of the hardened penitente; that is what they tell the Americans, but it is certain that they secretly encourage it among the ignorant Mexicans; at any rate, the practice shows no sign of abatement, and as it was brought and taught by the priests of the immutable church it stands to reason they still encourage it, and are working with all the strength and cunning they hav to bring all men back to the level of the poor fanatics who still continue this barbaric practice. Right here is illustrated the forced advance of the church; here the nineteenth century Catholicism from the north meets the sixteenth century Catholicism from the south, and the priesthood hav to do some hard lying to explain away some ugly phases in the practices of the latter. I am told that the scourges used by the penitentes can be of any material that will bring the blood. Some use small bags filled with cactus; one fellow on Friday had a broad piece of leather driven through with tacks.

Raton, N. M. W. A. GRAVES.

A Sermon to Negroes.

Preached at Fort Worth, Tex., by Revivalist Jones.

"What kinder talk you niggers want? Kin giv you two kinds. One kind put'cher to shoutin' and t'other kind'll do you good. What you want now?"

The negroes answered unanimously that they wanted the kind that would do them good. Brother Jones continued:

"Well, I never see no good much about this 'ere shoutin' nohow. Heaven's a good deal further off After you get to shoutin' you find that'cher got to go a heap further then. Ain't that so? I don't mind shoutin' when yer got anything to shout about. What you got to shout about, you old stove-colored gander? I've lived among the niggers all my life an' I know 'em, I do. I know more about 'em in a minute than a Northern philanthropist ever did know. I lived among 'em and I know what I am talking about, I do. I'm a better friend to the colored folks than any of 'em.

"I'll tell you whatch you white folks need to make you respectable. Listen. There are four things—honesty, industry, purity, and religion. A colored man can't be too honest. A dishonest white man is low enough, but a dishonest nigger has no show at all. You know the white folks all say that the nigger will steal. Why, bless you, they steal heap more from you than you hav from them. They oughter pay you better. [Cries of "Dat's so."] If you owned all the property and hired them and paid 'em no better wages than you git, they would steal a great deal more than you do. ["Dat's the troof."] An honest nigger gets there all right. You show me a colored man that's honest, and I'll show you a colored man that's getting 'long all right. Ain't that so? It is. I'll tell why. Honest folks are always industrious. That good old colored woman, busy all the week cookin' and washin', you never see her in trouble.

"Listen, this is a white man's country, and taint no use talking, you can't be clerks and conductors and engineers. Keep your place and try to elevate yourself and your race. Let one of these coons git a little education and the first thing you know he is on the chain gang. One of these nigger mashers, a kinder potato-colored dude, gits on the chain gang, sho. Whenever you see an educated colored man, he is one of three things. He is either a preacher, a teacher, or he is on the chain gang. Ain't it so? Be industrious and honest.

"A colored man that says he can't be honest is a liar. You old flat-nosed chicken thief, you! Some of you people ain't going to be honest the way you are doin'. You buy on credit and then walk around the block when you get paid off. He ain't a decent dog, is he? When you see a colored man drinking whisky, and his wife at the washtub all the week, he's a dog. You oughter be tuk out and hav your old head cut off, you old mangy moke of hell. Did you ever see a nigger that didn't like a dram? All the niggers here that don't like a dram, stand up. (Six stood up). Now, don't you stand up and tell a lie, you old black hog. What you need is a sentiment that will make you quit drinking whisky. You ain't got no money to be spending on whisky, you old yellow hound. Ain't I talking facts? Don't I know the colored people? Didn't I tell you I knod'em? [Cries of, "You know 'em."] If you want to be a respectable people be honest and quit drinking. Keep out of bad company. Don't associate with low-down white folks. First-class niggers don't want to go with white folks, and first-class white folks don't want to go with niggers. Ain't that so?

"And I tell you, niggers, to take an interest in your homes. Don't let this here old white trash come sneaking around your house. If they do, you get the old musket down and drop them. If you kill him you'll benefit your race and ours too. The more of 'em you kill the better off all of us will be. You quit copying after the white folks and run your own machine. White folks are not good enough to copy after nohow. Quit your old dancing, you colored ball fellers. Don't you look nice floating around on an old store floor, you old niggers? You old hop-skip-and-a-jump beast, your old feet look like trash piles, and you don't smell good, neither [cries of "Dat's de gospel sho."]. You old black goose cutting the pigeon wing, you look like a pillow with a string in the middle of it. What kind of people you meet at that ball? Half of 'em drunk. Cutting and shooting and razors flying through the air. Half of 'm got no virtue. A colored ball is a dandy, ain't it? Where do you go after supper? Instead of staying at home with your wife and children, where do you go? Suppose your wife knew you like God knows you, you old coon. She'd break your old neck, and it would serve you right. Did you ever hear any preaching like this before? It fits your case, though, don't it? Quit stealing chickens. You don't want to go to the trouble of raising 'em, you old hen-roost thief. You hate ducks because they stay on the ground. You don't hav to steal. Don't say you can't help stealing chickens, you old black devil, you. Take an honest nigger and the people will do for him. If he hain't, he will steal from you when you are asleep. Be honest under all circumstances. It is better to hav a black skin and a white character than to hav a white skin and a black character. 'Tain't what sort of a hide you've got but the sort of a fellow that's in the hide."

Items of Science.

An official test for deflection was made on the great Fort bridge in Scotland recently. Two trains of fifty loaded coal cars and three of the heaviest engins, eighteen hundred tons in all, were massed on the two seventeen hundred foot spans. The deflections were in exact accordance with the calculations of the engineers, and the bridge exhibited exceptional stiffness in all directions.

The United States arsenal at Rock Island, Ill., is to be converted into a great gun manufactory if the government will consent. Power will be furnished by a water privilege of nearly two thousand horse-power some distance away.

An electric railway two hundred and fifty miles long, to connect Atlanta and Savannah, is projected. The motiv power to generate the current will be furnished by water-wheels on river-banks at different points on the line of the road.

On the Manchester ship canal, now in course of construction, there are employed 169 locomotivs, 5 900 cars, 182 horses, and 11,489 men and boys. The amount of coal consumed each month on the job is 10,000 tons.

Lectures and Meetings.

AT the Liberal Club, Friday evening, April 25th, Mr. T. B. Wakeman will speak on the "Limits of Competition." Also, election of officers.

W. F. JAMESON can be addressed at Des Moines, Ia. He gave three lectures in Muchakinock, Ia., to a packed house. It is a mining-camp. He is engaged to return to Peoria, Ia., to giv more lectures the first Sunday of May. A debate is talked of at Neola.

THE Texas papers giv lengthy and friendly reports of J. E Remsburg's recent lectures in that state. From the Victoria Review we quote the following: "As an eloquent and logical expounder and champion of Freethought doctrin, Mr. J. E. Remsburg is acknowledged to hav few rivals. This he proved here too in his three lectures, which were numerously attended by friends and foes, and most attentivly listened to. Two of his chief attractions were his elegant and refined style, and his careful abstinence from bitter and violent abuse of the church or any sect thereof. With but few exceptions, all who heard him, and chiefly those who had the pleasure of meeting him personally, agree in placing him in the front rank of logical orators and refined gentlemen."

Our Annual.

From the Independent Pulpit.

Our thanks are due the Truth Seeker Company for a copy of their ANNUAL for 1890. This, like its predecessors, is a handsomely gotten up and useful pamphlet. It contains a calendar for 1890, many instructiv articles on Liberal topics, and a number of illustrations. Every Liberal should hav a copy. Price twenty-five cents. Address Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Communications.

The Washington Secular Union.

To the Liberals of Washington: I deplore my sickness in that it has hindered the work of perfecting the organization of the Washington Secular Union. But with feeble tokens of regaining health I am resolved to resume labor. The board of directors hav had 2,000 copies of the constitution printed; they are now ready for distribution, and will be forwarded to the Liberals throughout the state.

The constitution certainly commends itself to every true Liberal. It givs us an organization founded on strictly business principles, devoted to advancing the cause of Liberalism, the secularization of our government, and protection of its every member from persecution, ostracism, and misrepresentation of press, politician, priest, and parson; compelling that consideration and respect, which in the past they hav denied us on account of our supposed weakness and lack of organization.

By our plan of organization the rights and interests of every precinct, and of every member—in the most remote part of the state as in the city—are equally guarded. All hav equal interest, equal voice and influence in deciding the action of the organization. No one person, no clique or faction, can ever dominate.

The payment of $1 dues each six months in advance—if all but do their duty—will enable the work to be carried on without occupying the time of the secretary in making begging appeals. No such appeals, public or private, will be made unless under especial emergency.

Since the organization of our state Union we hav enforced the abolition of paid chaplains in our state legislature. For this we are under deep obligations to the Walla Walla Liberal Club for sending out letters to Liberals of the state to be forwarded to their members of the legislature. Over seven hundred such letters were sent. Nor can we afford to fail in acknowledgment and appreciation of the effectiv and brave service rendered us by G. T. Thomson in the Senate, and A. H. Eddy, of Snohomish, in the House of Representativs. They fearlessly took the lead in denouncing the injustice and enforcing compliance with the constitution in this matter of paid chaplains.

Thanks to the very generous aid of our treasurer, Geo. M. Boman, and his Heston cartoon and lesflet, "Taxed and Untaxed," of which I distributed by mail over eighteen hundred, and sent eight hundred personal letters, the entire expense being defrayed by Mr. Boman. The Hughes revenue bill, which originally exempted all church property from taxation, was amended in committee so that no church property, private school, or hospital is exempt from taxation. All must be taxed at full valuation. The bill passed the house and the senate and is now in the hands of the governor.

The Truth Seeker Fund, which has done grand and effectiv work with the money received, by distribution of telling Liberal publications, will, I hope, henceforth be generously sustained. There are no red-tape delays, no salaries, office rent, or commissions deducted, but every cent received has been promptly expended in sending just the needed pamphlets to the right persons, and the Truth Seeker Company hav furnished the publications at lowest wholesale rates, donating the labor of mailing, and giving strict account of all moneys received. It is only necessary to call attention to these facts to insure contributions to that fund, for it is doing a great, much needed, and national work.

Notwithstanding the good work accomplished, there never was greater need of earnest coöperation, and thorough organization of the Liberals of our state, than now.

The Bible is read daily in many of our public schools, and in some schools the children are punished for lack of reverence and attention to the opening prayers. Yet our constitution declares there shall be no sectarian instruction in our public schools.

The supreme court of Wisconsin has justly decided that reading the Bible is "sectarian instruction."

The Washington Secular Union proposes to insist on obedience to the constitution by each and all of our public school teachers, or it will appeal to the courts to enforce it.

Next August each vice-president should examin the assessment roll of his or her precinct, and when church property is not fully and fairly assessed, demand justice, and compliance with the law.

If at any time there are religious rites or ceremonies, prayers or Bible-reading in the public schools, at once protest, and insist on its discontinuance, and when it is persisted in, notify the Washington Secular Union secretary, and the whole force of the united Liberals of the state will be brought to bear to enforce justice and compliance with the law.

We hav no wish or intent to in the slightest degree encroach on the rights of others, but we are unitedly pledged, henceforth to fully protect and maintain our own.

The urgent need of election of a vice-president, to be the executiv officer and representativ of the Washington Secular Union, in every precinct in the state, is self-evident.

One of our greatest difficulties is that women often refuse to read any Liberal publication, much more to attend a Liberal lecture. Many will not even allow the subject to be talked of in their presence.

Without the earnest, hearty coöperation of women no local organization can long exist, and our success is impossible. If we win the women, we are then sure of the children, and more generous support, more real, live, earnest zeal in the cause, on the part of the men.

How get the truth before the women?

Women will read their local paper. I propose to send at least as often as every other week from a quarter column to two columns of really interesting items and brief articles pertaining to Liberalism, evolution, etc., that will awake to thought without arousing prejudice, that will stimulate curiosity and desire to hear further—live, readable items that will be read with avidity—to every vice-president in the state for publication in his local paper. But to do this work effectually I must hav the coöperation of vice-presidents in all parts of the state who will insure publication of items, to whom I can send publications for distribution to follow up the work.

In every precinct the vice-president should appoint from one to three persons who, if they cannot deliver an original oration, can and will learn one by rote, or at least read nicely, and conduct funeral services.

The Washington Secular Union proposes to furnish each vice-president with orations suitable for aged, middle-aged, youth, and babe, together with form of funeral services.

Also suggestiv form of by-laws for formation and conducting local unions—how to keep up interest, establish science school, lyceum, socials, semi-monthly dances, etc.

I am yet quite sick, sadly lacking strength—disease is robbing me of vim and energy. I appeal to the Liberals of Washington to help me in this work. I cannot write you all individually. You who love the cause, whose hearts are in this work, will you circulate copies of the constitution, secure members, and send me a list of their names, and as soon as Liberals of your neighborhood hav become members of the Washington Secular Union, urge their promptly electing a vice-president who shall at once open correspondence with me, and so keep the board of directors fully posted on the condition, wants, and needs of your precinct?

If you hav sent in your name, make a little extra effort and secure at least one more member. Write to me for copies of the constitution, or for any information desired; but act at once. Let us get ready now for effectiv work, and a grand victory shall reward our efforts. I need your help, your hearty coöperation, to enable me to discharge the duties of my office as secretary, especially at this time, so that, in my sick and feeble condition, I shall not be aggravated by the irritating fact that the cause is suffering because of my sickness and consequent lack of energy and ability to work. Help! help! help! Secure list of names of members, elect vice-presidents, and where this has been done write to me what you deem most necessary to giv renewed impetus to the cause in your neighborhood.

C. B. Reynolds,
Sec. Washington Secular Union.

Seattle, Wash.

The Religion of Humanity.

ITS BASIS.

It being an acknowledged fact that man only does his best when he is absolutely dependent upon his own exertions, and not when he has somebody else to fall back on, humanitarians claim that it is only possible for man to attain to the highest perfection, not by always expecting to be saved from and forgiven for his sins through somebody's suffering, but by once for all examining his every action, nay, even every word, and if he find it in any way or for any reason unworthy, at once remedying the misdeed—not going on and letting these misdeeds accumulate, and then offering prayer and sacrifice with the idea and belief of being forgiven. Humanitarians believe in acting properly, and making amends, if at all, by their actions—not by prayer. They believe, in short, that man must do his best, because it is his duty to his fellow-men, and not because he shall be rewarded by any supernatural being or agency. He must concentrate all his energies on his or her task, in order to accomplish it properly, because these energies are in his possession only for that purpose. Men should act toward their neighbors only in the most frank and aboveboard manner, not because they expect and wish to be rewarded in a future world, but because their conscience tells them that it is right to act in such a manner. They do not only say selfishly, "Do as you would be done by," but they say, do good for its own sake, not because of an expected return of favor, but because it is your duty to do good. You should no more be rewarded than the flowers are for producing their honey and fragrance; nay, you should not wonder, but should rather expect, like these very fragrant flowers, to be plucked for doing your duty.

ITS ADVANTAGES.

The first and most prominent advantage to be gained is peace—first to yourself, naturally following, as it almost always does, a sense of having done one's duty. It shall do away with all the intricacies of the so-called holy book, by abolishing its holiness. It shall do away with the immense number of human parasites—that is, bishops, priests, monks, pastors, nuns, etc., who, doing nothing but to practice deceptions of every kind, thrive upon the very marrow of the poor and unenlightened workingman. Having done away with these parasites, there shall be sufficient, aye, more than sufficient, means to educate their present victims, and to eventually remove the thick veil which shrouds their holy light of conscience.

Leonard J. Pastor.

A Voice From the West Indies.

Trinidad has just passed from a great state of excitement. Recently there was circulated about from one end of the island to the other Freethought leaflets, which caused quite a sensation among the orthodox classes. The Port-of-Spain Gazette, whose proprietor is a conservativ religio-maniac, employs a set of penny-a-liners to write whatever nonsense might spring from his fertil and capacious brain.

Commenting on the recent distribution of Freethought literature, one of the penny-a-liners said: "We hav received from some individual, doubtless ashamed to sign his name, two idiotic Atheistic tracts. . . . We hav every reason to believe that there is a knot of individuals in the community, with as much brains as principles, who hav taken upon themselvs to preach the scoffing, shameless tenets of a rank Atheism. A cat can look at a king, so can the foul mouthed Atheist rail at the almighty." And again, that "men of that stamp cannot long escape contact with the laws." These comparisons are all very fine to make, but when we consider under what circumstances they were written, what can we think but that the writer in question knows not how to make an analogy, or that he is ignorant of the very first principles of logic?

But again, when we take into consideration that the proprietor of this paper was dubbed a few years ago by one of the puisne judges with a title that fits him to perfection—no less a title than "an unmitigated ass"—when we consider all these facts, can we but say, "poor fellow?"

To return to the Freethought literature, the sensation it caused was never yet heard in any anti-religious commotion in the colony. The editor of the paper mentioned above called upon the attorney-general, and a meeting in "solemn conclave" was arranged to see whether the writer of these tracts could not be prosecuted for blasphemy. Besides the two individuals mentioned, there were the famous archbishop of Port-of-Spain, and the bigoted, fanatical solicitor-general. The whole affair was kept secret, but it failed deplorably. Blasphemy cannot be defined.

Considering the difficulties under which the small band of Freethinkers labor, and also their small number, we cannot but look with pride and satisfaction at the progress our cause is making here. When we look around us and see that in a population of nearly two hundred thousand, a small band of about one hundred and fifty people cause such a sensation, can we not but be satisfied and say, "Well done, thou noble pioneers of Freethought in Trinidad." When, in fifty years hence, the last mendicant friar is made to quit his abode and seek some other occupation whereby he may gain an honest livelihood, when the twenty-two different churches we hav in this city and its suburbs are all converted into colleges of science, theaters, and academies, then the generation that will then be living will look back and read of those noble names who braved an overwhelming majority so as to spread truth in this remote corner of the globe.

Trinidad might well be called a country of saints. I hav another saint to add to my former list of saints, of which the history is as follows: It appears that in the village of Arima in this island there was once a society connected with the church there, and who possessed a large statue representing Jesus Christ in the passion. The people gave the name of Saint Patience to the image. The society disbanded and the saint was taken away into the country on a cacao plantation where the owner, a lady, built a small shed to cover the poor fellow from getting wet, and from the hot rays of the sun. The estate was sold on account of the pecuniary embarrassment of the owner, to a Protestant, who took Mr. Saint Patience and placed him in the woods. He was found there a few weeks ago and taken into Port-of-Spain, where he was exhibited for a few days. The report was soon about town and thousands flocked to see the new saint, who it was reported began to work miracles. It was reported that in one day the person who had the saint in charge made $150. Now comes the sequel. Mr. Dominican friar visits the image and informs the people that authority from the archbishop must be had before it can be known whether it is to be worshiped or not. It is taken away to the Roman Catholic church, where I suppose that it will be placed in some corner and a collection-box placed near it, to extract pennies from the deluded victims.

SOTNAS.

Personal Antipathy.

Mr. Ingersoll has repeatedly been charged with injuring his own cause by speaking with too much vehemence, "as though," says a writer in the Baltimore American, "Christianity has done some activ personal wrong to him and he owed it a grudge which he intended to pay back with compound interest." Perhaps this is partly true, perhaps he does owe it a personal grudge. Mr. Ingersoll has a big heart, and I do not wonder, when he looks about him as he jostles along the crowded streets of New York and sees so much poverty and want, riches and plenty, side by side; so much degradation and oppression, superstition and hypocrisy, and knows that the money wasted on the costly temples of worship, paid to sky pilots, and shipped to foreign lands, might clothe the naked and feed the hungry throughout the breadth and length of this fair land—that he feels personally aggrieved and incensed. Indeed, when I look around me, first at my own family and find my precious wife so imbued by her early religious training as to be blind to reason, and sacrificing many of the innocent pleasures of life at the mandate of the church; when my little boys come home from the public school (for which I am taxed) full of the stories of the Bible deviled into them as "gospel truths," which I out of love for my wife cannot gainsay; when I visit my sisters only to hav them pity me for my skepticism and offer me "the sweet consolations of religion;" when I go out into the world to be constantly meeting persons who are practically slaves to their superstitious ideas, and to find in nearly every paper I pick up—alongside, perchance, of some ministerial scandal—a lot of religious twaddle about "Recognition in Heaven," or some such guess-work nonsense, it certainly makes me feel as though I had a personal grudge against Christianity. I go to church—I hav to go there to keep peace in the family—and I am insulted and hav my feelings and sense of justice outraged. I stay at home and the ringing of the church bells starts a flood of reveries that lead to honest indignation.

I walk the streets and meet the broadclothed gentlemen of the pulpit or pass the magnificent palaces which "keep open Sundays," and I think, Where does the money come from to support such follies? At the cradle, at the marriage, and at the grave I find these superstition-venders, and believing as I do that all this is folly and worse than folly, I feel that no words could be too strong to awaken my brothers to freedom. I see hypocrisy and Christianity hand in hand; I behold highwaymen robbing the poor "in the name of the Lord;" I see the institutions of learning checkmated by Bible-reading. I behold the little ones, dear innocent little ones, housed up in Sunday-schools and taught most outrageous falsehoods as truths. I am accused by my friends of being an ingrate and of committing horrible sin because I do not join my wife in teaching my children the doctrin of damnation and the kindred beauties of religion; so, am I to blame if I feel bitter against the institution which I know would lead me now, if it had the power, to the stake or the caldron or the gibbet?

Now for a suggestion, Mr. Editor. Don't you think a strong Liberal Club could be organized in this dear old Catholic citadel? Boston, Philadelphia, NewYork, Brooklyn, and other large cities hav such, but here we are with over 400,000 inhabitants and not a congenial "place of worship" for a pious old Infidel like me to put his head into. Couldn't you get one of your noblest workers to come down here and stir our people up? I will gladly contribute to the cause, and I believe there are many more here who will do the same.

EDGAR L. STROUGHTON.

Baltimore, April 13, 1890.

Religion in Civil Affairs Would Destroy Our Government.

From the Madison, Wis., State Journal.

A few days since, when the Wisconsin supreme court decided what is commonly known as the "Edgerton Bible case," the State Journal gave liberal extracts from the admirable opinions of Justices Lyon and Cassoday. The remaining opinion, by Justice Orton, is so clear on the point of the relation of the state constitution to religious teachings in the common schools, and withal so brief, that we are constrained to publish it in full, feeling sure that the able discussion of the question will be of great public interest and that the conclusions reached will meet with general concurrence. Justice Orton said:

"I most fully and cordially concur in the decision and in the opinions of Justices Lyon and Cassoday in this case.

"It is not needful that any other opinion should be written, but I thought it proper to state briefly some of the reasons which hav induced such concurrence in the decision.

"The right of every man to worship almighty God according to the dictates of his own conscience shall never be infringed; nor shall any man be compelled to attend, erect or support any place of worship . . . nor shall any control or interference with the rights of conscience be permitted or any preference be given by law to any religious establishments or modes of worship."—Constitution, Art. I, sec. 18.

"No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification for any office of public trust, under the state, and no person shall be rendered incompetent to giv evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of his opinions on the subject of religion."—Constitution, Art. I, sec. 19.

"The interest of 'the school fund,' and all other revenues derived from the school lands shall be exclusivly applied," etc., "to the support and maintenance of common schools in each school district," etc.—Art. X, sec. 2, subd. 1.

"The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment of district schools which shall be as nearly uniform as practicable; and such schools shall be free, and without charge for tuition, to all children between the ages of four and twenty years; and no sectarian instruction shall be allowed therein."—Art. X, sec. 3.

"Each town and city shall be required to raise by tax annually for the support of common schools therein a sum not less," etc.—Art. X, sec. 4. "Provision shall be made by law for the distribution of the income of the school fund among the several towns and cities of the state for the support of common schools therein," etc.—Art. X, sec. 5

"These provisions of the constitution are cited together to show how completely this state as a civil government, and all its civil institutions, are divorced from all possible connection or alliance with any and all religions, religious worship, religious establishments or modes of worship, and with everything of a religious character or appertaining to religion; and to show how completely all are protected in their religion and rights of conscience, and that no one shall ever be taxed or compelled to support any religion or place of worship, or to attend upon the same, and more especially to show that our common schools, as one of the institutions of the state created by the constitution, stand, in all these respects, like any other institution of the state, completely excluded from all possible connection or alliance with religion or religious worship, or with anything of a religious character, and guarded by the constitutional prohibition that 'no sectarian instruction shall be allowed therein.' They show also that the common schools are free to all alike, to all nationalities, to all sects of religion, to all ranks of society, and to all complexions. For these equal privileges and rights of instruction in them, all are taxed equally and proportionately. The constitutional name, 'common schools,' expresses their equality and universal patronage and support. Common schools are not common as being low in character or grade, but common to all alike, to everybody and to all sects or denominations of religion, but without bringing religion into them. The common schools, like all the other institutions of the state, are protected by the constitution from all 'control or interference with the rights of conscience,' and from all preferences given by law to any religious establishments or modes of worship. As the state can hav nothing to do with religion except to protect everyone in the enjoyment of his own, so the common schools can hav nothing to do with religion in any respect whatever. They are as completely secular as any of the other institutions of the state, in which all the people alike hav equal rights and privileges. The people cannot be taxed for religion in schools more than anywhere else. Religious instruction in the common schools is as clearly prohibited by these general clauses of the constitution as religious instruction or worship in any other department of state supported by the revenues derived from taxation. The clause that 'no sectarian instruction shall be allowed therein' was inserted ex industria to exclude everything pertaining to religion. They are called by those who wish to hav not only religion, but their own religion, taught therein, 'godless schools.' They are godless, and the educational department of the government is godless, in the same sense that the executiv, legislativ, and administrativ departments are godless. So long as our constitution remains as it is, no one's religion can be taught in our common schools. By religion I mean religon as a system, not religion in the sense of natural law. Religion in the latter sense is the source of all law and government, justice and truth. Religion, as a system of belief, cannot be taught without offense to those who hav their own peculiar views of religion no more than it can be without offense to the different sects of religion. How can religion, in this sense, be taught in the common schools without taxing the people for or on account of it? The only object, purpose, or use for taxation by law in this state must be exclusivly secular. There is no such source and cause of strife, quarrel, fights, malignant opposition, persecution and war, and all evil in the state, as religion. Let it once enter into our civil affairs, our government would soon be destroyed. Let it once enter into our common schools, they would be destroyed. Those who made our constitution saw this, and used the most apt and comprehensiv language in it, to prevent such a catastrophe. It is said if reading the Protestant version of the Bible in school is offensiv to the parents of some of the scholars, and antagonistic to their own religious views, their children can retire. They ought not to be compelled to go out of the school for such a reason, for one moment. The suggestion itself concedes the whole argument. That version of the Bible is hostil to the belief of many who are taxed to support the common schools, and who hav equal rights and privileges in them. It is a source of religious and sectarian strife. That is enough. It violates the letter and spirit of the constitution. No state constitution ever existed that so completely excludes and precludes the possibility of religious strife in the civil affairs of the state, and yet so fully protects all alike in the enjoyment of their own religion. All sects and denominations may teach the people their own doctrins in all proper places. Our constitution protects all and favors none. But they must keep out of the common schools and civil affairs. It requires but little argument to prove that the Protestant version of the Bible, or any other version of the Bible, is the source of religious strife and opposition, and opposed to the religious belief of many of our people. It is a sectarian book. The Protestants were a very small sect in religion at one time, and they are a sect yet, to the great Catholic church against whose usages they protested, and so is their version of the Bible sectarian, as against the Catholic version of it. The common school is one of the most indispensable, useful, and valuable civil institutions this state has. It is democratic, and free to all alike, in perfect equality, where all the children of our people stand on a common platform, and may enjoy the benefits of an equal and common education. An enemy to our common schools is an enemy to our state government. It is the same hostility that would cause any religious denomination that had acquired the ascendency over all others, to remodel our constitution, and change our government and all of its institutions, so as to make them favorable only to itself, and exclude all others from their benefits and protection. In such an event, religious and sectarian instruction will be given in all schools. Religion needs no support from the state. It is stronger and much purer without it.

"This case is important and timely. It brings before the courts a case of the plausible, insidious, and apparently innocent entrance of religion into our civil affairs, and of an assault upon the most valuable provisions of the constitution. Those provisions should be pondered and heeded by all of our people, of all nationalities and of all denominations of religion, who desire the perpetuity and value the blessings of our free government. That such is their meaning, and interpretation, no one can doubt, and it requires no citation of authorities to show. It is religion and sectarian instruction that are excluded by them. Morality and good conduct may be inculcated in the common schools, and should be. The connection of church and state, corrupts religion and makes the state despotic."

Items of Science.

A company has been chartered in Virginia, with a capital of $3,000,000, for extracting aluminum from North Carolina clay by a new process. In this process a combination of electricity, fusion, and distillation will be used, and it is claimed that nearly pure aluminum will be produced at a cost of less than thirty cents a pound.

A company in Colorado hav contracted for the construction of two hundred and twenty five miles of irrigating canals and fifteen large storage reservoirs. They intend to irrigate about half a million acres of land with water taken from the Arkansas river.

Antimony ore of high grade has been discovered in Kern county, Cal.

Dividends amounting to more than twenty-five millions of dollars hav been paid from Lake Superior copper mines on land originally owned by the St. Mary's Canal Mineral Land Company of Michigan. Many of the most profitable Michigan copper mines are on land originally owned by this company.

Nothing shows better the great progress made in the art of photography, from its origin to the present day, than pictures of clocks. In the early days, when an exposure of from a quarter to half an hour was required, both hands of the clock were blurred, the minute hand especially being lost in a fog. The improvement has been constant, and in modern photographs taken with quick exposure both hands are equally distinct.

Important sponge banks hav lately been discovered on the southern coast of Sicily, extending over a surface of from ninety to a hundred miles. All varieties of sponges hav been found there, including those in greatest commercial demand.

A long-distance telephone connects Buenos Ayres and Montevideo, crossing the Rio de la Plata by means of submarine cables twenty-eight miles in length. The charge for use is about a dollar a minute, and the line gives satisfaction both in loudness and in distinct articulation.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 26, 1890.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Pictorial Arguments Against the Church.

A FOUR HUNDRED PAGE CARTOON BOOK.

Two Hundred Pictures and Two Hundred Pages of Reading Matter.

Price, $2; advance orders solicited.

The Presbyterian Creed.

The Independent has been figuring on the probabilities of the revision of the Presbyterian Confession of Faith by the general assembly which meets at Saratoga on the 15th of next month. The Independent finds this state of things to exist: "Including the presbytery of Flint, in Michigan, which we suppose to be a new presbytery, as we do not find it in the 'Minutes of the General Assembly,' there are two hundred and twelve in all. We giv the vote of one hundred and twenty-two. Four others hav either declined or failed to vote, so that only eighty-six presbyteries are now to be heard from. The returns of the hundred and twenty-two show that they hav voted two to one in favor of revision. As the effect of not voting is really to vote against revision, the four presbyteries of Albany—which desire a new creed—Zacatecas, Alaska, and Urumia, must be added to the negativ vote, thus increasing it to forty-four. Forty-four is one-third of one hundred and thirty-two, consequently the affirmativ vote is six short of being two-thirds."

There is some difference of opinion as to whether a two-thirds vote is requisit, and that question will be decided by the general assembly. It is probable, however, that the two-thirds rule will be adhered to, which will render impossible any change in the Confession of Faith at present. But that so large a majority of the presbyteries favor revision is none the less significant, and indicates that the Presbyterian church, like other organizations, is subject to the law of evolution—something of which many people hav had serious doubts. The followers of Calvin hav been so grimly determined to learn nothing and orget nothing, that the wave of progress has apparently swept by them, leaving them anchored like a rock in a running stream. It is encouraging to know that some of them, at least, are making efforts to extricate themselvs from the mud. On this subject the Independent says: "One thing is clear, whatever may be the decision as to the question of a majority or two-thirds, that the Presbyterian church, as represented by its presbyteries, is not satisfied with its standards as they are. It desires that its confession be amended. Something must be done. Exactly what will be done is not clear. It may be revision; it may be a short new creed. Sooner or later, it will be one or the other."

Any man who is endeavoring to break away from the cast-iron cruelty of the Presbyterian creed is worthy of encouragement. That creed is such a libel on the character of any decent divinity and such a disparagement of mankind, that its complete or partial abolition cannot but help the progress of any country in which any considerable number of people hav been enslaved by it. From the time when Calvin busied himself in ordering the style of clothes to be worn and the food to be eaten by the citizens of Geneva to the last expulsion for heresy from the ministry of a Presbyterian preacher, the creed which Calvin and Farel concocted has been at once the most truly Christian and the worst of all Protestant efforts to befool mankind. "Fortunately for us," says Ingersoll, "civilization has had a softening effect even upon the Presbyterian church. To the ennobling influence of the arts and sciences the savage spirit of Calvinism has, in some slight degree, succumbed. True, the old creed remains substantially as it was written, but by a kind of tacit understanding it has come to be regarded as a relic of the past. The cry of 'heresy' has been growing fainter and fainter, and, as a consequence, the ministers of that denomination hav ventured, now and then, to express doubts as to the damnation of infants, and the doctrin of total depravity. The fact is, the old ideas became a little monotonous to the people. The fall of man, the scheme of redemption and irresistible grace, began to hav a familiar sound. The preachers told the old stories while the congregations slept. Some of the ministers became tired of these stories themselvs. The five points grew dull, and they felt that nothing short of irresistible grace could bear this endless repetition. The outside world was full of progress, and in every direction men advanced, while this church, anchored to a creed, idly rotted at the shore. Other denominations, imbued some little with the spirit of investigation, were springing up on every side, while the old Presbyterian ark rested on the Ararat of the past, filled with the theological monsters of another age."

And now, the old creed itself must soon succumb to the softening effects of civilization. It is only a few weeks ago that a Presbyterian minister said that "infant damnation is a legacy from our pagan ancestors," and was allowed to keep his pulpit. Some of the sleeping congregations hav awakened and some of the ministers can stand the stories no longer. They want to be more in harmony with the outside world, and so they demand the revision of the creed. It seems they never knew till now just what it contained, as Mr. Henry Day, one of the lay delegates to the Saratoga convention, confesses. Mr. Day is an elder in the church, yet when the Westminster confession was first under criticism, Mr. Day expressed himself as astonished to learn that he had been professing to believe in its fundamental teachings.

What is to be the effect of this movement for revision? Simply this, to still further discredit evangelical Christianity and to add to the ranks of the "Liberal Christians" and the Agnostics. The doctrin of election, which is now found abhorrent by the great majority of Presbyterians, is the very keystone of the Calvinistic creed, and its elimination will bring down the moss-covered theological arch, if the revisers carry their changes as far as logic demands. "Election and its declared consequences," says the Sun in commenting upon the revision movement, "lie at the very foundation, are the premises and the conclusions from premises necessary to the support of the entire system of Presbyterian theology. If they believe in the personality of God and in future retribution, they must believe in them. There is no escape short of Infidelity or Universalism." And the same journal further declares that this proposed revision is a "march toward Infidelity." Unquestionably these statements are true. It is a fact that the more cruelly absurd, logically damnable, and unfit for human adoption a creed or sect can be, the closer is it related to Christianity as built up from a literal acceptance of the Bible. The worst churches hav always been those which most closely followed the teaching of the two Testaments. Calvinism and Catholicism hav more support in that barbaric book than all the gentler sects put together. The fiddle plays all tunes, but some of its strings are louder sounding than others. The effect, therefore, of changing a creed so inextricably entangled with the Bible, must necessarily be followed by tearing out parts of the Bible itself.

Persecution for "Sabbath" Breaking.

A late issue of the Cleveland News and Herald has this dispatch from the Seventh Day Adventists of Battle Creek, Mich.:

"A peculiar case was tried in the circuit court at Troy, Obion county, Tenn., recently. The indictment was against R. M. King, and was based on the following charges: 'Plowing on Sunday and doing various other kinds of work on that day without regard to said Sabbath days.' Mr. King is a member of a small but respectable sect of Christians known as Seventh Day Adventists, who observe the seventh day (Saturday) as the Sabbath. Six witnesses were examined, five for the prosecution and one for the defense All the witnesses testified to the good character of the defendant as a law-abiding citizen, with the one exception of working on Sunday. The defendant offered to prove that he had been brought before a justice and fined for the principal offense charged in the indictment, and that he had paid his fine; but the court would not permit him to do so. The examination of the witnesses showed that two of them belonged to an organization whose members had bound themselvs together by a written agreement to prosecute every violation of the Sunday laws. The counsel for the defendant then offered to prove that men in the same neighborhood where Mr. King lived had cut wheat with a self-binder, rafted logs, and done other work on Sunday, for which they had never been called in question, but the court would not permit him to prove it. The work done by Mr. King was all on his own premises and not in sight of any public place of worship. The witnesses all testified that they were not disturbed in any way except that their moral and religious feelings were shocked. The cross-examination developed the fact that two of the witnesses were going to another part of the neighborhood after a cow, and a third was engaging harvest hands, when they saw Mr. King at work on Sunday. The defendant had lived in the same neighborhood from a child and had always borne a good character, both as a citizen and a Christian gentleman. About two years ago he changed his religious belief, uniting with the Seventh Day Adventists, since which time no opportunity has been lost by his former brethren to harass and injure him.

"The prosecuting attorney made an inflammatory speech, in which he confounded the Adventists with the Mormons. In the conclusion of his speech he said: 'I wish we had more Methodist churches, and more Baptist churches, and more Presbyterian churches, and more Episcopal churches, and more Catholic churches, until every man was brought under the benign influence of these churches; but I do not want any Adventist churches or Mormon churches. Mr. Guiteau, when he had a revelation from God (and I expect had a Seventh Day Adventist lawyer to defend him) took a pistol, and shot down the ruler of this nation, and they hung him, and that is what they ought to do with all of these fellows.'

"The jury brought in a verdict of guilty and assessed the fine at $75. In overruling a motion for a new hearing the judge said: 'The law is clear. I charged it properly. The fine is a reasonable one and well warranted. The laws are made to be obeyed, and Mr. King and all other men should and must obey or leave the country. I make these remarks that they may know that I intend to hav the law strictly enforced in the future. Mr. King and his brethren hav a right to keep another day if they choose, but as Christian men it is their duty to obey the laws of the state and they must do it.'

"People here are asking if we are returning to the days of Cotton Mather or of the Spanish Inquisition, that faithful law-abiding citizens must be fined or driven from the country when their only offense consists in quietly carrying out the convictions of conscience."

This is another outrage which, happily, can be committed only in a few unprogressiv states like Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, and Tennessee. That it can be committed in any state of the Union is of course a damage to the country, and a disgrace to humanity, but if the American Sabbath Union can compass its objects, we shall hav such scenes in every court room in the country. There are Sunday laws upon the statute books of all the states and territories but California and Arizona, and if the Sabbath Union can get the fanatics organized and compel their general enforcement the case of Mr. King will not be so conspicuous by reason of its comparativ novelty. If anyone thinks this is not so, let him read the speeches and reports of work done in the Sabbath Union's report. The Banner of Light truly says, "The spirit of bigotry is by no means dead—the age of intolerance has not yet entirely passed away. Old error dies hard, and the lover of personal liberty must be ever on the alert to guard his rights and to protect his principles at any cost, if he would not be overthrown by the enemy." United with the churches, these Sabbatarians hav vice-presidents and secretaries in every state, district secretaries working wherever opportunity presents, organizations in counties and villages with membership comprising a large part of the pious of the neighborhood, and traveling speakers using churches for week-day meetings to spread their tyrannical ideas. In many of the large cities they hav miscalled law and order leagues the special business of which is to poke their noses into other folks' business affairs and to make intolerable nuisances of themselvs generally by complaining of barbers, milkmen, candy and drug sellers, and such inoffensiv merchants and tradesmen. In Massachusetts alone there are over one hundred of these leagues of organized hypocrits, and it is their desire to make a Toronto out of every village in the United States; for they are never tired of holding up that priest-ridden and minister-ridden town as a model. At the annual meeting one fossil quoted from the description of Boston two hundred years ago written by an Englishman who visited the town. The letter so well pictures the state of society then, and the state again demanded by the Sabbath Union, that we print it here:

"Their observation of the Sabbath (which they rather choose to call by the name of the Lord's day, whensoever they hav occasion to mention it), is the strictest kept that ever yet I saw anywhere. On that day no man, woman, or child is permitted to go out of town on any pretense whatsoever; nor can any that are out of town come in on the Lord's day. The town being situated on a peninsula, there is but one way out of it by land, which is over a narrow neck of land at the south end of the town, which is inclosed by a fortification, and the gates shut by way of prevention.

"There is a ferry, indeed, at the north end of the town, but care is taken by way of prevention there, also. But if they could escape out of the town at either of these places it wouldn't answer their end, for the same care is taken all the country over to prevent traveling on Sundays, and they are as diligent in the detection of offenders of this sort all over the New England government as we in England are of stopping up of highways—more; and those who are of the Independent persuasion refrain from any attempts of this kind in point of conscience.

"And, as they will by no means admit of trading on Sunday, so they are equally tenacious about preserving good order in the town on the Lord's day; and they will not suffer anyone to walk down to the water's side, though some of the houses are adjoining to the several wharfs; nor, even in the hottest days of summer, will they admit of anyone to take the air on the common, which lies contiguous to the town, as Moorfield does to Finsbury. And if two or three people who meet one another in the street by accident, stand talking together, if they do not disperse immediately upon the first notice, they are liable to fine and imprisonment; and I believe, whoever it be that incurs the penalties on this account, are sure to feel the weight of them.

"But that which is the most extraordinary is that they commence the Sabbath from the setting of the sun on the Saturday evening, and, in conformity to that, all trade and business ceases, and every shop in the town is shut up. Even a barber is finable for shaving after that time. Nor are any of the taverns permitted to entertain company, for in that case, not only the town, but every person found therein, is finable.

"I don't mention this strict observance of the Lord's day as intended rather to keep people within the bounds of decency and good order than to be strictly complied with, or that the appointment of this duty was only by some primary law grown obsolete, but that it is now in full force and vigor, and that the justices, attended with a posse of constables, go about every week to compel obedience to this law."

Just think of the kind of men they must be who want that condition of things revived! But the greatest wonder of all is that they are supported by hundreds of thousands of persons, and can also find legislators and judges who will make and enforce laws at their command! To use the words of one of the opposers of Blair's Sunday Rest bill: "In the name of law, constitutional and statutory, moral and civil; in the name of enlightenment and progress; in the name of reason, why should the people of such a nation as this, living under such a Constitution as is our national Constitution, be asked to return to the wicked system that characterized the Middle Ages?" Yet that Tennessee judge could hav fittingly sat upon the judicial bench in Scotland or Massachusetts two hundred years ago. If there are any more like him in the land, may they, with him, soon be called to their rewards. They are too good for this world.

Mr. Harman Convicted.

Mr. E. W. Chamberlain, of this city, who made a journey to Kansas to help Mr. Harman in his legal defense, sends us this telegram: "Harman defrauded. Convicted on Markland and Whitehead letters before my arrival, judge apparently conniving. Trial a farce."

The folly of publishing the O'Neil letter is made clear by this conviction on the letters previously published. The Markland and Whitehead letters are not obscene at all, and could Mr. Harman hav had good counsel to defend him there would hav been a chance, notwithstanding Judge Foster's opinion expressed in his decision on the demurrer of Mr. Harman's counsel, of his acquittal. But the printing of the O'Neil letter caused his counsel to withdraw from his defense, and he was left alone. That was the reason why Mr. Chamberlain felt it to be his duty to go to Kansas, and it is much to be regretted that his presence was rendered valueless by the precipitancy of the court.

On the letters on which the conviction was gained we hav several times commented. They do not come within the meaning even of the unconstitutional Comstock law. It is a legal outrage to send a man to prison for printing them. So much we all know, but the practical question is, what can be done for Mr. Harman? We fear, nothing; but that can be told better when Mr. Chamberlain is heard from. He is fertil of resource, and it may be can devise some scheme of relief.

A Chance for the Sabbath Union.

The American Sabbath Union has issued its first annual report, and in it we find the basis and object of the Union stated as follows:

"The basis of this American Sabbath Union is the divine authority and universal and perpetual obligation of the Sabbath, as manifested in the order and constitution of nature, declared in the revealed will of God, formulated in the Fourth Commandment of the moral law, interpreted and applied by our Lord and savior Jesus Christ, transferred to the Christian Sabbath, or Lord's day, by Christ and his apostles, and approved by its beneficent influence upon personal and national life. The object of the American Sabbath Union is to preserve the Christian Sabbath as a day of rest and worship."

If the Union is so sure that Jesus and his apostles transferred the Sabbath from Saturday to Sunday that it makes the transference its basis, why does not the Union accept J. E. Remsburg's oft repeated offer to giv one hundred dollars to anyone who will show that assertion to be a fact by the Bible? The Sabbath Union needs funds, for the report shows that its treasury has been chiefly replenished from the pocket of E. F. Shepard, a gentleman who denounces all Sunday newspapers, but advertises his own journal of Saturdays as eminently fit print to be read on Sundays!

Editorial Notes.

THE Mail and Express says:

"At David Dows's funeral Dr. Rainsford commented on the fact that he had never connected himself with any Christian church, and, alas! commended him for it.

"D. D. himself now takes a different view."

What does Mr. Shepard mean by this--that David Dows is now in hell, and is sorry for it?

THE kind of Catholic society which meets the approbation of the authorities of that church is the Boston "Order of Athenians," the constitution of which has this provision: "At any of its meetings the pastor of the parish may enter without permit or passport." This, according to a Catholic journal, shows the right spirit. There is, however, another provision which might hav been added that we conceive would suit the priests even better than this—something to the effect that the pastor might also use the members for doormats whenever and wherever he saw fit to do so!

THE Catholic Review is interested in the tariff bill now before Congress, and waxes very indignant at the rumor that Congress is about to put a tariff on stained glass windows for churches, owing to the pressure brought to bear upon the committee by the very few American manufacturers. Although there is at present a duty of forty per cent on stained glass, the churches get their windows free by special exemption, and the proposal to take away that privilege and "leave the church furnishers and church builders at the mercy of the tariff or in the clutches of the American manufacturers," as the Review puts it, is held by the church to be little short of sacrilege. Probably if the Roman church bishops could hav their way, the men who proposed such a scheme would be racked.

A MAN by the name of Brown has begun in Indianopolis the publication of a driveling patent-plate paper called the Ram's Horn. It is supposed to be a religious sheet. Mr. Brown advertises himself extensivly as a converted Infidel, and was, he says, "one of the mistaken number who, a few years ago, helped to send a New York Infidel editor on a trip around the world, in order that he might study the different religions from personal observation, and thereby be better qualified to pitch into Christianity." It is hard to see where the mistake was made by Mr. Brown, unless he thought that Mr. Bennett would supply him with brains as well as books for his money. We think, indeed, that if Mr. Brown bought a set of "Round the World" his act was in every way more creditable than his present venture in patent-plate religion, and if that was the worst act of his life he has been a singularly virtuous individual. Mr. Brown alleges that he was converted four years ago and now "engages in the publication of the Ram's Horn because he believes that he owes it to God and Christian people to do all in his power to help make known the truth against which he formerly battled." Buying that set of books undoubtedly needs an awful lot of atonement, but if Mr. Brown could make his sacrificial offering assume some other shape than the issuance of this stereotype foundry sheet a long suffering public would probably be grateful.

A CUBAN correspondent of the Herald declares that the people in Cuba desire independence from Spain or annexation to the United States. One of the reasons for the change in dependency is thus given: "Another paper, La Lucha, has also been suppressed, because it contained extracts from a private letter of the late Captain-general Salamanca to the minister of Ultra Mar. Previous to its suppression La Lucha announced that the treasury intended to prefer charges against the clergy. It is alleged that churches which hav only one priest and one janitor hav been drawing salaries for two priests, and that churches which hav one priest and two janitors hav been drawing salaries for three priests. As the clergy are very powerful these charges may not be pressed, and even if a decision should be given against them it is quite likely that the court itself would be suppressed by the government."

THE Springfield State Register prints this item among its religious intelligence: "The Rev. L. C. Goodrich retires today from the pastorate of the Christian church at Mt. Pulaski to assume charge of the 'People's church,' organized in this city some time ago. He also expects to establish what he calls a 'non-sectarian' congregation in Mt. Pulaski. In an article in the current number of the Mt. Pulaski News, he says: 'Having myself publicly denied and ignored the infamous and God-dishonoring doctrin of an endless hell, that is, literal fire, and believing that punishment for sin is certain and that God demands final and inexorable justice, not revenge, of all men, and that punishment is causatory, and effects good, not evil, now, from all these considerations, and others which I will mention in my farewell discourse on Sunday night next, I am compelled to announce that I will on Sunday night, March 16th, at 7:30 P.M., cease to preach for any denomination or church having for its chief end only sectarian bigotry.'" This seems to be a case of a good man gone right—something very rare among the ministers.

LAST February Wallace Nelson, an English Freethought believer, issued at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia, the first number of a monthly Freethought journal called the Stockwhip. The postmaster-general promptly declined to afford him postal facilities except at transient postal rates. Of the postmaster-general's action Mr. Nelson says: "To deny to a Freethought publication privileges accorded to religious ones, is an act of despotism worthy of Russian imperialism. Such high-handed authority must be resisted to the death; he who tamely submits to tyranny is a traitor to liberty, and deserves to be a slave. The executiv government has no right, moral nor legal, to invade our rights because it does not agree with our opinions. If our publication is illegal, let us be prosecuted at law. If we are guilty of blasphemy, let that charge be preferred against us before the proper tribunals. If we violate the law, the law has, perhaps, a right to punish us; but we deny the right of the executiv government to become at once our prosecutor and our judge, and to condemn us unheard. We assure our readers that this attempt to persecute us, will only inspire us with greater vitality. The existence of such contemptible bigotry, even in high quarters, is a splendid justification of our policy, and will, doubtless, win us increased sympathy from our friends. Already one Sydney news-agent has ordered 1,000 copies of our next issue. In order to defeat the government we shall, for the present, increase the size and price of our publication, and, if our friends continue to support us, we shall continue to exist, and even to flourish, in spite of all obstacles."

WHAT Mr. H. O. Pentecost would probably call "long range" alarm is that displayed by the Protestants of Toronto who hav sent to the German emperor the following document:

"DEAR AND HONORED SIR: As citizens of the western world who feel the pulsations of the life that throbs at this hour in the heart of the Germans, we desire to assure you that, having followed your accession to the throne with grave apprehension and alarm, learning that the Jesuits hav expressed a determination to return in force to the land from which they were banished in consequence of their implacable hostility to the government of which the late emperor William I. of blessed memory was the honored head, equally sad hav we been made by assurances that negotiations hav been entered into which shall recognize Pope Leo XIII. as the head of the government, which is false in fact and hurtful in theory.

"Germany is the natural head of Protestantism. Luther marked off the channel along which is the current of Freethought sweeping into the future. To surrender to Rome is to cut loose from God and betray the trust committed to the liberty-loving people of every land. Your rejection of the overtures of Leo XIII. in the spring of 1887, your loyalty to God and his commands, manifested in your elevated purpose to honor and keep the holy Sabbath at home and abroad, and your determination to champion the people's interests, lead us to hope that you hav been chosen of God to strike Romanism its fatal blow and to build up the nation of which you are the honored head in all ennobling virtues. March at the head of the advancing thought of the hour and you shall be more than emperor of Germany; you shall be one of the leaders of the embattled hosts of God on earth."

It occurs to us that the Protestants of Toronto can find their Jesuit enemy much nearer home than Germany and in sufficient strength to tax the resources of themselvs, Kaiser William, and that God who is, according to them, all on their side.

Then the Good Result Will Be Produced.

From the Independent Pulpit.

The Truth Seeker Company announce that they will publish a volume of the illustrations that hav appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER from time to time. A judicious selection of these illustrations will, no doubt, be productiv of good results.

Letters from Friends.

GREENSBURGH, PA., April 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Two old subscribers, and the two new ones I herewith inclose, all vote for pictures. JNO. S. BYERS.

DENVER, COL., April 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed is $3.25, for which send me the ANNUAL for 1890, and the book of cartoons as soon as completed. Very respectfully, FRITZ THIES.

BALTIMORE, MD., April 14, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The inclosed is for Heston's picture book when published. I would hav preferred a book of his Bible illustrations, but hope that will also be forthcoming.

Truly yours, A. PARLETT LLOYD.

CANNONSBURG, PA., April 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $8.75 for four new subscribers for THE TRUTH SEEKER and Col. R. G. Ingersoll's argument on "Blasphemy." BEN EYNON.

MOUNT PLEASANT, PA., April 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The pictures, and the paper altogether, come as a pleasant treat every week, which I would surely miss if it was not forthcoming. JAMES RODGERS.

SCOTTSVILLE, ARK., April 5, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Send me the ANNUAL and other books named. I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for ten years or more. I could not do without it. I vote for the cartoons.

W. R. HALE.

ELDORADO, IA., April 5, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $3.25, for which send THE TRUTH SEEKER and ANNUAL for 1890. My vote on the cartoon question is, continue the cartoons if possible.

Yours respectfully, JOS. HUNTSINGER.

ROWLEY, COL., May 7, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5 for myself and a new subscriber. You can count these two votes for the pictures. As far as I am concerned I shall take THE TRUTH SEEKER with or without pictures. F. SHRALL.

OPHIR, CAL., April 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am in favor of Heston's pictures, and will do something for them as soon as I possibly can. The boys at Ophir, Cal., last Friday gave the Salvation Army a shower of rotten eggs and quartz rocks for the benefit of their souls.

LEWIS KAISER.

BURNS, MINN., April 6, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find money for the ANNUAL for 1890, and "Crimes against Criminals," by R. G. Ingersoll. Keep Heston at work, is the word with me, and I will send something to help pay him after a while.

Yours, etc., E. M. RATHBUN.

FORT SILL, IND. TERR., April 7, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I am glad that you hav decided to publish the pictures of the dear TRUTH SEEKER in book form. I herewith inclose $5—$2 for the cartoon book, the rest for the ANNUAL and other books as on list inclosed.

C. C. DE RUDIA.

CLOVERPORT, KY., April 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I think I will be able to send in two new subscribers. When I renew my own subscription in May I will send and get the cartoon book. I am doing all I can for the cause wherever I go. Some twelve years ago I was the only Freethinker in my neighborhood. Now several of the best men there are Freethinkers. W. B. CLARK.

IOWA CITY, IA., April 6, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5 and appropriate as follows: $1 for Brother Heston and $2 for his forthcoming book, $1 to the Literature Fund, and balance as per order inclosed. I hav been a constant reader of the dear old TRUTH SEEKER for fifteen years, and will continue for fifteen more provided I liv so long. J. J. DIETZ.

NAT. SOLDIERS' HOME, LEAVENWORTH, KAN., Jan. 9, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Great work you hav done. An immense Union is in waiting for you to create, which shall burst forth through the clouds of superstition and cast into oblivion the whole. Words cannot express my gratitude to all great laborers in the cause for humanity. Send me the ANNUAL.

FLORIAN LEBER, SR.

S. DENNIS, MASS., April 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Continue my name on the roll. The paper suits me to a charm. I hav been an old shipmaster and hav sailed the world over for more than fifty years. Keep THE TRUTH SEEKER under all sail, and may she ever hav a fair wind, and never alter her course, but run down all error and superstition, and sink it ten thousand fathoms deep.

Yours truly, A. HALLETT.

RIDGWAY, MO., March 26, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $7.40, for which send tracts and books as directed. I hav been trying for some time to get a subscriber. I finally succeeded in getting one for a year; and one trial subscriber, but I think he will renew when his time is out. Liberalism is growing here some, and, I think, will get stronger in a few years. We like the cartoons very well, and here are three votes for them. I think THE TRUTH SEEKER is the best paper published.

E. M. GILES.

CANTON, O., April 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $2—$1 for the balance of my subscription, twenty-five cents for the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL, and seventy-five cents for Heston. I am glad to see in the paper that you hav received enough new subscribers and money to continue the pictures for a year at least. I am doing some missionary work now with my paper, and I hav the promis of one new subscriber when I renew, and perhaps more. I will do all I can to get more till that time. D. S. AUNGST.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., April 9, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed I send $5 for a friend of this city to pay for THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and also for the forthcoming book of pictures. The gentleman is a Liberal Spiritualist—is particularly pleased with the pictures as a means of educating Christians who are only able to take in ideas from object-lessons.

Our city is favored at this time with a series of lectures by Dr. J. L. York, who is moving the minds of the people, and stirring up the muddy streams of ignorance and superstition as they hav never been stirred before. MARY A. WHITE.

GLENS FALLS, April 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I think the Freethinkers ought to get up a petition for the repeal of the law that givs all foreigners the privilege of voting. None should hav that privilege that owe their allegiance to Rome. None but American citizens ought to hav the power to vote. It is giving the scum of creation a chance to crush our best institutions. It is too much to bear. They hav desolated every country where they hav got the power, and it is asking too much to request to let them spread their rust and mildew over this America.

H. A. HOLCOMB.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., April 7, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $10; place the same to my credit to pay for Watson Heston's pictorial educator. Send me two copies. Then I will decide to whom I will send a copy free. I believe the picture book will find a ready sale. It will be an eye-opener to the investigator and a powerful weapon in the hands of Freethinkers. I am anxious to hav the pictorial Bible appear. You can calculate on me to help on the good work. Long life to Watson Heston and THE TRUTH SEEKER. Yours truly, R. BUTTERFIELD.

NEW CAMBRIA, KAN., April 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Although only a private in the Liberal ranks, I wish to say a word in regard to the course the Secular Union has mapped out. I approve of its present course, and hav circulated petitions on three different occasions, which givs me a pretty good chance to know how much help we can get from Christians. I circulated a petition in Illinois for the taxation of church property. With very little effort I got sixty-eight signers, knowing the most of them personally. Both Catholics and Protestants signed it. It is safe to say fully one-third were Christians of some kind.

JOHN W. ABBOTT.

FOSTER CENTRE, R. I., April 9, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $2, for which you will send me the cartoon book when published.

Foster Centre is a way-back place in the big state of Rhode Island, away from railroads. Nothing but the old-fashioned stage brings the mail. But the people, though old-fashioned folks, are more Liberal than in that ignorant orthodox camp of Georgiaville. The only nuisance in the place is one Baptist church that they do not run but one Sunday in four for the lack of a minister. If they were all that way, what a sight to behold! I will look around and see if I cannot get a subscriber. Times and money are not very good at present.

Yours truly, WILLIAM A. BENNETT.

YPSILANTI, MICH., April 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Every man, woman, and child should read Remsburg's life of grand old Tom. Thomas Paine's "Rights of Man," "Common Sense," and "Crisis" should be in every school-room in this land. It is strange how few know there are any such works in existence, much less of their real character. If they were fully known and understood, the man who undertook to rob him of his well-earned fame would meet with such a rebuke that a second edition would not be necessary. I am much pleased with the able articles found in THE TRUTH SEEKER so far. I think you can safely count on me as a fixture in the future.

Very respectfully yours, JAMES P. DICKINSON.

SAN JOSE, CAL., April 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $10 to help the cause of Freethought a little. Let it go toward a sample copy fund, which I think should be established in every Freethought office in the United States. My idea of a sample copy fund is, to send out sample copies, not to old-established Infidels, but to the young students of high schools, normal schools, universities, colleges, and seminaries. You cannot change the mind of old bigots, for they hav lost their reason. You need not try to change the mind of a good Infidel, for the "whole need not a physician, but they that are sick." Try the young students whose minds are not made up. Good luck to the old TRUTH SEEKER. My best wishes go with this.

SAMOS PARSONS.

CLINTON, IA., April 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: "A Truth Seeker Around the World," four volumes, came to hand yesterday. I am well pleased with it. I hope you may be able to sell thousands. I accompanied Mr. Bennett as far as Edinburgh last evening, and recognize his trip across the ocean as very much like my own of sixteen months ago. Inclosed I send you $10, which I wish you to apply on the above four volumes, also a cartoon book, and send it when ready. And I would giv $1 more with pleasure for the book, if you would embellish it with likenesses of E. Macdonald, C. P. Somerby, and Mr. Heston. Now suit yourself; pay your money and take your choice. Hoping you are having success in your work upon it, I remain, Fraternally, JAMES A. GREENHILL.

[We'll "split the difference" with our friend and put in Mr. Heston's picture.—ED. T. S.]

PORT OF-SPAIN, TRINIDAD, March 19, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Having the pleasure of seeing one of your valuable journals of January 4th, and being delighted with the pictures on first and last pages, I am compelled to take the liberty to pray that you will continue the same, as I am about to become a subscriber and induce several of my friends to do the same. After reading the contents and studying the same carefully, I can but conclude to be one of your number. The present state of Trinidad requires such a paper to enlighten its benighted inhabitants on the truths of nature, and remove from their priest-stricken consciences the darkness of the doctrins of the church of Rome. I therefore beg that you will forward to me by the earliest opportunity a copy of your paper, with the terms of subscription to Trinidad. I may state that I hav acted as agent for many publishers of magazines in the United States, and should you require an agent my way I shall undertake the business with all diligence. Send me one of your catalogs of books, and any useful papers on Freethought that you can spare.

THOS. C. JACKSON.

IPAVIA, ILL., April 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I cannot think of doing without THE TRUTH SEEKER. To me it is a continual light, sparkling with richness in reality during the day, and a beautiful vision by night (Jacob's ladder). Keep it shining, for many poor, benighted travelers will be guided into the path that leads to Freethought truth. As the lamp was an improvement on the candle, as the electric light was an improvement in beauty and brilliancy on the gas light, so are the truth seekers in advance of those studying myths for miracles. We are in for an intellectual war. It cannot be avoided. The pen held in the hand of THE TRUTH SEEKER, guided by Science, is moving on, casting light into unexplored regions. Reason has gone forth and is battling for supremacy. Can anyone doubt the result? Why, it is like the eagle and the owl—one loves light, the other darkness; one is brain and wings, the other loud noise and eyes. Surely Reason in her brilliancy will shine preëminently above all Gods, Christs, and Bible myths. And as the good child remembers and venerates the hand that guided it in infancy, so all the truth seekers will remember the G. O. TRUTH SEEKER, for leading us from darkness into light. C. S. RANDOLPH.

GREENSBURG, April 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Being a reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER, I desire to express my admiration for its enticing pages; especially the first and last, as I am greatly in favor of the pictures, for this one particular object. In our town we are surrounded by Catholics and Protestants. The Catholics dare not, and the Protestants will not, read the Bible, until they see these pictures, and are so truthfully informed that such is found in their holy book, which they certainly deny—but soon, without a long search for it, they must be convinced of the fact. So this is one of the ways I can get their curiosity aroused enough to read their holy Bible.

Words cannot express the praise Col. R. G. Ingersoll and John Peck really deserve, and to me their talks are first in the field.

But our town has entirely too much superstition in it, with about twenty agents at its head, for it ever to be honored with such able speakers, which most certainly would be a great benefit to all if they would only allow their thinking faculties to comprehend honestly for them. But I want to see as many of your papers with the pictures in them in our green town as possible, and I shall do all I can to hav the people read their own belief, for if a few more would read what they pretend to believe I know a great many ideas would be changed. H. H. NULL.

FOND DU LAC, WIS., April 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $14 75, for which send THE TRUTH SEEKER to names inclosed, and the ANNUAL and cartoon book and other books per list. I hav tried for some time, but this is all the subscribers I hav got, and all favor the pictures and will bolt if Heston gets converted.

Our supreme court, on the application of some Catholics, has decided, in effect, that the Protestant Bible shall not be read in our public schools. The good to result may be small, except in places and abroad, because before it becomes permanent and widespread they will see the Liberals are quietly looking on and enjoying the Kilkenny fight, and that they are feeling as the old Quaker lady did who said when she saw her husband and the bear fighting, that her spirit only moved to see a good fight but she had no choice which whipped.

And now we hav another question. The Catholics and Lutherans are making a fuss about the Bennett law, so called, which requires all persons having under their control a child between the age of seven and fourteen years to cause such child to attend annually some public or private day school, where shall be taught—the radical doctrin—reading, writing, arithmetic, and United States history, in the English language, for twelve consecutiv weeks, under penalty of a fine from $3 to $20. And the Democracy will accept their assistance, and hand-bill the scheme for a campaign, expecting nothing but their votes and the spoils. And the Republicans will fight on any question for the spoils. So that another term of the Dark Ages must be endured.

On the pictures, after reading much of what you hav published on the subject, I will say I am glad the pictures must continue, and so satisfy reasonable people. Though they may freeze and scare a Christian at sight, that is what they are made for; and no Liberal can expect a person fooled and made to believe any Christian creed when young, who has never outgrown it, will take the paper or do anything but burn or destroy it. DR. W. C. PRIEST.

ARAGO, ORE., March 30, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav labored diligently to get you a few new subscribers, but hav failed. Our section of country has sustained considerable loss by floods, and people are loth to part with money except for necessaries. There is a bright outlook for the future, however, and I may succeed better hereafter. I hav sustained considerable loss myself, so I am short of the filthy lucre. However, I send you the last five dollars I hav just now, trusting to providence to again fill up the purse (and if it doesn't I know persistent effort will), to show you my appreciation of THE TRUTH SEEKER by paying two years in advance.

I was interested in the cartoon controversy, and anxiously awaited the result. I intended ere this to register my vote in favor of retaining the cartoons. It seems the objection to them is, they ridicule things sacred to the other fellow. Now, what more potent power is there than ridicule to open the other fellow's eyes? It is my experience that my TRUTH SEEKERS hav done better missionary work with the cartoons than before they appeared. There are whole sermons in some of the pictures on the first page, and sometimes two in one of those on the last page. If the caricatures were less grotesque, would it make any difference? If they were discontinued, would THE TRUTH SEEKER be held in any higher estimation by the other fellow? I think not.

Yours fraternally, J. HENRY SCHROEDER.

EATON RAPIDS, MICH., April 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: When I commenced reading the "Letters from Friends" in THE TRUTH SEEKER of March 22d, my eye first fell on that of Lizzie Praise Hawkins, and I gave a hearty laugh at the reception she gave the Bible agent; and my heart gave a throb of sympathy, and in imagination a hand-clasp to her, in her enthusiasm in her Arizona home. The next letter, that of James Porgey, is only a repetition of the many so-called Liberals who are afraid to come out and own that they are. We hav many here in our town who through fear of Mrs. Grundy and Christian patronage, keep dark publicly as to their belief, even going so far as to patronize the church. I can hardly feel contempt enough for such a humbug. We are talking some of having, in a few weeks, a good speaker in our place for a lecture or two. Would it not be well to come from quite a distance to help enjoy it with us? There are Liberals enough here to welcome those that would like to come. Due notice will be given in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

If the book containing pictures is ever printed, send one copy to my address.

Now one thing more and I am done—and I think it will be the first suggestion of the kind ever given to the public, unless Liberal. Mo., might claim it. It is this: Why can we not hav a Liberal school? Christians hav theirs; why can we not? My daughters hav attended school here for many years and they hav been compelled to hear morning prayers, religious hymns sung, and other such nonsense. This we hav been compelled to support, and our children to hear, and I for one am not content to hav it so. Now, friends, what do you say about it? Can we hav a school started? MRS. R. E. ATWOOD.

POTTER, ARK., March 30, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: As it is more a duty than privilege for Freethinkers to write to our famous periodical, THE TRUTH SEEKER, I hav been impressed to write. I like to read the letters of our friends in that noble paper. I was a faithful member of the Methodist church for over fifteen years. I really feel ashamed to own it. I read the Bible a great deal during that time. I noticed a great many passages which appeared strange to me, but never conversing with anyone or reading any book or paper on the opposit side, I was slow to investigate. But, nevertheless, I commenced. I advanced slowly in all ways, never biting off more than I could chew. But I steadily held my ground, with parson and all. Is it possible a God would hate little children before they are born, that he himself made? If so, I hate him. I see in one of Talmage's sermons he says, in speaking of the Westminster creed, there is one belief sufficient for all, that is to believe Jesus Christ is the son of God. But to believe this is just as hard a job as any of the rest, for the same evidence you hav to rely on for that teaches all the rest of the absurdities found in that book. By accident a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER was placed in my hands some time ago, and I never had anything stimulate me so, and I hav subscribed for it and hav done my part to induce others to do so. I will giv you a few names of Liberals in this country, to whom it might be of advantage to send a sample copy of your paper and a little sheet of literature.

Some Freethinkers hav to be instructed with some good reason before they can realize their duty to help on the good cause.

The cartoons, I think, set off our paper nicely.

The Christians in this country are softening down. The clergy do as much work as ever, but with less effect. People are beginning to peep behind the curtains to see if any ghost is there; they do not see any, and they hav mostly quit trembling. There are a few yet who cannot be induced to accept their reason. They are as a negro was about an elephant. On seeing an elephant he said, "Good Lo'd, what a mule! You don't catch dis darkey foolin' 'bout dat mule, case he's got a tail on bofe ends." Some people are afraid to fool with the Bible.

I will be glad to see that picture book, with explanations. I send you twenty-five cents for the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL. I am too poor to help the cause as I would wish.

Peace and prosperity to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and all good, honest Infidels. I had as soon be called by that name as any. J. R. PERRY.

LAHORE, PUNJAUB, INDIA, March 6, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I beg to take this opportunity to inquire herein whether you could tell me of a gentleman amongst your Secular friends who could spare a little of his time and talents for the propagation of Freethought principles in this land, Punjaub. The advent of English education, with the diffusion of scientific ideas of the West, has prepared a large number of men here to accept Secular principles. The people in this part of the country hav long been accustomed to come in contact with foreign views on matters social and religious, and are consequently more susceptible to commonsense principles than their brethren in the East and South. The field for sowing Freethought here is large and fertil. Only a steady, practiced sower is wanting, and if some one able to propagate what he knows and believes to be true could be induced to try his talents for the amelioration of his fallen brethren in this priest-ridden country, I doubt not that he would not hav long to wait for a plentiful harvest as the result of his labors. All that is wanted is to express in reasonable, logical language, by tracts, pamphlets, and reviews, the superstitious notions that hav got hold of the people, through priestly education, about speculativ subjects. What I mean is that if some Secular gentleman willing to enlighten his fellow-beings in this benighted land would undertake to show the untenability of the dogmas and doctrins that are being preached and taught here by advocates of theology—if he would please to write out critical reviews of the publications issued by these advocates in support of their theses, I hav every hope that the educated community here, who are mostly open to conviction, would not take long to be converted to Secularism. I can send the theological publications mentioned here on demand. If I can hear from any gentleman who would be willing to help us, I will communicate with him. GOVERDHAN DASS.

CENTERVILLE, UTAH, March 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please send two ANNUALS. Well, it seems most of your readers are giving their opinions in regard to the pictures, so I suppose I must giv mine, which is, let the pictures continue, for there is broad meaning in each one. But it seems there are a few that are against them. Well, now let me ask all the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER this question, Do we not get the full worth of our money independent of the cartoons? Mr. Heston nor no other person can make that infernal old Jew book appear too ridiculous. I am one with John Peck. I am on the warpath against all cursed, illogical, twaddling humbug from this time forth.

I want to say a little about what you say about this infernal Mormon, treasonable humbug in THE TRUTH SEEKER of Feb. 22, 1890, entitled, "Some Persecution by the Dominant Sect." It seems you are mistaken with regard to Mormon rascality. The American government has disfranchised the whole beastly, adulterous outfit. The government is right in doing so. This Mormon hierarchy is an alien government to this nation. No person can be a good Mormon and at the same time be a loyal citizen of this great nation. Of course that infernal old Jew book backs up all the rascality and dishonest tricks of these saintly thugs, including murder. Yes, this mountain Mormonism is an organized system of crime and rascality. But there is a change coming over its dreams since the 10th of February.

I hav no fault to find with THE TRUTH SEEKER, but will say to some of your readers, do not find fault or throw out any insinuations on Mr. Parton, or any that hav written against the cartoons. I expect Mr. Parton, with others, pay for their paper as well as the rest of us, and are as desirous for the final overthrow of all Bibles and humbugging priestcraft. And remember we are not all constituted alike, so as to those that do not like the pictures, let them hav the privilege to say so in their own way. WILLIAM WILLIAMS.

SHINGLE HOUSE, PA., April 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav had it in contemplation for a long time to subscribe for your paper. I hav read it more or less for a number of years past. The numbers that I hav read were some that I borrowed from the neighbors. I hav taken a great comfort in reading THE TRUTH SEEKER, and think it is not only a truth seeker but also a truth teller. When I read in history of the doings of that devil of devils, the Catholic church—the burning at the stake and robbing of people for opinion's sake, the tyrannical and unjust laws that they get passed in their favor by which they are freed from taxation or from bearing any of the burdens of the state—my blood fairly boils with hatred and indignation toward the whole system of Christianity. And the Protestants are not much better. They hav lived up to the divine command, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to liv," and thereby thousands of poor, innocent people hav been hanged or put to death in some way—people who were most of them better folks in every way than the bigots who murdered them. And when I read in the old book about the doings of the God that they want us to worship—where he commanded the Israelites to dash the little children to pieces and to rip up the women except those who had not known a man, and to take such as had not known a man and keep them to gratify their lusts! Call such a God a God of mercy forsooth! The meanest devil that we ever heard of never was accused of such cruelties. In the language of Robert Ingersoll, "Great God, what a God!" I would sooner fall down and worship the most hideous Chinese idol than such a God, for an idol, if it did no good, would do no harm.

A couple of sky-pointers are holding a protracted meeting in this place. They are both big, strapping fellows and able, if they would, to work in the woods or on a farm. But you will not catch them doing that. It would soil their pretty white hands. They are both great pets with the ladies. I consider all such men to be nothing more than genteel paupers. And all that such men get from me they can stick in their eye and it will not hurt them. If I hav anything to giv away I will giv it to some poor family who are not able to work. LEWIS STEVENS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: All good Christians profess to believe the whole Bible from beginning to end. Now, as the Bible contains so many contradictions, it is easy for any Freethinkers in a controversy to silence them. One will always find that the more ignorant one is, the more sure he is that he knows the will of God. The blind belief and ignorance of the mass is astonishing, and is the direct cause of the amazing arrogance of the clergy, who put themselvs up as vicars of Christ and God, to promulgate his will, and what they say and teach people must not doubt nor inquire into, but take as given from God. And the people obey their behest. Yet this is called the nineteenth century, so much praised for progress and inventions. With Puck, I exclaim, "What fools these mortals be!" To all that is true, good, and sensible in the Bible I agree, but the rest I reject. The Christian accepts much more—but, to be sure, only what suits him, too, and that part to which he cannot agree he tries to twist out of all sense, to coincide. Now, where is the line to be drawn? I believe less; the Christian much more, but still not all. The Christian believes in a future heaven and hell. I believe I will return to the existence I was in before born, and that time suited me well enough then and will hereafter. To refute a Christian's hereafter and show his ignorance of it I cite him his own Bible: "For that befalleth the sons of men which befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them. As the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they hav all one breath, so that a man hath no preëminence above a beast, for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again. Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" (Eccl. iii, 19–21). Who knoweth? I ask again. Belief proves nothing. Belief commences where knowledge ends. "Wherefore I perceive that there is nothing better than that a man should rejoice in his own works; for that is his portion. For who shall bring him to see what shall be after him?" (Eccl. iii, 22). True, true. But to get a minister into a discussion is almost impossible. He has always an engagement, and is in haste to go. The ministers feel their littleness, their false position, in presence of an independent man. But when in their pulpits, these cowards' castles, their arrogance has free run and swing, and no limit. The clergy put themselvs up as mankind's keepers, as leaders and teachers of morals to be found only in the Bible, what they please to call God's word, when any intelligent man knows that ministers are the most immoral beings, as a class. FREDERICK KOEZLY.

BYRON, MINN., April 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: While I hav not sent you any new subscribers I hav at the same time influenced some to send in subscriptions to you, and am pleased to say they are professional men and good citizens, men who dare think for themselvs, men who believe that the highest attainment is to help one's fellow-man. I think it almost wasting time to ask any other kind of men to subscribe for your paper, as there is nothing in your columns that will please any other class. I wish I could spend the time and money to help more than I do to emancipate our poor superstitious church slaves, to the end that I could make them feel that they are individuals; men, not mice; independent by themselvs, not slaves to any dogmas or isms; standing erect upon their individuality, not leaning against any steepled poorhouse.

I noticed in the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL the article, "In Search of a Spirit," and several comments in several Liberal papers concerning it and on slate-writing. Now, Mr. Editor, while I do not know what there is to this slate-writing business, nor do I choose to get into a controversy with anyone, yet I feel it the duty of all true Liberals to giv to the readers of all Liberal journals their honest thoughts in regard to this great question of the spirit-world, and with your kind permission I will as best I can tell you of what I know of slate-writing. Some two or three years ago I was handling farm produce in a warehouse with a small hall over it. There was during this time a sleight-of-hand performer giving entertainments in this hall, and one evening as I was looking up the hall in conversation with the performer I said I would like to know how that slate-writing was done, as I had met people doing slate-writing who claimed that the spirits of the dead wrote on the slates and who told me they could get communications from my friends that were dead, but of course they wanted a fee to let my dead brother, or sister, as the case might be, write to me; and I told him that if I had any dead friend who wanted me to pay some one to let them write on a slate I did not care to go to that trouble. The sleight-of-hand performer told me if he had the time he would tell me how it was done so that I could in a short time do the trick myself, and when I asked if it was the spirits did the writing he laughed and said, "The spirits, the devil!" Again he said, "Do you think it was the spirits that turned that clear water into wine in the hands of a man in the audience?" I hav questioned the spirit slate-writing ever since, still I do not know what there is to it.

I will ask you to send a copy of your valuable paper to names and addresses inclosed, trusting they may enjoy the fruit thereof. WALTER A. JOHNSON.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Wouldn't You Like to Be Happy?

He that believeth shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned.—Bible.

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy?
Then believe in heaven and hell,
And so if you'd like to be happy,
Believe in the Bible as well.

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy?
Then believe the earth to be flat,
For couldn't you be just as happy
To believe in this and in that?

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy,
By taking the story of Eve?
Then don't be cranky, but happy—
'Tis easy enough to believe.

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy?
Then believe the moon to be cheese.
You might just as well be happy,
I know you can gulp this with ease.

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy?
Then believe in old Noah's flood,
For you might just as well be happy,
For the thing is as clear as mud.

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy?
Then absorb the pillar of salt;
If you ever wish to be happy,
Believe all and ne'er call a halt.

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy,
If you could be as well as not?
Why, then never think, but be happy
By believing the tale of Lot.

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy?
Then hope in Jesus the man-god.
Believe, yes, believe and be happy,
Though it press your throat like a wad.

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy?
Believe in Jesus the God-man,
'Tis belief that makes a man happy,
This thing is a mighty good plan.

Say, wouldn't you like to be happy?
Believe two and two make seven,
And so, if you'd be very happy,
Believe all things under heaven.

(Presto, change!)

Fools! No one o'er all the broad land
Can believe all things at command.
Would you shut up man's eyes,
Bid him look to the skies,
And believe what he can't understand?

Would you hav us with bandaged eyes,
Go it blind when wolves in disguise,
With fangs dipped in gore,
And whose cry is for more,
Only wait to web you with lies.

Would you hav us turn fools and believe
Tales of Adam and Eve,
When fair Reason should teach
Every man within reach,
Such stories were made to deceive?

Then why, reckless man, tell me why
You should cherish a lie?
Come, now, up and be men,
Trust to reason, and then
You'll be quick such stuff to deny.

Harwich, Mass., March 10, 1890. B. F. REBBINS.

POSTSCRIPT.

Now, Susan dear, isn't it queer
That I should take pains to write this 'ere,
And spend my time in making rhyme,
That other folks may laugh and sneer?

So now I'll stop, my pen I'll drop,
And for a pen a book I'll swap;
And when I've read, then I'll to bed,
And rest my tired and sleepy head.

SAME ONE.

The Baby's Writing.

The baby's writing—oh, who shall say
Those pencil marks in their tangled skein
Which the baby made in his aimless play
Were not put there for some human gain?

The baby's writing—a funny scrawl,
'Tis just a purposeless maze of lines,
Yet out of the maze, sweet voices call
And the steady light of a pure love shines.

The baby's writing—it calls to mind
The child that is or the child that was,
Now gone the way of all humankind,
Or grown in accordance with nature's laws.

A smile half blooms on the mother's face
And a lump creeps into the tender throat,
As she finds in those lines all void of grace
Some memory of what her baby wrote.

The baby's writing—how like is this
To the mark of the aged, dying man!
Yet between them lie all grief and bliss
That are crowded into a life's brief span.

—Columbus Dispatch.

J. T. Foster's Second Speech.

I suppose the other side would like to claim the Himalayas and the Andes. It does beat all. Now, ladies and boys, the greatest things in this world bear gentlemen's names. I hav an uncle—the greatest man in this world. He has more brains than anyone I hav ever seen. He belongs to the best families in this world. His right arm is in Alaskan waters, while his feet are bathed in the Southern gulf. From Maine to California his shoulders are from ocean to ocean. His name is Uncle Sam. And I am proud of my blood—more royal than the blood of kings. I am one of Uncle Sam's sons. All of his children are free. Free to go and come. Free to enjoy life, liberty, and happiness forever. Free to sit under their own vine and fig-tree. Why, everybody wants to get on the good side of him. The pope of Rome, the vicar of Christ, the holy see, is trying to court him. She wants his help. Now, that is funny, is it not? For, you must remember, Uncle Sam is a Freethinker. Yes, sir, from boyhood he was a Freethinker. Let me tell you, Uncle Sam is a little like the prodigal son; he, too, left his father's house when a boy, but he never would hav eaten shucks while there was a pig left—you can bet your life.

Now, Uncle Sam's old mother was orthodox. She said she ruled her house by divine right. She said he must be subject to the powers that be, for the powers that be are ordained of God. Now, you ought to hav seen Uncle Sam pull down one corner of his eye this way (he pulls down one corner of his eye), sort of bad boy like. For he knew this ordained business was all a hoax. He said, "I will build me a house different from yours. I will be guided by reason, not by customs. In the government of my house, authority comes from the family, not from the clouds." This was his arsenal. "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." This was his monster gun—his iron-clad ship—his man of war, that will clear every sea of all the pirates of the world. She called him a heretic. He called her a tyrant—said he had more right to the title, "Defender of the Faith," than George III. George III. was his step-papa. And here the racket began. He upset her tea, and then she tried to whip him, and could not do it; and so he left his father's house, and ever since that time, his mother has been trying to fix her house like his. And Uncle Sam gave all his children a bill of rights—a kind of a Magna Charta, a guarantee of liberty. Oh, I tell you he is head and shoulders above all the men of his time. Are you not fond of him? Sons and daughters of this grand country, are you not proud of your blood? Are you not proud of such a brave man? Why, away back, when young, he said to Miss France, "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute."

(A voice: "Uncle Sam is a myth!")

I don't care if he is a myth. This great country he represents is no myth. This country of a hundred years is no myth. This nation of fifty millions of people is no myth. The doctrin of religious liberty is no myth. A country of the grandest rivers, happiest homes, and the brainiest people is no myth. A country looking to the energies of her people for success is no myth. A country with the sacred word liberty written on the foreheads of forty millions of her people is no myth. Boys, in the name of this great country—in the name of her noble institutions—in the name of her free secular schools—in the name of her heroes and heroins, living and dead, let us stand by the heritage our fathers left us. I tell you there is the grandest future before the sons and daughters of this country of any beneath the sun.

J. T. FOSTER.

MARY'S SECOND REPLY.

To be truly great, to be magnificently grand, one must do good for the happiness it brings.

Her motto will be like this: "The world is my country, to do good my religion."

She must be impartial. She must rise above state, rise above religion (as it is commonly understood), above worship, for all these belong to all peoples in all the ages gone, from barbarism up to civilization. Civilization, the grandest word in all the language of the world; civilization, daughter of all the progress we hav made; the culmination of all the hopes of all the heroic dead. But she that has produced all these, is greater than they. Nature, that dear old mother, has fed and clothed you and given rest to the weary. She has given you every drop of your blood; every fiber of your body, and every thought of your fertil brain. She has furnished the field for mighty battles; the sublime mountains; the great and roaring rivers; the golden harvest, and the happy homes. She has cradled everything from protoplasm up to the grandest woman of this generation. Her resources are without limits, without bounds, and without end. Nations and their religions die, and new ones are constantly being born. But nature will survive all. She is the sum and substance of all that is known. MARY W. FOSTER (aged 13).

Noblesse Oblige.

An accurate remembrance of names and faces has been called a gift of princes; another gift, showing the nobility of both heart and breeding, is that of punctilious courtesy toward the humble as well as toward the great.

"Why should you thank a servant?" asked a father, who was fond of the Socratic method of teaching, and loved to question his little son, until the lad reached wise conclusions by his own wit. "They are paid for what they do. Do you owe them anything but money?"

"I owe them money," said the lad, somewhat perplexed in expressing what he really felt, "and I thank them because—because I owe it to myself to be polite."

He had learned the meaning of the old, grand motto, Noblesse ob'ige.

Her Preference.

The fondness of Phillips Brooks, of Boston, the distinguished rector of Trinity church, for little children is well known. Not very long ago Dr. Brooks was calling on a friend in Cambridge, who is the happy mother of three children—two boys and a little girl. Dr. Brooks soon had all three of the little folk about him and was questioning them in regard to their views of an occupation when they should be "grown up." One boy would be an architect, he said, and plan Queen Anne houses; the other thought he would be a poet, like his late distinguished grandfather. "And what would you wish to be, my dear?" said the clergyman to the little four-year-old daughter of the house. "I think, sir," she replied modestly, as she caressed her doll, "that I should like to be a mother."

Correspondence.

COALING, ALA., March 23, 1890.

MISS S. H. WIXON: Check received with thanks. I accept your advice.

Yours truly, J. HAROLD WARD.

WORCESTER, MASS., March 25, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I received your letter and check for $3 to-day. I am glad that you divided the prize, so that all may hav what they deserve. I cared more for the winning of the prize than for the money. My share goes toward buying me a set of encyclopedias. Thanks for your encouraging words.

Respectfully yours, W. W. CLARK.

LISBON, IA., March 13, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to you, as I see so many girls and boys writing to the Corner. I hav five brothers and one sister. My younger brother, who is eight years old, has been sick for nearly eight weeks. I am twelve years old; my birthday is in December. I like to read the letters of the girls and boys that write to the Corner. I wish some girls would write to me; I would be very glad to answer them. There are no Liberals around here. We hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for as long as I can remember. I will close. Wishing success to the Corner, I remain, MAGGIE SAILOR.

GLENDALE, CAL., March 27, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. I like to read the letters in the Corner. I go to school, but we are having vacation this week. We are going to celebrate Arbor day. We hav about sixty scholars. My teacher's name is Miss Clark. I am eleven years old, and will be twelve the 13th of August. I hav two brothers and two sisters. We hav beautiful wild flowers here. We hav a span of mules and a span of horses. We hav some little chickens; they just hatched this morning. There are not many Freethinkers where I liv. I will close, hoping to see this letter in print. Good-bye,

From your Freethinker friend,
WANDA A. PEET.

FINDLEY, MICH., March 14, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As I like to write letters, I thought I would write to you. I am seven years old. I hav a little baby sister, almost three months old. She laughs and tries to eat up her fists. I go to school and read in the Second Reader. I bring my book home every night, so if I do not go to school I can learn my lesson at home. I like to go to school very much, and I think a great deal of my teacher and playmates. My dear grandpa and grandma liv just one mile from here; I stayed all night with them Friday night. I had rather go there than any other place I know of. I guess I hav written enough for my first letter, so will close. I hope I can do better when I get older.

From your friend, FERN THURSTON.

VERSAILLES, IND., March 21, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I received the check for the three dollars that you awarded me for the essay.

I had not the least idea of receiving a prize for it. I wrote it more for the benefit it would afford both to the children of the Corner and to myself.

We know not what we can accomplish until we giv it a fair trial, and the young readers, especially, should remember this.

You were judicious in dividing the prize between us.

I am very thankful for the prize, and also the kind feelings which promp'ed the donor to make the offer in order to encourage the young readers of the Corner.

I will close with my best wishes for the welfare of the Corner. I am your true Liberal friend, LEONORA STOCKINGER.

OKLAHOMA CITY, IND. TERR., April 2, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As I hav not seen any letters from this place, I thought I would try to write one. I like the Corner very much, also the pictures. We liv on the side of the North Canadian river, which is a very pretty stream. We came here from Texas, and like this place much the best, although we hav not as many Liberal friends here as there. I do not go to school. I hav two brothers and three sisters; the baby sister is named Susan H. and we call her Wixon.

I would like to tell the readers of the Corner about my mother's first acquaintance with THE TRUTH SEEKER. As she was a member of the Presbyterian church, I think it real funny. If you can spare room in the Corner I will write it in my next letter. Pa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and the Independent Pulpit, published by J. D. Shaw, of Waco, Tex. Mr. Shaw is a favorit with us. Well, this is taking too much room. I will close. Wishing the Corner good success, I remain,

Your Liberal friend, ANDY THOMPSON.

ALTOONA, PA., March 24, 1890.

EDITOR CHILDREN'S CORNER: Many moons hav waxed and waned since I had the pleasure of introducing myself in the garb of a puzzle writer for your department. It is only occasionally that I hav seen our good old TRUTH SEEKER, but Mr. Moore has been jogging my memory so frequently that once more I hav awakened from my lethargy, and after a week's laugh at the parrot and the monkey I feel like giving you all a word of good cheer in the good work you are all doing. Where are all our puzzle writers—J. K. P. Baker, Isaac A. Pool, William Scott, and others? Are they dead or too busy to let themselvs be heard? I beg pardon, but I do envy your invitation to spend the summer at Mono lake. I just wish I could get such an invitation to roam among the Sierras, as I am a mountain climber No. 1. With best wishes for your success as a school director,

WILLY WISP.

[Glad to hear from you, Willy. We thought you had forgotten us. We believe our puzzlers are all alive, but how can you expect brains to spin out puzzles forever? They need a rest sometimes. Besides, some of us nearly went crazy finding the solution of such intricate puzzles of puzzledom. We wanted to rest too. Thanks for kind wishes. —ED C. C.]

ROME OR REASON

A Memoir of Christian and Extra-Christian Experience.

By NATHANIEL RAMSAY WATERS.

A very critical analysis of both Protestantism and Catholicism, from the vantage-ground of an intimate personal experience with the two systems. It deals the most trenchant blows which pure logic is capable of inflicting.—[Critical Review.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.75.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SCIENCE VERSUS RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

BY T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, PA.

Price, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE

FREETHINKER'S MAGAZINE

For April is a valuable number. The contents are as follows:

Picture of Girard College.—Too much Clericalism. By B. F. Underwood.—Warriors and Scientists. By Nellie Booth Simmons.—Unreported Scenes in Paris and Florence. By G. J. Holyoake.—The Gods (Continued). By Robert G. Ingersoll.—Looking Backward. By Zoa Topsis.—Reminiscences (Continued). By Lucy N. Colman.

Literary Department: The Tenant. By Carol. Oathcart Dey.—The "Frizzletop" Papers, No. 1. By J. Edd Leslie.—Monism and Agnosticism. By Dr. Edmund Montgomery.—Liberalism in New York and Brooklyn, No 2. By H. J. Clark.—Dividing Matter from Spirit. By L. M. Wilson.—Do Spirits Hav Teeth? By Henry Sharp.

Editorial Department: Elizabeth Hannah Church. An Obituary Notice (with Portrait).—The Women's Convention.—All Sorts.—Book Review.

Copies for sale at the Truth Seeker Office. Price, 20 cents.

Essence of Religion.

By L. FEUERBACH.

Translated from the German. Cloth, 12mo, 75pp.; 50 cts.

The truth-teller is ill-mannered, therefore immoral.—Extract.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

A NEW ARTICLE BY INGERSOLL.

This week's TWENTIETH CENTURY will contain Colonel Ingersoll's latest contribution to the literature of Freethought, entitled,

CRUMBLING CREEDS.

Beginning with this number and continuing four successive weeks, the TWENTIETH CENTURY will publish an

ECONOMIC SYMPOSIUM;

Among the leading articles being:

"Why I Am a Protectionist,"
By VAN BUREN DENSLOW.

"Why I Am a Free Trader,"
By PROF. WM. G. SUMNER, OF YALE.

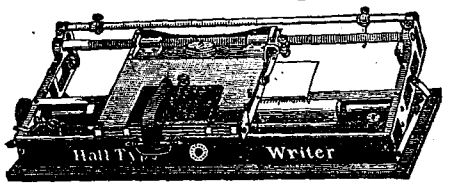
"Why I Am a Single Taxer,"
By WM. LLOYD GARRISON.

"Why I Am a Socialist,"
By LAURENCE GRÖNLUND.

"Why I Am a Nationalist,"
By BURNETTE G. HASKELL.

"Why I Am an Individualist,"
By FRANK Q. STUART.

"Why I Am an Anarchist,"
By BENJ. R. TUCKER.



Send 10 cents in postage stamps for the next four numbers.

A WEEKLY RADICAL MAGAZINE.

$2 a year; $1 a half year; 50 cents a quarter year; 5 cents a single copy.

TWENTIETH CENTURY,
4 Warren street, New York city.

New Model Hall Typewriter

The Best Standard Typewriter in the World.
Cheap, Portable, No Ink Ribbon, Interchangeable Type in all Languages, Easiest to learn and rapid as any. Agents wanted everywhere.
WARRANTED AS REPRESENTED. Address

National Typewriter Co.,
10 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. P. O. box 5159.
Send for catalog and specimens of work.
13:10

Giordano Bruno.

His Life, Works, Worth, Martyrdom, Portrait, and Monument.

With a complete list of the American subscribers to the fund for the erection of the monument.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, THOMAS DAVIDSON,
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, KARL BLIND,
LYDIA R. CHASE.

Single copies 15 cents; ten copies for a dollar.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price, 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.
tf

ROMANISM,

OR

DANGER AHEAD.

The Reason Why a Good Roman Catholic Cannot be a Good Citizen of this Republic.

By A. J. GROVER.

Price, paper, 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

FREETHOUGH

IS IT

DESTRUCTIVE OR CONSTRUCTIVE?

A SYMPOSIUM

BY

COL. R. G. INGERSOLL,	R. B. WESTBROOK,	CAPT. R. C. ADAMS,
E. B. FOOTE, JR.,	SALADIN (W Stewart Ross),	L. K. WASHBURN,
H. O. PENTECOST,	GEO. E. MACDONALD,	SUSAN H. WIXON,
E. C. WALKER,	SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,	F. M. HOLLAND,
LUCY N. COLMAN,	PARKER PILLSBURY,	MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL,
C. B. REYNOLDS,	CHARLES WATTS,	J. H. BURNHAM,
W. F. JAMIESON,	THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.

SUBJECTS OF PAPERS:

Is there an Affirmative, Positive, Constructive side to Freethought?
If not, the reason why?
If there be, in what, in your opinion, does it consist, and in what should it consist?

PRICE 25 CENTS.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

THE
CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:
THEIR
Crimes and Persecutions.

8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

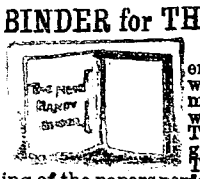
This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.



It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BINDER for THE TRUTH SEEKER

For the benefit of our readers who preserve their papers we offer a new style of binder, made for the purpose, and with the heading of THE TRUTH SEEKER printed in gold letters on the outside. This binder allows the opening of the papers perfectly flat. It also allows the taking out and replacing of one or more papers from any part of the file without disturbing the other parts.
Sent by mail, postpaid, for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
tf 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

BIBLE INQUIRER;

OR,

A Key to Bible Investigation.

Containing 148 Propositions
With References to the most Plain and Striking Self-Contradictions of the so-called Inspired Scriptures.

BY A. JACOBSON.

Third edition, carefully revised and enlarged.
Every Liberal needs a copy for ready reference. As a pamphlet to loan to Christian friends, it is the most effectiv Iconoclast ever published.
Price only 25 cents.

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 333pp., silk cloth, $3.

Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER,

Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.
The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photo-engravings of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 40c.; with autograph, 50 cts.

Odds and Ends.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL teacher (also cashier in a bank): "Can you tell me, Johnny, what a miracle is?" Johnny: "Yes, teacher. Pa says if you don't skip to Canada before long it will be a miracle, sure."

GOOD minister: "I wish you would call the attention of the chief of police to that terrible riot which was going on during the entire service this morning, and demand that the streets be better patroled." Sexton: "Please, sir, there was no riot outside this morning. That was a little misunderstanding in the choir."—The Jury.

THE New Orleans Picayune declares that the Bostonian is a philosopher from the cradle. A night or two ago a Beacon street matron had occasion to reprove her little boy, aged six and a half years, for some unusually mischievous nonsense. "I am afraid," she said, "that you will not go to heaven." "I'm sorry," said the criminal, "but I've been to the circus and a party this week, don't you know, and of course one can't take in everything."

BABY spirit (up in heaven): "So I must go down to earth and get born, must I? What am I to be, a man or a woman?" Guardian angel: "Let me see. You hav many talents, hav you not?" "Yes, indeed, ever so many. I can keep track of forty things at once, hav my thoughts on one thing and do a dozen other things correctly, sleep with one eye open, and on waking up at any time hav full possession of all my faculties in an instant." "'Tis well. You shall be a woman."—New York Weekly.

MEN were buried and babies were born,
Ships sailed around Good Hope and the Horn,
Youths turned into oldsters gray,
But Big Bore Blair still talked away.

Day after day a steady rain
Of dullness from a cloudy brain;
Day after day a fog most thick
With words confused and lunatic.

The weary galleries slept and snored,
Ingalls looked acid, bilious, bored;
And visitors, with bated breath,
Asked, "Will Blair talk himself to death?"

Alas, there is no hope he will!
Others, but not himself, he'll kill.
All Christendom's junk shops he'll fill
With speeches on his blasted bill.
—New York Sun.

"HAV you seen the devil?" I asked of an old negro preacher who was regarded by everyone with extreme veneration. "Cose I has. Whut you come foolin' wid me dat way fur? How I gwine ter know so much erbout him ef I ain't dun seed him?" "What does he look like?" "I ain't got time ter tell you whut he do look like, sah. Da's so much erbout him ter tell dat I wouldn't like ter undertake de job. Monst'us, sah; oh, he was monst'us." "Now, look here, old man, you are too intelligent to believe in such nonsense. You know that no devil has been seen; you know that you started the report yourself." "Look yere, sah," he exclaimed, turning wrathfully upon me, "whut you mean by comin' down yere a 'foolin' an' a meddlin' wid our 'ligious affairs? Ain't you got no bizness ter tend ter at home? Doan you know dat you got ter keep de devil constantly befo' dese niggers or da ain't gwine do no good? Whar I preached last year I got up an' tole 'em dat I didn' bl'eve dat dar wuz any devil an' whut did da do? Da cut down my salary an' den didn't gib me but half o' de cut down. An' stead o' takin' off dar hats when da met me in de road like da uster do, da'd laugh at me an' call me old knock-kneed Ben. So when I come ober yere I 'lowed ter myse'f, I did, dat I wuz gwine ter use diffunt tactics, an' I has. W'y, sah, ef you take de devil outen religion, de nigger preacher would starve ter death, so go on away, now, an' quit foolin' wid er bizness dat you ain't got no intrust in."—New York Mercury.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE
New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.
PRICE, TEN CENTS.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Every Liberal Should Read

THE BIBLE AND EVOLUTION.

By ARTHUR B. MOSS.

WITH PREFACE BY DR. HARDWICKE.

INTRODUCTION.

Chapter I, Bible Astronomy and Evolution; Chapter II, Bible Biology and Evolution; Chapter III, Bible Myths and Evolution; Chapter IV, Bible History and Evolution; Chapter V, Bible Morality and Evolution; Chapter VI, Bible Miracles and Evolution; Chapter VII, Miracles Incredible; Chapter VIII, Bible Poetry and Evolution; Chapter IX, Bible Art and Evolution; Chapter X, Bible God and Evolution; Chapter XI, Soul and Future and Evolution; Chapter XII, Heaven Hereafter; Chapter XIII, Conclusion.

Handsomely bound in cloth. Price $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

MYTHS AND MYTH-MAKERS.
Old Tales and Superstitions Interpreted by Comparative Mythology.
By JOHN FISKE, M.A., LL.B., of Harvard College.
Price, $2.

BEYOND THE VEIL.
Claimed to be Dictated by the Spirit of P. B. Randolph, aided by Swedenborg, through Mrs. F. H. McDougall and Mrs. Luna Hutchinson. [Spir.]
Steel Engraving of Randolph. Price, $1.50.

THE KORAN.
A New English Edition of the Koran of Mohammed, to which is added the Life of Mohammed, or the History of that Doctrine which was begun and carried on by him in Arabia.
SALE'S edition. Price, $1.50.

HUME'S ESSAYS.
Essays and Treatises. Autobiography and Dialogues on Natural Religion.
By DAVID HUME. Price, $1.50.

SUPERSTITION IN ALL AGES.
By JEAN MESLIER (born 1678),
A Catholic Priest who Renounced Christianity.
Portrait.
Price, pap., 50 cts.; clo., $1.

Man's Nature and Development.
By HENRY G. ATKINSON, F.G.S., and HARRIET MARTINEAU.
Price, - - - - - $1.50.

Infidel's or Inquirer's Text-Book.
Thirteen Lectures on the Bible.
By ROB'T COOPER. Price, $1.

Origin and Development of Religious Ideas and Beliefs.
By MORRIS EINSTEIN. Price, $1.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.
With Explanatory Observations on his Writings.
By GILBERT VALE. Price, $1.

A BUSINESS MAN'S SOCIAL AND RELIGIOUS VIEWS.
From a Poor Man's Standpoint. Price, $1.

KNEELAND'S NATIONAL HYMNS
Price, cloth, 35 cents.

LETTERS TO EUGENIA.
A Preservative Against Religious Prejudices.
By BARON D'HOLBACH.
Price, - - - - - - - $1.

CAREER OF RELIGIOUS IDEAS.
Ultimating in the Religion of Science.
By HUDSON TUTTLE. [Spir.]
Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

LIFE OF PAINE.
By J. E. REMSBURG.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Mortality of the Soul and the Immortality of Its Elements.
By A. S. DE PELLEGRINI.
Price, - - - - - 15 cents.

JEHOVAH UNVEILED.
Character of the Jewish Jehovah Delineated.
Price, 35 cents.

MORAL PHYSIOLOGY.
A Treatise on the Population Question.
By R. D. OWEN.
Price, - - - - - 35 cents.

AN HOUR WITH THE DEVIL.
By D. M. BENNETT.
Price. - - - 10 cents.

IF, THEN, AND WHEN.
Church Doctrines.
By W. S. BARLOW. [Spir.] Price, 10 cents.

The Liberty of Printing, and Reply.
By HURLBUT and WAKEMAN.
Price. 10 cents.

ICHABOD CRANE PAPERS.
Daringly witty and inexpressibly laughable onslaughts on Christianity.
Price, 10 cents.

BLASPHEMY AND THE BIBLE.
By C. B. REYNOLDS.
Price, 5 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

BIBLE—WHENCE AND WHAT?
By R. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.
Price, $1.

Socialism and Utilitarianism.
By JOHN STUART MILL.
Price, $1.

A Legacy to the Friends of Free Discussion.
By BENJAMIN OFFEN,
Formerly Lecturer of the Society of Moral Philanthropists, at Tammany Hall, New York.
Price, $1.

APOCRYPHAL NEW TESTAMENT.
The Gospels, Epistles, etc., attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not included in the New Testament.
Price, - - - - - - $1.

ASTRO-THEOLOGICAL LECTURES.
By REV. ROB'T TAYLOR.
Price, - - - - - $1.50.

THE SABBATH.
By M. FARRINGTON.
A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.
Price, 10 cents.

RELIGION OF COMMON SENSE.
By PROF. LIEBRECHT ULICH, of Germany.
Price, 25 cents.

THE SUNDAY QUESTION.
A Historical and Critical Review. With Replies to an Objector.
By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.
Price, 15 cents.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.
By FRANCES WRIGHT.
Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.
Price, 75 cents.

AN EYE-OPENER.
"Citateur, Par Pigault."
Le Brun, Doubts of Infidels.
By ZEPA.
Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Antiquity and Duration of the World
By G. TOULMAN.
Price, - - - - - 20 cents.

ASTRONOMY AND WORSHIP OF THE ANCIENTS.
By GILBERT VALE.
Price, . . . 20 cents.

Autobiography of Robert Cooper.
Price, 15 cents.

BHAGAVAD-GITA.
A Discourse on Divine Matters between Krishna and Arjuna.
Translated by J. C. THOMPSON.
Price, $2.

BIBLE IN INDIA.
Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.
By LOUIS JACOLLIOT.
Price, - - - - - - $2.

BIBLE IN THE BALANCE.
A Text-Book for Investigators,
By REV. J. G. FISH,
Price, ... $1.50.

BIBLE INQUIRER.
148 Striking Self-Contradictions of the Bible, and 152 Marvelous Occurrences.
By A. JACOBSON.
Price, - - - 25 cents.

BIBLE MYTHS.
Their Parallels in Religions of Heathen Nations of Antiquity; Origin and Meaning. Copious Notes and Authorities. "Cyclopedia of Reference." Many Illustrations.
8vo, 600pp., ... price, $2.50.

BIOGRAPHY OF SATAN.
Historical Exposition of the Devil and his Fiery Domains.
By KERSEY GRAVES.
Price, 35 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Christ of Paul; or, the Enigmas of Christianity.
Frauds of the Churchmen of the Second Century Exposed.
By GEORGE REBER.
12mo, 400pp., - - Price, $2.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN.
A Compendium of Universal History.
By WINWOOD READE.
Sixth edition, 544pp., - - $1.75.

SCRIPTURE SPECULATIONS.
With Creation, Stars, Earth, Primitive Man, Judaism.
By H. R. STEVENS. 419pp., $1.50.

ETHICS OF POSITIVISM.
A Critical Study and Survey of the Moral Philosophy of the Present Century.
By GIACOMO BARZELLOTTI,
Prof. of Philosophy at the Liceo Dante, Florence.
Price, $1.50.

OLD FAITH AND THE NEW.
A Confession.
By DAVID FRIEDERICH STRAUSS.
Authorized translation from sixth German edition by Mathilde Blind.
Price, ... $1.50.

HEALTH HINTS TO WOMEN.
Important Information for All, and "Danish Cure." With Portrait.
By MME. W. SCHOTT. Price, $1.50.

The Legends of the Patriarchs and Prophets.
By S. BARING GOULD.
Will be seized with avidity by all students of the Bible.—[Congregationalist.
Price, $1.50.

RADICAL PULPIT.
Discourses of Advanced Thought.
By O. B. FROTHINGHAM and FELIX ADLER.
Price, $1.

INSTITUTION of MARRIAGE.
And Remarkable Divorce Cases.
By PHILANTHROPUS.
446pp. - - - - Price, $1.

The Contrast: Evangelicalism and Spiritualism Compared.
By MOSES HULL.
Paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

PERSONAL IMMORTALITY
AND OTHER PAPERS.
Candid Arguments for and Against Immortality
By JOSIE OPPENHEIM. Price, 75 cents

SIXTEEN SAVIORS OR NONE.
By KERSEY GRAVES.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Truth Seeker Collection of Forms, Hymns, and Recitations.
For Organizing Societies; for Marriages, Funerals, Naming of Infants, Obituaries, Epitaphs, etc. Also 525 Liberal and Spiritualistic Hymns for Social and Various Public Occasions.
18mo, 550pp. Price, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Nunneries.
By W. HOGAN.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Shelley: Philosopher and Reformer.
By C. SOTHERAN.
8vo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Lithograph of D. M. Bennett
Heavy plate paper 22x28. Price, 50 cts.

Lithograph of Bennett Monument.
In 4 colors, 22x28. Heavy plate paper.
Price, 50 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.
With Remarks on Rousseau and Comte.
By CALVIN BLANCHARD.
Paper, - - - 40 cents.

SOUL PROBLEMS.
WITH
Theological Amendment and State Personality
By JOS. E. PECK.
Price, - - - - 25 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

MATERIALISM AND CRIME.
By B. F. UNDERWOOD.
Price, 5 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE French Revolution
ITS CAUSES AND RESULTS.
By W. S. BELL.
Paper, 12mo, 25 cents.

MORTALITY OF THE SOUL.
IMMORTALITY OF ITS ELEMENTS.
By A. S. de Pellegrini.
Paper, - - 15 cents.

PHILOSOPHY of SPIRITUALISM
AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.
By F. R. Marvin, M.D.
Cloth, - - - 50 cents.

POCKET THEOLOGY.
By VOLTAIRE.
Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms.
Price, 25 cents.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY EXPOSED.
By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.
15 cents.

PRO AND CON OF Supernatural Religion.
Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?
By E. E. GUILD.
Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

PYRAMID OF GIZEH.
Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.
By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D.
Price, 15 cents.

QUESTION SETTLED.
BIBLICAL and MODERN SPIRITUALISM.
By MOSES HULL.
Price, 60 cents.

Rational Communism.
THE PRESENT AND FUTURE REPUBLIC OF NORTH AMERICA.
Advocates associate life and employment as a preventive of vice, crime, poverty, etc.
By A CAPITALIST.
Paper, 493pp., 50 cts.; clo., $1.

Relation of Witchcraft to Religion.
By A. C. LYALL.
Price, 10 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.
POPULATION QUESTION.
By Dr. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant.
25 cents.

TRUTH. A Poem. By E. N. Kingsley. 10 cents.

POVERTY: Its Cause and Cure.
How the Poor May Attain Comfort and Independence.
By M. G. H.
Price, . . 10 cents.

Religion of Inhumanity.
With a Glance at the Religion of Humanity.
BY FREDERIC HARRISON.
Price, 15 cents.

RELIGION:
The Gibraltar of the World, as Now Constituted.
By George T. Bondies.
With
Exceptions to the Character of Christ as a Gentleman.
By W. T. Purviance.
25 cents.

IMAGE BREAKER.
By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Six Lectures.
Decline of Faith.
Protestant Intolerance.
Washington an Unbeliever.
Jefferson an Unbeliever.
Paine and Wesley.
Christian Sabbath.
Each, 5 cents; bound, pap., 25 cents; per doz., 40.

SABBATH BREAKING.
By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Price, 25 cents.

St. Matthew Before the Court
FOR THE CRIME OF FORGERY.
By SECULARIST.
Price, . . . 10 cents.

SEMITIC GODS AND THE BIBLE.
Including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, Bible.
By D. M. BENNETT.
(From Vol. II. "Gods and Religions.")
393pp., pap., 60 c.; clo., $1.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I., and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two Volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

Thirty Discussions, Bible Stories, Essays, and Lectures. 700 pages. Paper covers, 75 cents;

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity, between D. M. BENNETT and Rev. G. H. HUMPHREY. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price. $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. BENNETT and CYRUS ROMULUS R. TEED. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents;

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. BENNETT and G. M. MAIR, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion.

2. Miracles and supernatural achievements hav been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus.

3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history.

BENNETT affirms; MAIR denies. This is an exhaustiv discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This givs a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon MR. BENNETT. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cents.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist Church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. Cloth, $1.00

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

The Great Religions of the World. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Sinful Saints and Sensual Shepherds. 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

W. S. BELL'S PAMPHLETS.

LIBERTY AND MORALITY.

PRICE, 15 CENTS.

Accept my thanks for your excellent and useful discourse.—James Parton.

I am much pleased with your address, and will notice it in Man.—T. B. Wakeman.

A beautiful pamphlet of 36 pages. It is a very able paper, and deserves wide dissemination.—The Age.

ANTI PROHIBITION.

PRICE, 20 CENTS.

The number of heads under which you hav divided the subject matter of the pamphlet, and the concise manner in which the point is discussed, should be highly commended. Therefore I take great pleasure in recommending "Anti-Prohibition" to the consideration of every person who is interested, not only in the cause of temperance, but in the principles of self-government.—J. J. McCabe.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LIFE OF Joshua Davidson:

MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,

As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.

BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,

Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.

Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.

☞ This book was suppressed by the first American publisher. ☜

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE NEW GOD.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM,

Secretary of the American Secular Union.

Price 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE SAFEST CREED,

AND

TWELVE OTHER DISCOURSES OF REASON.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

Extra cloth, 12mo, 238pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By D. ROSSITER RAYMOND
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR BOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Career of Jesus Christ.

An Exposition of the True Meaning of this Character as described in the New Testament. By Milton Woolley, M.D., author of "Hebrew Mythology." Paper, 8vo, 25 cents.

SPECIAL SALE OF WATCHES AND DIAMONDS.

Good American Nickel Stem-winders, $2.50, $4, $6. Best grades in silverine case, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; adjusted, $16. For 3 ounce coin silver case, add $3.50; 4 ounce, $4.50; 5 ounce, $6. In best open-face filled gold, dust-proof case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; adjusted, $24.50; hinged cases, $3 more; hunting cases, $6 more.

The New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

All modern improvements: in silverine, $19; 3 ounce coin silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25. BEST open-face filled screw case, $27; hinged, $30; hunting, $26; Louis XIV style, $2 to $10 more. Ladies' best gold filled, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18.50; 15 jewels, $25; adjusted, $35; 14 kt solid gold, $10 to $20 more. Ruby and diamond ornamentations up to $100 extra.

DIAMONDS.

An elegant 3 stone, 8kt., solitaire pin and drops, $600, worth $900; a magnificent hair ornament and pin and pendant combination, rosette, 29 brilliants, $200, worth $300; one do., heart-shape, sapphire and ruby in center, same price and value. Pins, rings, drops, studs, from $300 down to $10; same proportionate discounts. All bought before late advance.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can have their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Admission free. Discussions follow lectures.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston,
Meets every Sunday (from October to June) at 2:45 P.M., at Paine Memorial Building, Appleton street.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,
Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

San Francisco, Cal., Freethought Society
Meets every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free.

Des Moines Secular Union
Holds regular meetings at Good Templar Hall, Flynn Block, S.E. corner 7th and Locust streets. Lectures followed by discussion. Friends from abroad heartily welcome.
FRANKLIN STEINER, Pres.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indescretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

Inquiries are frequently received asking what we know about Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, N. J. First, we know that he is a reliable gentleman of rare professional skill, who has earned success by good work. Second that he fulfills all his agreements to the letter. Third, that he has performed cures of hopeless cases that in the olden time his skill would have been called miraculous. Fourth, and last, we know him to be an honest man and a stanch Liberal.—The Better Way.

News of the Week.

FRIENDS of the modified Australian reformed balloting praise its working in Rhode Island, Missouri, and Wisconsin.

THE conference of the African M. E. church expelled the Rev. G. H. Smith on the remarkable charge of being a thief, a fugitiv from justice, and a conjuror.

THE school question continues a burning one in Wisconsin.

DORTMUND, Prussia, coal-pit strikers hav been arrested for rioting.

EMIN PASHA has been made governor of Germany's possessions in Africa.

BISMAROK will publish memoirs of the last twenty-five years of his official life.

THE white population of the Congo State, in the middle of Africa, has reached 450.

THE reception to Stanley at London will occur May 2d. The prince of Wales will preside.

DOM PEDRO thinks he will die soon, and wishes to return and pass away among the people of his own land.

PARLIAMENT is still busy considering schemes of helping Irish tenant farmers to buy their farms.

MANY Mormons are leaving Utah for Chihuahua, Mexico, where they hav purchased a vast tract.

BEN ELSEY, hanged at Birmingham, Ala., on the 18th, left a written confession of having murdered twenty-one people.

AT the Boston Methodist conference one of the brethren attempted to advertise a certain wine for communion purposes.

ARREST for assault in church, is the outcome of a war of factions that has long raged in the church at Babylon, N. Y.

BRAZILIAN capitalists who hav been running banks opposed the establishment of a national bank, which would reduce their gains, so effectivly as to force the government into a compromise.

THE Farmers' Allianee is pushing schemes by which the government will lend farmers money at one per cent on their land or crops. One plan is to hav the government pay off present mortgages and take new ones at one per cent.

IT is doubtful that all the European governments will allow their workingmen to set apart May 1st as an annual Labor day. The ruling classes in Austria are working to secure a prohibition of demonstrations on that date.

AT Philadelphia on the 15th two small riots arose from attacks on Italian street-cleaners who had taken at $1 25 a day the places of other Italians who had struck for $1.50, the attacking party being the wives and sweethearts of the latter.

AT New York, on the 15th, an old lady named Josefa Machata, upon her hair catching fire, stood in the middle of the room and prayed. A neighbor ran in and put out the fire, which had spread to her clothes, by wrapping bedding round her. She cannot liv.

THE eight-hour movement is not joined in by some bodies, but a great number will take part in it. Brooklyn plasterers, who hav worked nine hours, hav arranged with their employers to work eight at the same pay. The Chicago carpenters that struck are still out.

THE late persecution of the Jews in Vienna became so dangerous to all shopkeepers that the city recently appeared covered with such signs as "I am a Christian Tradesman;" "Christian Brandy Shop;" "Christian Cheesemonger;" "Christian Old Clothes Shop."

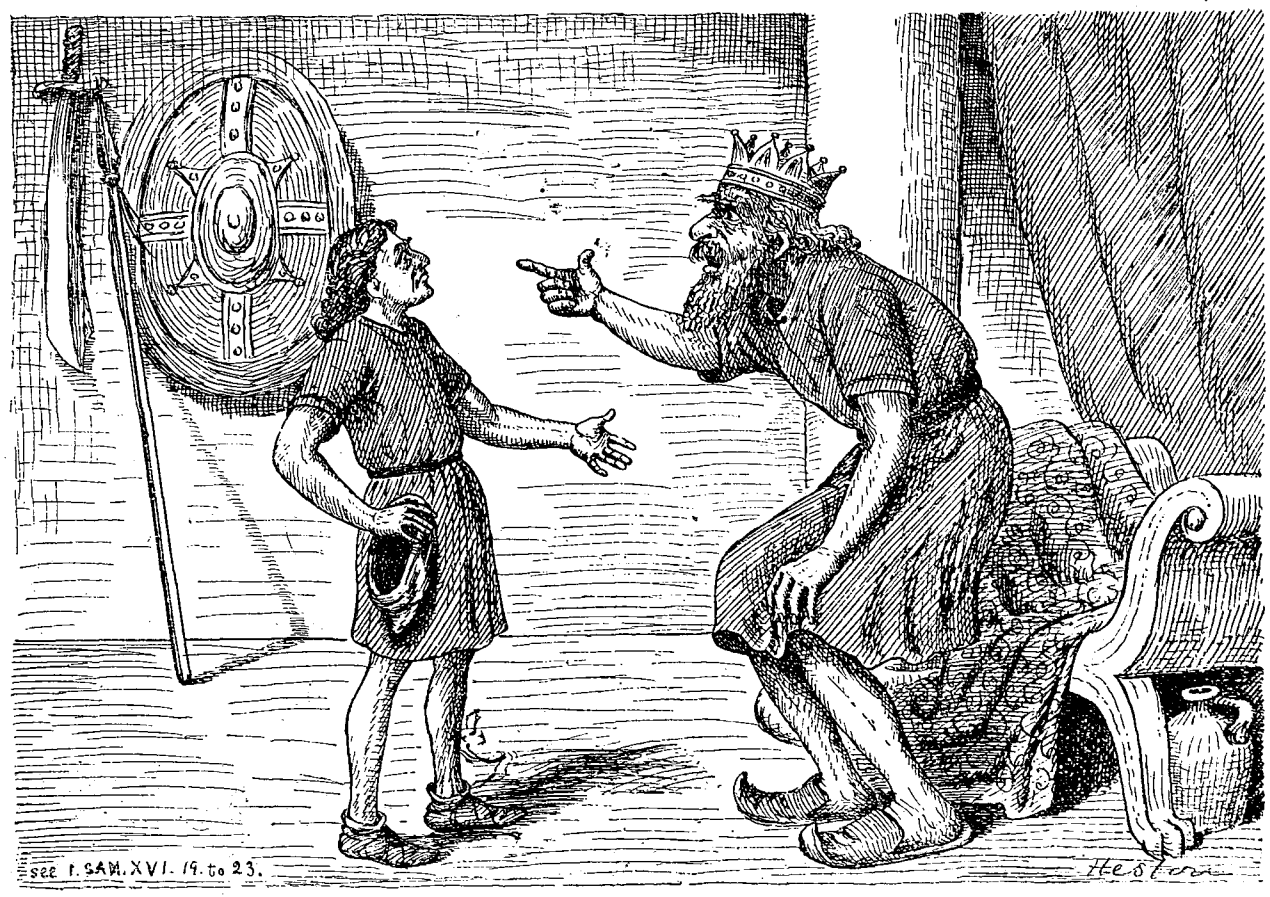
ON account of the prophecy of Erickson, Mrs. Woodworth, and others, that Oakland, San Francisco, Chicago, and Milwaukee were to be destroyed by a tidal wave sent by the wrath of God, all the weakminded in Oakland hav been half-crazed for weeks, and from dark until midnight the main street has been a pandemonium of Salvation brass bands, corner preachers, delirious doom-sealers, and fleeing 'woebegones' with torches. When the 14th passed without the expected calamity, the faithful were confounded.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,



28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SAUL DOESN'T KNOW DAVID.

And Saul said to him, Whose son art thou, thou young man? And David answered, I am the son of thy servant Jesse the Beth-lehemite.—1 Sam. xvii, 58.

Gems of Thought.

IF we turn our attention from the narrow and puerile view of the Bible to the large and comprehensiv view of science, we shall find that the universe is in reality the one great open book—a revelation to man just up to the measure of his capability of reading and understanding it. The diligent and earnest student of nature day by day grasps some new fact, and, speculating upon its value, opens up new mines of thought for future exploration. . . . Never for a moment silent, this universe, in its ceaseless changes, is ever ready to deliver its message to whomsoever is willing to receive.—A. B. Moss.

SUPPOSE Joshua out of the way (and he is going fast), the problem of human life remains. Here we are, a thousand million of us [the estimated population of the globe], upon this "bank and shoal of time," alone, alone, alone, with none to help us but ourselvs. Let us help ourselvs and one another. And that is the whole of the coming man's religion.—Jas. Parton.

IN the insane or weak, conscience may impose whimsical duties, so that it sometimes gets a bad name through enforcing a senseless morality; for conscience is no security to a fool against his folly. In the interest of virtue one should avoid justifying silly things by conscience, and, in following it, learn not to sin. Inspect your conscience as well as your observance of it; or, rather, look after your views of right, as well as your conformity thereto; and do not expect to get along in morals on less sense than in business. Those who assume arbitrary duties must often violate their conscience through the very multitude of their scruples, which violation, becoming habitual, disables conscience for real duties. One can not do much that is not right for right and hav strength left to do the right for right. Do not habituate yourself, therefore, to do wrong by having so many foolish things for right that every time you are sensible, you are in danger of violating your conscience. For one who is silly when right is apt to be guilty when reasonable. For he who violates his conscience when not doing wrong, accustoms himself to violation as much as if he were doing wrong, so that he will more likely violate it in cases of real wrong than if he reserved his conscience for only the matters of conscience. One cannot support a conscience long on error, but he who uses it up in nonsense has no more left than he who uses up his intellect in nonsense.—Bierbower.

THERE is a gradual tendency to withdraw from the moral code, observances originating purely in sentiment, and having little or no connection with human welfare. We hav abandoned the divine sacredness of kings. We no longer consider ourselvs morally bound to denounce and extirpate heretics and witches, still less to observe fasts and sacred days. Even in regard to the Christian Sabbath, the opinion is growing in favor of withdrawing both the legal and popular sanction formerly so stringent; while the arguments for Sabbath observance are more and more charged with considerations of secular utility.—Bain's Moral Science.

BELIEF is regarded as the one essential thing. To practice justice, to love mercy, is not enough. You must believe in some incomprehensible creed. You must say, "Once one is three, and three times one is one." The man who practiced every virtue, but failed to believe, was execrated.—Ingersoll.

THE present is our scene of action—the future is for speculation and for trust. We firmly believe that man was sent upon the earth to liv in it, to enjoy it, to study it, to love it, to embellish it—to make the most of it in short. It is his country, on which he should lavish his affections and his efforts.—Greg.

THE grand doctrin that every human being should hav the means of self-culturing, of progress in knowledge and virtue, of health, comfort, and happiness, of exercising the powers and affections of a man; this is slowly taking its place, as the highest social truth. That the world was made for all and not for a few; that society is to care for all; that no human being shall perish but through his own faults; that the great end of government is to spread a shield over the rights of all—these propositions are growing into axioms, and the spirit of them is coming forth in all the departments of life.—Dr. Channing.

THE

Truth Seeker Annual

—AND—

Freethinkers' Almanac,

1890.

(E. M. 290.)

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

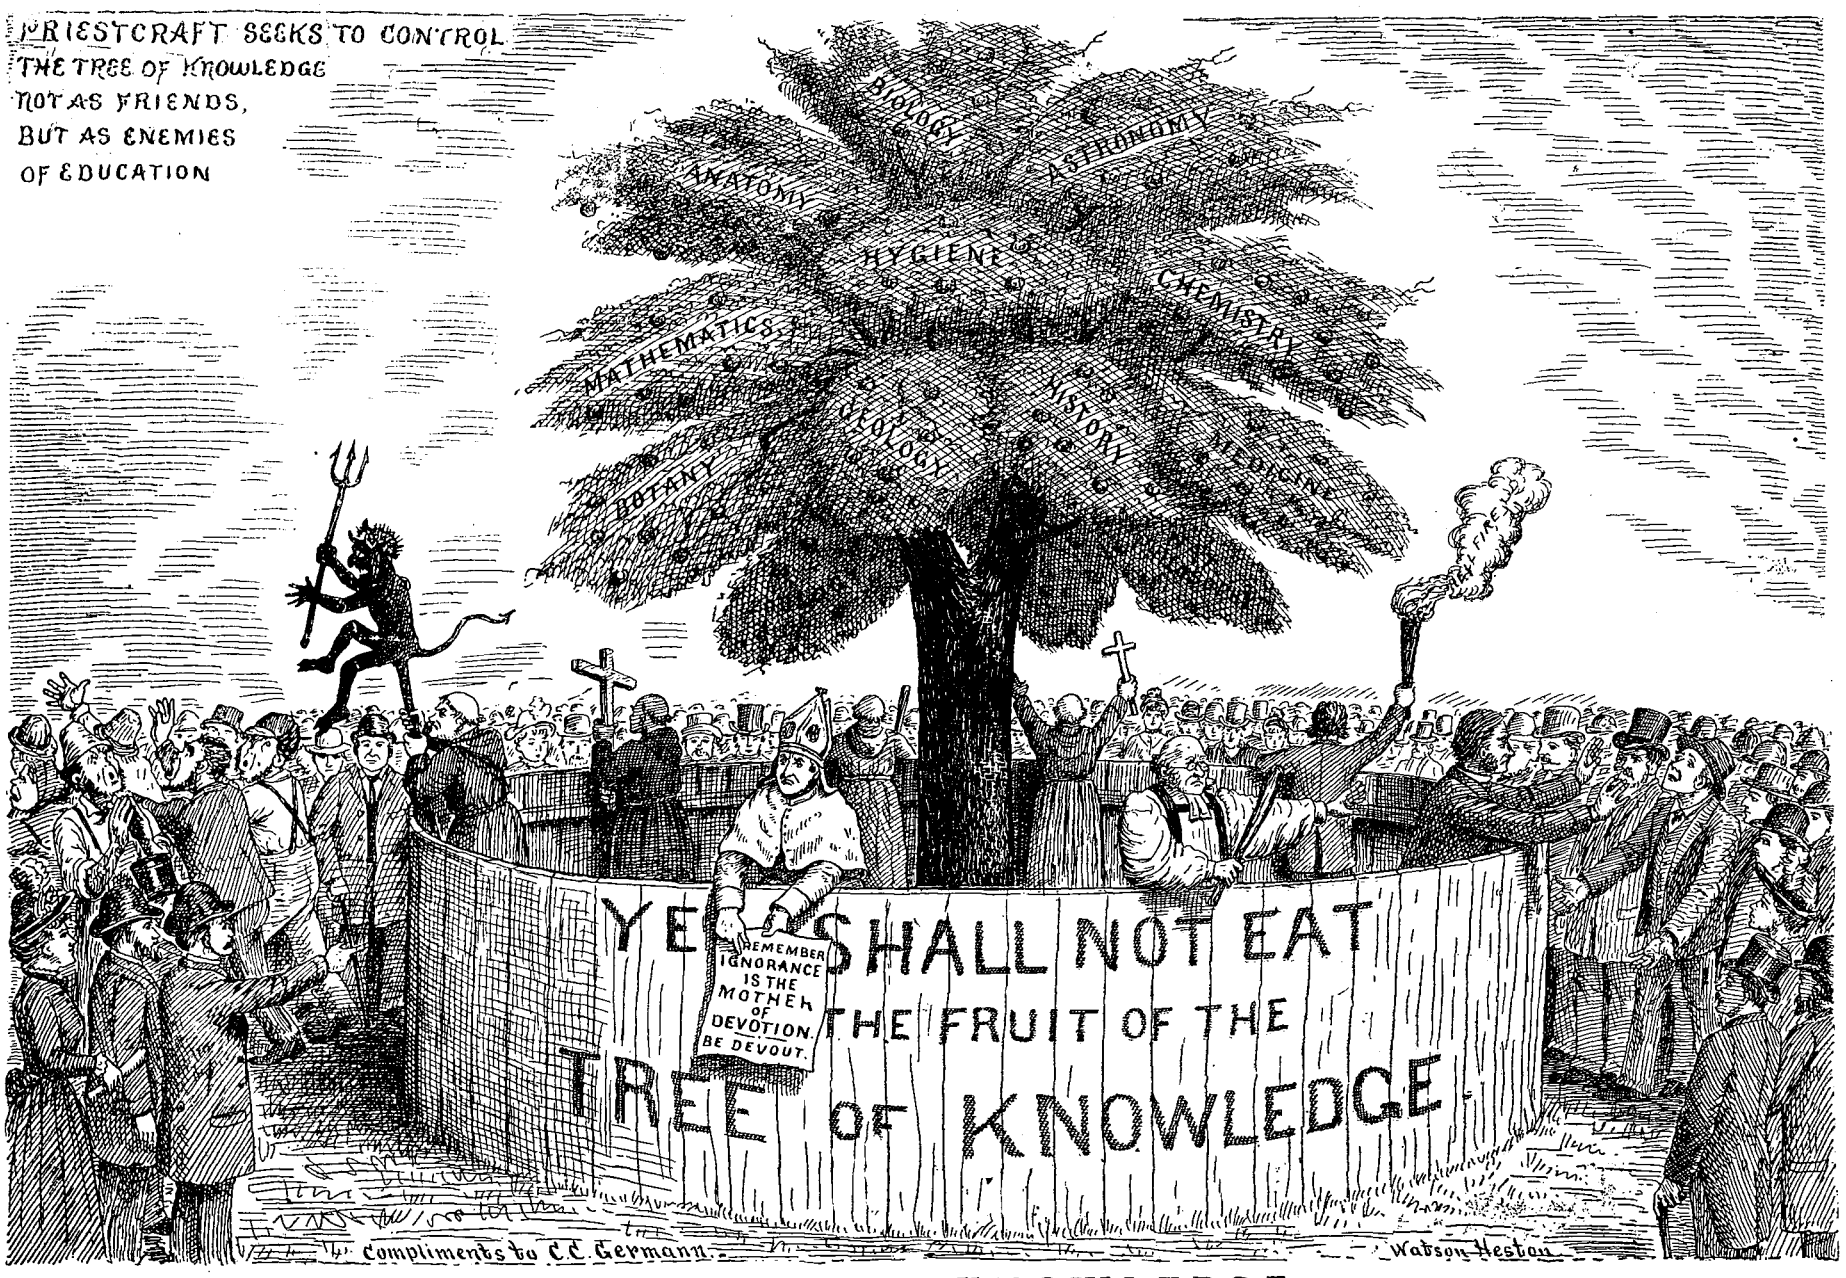
CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
Calendar for 1890,	5
Freethought in the United States, 1889,	17
Faded Flowers. Poem by J. E. Remsburg,	24
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue. T. B. Wakeman,	26
Mostly Fools. W. Stewart Ross (Saladin),	36
Record of the Spanish Inquisition,	44
Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas,	44
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral. Helen H. Gardener,	45
The Middle Ages. Illustrated,	69
The Priest,	70
The Supernatural World,	71
The Reformation,	73
Future Terrors,	77
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated,	79
Freethought Journals in the United States,	96
In Search of a Spirit. E. M. Macdonald,	97
Why I Left the Church. H. O. Pentecost,	109

NEW YORK:

PUBLISHED AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE.



PRICE, 25 CENTS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 17. No. 18 {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 3, 1890 {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

THE TREE OF KNOWLEDGE.

Notes and Clippings.

MURAT HALSTEAD, in his last letter to the Commercial Gazette, declares himself in favor of the instantaneous photograph as an aid to modern journalism. The instantaneous subscriber can help out a little, too, adds the World.

SOUTH MISSOURI preacher reported by Life: "Now, my brethren, having disposed of that ar lyin' hypocritical cuss, who runs the Methodist church across the way, I'll continue my discourse on 'peace on earth, good will to men.'"

THE Illinois supreme court has decided that the Young Men's Christian Association is not a religious body within the meaning of the law, and so awards it a large bequest. What is it when the taxes are being assessed? —Gardiner Home Journal.

THE pope has authorized the archbishop of Paris to communicate to the clergy the decision of the holy see against cremation. It forbids Catholics to cremate their dead, and orders the priests to refuse ecclesiastical burial to the bodies of persons cremated.

THE Australian Radical says: "The Christian World has discovered that six out of every seven of the convicts in penal establishments, and those confined in prisons and reformatories, hav been Sunday-school scholars. Thus the little Sunday-school saving bubble bursts."

IN the House of Commons on the 22d ult., Mr. Bartley having made a motion for a committee of inquiry on the labor question, Mr. Bradlaugh severely attacked Cunningham Graham for inciting strife among starving laborers. He contended that the condition of the working classes had enormously improved, and that in this respect England stood in advance of every other country in Europe. Mr. Graham, after repeated but futil efforts to interrupt Mr. Bradlaugh, denied that he had incited people to violence, but said that he would do so the moment the workers became powerful enough.

IN Berlin the other day Wilhelm Irmacher, a Socialistic saloon-keeper, referred in a speech to Emperor William as a hog. He was tried and sentenced to prison for one year. This language was used in the heat of a campaign and it might hav been excused, but the present emperor is determined that his subjects shall know that he is one of the Lord's anointed. When a man has been properly anointed and commissioned with a divine right to rule, tax, and destroy men, it is a gross breach of etiquet to refer to him as a hog.

THE Jewish ministry of New York are taking up the case of Rosa Ladner, a Jewish girl who, they complain, is being forcibly Christianized by having been committed by Police Justice O'Reilly to the Protestant Episcopal House of Mercy. They say: "Both the Society for Prevention of Cruelty and the Protestant Episcopal institution hav exceeded their legitimate functions to become tools of conversion to Christianity, against which it is our duty as representativs of Judaism to protest or seek every possible means of redress." We shall be gratified when Freethinkers hav become sufficiently aroused to abolish the present connection between churches and the charitable institutions required for civil purposes.

SOME nations hav funny ways. A Panama correspondent of the Colon Telegram states that on Sunday morning at the Wesleyan chapel, "just before service, a band of men who seemed to hav been Colombians came in the yard, and several carried cocks in their hands. The oldest of this mob, a man with hoary locks, ascended the steps of the chapel, and he was soon followed by members of the gang. The birds were put down and a cock fight followed, accompanied with the usual oaths, noise, and curses, and offers to bet, etc."

AN extraordinary scene took place at the cathedral in the ancient town of Passau, about ninety miles from Munich, Bavaria, during the Good Friday services. Vicar Pichler, in his discourse on this solemn occasion, launched out into some very sweeping denunciations of women, accusing them as a class of vanity, prodigality, and unchastity. Immediately an exciting scene followed. Women all over the church arose and protested that the charges were unfounded, and left the cathedral in a body. It is said tha the vicar will be proceeded against in the courts for slander.

THE following paragraph is printed in the Byron, Ill., Express: "Much curiosity has been aroused by reports from the Weldon farm, the home of Schweinfurth, and the 'heaven' of the Beekmanites. Last week a two-year-old child was taken ill and died. Schweinfurth was invoked to bring the little one back to life, which he seemed loath to do. Still the entreaties prevailed and much faith was exercised. At last he could resist the supplications no longer, and on Friday last, after the child had been dead two days and the body beginning to decompose slightly, he laid his hands on the child and prayed for the return of life. His prayer was answered and the little one was restored to life and health. This will do much toward increasing his power among the surrounding people." The evil effects of religion are clearly shown by the astonishing fact that there are people in the world who will believe such stories.

A DISPATCH from Montreal says: "The conservativs hav made the charge that six priests attended a caucus of the opposing party the other evening, and a serious accusation in consequence has been laid before Archbishop Fabre against Abbé Bédard, curé of Saint-Constant. The curé is accused of having refused to giv Easter communion to a number of his parishioners because they opposed those candidates at the municipal election in which he was interested. The archbishop is said to hav ordered an inquiry unless Abbé Bédard givs up his parish and takes another. The priest refuses to leave. The abbé is very activ in politics. At recent provincial elections a number of his parishioners say they gave him money which they had received as bribes to vote for nationalist candidates and which their consciences would not allow them to keep. The abbé, it is stated, said nothing about it until he was made to appear in court and put in the witness-stand. He has also a large number of lawsuits against him. The probabilities are that a great sensation will be caused by the revelations that are threatened by the conservativ party, and which will clearly show, it is believed, to what a great extent the elections in Quebec are practically controled by the clergy, and, it is hinted, usually for a money consideration."

Communications.

Life of Satan.

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

The devil, I can safely aver,
Has neither hoof nor tail nor sting:
Nor is he, as some sages swear,
A spirit, neither here nor there—
In nothing, yet in everything.—Shelley.

It would be very difficult to giv a description of his satanic majesty as he appears to a modern Christian mind. Even among the strictly orthodox people his person is extremely vague. They believe in his existence, of course, but at the same time, this belief is not that of their ancestors. Physical science, comparativ mythology, common sense, and last but not least, the altruistic feeling which marks our time, hav made the devil smaller and smaller and placed his abode somewhere in the nowhere. Yes, some, but by no means the lesser number, of believers hav even dared to exchange the customary exclamation point (!) that followed his name, for an immense interrogation point (?). I hav conversed with numerous people, both here and in Europe, on the subject of Christian dualism, and, mark, people who considered themselvs Christians, and eight cases out of ten the answer given me has been that the devil is but a personification of our egoistic thoughts, feelings, and actions, and that all the hell there is we receive here on earth in form of natural consequences. That the spirit of our time is decidedly hostil to the old fashionable devil idea is evident to even the most superficial observer, and it is likewise plain that in the battle the devil always occupies the position of under dog.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago it was very common to hear ministers of the "gospel of love and peace" entertain their audiences with red-hot brimstone sermons, in which they with particular fondness dwelt upon the pains of those wicked souls who kept the devil company, either because they had been merciful and honest enough to repudiate the slanders heaped upon an all-loving God by his dear children and representativs, or perhaps because they had failed to pay the due homage in behavior and hard cash to his self-appointed guardians here on earth. But where can we, nowadays, find an educated, self-respecting minister who dares to insult his audience with such discourses? Only in way-back settlements here in the East and in the haunts of men like Talmage and Sam Jones. Educated people draw back in disgust from such "glad tidings" as the dogma of eternal punishment, and it is to this Christian message, the pronouncing of which ought to make a Nero, a Caligula, yes, even a cannibal shudder, that the church, at the present time at least, owes most of her losses. Even the clergy itself is ashamed of this its best ally. In private conversations clergymen either entirely repudiate it, or they affirm the time for the "eternal" punishment of each individual to be in exact proportion to the sins committed; in short, hell is made a Protestant purgatory.

But before venturing any further, it will be necessary, in order to understand the real character of the much abused gentleman of whom this paper treats, to retrace our steps and go back to a time long anterior to that assigned for the Mosaic creation of the world.

When man after a long course of ages had reached that stage in mental evolution which enabled him to anthropomorphize the various phenomena of nature, the ancient division of these into three classes, beneficial, indifferent, and destructiv, was naturally kept alive, and powers like winter, darkness, storm, lightning, drouth, were by their very nature regarded as belonging to the latter class. Yet this is not the only source from which these personifications of darkness and destruction were recruited. We must yet mention the souls of enemies, of bad men within the tribe, and of the persons who for one or another reason had been left unburied. But while these spirits continued for a long time to be regarded as separate, individual ghosts, the powers of nature became—caused by their manifestations, which primitiv man, on account of his lack of knowledge of physical nature, could not keep apart—soon smaller and smaller in number and were finally combined in the person of one, which is considered as the supreme evil being. Thus Pani the "robber," Cushna, "the parcher," Ahi, the "strangler," these different Vedaic emanations of the dark powers are at last identified with Vitra, the "concealer," who becomes one of the Pani or night-demons, and whose name is made to signify "enemy," and as such applied to any evil spirit, while Vitra himself, the demon of drouth and darkness, after absorbing the other powers is called Adeva "the enemy of the gods."

Such is, in short outline, the history of Vedic dualism, which at its highest development never rises any higher than expressed in the prayer that the followers of Indra may not be ruled by Vitra. It is among those Aryans who, leaving their home on Indian soil, spread themselvs over Europe and western Asia, that we find the further development of those dual germs from which, on Iranian soil, arose that philosophical system known as dualism, and which is a conflict between a good and an evil god. But since it is from this Iranian dualism that the Jews and subsequently the Christians received their Satan, it will not be without interest to inquire into the principal characteristics of the religion.

According to the theology of the ancient Persians or Iranians the universe is divided between two self-existent spirits, Ormuzd and Ahriman, the first mentioned being the good, the last the evil, deity. Says the Zend Avesta: "In the beginning there were two spirits, each of a peculiar activity. These are the good and the bad in thought, word, and deed. Choose one of these two spirits. Be good, not bad."

Ormuzd, who in the Zend Avesta is called Ahura Mazda, the all-wise spirit, or Spento Mainyus, the spirit of life, is thus the embodiment of everything good and beautiful, while to his adversary, Ahriman or Angro Mainyus (the dark intelligence, from angro, dark, or black, and mainyus, mind, or intelligence), who corrupts and ruins whatever is made by Ormuzd, we owe not alone every destructiv natural phenomenon, but also sickness and all those calamities which embitter the life of man on earth. The poisonous serpent, the ferocious wild beast, the deadly herb, are his creations. He is the originator and introducer of witchcraft, cannibalism, murder, lying, and unbelief. Yet these two great spirits do not stand alone. On the side of either fights an innumerable host of asuras (angels) and devs or devas (demons), the former under command of Serosh, the Iranian archangel Michael, while the latter are marshaled by a number of captains, among whom we must mention Drukhs (destruction), Druais (poverty), and Aêshimo (rapine). In the battles, which are fought on almost equal terms, Ahriman, like the Christian Satan, is quite frequently the victor, and Ormuzd, in spite of all his almighty power and wisdom, cannot kill him or even damage his cause to any serious extent, a circumstance which must, on more than one occasion, hav aroused the sympathy and brotherly feeling of Jehovah, who certainly knows how one feels when worsted by a devil.

Such is the Iranian conception of the supreme God and the supreme devil, and very much like it is that entertained by the Jews since the time of the Babylonian captivity, and by the Christian.

The clause, "since the Babylonian captivity," demands an explanation, which I am perfectly willing to giv, since I thereby can perhaps do something to vindicate the subject of this sketch from the many false accusations which are heaped upon his, I dare say, innocent head.

The fact is that no good, substantial proof can be produced in favor of the assumption that the Jews, previously to the Babylonian captivity, believed in the existence of a devil.

In this age of inquiry certain wicked men, of both Christian and Infidel persuasion, hav had the audacity to question the veracity of the clergy, when it asserted the divine inspiration and consequently the accuracy of the "big" book. It is my intention to follow these gentlemen in their inquiries into the genuinness and authenticity of the Old Testament, but I will, to evade the accusation of unfairness, follow and quote such authorities only as are by all admitted to be "eminent" Christians.

In Gen. i, we are given an account of the origin of things and in chapter ii we are given another, which, as Dean Stanley says, "differs from the first" in almost every particular of time, and place and order; yet this is not all. We find in no subsequent chapter of the Old Testament a single certain allusion to either the garden of Eden narrativ or the "fall of man." These facts, which the most ingenious theological interpretation has failed to bring into harmony with each other, we can but explain by admitting that the first chapter and the first three verses of the second chapter of Genesis were the last which were written, and that such is really the case we will now endeavor to prove.

It is well known that among primitiv people the art of recording events is entirely unknown, and that such proceedings belong to a further advanced stage of civilization. Now, the Jews, although being Jehovah's chosen people, are no exception to this rule, and their so-called inspired writers differ in no particular from the inspired writers of other nations of antiquity or modern times. All do they draw from the great storehouse of national tradition, and all do they not hesitate to misrepresent, exaggerate, subtract from, nor even compose anew, if such proceedings can in any way increase the glory and prosperity of that particular cause which they themselvs regard as being true and good. And if the authority of their own name is not sufficient to command the often very heavy draft on public credulity, they, with a spirit of fraternity, otherwise seldom known among writers, attribute the authorship of the dead child of their own imagination to one or another individual who by force of circumstances is unable to resist the sometimes rather doubtful honor, therefore generally a good or a long deceased person. That proceedings of such and similar kind are but plain forgeries, evidently never entered the mind of these divinely inspired writers; at least, they hav continued in the practice until our days, officially for the "glory of God," privately for their individual prosperity.

In the modern version of the Bible the Pentateuch is ascribed to Moses, who thus must hav been not alone a very modest man (he speaks of himself as being "meek"), but likewise a very persistent writer, since he must hav written the account of his own death and funeral and the thirty days' weeping (Deut. xxxiv, 5–12) after he had left this earth and become seated in the bosom of Abraham. Yet the amount of faith necessary to believe this has not been found in even the most orthodox theologian, and to this doubt Bishop Colenso givs word in his book, "The Pentateuch and Book of Joshua Critically Examined," when he says: "The books of the Pentateuch are never ascribed to Moses in the inscriptions of Hebrew manuscripts or in printed copies of the Hebrew Bible. Nor are they styled the books of Moses in the Septuagint or Vulgate."

J. Knappert, D.D., the Dutch biblical critic, arrives at the conclusions of Bishop Colenso. He says, it was after the Babylonian captivity that the Jews ascribed the Pentateuch to Moses, and yet "nothing in the whole law really comes from Moses himself except the Ten Commandments, and even these were not delivered by him in the same form as we find them now."

The question now naturally arises: Who wrote the Pentateuch? To which we will answer, that it was written by different persons at different times.

Like the primitiv historian of any nation, one of the Pentateuch composers takes upon himself the task of writing a history of his people which goes back to the very beginning of things. This writer, the Jehovistic, as he is termed, begins his history at Gen. ii, 4, and closes it with the entrance of the Jews into Canaan, and in it we are, for the first time, made acquainted with the account of creation and fall of man, narrativs which the Jews at that time, 725 B.C., received from Assyrian colonists from Persia, Babylon, and other places, who were by Salmanassar sent into Canaan to fill the place of those Jews who were carried to Babylon.

The Elohistic writer makes his appearance 620 B.C., and is author of Deut. iv, 44, to xxvi, and xxviii, and of certain "new passages," some of which appear interwoven in the work of the Jehovistic writer.

The third Pentateuchian writer is Ezra, 444 B.C., who redits the work of his predecessors and adds some new laws and narrativs which he received from Babylonian priests during his stay in said country, and which were evidently a condensed translation of the Bundehesh, a Persian sacred book devoted principally to cosmogony.

Even after the death of Ezra some more changes and additions were made, but on these, which are of less importance, as well as with the authorship and composition of the other books comprised in the Old Testament, we will not dwell, inasmuch as it is of no consequence to the due understanding of the subject of the sketch, and I will merely add that previous to the Babylonian captivity the Jews had no sacred writings, and it was only after the time of the Elohistic writer, who attributed his and the Jehovist productions to Moses, that the Pentateuch was considered authoritativ, while the canonicity of the rest of the Old Testament books was an unsettled question until the time of Rabbi Akiba, about 210 A.D.

The conclusions of biblical criticism are also sustained by the words of early books in the Old Testament. The writers of the books of Samuel, Isaiah, and Amos agree in attributing to Jehovah himself the dispensation of good and evil. "And again the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them to say, So number Israel and Judah" (2 Sam. xxiv, 1. Time: division of Jewish kingdom). Likewise in Isaiah (710 B.C.) xlv, 7: "I make peace and create evil; I, the Lord, do all these things." And also in Amos (790 B.C.) iii, 6: "Shall there be evil in a city and the Lord hath not done it?"

We hav thus seen that previous to the Babylonian captivity the Jews had no conception of a devil as author of evil, and will now proceed to point out the close similarity between the then accepted devil and his prototype of other religions, and especially Ahriman. Yet it must not be supposed that the change in the religious conceptions of the Jews was the work of a few years, nor even of an age. Religious beliefs appear not in their mature form at the outset—they do not emerge full-grown from their originators like Pallas Athene from the forehead of Zeus. Like every other product, mental or physical, they are subject to outward influences, and the rate of their growth is in exact proportion to the character of their environments.

In the book of Job, written, according to Bleek, in the time between the Assyrian and Babylonian captivity, Satan is introduced to us as a son of Elohim holding the office of celestial accuser. But the practice as such has destroyed every vestige of his faith in human goodness and piety, and the dislike of the Jews toward him increased steadily, until they at last attributed to him the character of Ahriman, a belief which heretofore had been held by a few only.

The story of a war in heaven seems to be a common property to most religions both ancient and modern, and is, as we hav already pointed out, the result partly of perverted language, partly of the application of moral ideas to physical apparitions. We hav seen it existed among the ancient Aryans, that it was believed in by the Persians, and we find it among nations as far apart as the ancient Egyptians and the inhabitants of Scandinavia, the Greeks and Romans, the Battas of Sumatra, the nativs of the Caroline islands, the Salvias of New Granada, etc. They all tell the same story of a war between a good and a bad spirit, the latter of whom was invariably cast out of the heavens either because he attempted to usurp the throne of the most high, or on account of his disobedience of the commands of the good spirit. But while the rest of the Semitic nations adopted the Egyptian myth of the war between Typhon and Isiris, the Jews, and later the Christians, as already stated, embraced the Persian conception of Ahriman.

Isaiah xiv, 13, 14, informs us that Satan once, desiring to be as great as God, soliloquized as follows: ". . . I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God; I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north. I will ascend above the hights of the clouds; I will be like the most high."

But Satan, being a man of business, soon ceased to speak "in his heart," and gave life and action to his thoughts, and thus it happened "there was a war in heaven; Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the devil, and Satan, which deceived the whole world; he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him" (Rev. xii, 7–9). Of course, this rather rough treatment would exasperate any gentleman, so Satan naturally took offense, and to show his anger, he, according to some Talmudists, spit at God, but as the earth was flat then and Satan consequently never had been in America, he had not acquired the Yankee facility for spitting straight; he missed his aim and his saliva fell on the moon and produced the dark spots visible on her surface.

GUSTAVE NELSON.

Montreal and Its Freethought Club.

I hav just returned from Montreal, where I was invited by the Pioneer Freethought Club to lecture. I do not know that I am well enough acquainted with all of the Freethought organizations in this country to say with Mr. George Jacob Holyoake that "it is, for the social position and influence of its members, the most important institution of the kind extant;" but I can truly say that so far as I hav become acquainted with such organizations I know of none in the United States that is its equal in all regards.

This was a great surprise to me, for Montreal would hardly impress one as a promising location for a flourishing club of the kind. It is a handsome city, but the awful clutch of the Roman church is to be seen there as I hav seen it nowhere else on the continent. In spite of this fact the influence of the Pioneer Freethought Club has brought about a most remarkable change. My lecture was given upon the club's tenth anniversary—its tin wedding, so to speak—and the club had secured the best hall in the city, which would compare favorably with Chickering Hall in New York city, and the audience filled the hall.

That is to say, it filled the hall when I began speaking. Something like forty people, who did not agree with my opinion of the low moral status of a God who ordered the degradation of all the pure young girls of one entire nation, arose and departed therefrom accompanied by the loud and continued applause of the rest of the thousand or so people.

They appeared to think that the forcible degradation of thirty-two thousand girls and the attendant brutality of the camp of the Lord's anointed under the leadership and commands of Moses and God, were worthy of a place in the record of a being good enough and pure enough to worship as an ideal God; but that to mention the fact and object to the immorality of it was a thing they should not listen to.

In other words, they approve of and sustain acts and a condition of morals which they look upon as unmentionable in abstract form even if the mention is solely to condemn. At least, that is the way I interpreted the attitude of those who went out when I spoke of certain of the commands of God which Moses was pleased to execute. It was all right to commit a deed, but all wrong to mention it.

It was very funny; but I am not afraid to assert that there was a deal of Bible-reading next day to discover just what Jehovah did command for woman, and what she owes him. Well, that was exactly my aim, and any woman whose self-respect will allow her to worship him after she does know that, has not enough to make a basis for Freethought possible within her. Now, I say this as a salve for some of our friends who sometimes think I say rather savage things about men. I do not believe that that man livs in any enlightened country who, if it were for himself, has little enough self-respect to accept the position Jehovah givs to woman—the indignities he heaps upon her—and worship him.

Woman's training in all the past has undermined her self-respect. She needs to be stung into a realization of this sad fact, and if the record of her treatment by Jehovah will not do it, I claim that her case is hopeless. So you see I hav as much confidence in the shaken faith of the forty who rushed home to read up on woman's status in the Bible, as in the nine hundred odd who laughed at them for going. The yeast will work. Their anger at me will, by and by, swing around to its proper object, Jehovah—to him who commits an outrage rather than to her who condemns it.

It was a fine audience—intelligent, wide-awake, and a good audience to look at. Captain Adams, author of that delightfully written book, "Travels in Faith," and now president of the club, introduced me in a charming speech.

I did not hav an opportunity to hear Captain Adams make an address, but from all I did see and hear I am sure that one of the main reasons why the club is so large, so well equipped, and so firm, is that it possesses such a president.

His fine personal character, his broad culture, and his earnest, loyal enthusiasm are of the first value to such an organization. The captain is fortunate, too, in having a wife and son who march shoulder to shoulder with him. I spent nearly a week in their charming home and enjoyed every minute of it. Whether I was trying to learn to play billiards with the bright son as my teacher, driving over the mountains in the dog cart, or discussing philosophy in the drawing-room, it was all the frank, free hospitality of the cultured home of earnest people.

With such a leader might we not hav equally successful clubs in every city in the states? I think so, and therefore I most heartily congratulate the Montreal Pioneer Club upon its president.

I met much less intimately the other members of the club; but they all impressed me as able and devoted advocates of the first and basic need of humanity, the right to think for one's self and to express that thought without fear.

Ten years ago no such society existed in Montreal. A few years later the authorities would not rent any but a poor little hall to even the greatest Freethought lecturer, and only a very few people dared go to hear such a speaker. To-day the club takes the finest hall in the city and draws a splendid audience. That is a record to be proud of. Only fine ability and splendid character could hav accomplished it.

One fight is yet before the club. The newspapers preserve a masterly silence in regard to its work. An audience of one-tenth the size it attracts receives due notice and comment. Not a line, not a letter, appears in any Montreal paper in regard to the Pioneer Club's doings. With us a newspaper is supposed to giv the news, and usually it does so even if it does not giv it with full regard to facts; but a newspaper in Montreal is not conducted on that theory. If a happening takes place which is in the line of established public opinion it is news. Otherwise it is not news—so far as the papers are concerned.

That there is a political club of ten people or a religious one of fifteen engaged in doing a certain thing is news and receives due notice. That there is a large club of intelligent, cultured men and women meeting each week, conducting lectures, owning a good library, taking the leading periodicals for their reading-rooms, and drawing audiences of a thousand people is not news—from the Montreal newspaper's outlook.

That is rather funny to one from the states, where newspapers are news papers, whatever one may think of them as tracts or as scientific treatises.

If you hav space, I wish that you would giv your readers the inclosed record of the Montreal Club. I believe that it will be both interesting and instructiv, and let us hope that many of our earnest men may go and do likewise.

The Montreal Pioneer Freethought Club was formed in 1880 by a few earnest men, chief among whom were George Martin (now honorary president for life), Feodor Boas, George S. Wilson, and B. Marcuse. Private meetings were held in an upper hall belonging to Mr. Martin and its membership extended, embracing one resident of the eastern townships, Mr. Baker, who, dying soon after, left a legacy of $500 to the club. This gave the nucleus for the formation of a library, and with the help of wealthy friends in Montreal a fine collection of standard Liberal works was secured. Mr. Martin, who is a fine poet and vigorous thinker, gave an intellectual stimulus to the club, and Mr. Boas, who is a man of extraordinary energy and business genius, promoted its material interests. In its second year it was strengthened by the accession of Capt. R. C. Adams, a new convert to Liberalism. He showed a zeal and capacity for lecturing, and it was felt that the time had come to open the meetings to the public. The club moved to spacious quarters up-town, having good reading and social rooms and a hall capable of seating two hundred people. After five years of successful work the club removed to a somewhat smaller hall, which it uses for its reading-room and ordinary lectures, engaging large public halls for special efforts. The lecturing has devolved chiefly upon Captain Adams. A number of wealthy men in the city who are not members of the club subscribe to its expenses, and its membership, though small in numbers, comprises men of fortune and high position as well as workingmen. George Jacob Holyoake, when he visited Montreal, said in his paper, To-Day, that this Freethought club, for the social position and influence of its members, was the most important institution of the kind extant. Finding that the Montreal public will not pay to hear Freethought lectures, the club occasionally goes to the expense of giving a free lecture in a large hall with imported talent. Upon the last occasion of this sort I was the speaker. On previous anniversaries they hav had Felix Adler and Mr. Underwood.

The very funniest thing I saw while I was gone was the grave of a man who was buried in consecrated ground and then had it *un*consecrated right from under him. Here is the record as I got it on the spot.

Monsieur Guibord was a member of the Institut Canadien, which persisted in keeping in its library Voltaire's works and other books placed under the ban in the Index Expurgatorius. When he died the church refused to let him be buried in the lot that he had paid for in the Catholic cemetery, his membership being the offense. The case was lost in the courts but gained before the privy council in England. A Catholic mob prevented the burial, but a second attempt under arms succeeded. Cement and scrap iron were placed over the coffin and a huge stone the full length of the grave. The bishop *un*consecrated the ground.

Now if that poor man is not in a tight place, who is? The Protestants cemented him into scrap iron and cemented a stone, six feet by three, down on top of him. Then the Catholics came along and *un*consecrated the scrap iron and things, and there he is.

It seems to me he is more or less liable to stay there, too, when Gabriel calls time. Still, it is hard to tell. That unconsecration may work through and he may turn up in China and scare the celestials out of their wits in the last great day.

I confess that unconsecrated scrap iron and cement is altogether too heavy a problem for me; but I saw a lot of people in Montreal who took it seriously—Catholics who felt happy because they had poor Guibord's soul safely sealed for hell and Protestants who felt happy because they had his body safely sealed in the Catholic burying-ground. The Agnostics smiled.

HELEN H. GARDENER.

Too Much Religion.

Last Sunday, in the Ada street Methodist Episcopal church, Chicago, the Rev. J. P. Brushingham preached on "Religious Fanaticism." The object of the discourse was to take up and review what is known as the Schweinfurth religious colony, at Rockford, Ill. Schweinfurth has about one thousand followers. He (Schweinfurth) says that he is Christ come in the flesh to right the world, and like all new religions, this one will be sought to be put down by the strong hand of state power. The Rev. Brushingham had an interview, in the very near past, with the Rev. Schweinfurth, and spoke as follows. We quote from the Chicago daily Herald:

> The interview convinced Rev. Mr. Brushingham that while Schweinfurth was sincere in his pretensions, there was too much religious liberty in this country, and that such impostors should be dealt with as business frauds. "It is very difficult to reach them, on account of being accused of persecuting a religious sect, but something ought to be done to check the progress of these people."

Too much religious liberty in this country! This is the old cry, iterated for a thousand years! Brushingham is a reflex of all his cloth! Orthodoxy is my doxy—heterodoxy is your doxy. That is the key. To millions of intellectual and reasoning people, the doxy of the Rev. Schweinfurth is as true a doxy as that of the Rev. Brushingham and his kith. Why not?

There is as much evidence of the divinity of Schweinfurth as of Christ. We hav their words for it. Schweinfurth has performed a miracle by healing a woman as well as Jesus. Now, in what respect is the religion of Jesus any more a religion revealed than that of Schweinfurth's? Put him down as a "business fraud!" How cheeky, how narrow and bigoted, this Chicago reverend! Do you not see the great anxiety such men hav for power, that great remedy for heresy? Bring out the thumbscrews, light the fagot, burn the bones of heretics! Put the state into the hands of religious bigots of this Chicago stripe, and we may bid adieu to personal and mental liberty. What more does the Rockford bigot get as a "business fraud" than the one in Chicago? Both promis you heaven and its good things if you will faithfully pay your insurance premiums to the priests. Both are the same. They are instituted by man for the lazy priesthood. There is no merit in either, and the sooner such hog-wash is spilled on the ground and buried the better for the world. If one is to be "put down," let all of the "religions for revenue" be put down together.

JOHN BUSHEL.

A Practical Reform.

I hav read with much interest, in the late numbers of THE TRUTH SEEKER, the symposiumistic utterances of the brethren on what they call "constructiv Liberalism," in answer, I suppose, to the question put to them so constantly by religious people: "If you take away from mankind the church, with its restraints and safeguards to good morals, what will you put in its place?"

To me, the rooting out from a man's character of an old and groveling superstition, whether he does the work himself, unaided and alone, or is helped by another to do it, is a great, positiv achievement; for his intellect then becomes consciously free and he begins a career of self-enlightenment on other, but kindred, subjects, which, as he progresses, satisfies his soul and makes him happy. He takes a new view of the universe and his relation to it; of the family of mankind to which he belongs, thus becoming a cosmopolitan as well as a sincere patriot; of the globe on which he livs, making it only one of an infinit number of grains of sand, instead of the center of the universe, around which the sun, moon, and stars revolve. He becomes a reconstructed man in his thoughts, feelings, and purposes of life. At least, this was the revolutionary effect produced on myself by Radicalism—I hate the timorous, apologetic phase, Liberalism—when I threw overboard the puerilities of the church and accepted the new philosophy which sheds its glory upon the closing years of the nineteenth century. If it has done nothing else than reconstruct, out of the poor, blasted materials furnished by the church, the individual characters of so many of the Freethinkers, Radicalism is worth to the world all the sacrifice it has cost; for, our enemies being judges, it has formed a class of men, and especially women, who are distinguished for their intelligence and good morals. The church can be strengthened by numbers, though they be ever so ignorant, for each person counts one, and pays his church taxes into the treasury; but it is the glorious misfortune of Radicalism that it cannot compete with the church in this line, because it cannot make a convert to its cause out of a man who is an ignoramus and a coward. A candidate for admission to our ranks must hav intelligence enough to form opinions on subjects which require thought; and he must hav courage enough to express them to others.

In all the discussions produced by the symposium there seems to hav been no suggestion made by any one, to take up some particular enterprise of practical reform as a part of the work of reconstructing society on the basis of radical doctrin. Some critics might suspect that this was because the wine, which the members of the symposium drank, was all of the same brand. But I attribute it to the fact that, as a class, the Radicals are unorganized, and so individualized as to be totally unable to do any practical work which requires unity of purpose and coöperation. But there is one great reformatory enterprise which they can, and I think ought to, act in in their individual capacity, and make a peculiarity of Radicalism. It is the burial reform, or the disposal of the dead by cremating their bodies, and returning them in the form of ashes to the earth, instead of placing them in shallow graves, where, in the process of decomposition, they injure the health of the living.

Probably one hundred thousand human bodies, dying of all manner of pestilential diseases, in a single year are carried out of the two cities of New York and Brooklyn, and deposited in the neighboring cemeteries, near the surface of the earth, where, in the natural process of decomposition, the gases burst their coffins and send up through the loose mold into the atmosphere, and impart to the veins of water which permeate the earth, millions of the germs of the diseases of which they died, to renew and extend, under favorable circumstances, the work of death among the living. The fact, and how these germs liv, defying everything but fire, and how they are carried on every wind that blows, crossing thousands of miles of ocean and of land, and visiting remote islands of the sea with their deadly influence, is seen, at the present time, in the prevalence of the grip. Hence, it is not necessary, when a cholera or small-pox patient dies and is buried at New York, that, in order to inoculate distant communities in the West with those diseases, their putrefying bodies should be disinterred and openly carried there, and exposed. The germs of these diseases, being living and activ agents, are commissioned by human ignorance, or carelessness, to go forth on their errands of death, and they use the wind as a vehicle.

This barbarous state of things, like so many other evils, is traceable to the church, which, for eighteen hundred years, has propagated the false and absurd idea taught by the apostle Paul, that the self-same bodies of saints and sinners, which die, and are buried in the ground, are the same which will be resurrected when the archangel blows his trumpet, announcing the arrival of Jesus Christ in the clouds of heaven, to judge the quick and the dead, and to set up his kingdom upon the earth. In every church pulpit, and at every open grave, some one of our eighty thousand clergymen stands and tells the ignorant people this great falsehood, and they believe it. Hence, the care that families should lie in groups with their faces to the east, so that they may respectfully meet Christ at his coming, when they rise out of their graves.

We Radicals do not believe this absurdity, but, except a few of us who shudder at the prospect, "to lie in cold obstruction and to rot," and who do not wish to be nuisances to the living when we are dead and gone, we countenance and giv aid and comfort to the mischievous superstition by conforming to the church custom and making people believe that, really and after all, we do believe in the dogma of the resurrection of the dead. Even the Spiritualists, who hold that after a man dies and his personality escapes from the ruins of his earthly tabernacle, his body is of no more account than his cast off, old clothes, follow the example of the church in burying, instead of cremating, their dead, and thus giv the lie to what they profess to believe and know to be true.

But there is another consideration which appeals to our humanity. The expense and ostentation of funerals hav become such an evil that many of the church people themselvs, in this country, are protesting against it as a barbarism. The wealthy classes show the unnaturalness of their conduct, and the vulgarity of their taste, by their extravagant display on such occasions. In this democratic country, where a poor man's vote is equal in weight to that of a rich man, many a family is impoverished by the sickness and the burial expenses of one of their number. The amor sceleratus habendi, or hell-fire greed, as the Scotch call it, has taken possession of the undertakers, who, knowing that the poor are as ambitious to giv a respectable funeral to their dead as the rich are to theirs, charge ten times as much for their coffins and services as they did fifty years ago. I know of a man who, after a lingering and expensiv illness, which consumed all he had except the little lot of ground on which he lived, died, and the undertaker, who charged $20 for a coffin, refused to furnish it to the widow and children unless a citizen able to pay would become responsible for the money. The man was buried, and the heroic widow paid the doctor bill and the funeral expenses, but it took several years of hard work and self-denial to do so. I was present at the town of Washington, Pa., when the first cremation of a human body, in a building erected for the purpose, took place. Dr. Lemoyne, the owner, told me on that occasion that the total necessary expense of reducing a body to ashes might be covered by $10. A cheap pine coffin, the wages of the fireman, the expense of the fuel and of an urn to receive the ashes for burial, would not reach at the utmost more than $15. What a contrast between this sum and that expended in the funerals now in fashion!

Besides this, and much more, how delightful the thought that the body of a loved one, kept so clean and sweet all during life, need not see corruption when it dies, but may, by the purifying process of fire, be returned immediately to the earth in the form of ashes, thus doing in an hour and without the least annoyance what it would take the grave years to do by a process too horrible to think of.

Then, in order to testify against the absurdity and impossibility of the church doctrin of the resurrection; in order to cheapen and do away with the unnecessary expense, and the empty parade of public funerals, and in order to set a good example in the way of sanitary reform, ought not everyone who rejects the popular superstition to enlist in the burial reform, and thus do his part in making the movement popular? These, no doubt, were the motivs which made our late co-worker, Courtlandt Palmer, giv orders to his family to hav his remains cremated; and it should be the peculiarity of the whole class of Radicals to which he belonged.

A. B. BRADFORD.

Enon Valley, Pa., Feb. 23, 1890.

The Harman Case.

Another outrage, equal in its enormity to that which D. M. Bennett suffered, has been enacted, and Moses Harman is the victim.

I had not seriously thought of taking part in Mr. Harman's defense, for I considered that he was in the hands of very capable counsel who would defend him with ample ability. Such was my desire, however, to see everything done that could be done for the grand old man who had braved so much, that I wrote, in March, that if business which was then demanding my entire attention should be concluded so as to leave me free to go to Kansas I would go, if I were wanted, on notification of the day fixed for trial. Later on came news of the disaffection of counsel. Messrs. Overmyer and Clemens, the only lawyers, with the exception of Mr. T. B. Wakeman, that I had ever known or heard of who had any conception of the way in which a charge like that against Mr. Harman should be met and defended, declined to go on with the case. Their abandonment of Mr. Harman was due to a combination of various influences which it is not necessary to dwell upon, such as local politics, disapproval of certain of Mr. Harman's methods of management, financial and otherwise, conflict of interest between Mr. Harman and the other clients, i. e., E. C. Walker and George Harman, etc. I cannot look upon their abandonment of Mr. Harman as justifiable.

As the time for the opening of the court was approaching I felt great anxiety to hav some proper provision for the fair presentation of Mr. Harman's defense fixed, determined, and positivly settled upon at the earliest possible day. There seemed to be only three ways possible. First for Mr. Harman to defend himself. I urged him to prepare for this in case he was driven to it. The matter published in Lucifer for the past three years would hav furnished many good suggestions for this preparation. Second, to bring about a reconciliation between Mr. Harman and his council. I did all I could by correspondence with all parties to accomplish this. Third, to go myself, my ability to do which was at this time doubtful.

On the morning of April 12th, I received a night message from Mr. Harman asking me to go West. It was not until the evening of that day that I knew I should be free to go. I then answered expressing my willingness to go and asking when it would be necessary for me to be there. A message substantially the same was received by me on the 14th, to which I returned the same answer. On the morning of the 15th two telegrams lay on my desk on my arrival at my office. Both were dated 15th of April. One, a night message, presumably the first sent, said, "Case set for to-morrow, will defend myself probably," the other a full-rate message saying, "Come on, will try to hold them down till you come." Unwilling to undertake such a journey on an uncertainty I wired to Mr. Harman, "Messages contradictory. Shall I go or not? Will start to-night if you say come." I also telegraphed to the judge, "Will you hold Harman case till I reach Topeka? If you will start to-night, please answer immediately." I received no answer from the judge. I did get an answer from Mr. Harman as follows: "Yes, come on at once. Answer to same place." I replied, "Leave to-night on six o'clock train," and I started accordingly, assuming, as I think I had a right to do, that some understanding had been had between Mr. Harman and the judge or that at least a chance for a fair hearing would be given.

I made a long and tedious journey, in good faith, with the honest intention of trying the Harman case upon its merits. Had I been met with equal good faith and honesty on the part of the court, the result might hav been very different.

On the morning of April 16th the case was called, and Mr. Harman presented the affidavits printed at length in Lucifer (issue of April 18th) showing the agreement of the prosecution to fix a day for trial, their failure to do so, and the fact that I had been sent for, and moved for a brief delay.

This affidavit, with Mr. Harman's explanation, and the knowledge of the judge derived from my telegram to him, puts the judge in the position of denying a chance for me to reach the place of trial—though I had used all possible diligence to do so, and he knew that I was on the way—or of altogether refusing Mr. Harman a chance to be heard through me as his counsel.

Mr. Harman's motion for delay was denied, and in denying it the judge is said to hav used very nearly these words: "If you had been as diligent in looking up counsel as you hav been in instructing me in my duties, you would not now be unprepared for trial." This remark exhibits very clearly the judge's true spirit, and tells the whole story of his disposition toward Mr. Harman. He was piqued, as no large-minded man ever would be, at something that had been said of him in Lucifer, and was mean enough to take such an opportunity of gaining his revenge; and his willingness to retaliate for utterances that he was vain enough and weak enough to consider personal criticisms, but which certainly Mr. Harman never intended offensivly, seems to hav entirely run away with his sense of fairness. Moreover, the judge could not hav known of Mr. Harman's instructing him in his duties without having paid more or less attention to the articles published in Lucifer, and his reading of any single number of Lucifer, however superficial, if sufficient to indicate that Mr. Harman was instructing him in his duties, was also sufficient to inform him that the present case was one of an unusual nature, purely fictitious, one to which there was a perfectly good defense, and one which was not likely to be fairly tried by any attorney without adequate preparation.

I find it difficult to understand how any fair-minded judge should take offense at being instructed in his duties. I should think that the one thing which any honest judge, resolved to do what was right, would, above all others, joyously welcome, would be the most ample, abundant, and thorough instruction in his duties from any source whatever.

There was no good reason why Mr. Harman's request for delay should not hav been granted, for there were many other cases on the calendar that might hav been tried, and the business of the court need not hav been interrupted by this brief delay. Indeed, I am informed that in this very case the district attorney had announced himself as not ready to proceed on the first day of the term on account of the non-attendance of his witnesses, and on that ground had procured the same favor which the judge denied to Mr. Harman.

There were some reasons not creditable to the district attorney why he was eager to hasten this case. This case was on the four first indicted articles. They had been generally circulated all over the country by Mr. Harman, and by common consent everybody whose opinion was at all respectable had agreed that they were not obscene. If unfair advantage could be taken of Mr. Harman a verdict favorable to the prosecution might yet be procured. The O'Neil letter had been presented to the grand jury, but no bill was yet found. If the prosecution had waited until there were two indictments before the court for two acts or transactions of the same class, one on the four first indicted articles and another on the O'Neil letter, the court, however high-handed its methods, would hardly hav dared refuse one of two things, either to require the consolidation of the indictments or to compel the prosecution to elect which indictment should be tried and ignore the other.

The indictment upon the four articles was under the law of 1876. The indictment upon the O'Neil letter would be under the law of 1888. The law of 1876 provided a savage, brutal punishment entirely disproportioned to the triviality of Mr. Harman's pretended offense. When the revision of 1888 was before the Senate, Senator Hoar of Massachusetts protested against the outrageous punishment affixed to this law, and on his suggestion the minimum limit of the penalty was removed, so that if Mr. Harman were convicted on the first indictment, under the old law, the judge could inflict a fine of $100 or imprisonment for one year, the minimum limit, whereas if he inflicted a like excessiv sentence on a conviction upon the new indictment under the law of 1888, which prescribed no minimum limit, it would be clear evidence of his malignity.

I cannot believe the judge was entirely unmindful of this situation nor of the advantage it gave him for the gratification of the pique he manifested.

The trial went on through Wednesday and Thursday, a part of the performance being the assignment as attorney to defend Mr. Harman of a gentleman who had so little understanding of the case and its real merits that he made the whole proceeding ridiculous by his efforts to convince the jury that Mr. Harman was insane. No one knew better than the judge the deep-dyed infamy of thus pouring ridicule upon the good old man's earnestness. Had the judge improved some of the instructions in his duty, the obtrusion of which so ruffled his trumpery dignity, he would hav shown greater wisdom and more fitness for his office than he did show.

I am informed that Mr. Harman protested against this outrage until he was silenced by the judge by actual physical force and could protest no longer, the bailiffs being called upon to compel him to keep his seat.

I arrived Friday morning in time to hear a very unfair charge from the judge. He spoke mildly of the several counts in the indictment. In a former opinion he had spoken of the multitude of counts (38 Fed. Rep., 829). As a matter of fact they were piled up to such a number as to very clearly indicate a dishonest purpose on the part of the person who prepared the indictment. He rejected the old, silly definition of obscenity, and substituted one quite as silly and possibly more dangerous to the defendant. It was as follows: "A matter is obscene when it is offensiv to chastity. Presenting that which delicacy, decency, purity forbid to be exposed." As to the suggestion of insanity the judge mercilessly turned it against the poor defendant, though it was not Mr. Harman's plea but his lawyer's, by saying to the jury, "Insanity is a defectiv power of the will—it is an inability to realize the effect of an illegal act. You are not to confuse insanity with other matters. It does not follow that because a man is an enthusiast or a fanatic or a crank that he is necessarily insane. It does not follow because a man asserts his will against the will of all the world that he is insane." The judge craftily omitted to tell the jury that if they found Mr. Harman to be an enthusiast, a fanatic, or a crank, that condition was, to the extent to which they found it to exist, an assurance of his sincerity and honesty and of the absence of criminal intent. On that point the judge charged what was clearly bad law, "That it does not relieve a party from the operation of the law because he sincerely believes that the matter is not obscene," and omitted to charge what he had previously declared (and with good reason) to be the law, "That the question of obscenity in any particular case must depend largely on the place, manner, and object of its publication," and "That if the writer was in good faith attacking some great flagrant wrong, the use of plain language, although offensiv to ears polite, might be permitted."

There was no suggestion from the court that the jury were judges of the law as well as of the fact. The judge simply said, "The question of obscenity is left to you."

Thus Harman was bilked.

At the conclusion of the charge, the attorney who acted for Mr. Harman called the attention of the court to my presence. I could do nothing but throw the responsibility for the situation upon the court, where it rightfully belonged.

I will say in conclusion, that I do not believe there was any disposition or intention on the part of the prosecution nor of the court that Mr. Harman should hav a fair trial. ED. W. CHAMBERLAIN.

Concerning Liberalism, Obscenity, and Injustice.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: In your editorial headed, "A Queer State of Things," in THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 19th, you close by inviting your friends to study the matter a little more closely. I hav been studying this matter a good deal all along, and would like to report conclusions. Much of what you say in that editorial can not be well disputed by anyone who makes any claim to stand up for freedom of expression of opinion, but, of course, that is a claim upon which many folks think they are most consistent whom you hav shown to be ill-Liberal and inconsistent in their criticisms of your remarks upon the Harman O'Neil publication. One is apt to think that, when a man like Mr. Harman is in the clutches of the law, it is rather unsympathetic, if not unfriendly, to criticise his acts as sharply as you did, but it should be remembered that Mr. Harman himself has not been kind to himself. At the time of publishing the O'Neil letter he was already under indictment, approaching trial on another affair, and so, in publishing the O'Neil letter in such an emergency, he adopted a policy which, from any politic point of view, must be regarded as extra hazardous. It may be quite right to shout, "No popery," whenever I want to, but if I should take the notion to do it in some crowds, I would be apt to get my head split open, and could hardly expect sympathy from my friends all around. So your criticism of the O'Neil letter could certainly not do Mr. Harman as much harm, under the circumstances, as his own act had done. On another point, however, I differ from you. You think Mr. Harman ought not to hav published the letter without sending private notices in advance to each subscriber that it was about to be printed.

It seems to me that readers of Lucifer for a year or two previous to the printing of the O'Neil letter, should hav been prepared for that letter, and ought not to hav been surprised by its appearance. The policy of the paper had been sufficiently and frankly stated all along. The publication of the letter was consistent with its well-known policy. Now comes in the question whether the letter was obscene. By its origin and make-up we would take that word to mean the displaying of anything which ought not to be displayed. A thing is obscene which is seen out of place. Nudity is not obscenity in one's own private apartment, whereas nude exposure in public places is considered an obscene act. In many a surgical clinic exposures are made before several hundred persons which would doubtless be considered obscene by any but medical students who are there for a purpose and for a proper purpose and know that there is no obscenity in the proceedings because they are proper under the circumstances. A manure heap is all right in a back yard. Everyone expects to see it there, but on the front porch, even so much of a manure heap as may be tracked in on the heel of the boot becomes an obscene thing.

Next the question arises, whether such accounts of sexual perversity as stated by Dr. O'Neil, should find place in any publication other than a medical journal. They are not often seen even in medical journals—perhaps owing to the natural disinclination of even medical men to say much about them. But from what I know of the profession, I am sure that a large number of physicians systematically repress or conceal a great deal in the way of vice and abuse which ought somehow to be denounced and abated. Seeing no ready cure for it, they doubtless think the least said the better, but I think that because of their silence and desire to save themselvs from unpopularity, they are more or less responsible for the continuance of evils which they constantly see, but do little to abate.

Outside of the medical profession come up honest men like Harman who propose to do something about it, and it may be they will blunder in their efforts, but in their earnest, honest purposes I contend that they hav a right to work for a better state of things without taking any professional degrees. I cannot see why physicians should be allowed freedom of discussion on these matters any more than well-meaning philanthropists who are willing to undertake Herculean labors in Augean stables that the doctors prefer to ignore. The abolition of the laws in England in reference to contagious diseases and the licensing of prostitution was accomplished by earnest reformers, many of them women, who suffered much ostracism simply because it was impossible to effect their object without bringing to public notice many very unpleasant particulars. I doubt if what Harman published is any more objectionable than things which hav been published with a view to abolish the confessional; but now that Lucifer's field of work is known, and since it is a necessary though an unsavory task he has undertaken almost single-handed, it is hardly fair to consider anything which is likely to appear in its columns as obscene or out of place, and those like Mrs. Whitehead, who cannot bear the malodor of an investigation, can easily cut themselvs off its list.

From the little information already received concerning Mr. Harman's conviction on the Markland and Whitehead letters, it looks as though he had been railroaded through that trial by a pack of hounds, as officials, who didn't dare to giv him a fair show to clear himself, and so I say, whatever his would-be friends may think of the last and untried charge, they should nevertheless do all in their power to help him at this moment, when he stands convicted on the Markland and Whitehead correspondence—letters which we must not allow to be indictable under the existing law—and which conviction we ought all to resent and denounce, and, if possible, reverse by an appeal to a higher, to what may be a less hell-bent, barbarous, and hot-headed court. Yours always for the under dog,

E. B. FOOTE, JR.

Lectures and Meetings.

W. F. JAMIESON recently delivered four lectures at Des Moines, and two at Taintor, Ia. Address him at the former place.

THE Des Moines Daily News said: "The lectures by W. F. Jamieson at Good Templar Hall yesterday afternoon and evening were well attended, and the audience was well pleased. Mr. Jamieson will be in the city one week longer, and next Sunday afternoon will lecture on the East Side upon the labor question, or "Bellamy's Dream;" in the evening at Good Templar's Hall, subject: "Has Jesus any Followers on Earth?" The Liberals concluded to hire a larger hall, the Capital City Opera House.

AT the Liberal Club Friday evening, May 2d, Col. A. H. H. Dawson will speak upon "The Modern Press;" 220 East Fifteenth street. The officers of the club elected at the meeting of May 25th were: E. B. Foote, Jr., M.D., president; E. W. Chamberlain, Augustus A. Levy, R. A. Gunn, M.D., vice-presidents; Mrs. A. C. Macdonald, secretary; Samuel Levin, treasurer; Mrs. Cynthia Leonard, librarian; Isaac Rosenborough, W. C. Kidney, James Morris, trustees. Mr. Moses Oppenheimer was appointed pro tem secretary during the illness of Mrs. Macdonald, who is suffering from acute rheumatism, a legacy from the grip. She will probably not be able to read the minutes at the meetings until next fall.

MRS. MATTIE KREKEL'S California lecture engagements for this month are as follows: Los Angeles, May 4; Livermore, May 6, 7; San Francisco and Oakland, May 11; Santa Cruz, May 13, 14, 15; San Jose, May 18; Lodi, May 20, 21; Stockton, May 25. June 1 she speaks at Sacramento. She may be addressed in care of Freethought, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal. The critical observation writer in that discriminating journal says of her lecture in that city: "Many persons who attended the meeting of the Freethought Society last Sunday evening declared that Mrs. Krekel's address was the most eloquent they had ever heard, and no doubt they were right. I expect there is not in the ranks of Freethought, or in the ranks of anything else, another woman who so combines the reasoning faculty with good judgment as to what ought to be said, and the power to express it in language that so carries an idea into the head that a legible impression is made on the mind. Her thoughts are mainly original, and she presents her subjects in fresh attire. Yet she makes things so plain that the hearer wonders why he had not thought of that before."

Something Can Be Learned from It.

From Secular Thought.

The symposium on the destructiv and constructiv aspects of Freethought published by THE TRUTH SEEKER is an interesting series of papers. The authors are Ingersoll, Watts, Captain Adams, "Saladin," and fourteen or fifteen others—all leading lights in the Secular world. The series taken together forms perhaps one of the most valuable aids to a complete understanding of the Secular platform it is possible to find. The subjects of the several papers are as follows: Is there an affirmativ, positiv, and constructiv side to Freethought? If not, the reason why? If there be, in what, in your opinion, does it consist, and in what should it consist?

IT was observed of the Jesuits, that they constantly inculcated a thorough contempt of worldly things in their doctrins, but eagerly grasped at them in their lives. They were wise in their generation; for they cried down worldly things, because they wanted to obtain them, and cried up spiritual things, because they wanted to dispose of them.—Colton.

THE mental differences between the lowest men and the animals are less than those between the lowest and the highest men. . . . Our theory of development explains the origin of man and the course of his historical development in the only natural manner. We see in his gradually ascensiv development out of the lower vertebrata the greatest triumph of humanity over the whole of the rest of nature.—Haeckel.

Communications.

Spiritualism as a Science.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: In yours of March 15th, D. B. makes the assertion that Spiritualism is the outgrowth of science, and that Materialists stultify themselvs by denying the immortality of the "soul." To this I would reply that his doctrin is in direct opposition to the laws of nature and therefore cannot be in harmony with science. The fundamental law of nature and science is that relating to the conservation or transmutation of energy, which teaches that matter or force is transmutable from one form of energy into another, but that in the entirety of its various phases and formations it can neither be diminished nor increased; in other words, that not one tittle can be subtracted from or added to the sum total of all existences. Viewing Spiritualism from this, the most important of all standpoints, its fallacy must become apparent, for is it not claimed that with the ushering of every new "soul" into the world the sum total of all existences is increased? It is not asserted that a transmutation of matter or force into souls is going on, or that soul substance is derived or extracted from matter as this would result in its eventual declension and final extinction, but that matter or force can produce souls—through the conception and birth of human beings—without impairing or diminishing the properties and number of the atoms from which said "souls" were derived. It might as well be claimed that ten quarts of sweet milk might be made out of two pints. The fallacy of the doctrin of immortality can therefore almost be mathematically demonstrated. It is conceded by all scientists that there is as much matter—or force appearing as such—in the universe as there was we will say a hundred million years ago. But how many "souls" were born into existence within that time passes our comprehension. If this vast number of spirits still exists, the sum total of all existences has increased to that extent, but as atoms remain virtually the same through all eternity no transmutation of "matter" into soul or spirit substance can hav taken place.

From what, then, was this spirit substance derived?

Matter or force is the same now as ever. It has lost none of its properties, nor deteriorated in quality, as it is indestructible. If soul-substance had emanated from it, there would soon be nothing left but an inert residue. And then its soul-producing property would cease. Matter or force can therefore not possibly produce immortal souls. It can be reconverted into its primordial elements, but can never metamorphose itself into spirit substance. It would result in the annihilation of the energy of which all so-called material bodies are composed.

Mr. B.'s assertion that the disclaiming of immortality stultifies man is on a par with the Christian whine, "What will you giv us instead?" Giv you instead of what, Mr. B.? Instead of a castle in the air? Instead of a figment of fancy? I see you want to strike a sharp bargain! You want us to giv you something for nothing. Open your hand and let us see first whether there is anything in it before we think of offering you something "on sight, unseen." But, seriously speaking, if you are so confident of possessing immortality, how can we take it, or you barter it away? You virtually admit that you can be deprived of immortality—by the mere exercise of reason! You would not ask, "What will you giv us instead?" or assert that a denial of eternal life stultifies man, if you really felt convinced that it is your irrevocable heritage, and therefore not subject to exchange for an equivalent. You propose to resign your claim to a shadow if we can giv you something of substantial value, showing how little faith you hav in immortality yourself. You shrewdly want to exchange the visions of a dream for a substantial reality, for something that it is not in the power of nature or man to giv.

But is there not gross egotism and rank conceit at the bottom of this belief in immortality? In India there is a sect called Anthropomorphites who believe that the almighty exists in every human being. How inspiring, to consider that we poor earth-worms are part and parcel of the supreme being. And how debasing and "stultifying" to think that we are devoid of this deistical "attribute." If Mr. B. were to imagin himself to be the almighty in toto, how stultified he would no doubt feel to be convinced that he is not superior to other mortals. Well, his aspirations do not reach quite that high, but they are not far removed from it, he fancying himself to be an immortal spirit.

But what is the most stultifying, to believe the truth be it what it may, or to argue yourself into impossibilities? Is it not stultifying reason to suppose that, after the organ of mind, or soul, is destroyed soul can still continue to be evolved from the decomposed matter? Are you in quest of truth, Mr. B., or of "soft soap?" If of the latter, you can purchase plenty of it behind the portals of any church edifice. Sycophancy will there turn you into, if not the almighty himself, at least his veritable image.

No, Mr. B., you must not ask of nature any more than she is able to giv. Would she not play false with matter if she were to extract thousands of souls from it every hour, never giving anything in return? Would her spirit reservoir not soon become exhausted? If spirit-substance is extracted from matter, it is robbed of its most precious property, which is in direct contravention to all known laws of science. But do we behold any deterioration that would necessarily follow if soul-substance were constantly withdrawn from matter, or what we conceive as such? No, the mind-force that was temporarily extracted has been returned, that new bodies and new minds may be evolved. Life and consciousness are eternally developed, but at the end of the period allotted to each conscious being, nature demands every tittle of the loan in return.

And, by the way, is life immortal so desirable or pleasant to contemplate? Picture to yourself the dread monotony of such a life for thousands, millions, trillions of years, and who would not then lie down to rest, even to "a sleep that knows no waking?"

As for the so-called spirit manifestations, if they cannot be explained in accordance with the teachings of science, or of the psychological laws of mesmerism, we must look for their elucidation in the realm of jugglery or legerdemain. H. Wettstein.

Marengo, Ill., April 10, 1890.

"In Search of a" Theory.

The Truth Seeker, both by its Editor and correspondents, has recently had much to say on "In Search of a Spirit." I also hav something to say on the same line, but under the above heading. While the experience of the Editor with Dr. Slade and the Keeler brothers no doubt was not satisfactory, still other investigators, with other media, hav had most wonderful manifestations occur in their presence, under circumstances utterly precluding the hypothesis of fraud, collusion, hallucination, or hypnotism. It is to some of these facts I now call attention and ask for a theory that will satisfactorily explain them on any other supposition than that of a spiritual origin. A fact is cold and stubborn. It will not be ignored or carelessly brushed aside. It demands recognition and investigation, no matter if the process should dash to pieces the most cherished and pleasing theoretical structure. I invite Materialists to candidly present a theory that shall account for the facts which follow, on a rational and scientific basis, or to modestly hold their peace till some one more wise than they shall hav performed this task in accordance with their pet supposition that physical death ends all personal consciousness.

For over thirty years I hav been a Materialist. During that time I hav never failed to embrace all available opportunities to investigate alleged spiritual phenomena. In these researches I hav met and uncovered some frauds of gigantic proportions. I hav also met media who were honest beyond question, and hav been confronted with enough phenomena which were inexplicable on any known laws of mental or physical philosophy to fill several numbers of The Truth Seeker, even if briefly stated. For these phenomena, or rather the newer portion of them, I want to find a reasonable theory, for which I am hunting diligently. I do not want dogmatic denial. I do not want to be told by you or your readers that this evidence is second-hand; that you or they were not personal witnesses. I already know this fact, and I also know something of the rules of evidence and the value of testimony. The testimony I offer to your readers is just as reliable and no more second-hand to them than was your testimony to them of any possible experience you could hav had with Dr. Slade, the Keeler brothers, or any other media. Neither do I wish to be told that the individuals whose names I will mention are cranks or fools, who would be willingly deceived, for they are all of more than average intelligence and whose reputations are of the very best, whose word would be taken without question on any other subject, and who are ready to be sworn that the following statements in reference to this subject are true. So, as an impartial attorney, I present the case to the jury of your readers, and ask them either to accept the facts for what they purport to be or to present a theory for their explanation that shall possess the elements of satisfaction, fairness, and common sense.

Leaving the great volume of alleged spiritual phenomena I hav encountered in former years, I shall confine myself in this letter to but one phase of mediumship, to wit, independent slate-writing, and to but one medium, Mr. W. Mansfield, and to phenomena which hav occurred in Boulder, Col., within the three weeks last passed. It is proper to state that Mr. Mansfield has been the guest of myself and wife at our home near Boulder for the period just named, a member of our family for the time, and under such circumstances as to convince us that he is an honest man in every respect. Either you or any of your readers can hav the opportunity of testing his mediumship and his honesty at the Cassadaga Lake, N. Y., Spiritualistic Camp Meeting which will commence the last week in July. Until that time he will be in Colorado. I am thus particular only to afford you or any of your doubting readers the opportunity to satisfy themselvs by a personal test, should they question the correctness of my statements, or feel sufficient interest in the subject to take the trouble.

Mr. Mansfield gave sittings to Mr. Develing, a prominent, level-headed citizen and business man of this place, also to his estimable wife. The slates were thoroughly cleaned by them. A small piece of pencil was dropped between the slates by Mr. Mansfield. The slates were on the table, in broad sunlight, the hands of the parties on them all the time, and at no time was it possible for Mr. Mansfield to manipulate or tamper with them without instant and complete detection. The sitters and medium were total strangers to each other. With the slates thus placed and guarded, communications were written inside the closed slates from their three sons, in their own handwriting, signed by their full names, and the signature of one, at least, a fac simile of his signature as written by his living, bodily hand. The sitters distinctly heard the movement of the pencil inside the slates while the writing was being executed. The nature of the communications thus given bore unmistakable internal evidence that the messages were written by the identical persons who claimed to hav written them.

Mr. Charles Dabney, a citizen of this place for thirty years, a reliable and wide-awake business man, who has filled acceptably several offices of public trust, together with his excellent wife, received messages from their son and daughter and a very dear friend, under precisely similar test conditions, with equally as strong internal evidence of the personality and genuinness of the messages. They also distinctly heard the writing between the slates while it was going on.

Mr. J. K. McGinnis, another reliable citizen of this town, his wife and daughter, also each received messages written in the closed slates, while in their hands, which they had never left from the time they had washed them till the messages were written. They all distinctly heard the writing while being done. The internal evidence was even more strong here than in the other cases, besides containing a most remarkable prophecy relativ to an absent daughter, which was literally and unexpectedly fulfilled within the time stated. These parties were also total strangers to Mr. Mansfield.

Yesterday, April 12th, Mrs. Carrie Case, a lady of our acquaintance, while visiting us, had a sitting with Mr. Mansfield in our parlor. The sun was streaming into the room through two large windows. Mrs. Case washed the slates and Mr. Mansfield placed a small bit of pencil between them. They were then closed and placed on the table between the parties, the hands of Mrs. Case on the slates all the time. My wife was also called into the room and the three took the slates in their hands, gripping them together tightly as possible. While thus held the pencil was distinctly heard writing between the slates. When they were opened a message was found purporting to come from the favorit son of Mrs. Case, who had been dead some eight years, which could not hav contained more internal evidence that it was written by him if his own living human hand had guided the pencil. In this case, also, the medium and the sitter was total strangers. These cases are only a small part of similar ones occurring in the presence of Mr. Mansfield while in Boulder.

Here are facts which can be verified by the oath or affirmation of witnesses whose testimony would be taken in any court and in any cause relating to the material world. The medium testifies that the writing is done by the spirits of those who once occupied a human body and yet liv and love in spirit life. The witnesses testify that the medium could not possibly hav done the writing by any agency exclusivly his own. The pencil was moved by an intelligent agent unseen by any of the parties present. The communications were to the point, in answer to questions written by the sitter, folded, kept away from and unseen and unknown by the medium, purporting to come from the spirits addressed. In each case the body of the message bore unmistakable internal evidence of the personality of the writer. In one case, at least, information was conveyed which was absolutely unknown to either medium or sitter, because it was a future event, which literally took place as predicted.

Now let us briefly review these facts and see what can be made of them. That they are facts is beyond question. I think it may be safely claimed that human language can be written only by human beings.

If there is any other means by which spontaneous human thought can be clothed in written human language, it is unknown to the present race of men, and has been unknown in all the ages of the past. Human science and philosophy are both dumb in the presence of this phenomenon. The statement that science will yet develop the occult force that can perform this feat without the aid of disembodied spirits is in the nature of a prophecy, largely made up of a wild and childish faith, and is only used by objectors because no better explanation can be offered.

If, then, so far as we know, human language can be written only by human beings, and the fact is established that intelligent, relevant human language was written without visible human agency, it follows, with a fair degree of logic, that a human being, invisible to the natural eye, did the writing. This granted, what can we do but accept the statement of the intelligence guiding the pencil, that it is the identical, living, conscious, though unseen, spirit it claims to be? How much more sensible and satisfying is this hypothesis than the preposterous one that blind force has all this power and intelligence, to be furnished to order, in bundles to suit, dug up from the vast universe of the attributes of matter, and only to hoodwink and befool poor, hoping mortals. The ignorant, orthodox explanation that it is the work of the devil is respectable in comparison. How much less the stretch of credulity would be to suppose that the life that animates this body is the real man, unseen as much while wearing it as when it is put away in the change called death, and retaining all that really constitutes the ego as completely as while wearing the fleshly garment.

Come, now, brother Materialists, let us reason together on these facts. Let us not "search for a spirit" quite so much, and giv a little honest effort to find a sensible un-spiritual theory to account for them. A majestic wave of the hand has not much argument in it, you must allow. A fact is brutal in that it will not submit to be brushed aside by those who deny it. It will forever stare one in the face, if it be a fact. Dogmatic and unreasoning denial can no more destroy it than can the pope's bull drive the comet from the sky. Then how did the fact get there? What brought it to view? These are the vital questions to answer.

Before leaving your readers for the present, I beg of them, as Liberals, not to be so infernally illiberal. It is a lesson they need to learn. Spiritualists are substantially in the same procession with the Materialists in the battle for universal mental liberty. They outnumber Materialists more than ten to one. They are the most numerous patrons of THE TRUTH SEEKER and all other Liberal publications. Yet, alleged Liberals too often turn their childish, not to say bitter and senseless, guns on their friends. This, I need scarcely say, is wrong in every way. This is why the American Secular Union is so puny, with not much hope for future strength. Even to me, a Materialist, the unprovoked attack on the faith of the Spiritualists, both from the Liberal press and rostrum, is most tiresome and discouraging. It is time for the professed Liberals to stop such unmanly nonsense. JOS. WOLFF.

Boulder, Col., April 13, 1890.

More About that Search.

I hav been much interested in the articles in THE TRUTH SEEKER by Burr and McArthur on Spiritualism, also in the Editor's Search for a Spirit, published in the ANNUAL, and it occurred to me that he was not at all anxious to find one, but went along with his friend to please him. Now, I hav the most profound respect for the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, for he is Liberal enough to admit both sides of any question in his paper, so that all may hav a fair hearing. He also is striving to make this world better, if he does not believe in any other, and doing that which he considers the most needed to bring about the best results. And as long as he seems perfectly satisfied to become non est at the grave and say, "Thus far and no farther," I think it is folly and time wasted to try to convince him to the contrary. When he takes interest enough in Spiritualism to investigate for himself and will spend time and money to do so and be very anxious to find a "spirit," then, I think, it will be time enough to aid him in his search.

I wish that there were more Spiritualists that would work as hard as he does to help enlighten the people, to bring about more liberty of thought and action, and spend less time in hunting angels and singing, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and the "Sweet By and By," and work for something practical in this life. But I want to say right here that there are Spiritualists in the front ranks of all reforms, shoulder to shoulder with the most advanced thinkers, who are not afraid of "hurting the cause, either."

Such ones will work hand in hand with Friend Macdonald for the betterment of this world; while there is a class of Spiritualists that think it impossible to work in harmony with a Materialist for any good purpose, while to my mind it does not matter what he calls himself, whether it be Spiritualist or Materialist or Freethinker, as long as he is interested in and willing to work for the reforms of the day in this life. I think it unfortunate for any person that does not know anything of Spiritualism and still more unfortunate if they do not want to know.

But as long as he or she does not think so, they do not realize their loss, and are perfectly willing to pocket the loss. The phenomenal part of Spiritualism is very necessary, as it is the foundation of a grand and beautiful philosophy, yet many never get beyond the phenomena and are hunting for tests. The teachings of Spiritualism in all its phases are felt, more or less, all over the civilized world. But I am sorry to admit that many Spiritualists are ready to go into the churches just as soon as they (the churches) will accept spirit communion.

PROF. A. B. SEVERANCE.

Milwaukee, April 22, 1890.

Woman Suffrage in Kansas.

In the April 19th number of THE TRUTH SEEKER is an article taken from the New York Herald, purporting to be the substance of a dispatch to that paper, in regard to the late woman's suffrage vote in Kansas.

The extract has the heading, "Are These Statements True?"

Let us look at some of them a little.

